"THOU HAST CONQUERED, O GALILEAN."

Fortunate indeed are the men and women who are privileged to live in this wonderful twentieth century when God's plan of the ages is developing with such unparalleled rapidity. According to tradition, within a few hundred years after the death of Christ, Julian the Apostate cried, "Thou has conquered, O Galilean," and thus gave utterance to a confession and a prophecy of eternal significance. We of the present day may well repeat at this Christmas season the words of the Roman emperor, for time has filled out his thrilling exclamation with an indescribable richness of meaning.

Potential Victory Everywhere.

It would easily be possible to make out a case for the growing triumph of the Christian faith by citing particular instances without number of the tangible accomplishments of Christ in the individual and collective life of the world. Such results help greatly to strengthen and establish the confidence of men in the power of humanity's Friend and Savior. But there is still another approach to the eternal problem of God's relation to His word through Christ which challenges sincere and thoughtful souls with all the force of conclusive demonstration, and makes it possible for Christians, viewing as an already accomplished fact the future reign of the Master of Men, to shape their own heart's conviction in the past tense of Julian's memorable declaration, "Thou hast conquered, O Galilean."

Mankind lives for the most part provincially. With the individual, the present hour or day absorbs the whole attention; with the family, the network of relatives and friends constitutes the world; with any particular generation its own era is the only period of history; few countries realize in any vital way the existence of other nations. We are all short-sighted and dim-visioned. But suppose it were possible for an observer to escape the stream of time in which we are all immersed, and, standing on some distant star, to be able to comprehend in one all-embracing present the whole current of human history. What would be the verdict of this unprejudiced judge as he viewed in a single mighty sweep the multitudinous events of the ages from the crucifixion to the Washington conference? Can any one be in doubt as to his answer? Would he not cry with Julian, "Thou hast conquered, O Galilean?"

To-day, then, as we scan the unfolding life of the race from Bethlehem's cradle to the present hour, we too may see in the dawning of world peace the approaching brotherhood of nations, the increasing intolerance of evil, the rapid emergence of the social conscience, and innumerable other partial realizations of the ideals of Christ, the "substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Potentially, Christ has already conquered. It remains for us simply to complete the unfinished details of His eternal undertaking.

A New King for Old Kingdoms.

The story of redemption through the power of Christ of individual souls will ever fascinate men with its perennial freshness and variety. There is something of infinite wonder in the miracle through which, by the magic touch of an eternal Friend, all things become new and the soul enters upon a mystical friendship of ever-enlarging richness and surprise. Sins forgiven! A song on our lips! Who can describe the experience of this amazing transformation? It marks the coronation of a new king in the realm of personal life, and with the changed loyalty come also "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith." There radiate, too, from the truly converted soul, influences that rebuke the sins of men and call prodigal sons and daughters from the husks and swine to the warmth of the Father's house. Christ is to-day walking in our midst and calling to this one and to that one, saying, "Follow me." And by thousands, dead souls are hearing the word of life and entering into the blessed companionship.

But there is another sense in which old kingdoms are crumbling and new kingdoms are being set up. The movement is so near and obvious, however, that even many Christians fail to sense its astounding significance, and still await with mingled hope and apprehension some extraordinary and spectacular millennium when the Christ of history and art shall appear as a white-robed king. Christ is here now! "The kingdoms of this world" are at this very moment in the actual process of becoming the kingdom of our Lord and Savior. How otherwise are we to interpret the wholesale fall of earthly kings, the rising of the mighty surge of democracy that is sweeping before it in one huge maelstrom of confusion thrones, crowns, robes, and scepters, and the rapidly lengthening lists of republics throughout the world? If the King in His glory is not at this time sitting as a silent counselor among the statesmen of earth, what means the tramp of millions of feet, black, yellow, and white, on the long, hot, dusty road to the new freedom, and the growing insistence of high-visioned leaders that every man must have his chance?

The Glories of the Struggle.

The man or woman who is for any reason deprived of a part in the culminating struggle of Christ for supremacy is deeply to be pitied. We are in the midst of the "last days," for just beyond is the hill of victory. The fight is on, and to-day as never before we are struggling with decisive issues. We are about to bring war before the judgment bar of God and man. Within a few brief years we are going to meet the test of world brotherhood. Shall man at last be altogether free? The reply of the race is on the way. We are face to face with reality, partners with God in the making of a new world wherein shall dwell righteousness.

In a very genuine and sacred sense we as Christians are expected to do exactly what Christ Himself would do if He were to be reincarnated. We are working in His stead. World issues are to-day at stake as they were when Jesus died on Calvary, and we are permitted to enter into His holy work of atonement. We are to participate in the suffering and self-sacrifice, but also in the joy and exultation, of the cross. The parasites, the idlers, the superficial, the lovers of pleasure, stand forth in this hour a pathetic sight, for they have no part in things worth while. They feel none of the tang of the morning air; none of the exciting urge of battle. They cannot sing:

"The kingdom is coming,
O tell ye the story,
God's banner exalted shall be!
The earth shall be full of
His knowledge and glory,
As waters that cover the sea!"

Adorning the Church.

God is adorning His church just now for the wedding feast of the ages. From the days of Nero, when the early Christians were despised, persecuted, and killed for their loyalty to Christ, to more modern times, when the church has suffered contempt or at best a grudging tolerance, the followers of Jesus have had to share more or less the fate of their Master in being despised and rejected of men. But to-day the infinite Father is bidding the church arise that she may be adorned as a bride to meet her husband.

There is unprecedented reason for optimism in the growing respect of mankind for Christianity and the church. In the field of education, Christian leadership challenges the highest recognition. In the field of social and industrial reform, its voice is being increasingly heard and heeded. In philanthropic service, Christian hospitals and other ministries to the unfortunate breathe the spirit of our Lord. In politics, too, the world is gradually learning a new esteem for the church's moral demands. Even in the world of international relationships, respect for the church has been manifested in a most surprising way. No more notable example of this new regard for kingdom principles has been furnished than that revealed in the revolution in diplomacy at the Washington conference. The church is being adorned because it is beginning to learn in a new way the secret of Christlike service and the true meaning of the kingdom of God. "Thou hast conquered, O Galilean."—Zion's Herald.

REVERENCE FOR GOD'S WORD.

Not as a critic dare I approach this Book as if it were an ordinary book which I may hope to master and fathom.

It is above me, and I cannot exhaust its fullness; it knows me, even the hidden things of the heart, and judges me, bringing me into contact with the all-seeing God. I enter with reverence into the Temple of Scripture, which from the height of God's eternal counsel, and out of the depth of God's infinite love, beholds and comprehends all ages, and is sufficient for the guidance and perfecting of souls in all generations praying with trustful hope that out of Christ's fullness the Spirit will minister unto me also grace upon grace.

But while I thus stand in awe, beholding the grandeur and infinite depth of the Scripture as One Organic Spirit-built Temple, and the beauty and perfection, and exquisite skill which characterize the most minute portion of this structure, I feel at home, and as in a peaceful and fragrant garden.—Adolph Saphir.

SET YOUR STANDARD HIGH.

Paul has set a standard which every boy and girl should aspire to reach. He says: "Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, * * * think on these things." Is this standard too high? Not if your character is to become as strong and pure as you can make it. Not if you would live in favor with God and man and would achieve in life the highest possible good.—Exchange.

THE DAY'S NEED.

Each day I pray, God give me strength anew
To dō the task I do not wish to do,
To yield obedience, not asking why,
To love and own the truth and scorn the lie,
To look a cold world bravely in the face,
To cheer for those that pass me in the race,
To bear my burdens gaily, unafraid,
To lend a hand to those that need my aid,
To measure what I am by what I give—
God give me strength that I may rightly live!

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

By Hon. C. L. Bates.

Seventh Paper.

I.

Pursuant to the call of June 11, 1844, acting under the "Plan of Separation," the sixteen Southern and Southwestern Annual Conferences, by their constitutionally chosen delegates, numbering 100, duly assembled in Constitutional Convention at Louisville, Kentucky, on May 1, 1845. Among them were many of the most talented and brilliant men, statesmen, scholars, preachers and divines, consecrated, Christian patriots, who ever met in an ecclesiastical council; then Christian "knighthood was in flower."

"The convention was called to order at 9 o'clock a.m., by Dr. William Capers, and Dr. Lovick Pierce, of Georgia, was elected president pro tem. This venerable minister opened the Convention by reading the second chapter of the Epistle to the Philippians; by singing a hymn, containing an appropriate invocation of the Holy Spirit, 'Come Holy Spirit, heavenly Dove'—and by offering a suitable and impressive prayer to the throne of grace."

By unanimous resolution, the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church then in attendance were requested to preside over the Convention, and Soule and Andrew accepted the duties of the chair; and Thomas O. Summers was elected permanent secretary of the Convention.

II.

The first action of the Convention, after permanent organization of the body, was to appoint a Committee on Organization; the resolution on that subject was:

"That a committee of two members, from each Annual Conference represented in this Convention, be appointed, whose duty it shall be to take into consideration the propriety and necessity of a Southern organization, according to the Plan of Separation adopted by the late General Conference; together with the acts of the several Annual Conferences on this subject, and report the best method of securing the objects contemplated in the appointment of the Convention."

Upon analysis it will be noted that the duty of the Committee was: (1) to consider the propriety and necessity of a Southern Organization; (2) to consider an organization to be effected according to the Plan of Separation; (3) those matters were to be considered "together with the acts of the several Annual Conferences on this subject;" and (4) to report the best method of securing the objects contemplated in the appointment of the Convention.

And so it clearly appears that in the very first action taken by the Convention, the cardinal importance of the acts of the several Annual Conferences in the premises was accentuated; throughout all the previous acts and proceedings, from the "Declaration" presented to the General Conference, down to the assembling of the Convention, the establishment of a separate jurisdiction in the South was made to depend on the will and suffrages of the Southern and Southwest Annual Conferences, composed not of preachers only, but also of all the private membership of Southern Methodism—all the Methodist people in the South; and now in the first action taken the Convention recurs to that cardinal feature of the Resolution, and directs an inquiry into the facts in respect to it; the idea was ever present in the mind of the Convention, that only the Annual Conferences had the power to dissolve the old and establish a new ecclesiastical connection in the South. The mind of the man who denies it is impervious to the indisputable and outstanding facts of history. Such a mind is fatally bent on the extirpation and annihilation of historical truth.

The very object contemplated by the Annual Couferences in appointing delegates was to establish a new and separate jurisdiction; and the Committee on Organization was directed to report the best method of securing the objects contemplated in the appointment. Certainly the sixteen Annual Conferences did not send their delegate to Louisville on "a fool's errand." They were sent on a serious business—one that involved the social and religious welfare of a great people—and with power to act.

III.

On May 15, 1845, the Committee on Organization submitted its report to the Convention, by its chairman, Dr. Bascom, the first paragraph of which is as follows:

"The Committee appointed to inquire into the propriety and necessity of a separate organization of the Annual Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in the slave-holding States, for the purpose of a separate General Conference connection and jurisdiction, within the limits of said States and Conferences, having had the entire subject under careful and patient consideration, together with the numerous petitions, instructions, resolutions, and propositions for adjustment and compromise, referred to them by the Convention, offer the following as their report."

It is clear from this preliminary statement (1) that the Committee had considered, surveyed, canvassed the whole field of ecclesiastical controversy and consequent conditions, caused by the actions of the General Conference of 1844 and all issues of law and fact therefrom arising, and the future course to be pursued by Southern Methodism, and (2) that in the opinion of the Committee it was the Annual Conferences in the South and Southwest which were to be erected into a Separate Organization; and that a separate General Conference connection and jurisdiction, to be created by them, was a purpose to be achieved by the Annual Conferences. Those sixteen Conferences were the ecclesiastical units, States or sovereignties, which were coming into the new Federation, and the General Conference to be established was to be only an instrument in carrying out the purposes of the Federation.

The Annual Conferences in the South did not, by accepting the Plan of Separation, lose their organization or autonomy; they continued to be full and complete ecclesiastical organizations, and were in the South only organizations; upon the assembling of the Convention, there was no Southern General Conference, and could be none until created by the Annual Conferences, acting by their delegates in Convention assembled. Has the creature grown greater than the creator?

IV.

The body of the report is an elaborate argument of the law and facts of the case—the case of Southern Methodism against Northern Methodism—to demonstrate (1) that the erection of the sixteen participating Annual Conferences into a Separate Organization and ecclesiastical federation and jurisdiction was necessary and indispensable, and (2) that these Conferences, through their respective delegates, then and there in Convention assembled, were vested, and exclusively vested, with full right, power, authority and jurisdiction to establish the new, separate federation and jurisdiction.

When the case is stripped of all extrinsic matter and reduced to its last analysis, those two points were the only ultimate issues in it; they were the only issues referred to the Committee; they were the only issues confronting the Convention and claiming its attention. Much has been written which tends only to obscure those simple issues; but they are easily eliminated from the great mass of literature on the subject.

The facts of the case were uncontroverted and incontrovertible; they were manifest in public records and documents; they were matters of common knowledge; they were current history; the Convention and its committee took judicial notice of them; "what everybody knows, the court knows." Likewise all men are charged with a knowledge of the law; and there were some principles of law, both ecclesiastical and civil, of vital and far-reaching importance, which were applicable to the case and necessary to be considered in determining the issues referred to the Committee; and those principles of law were discussed in the report with great aptness, force and vigor.

The Committee also heard evidence and investigated relevant facts; and one of its findings of fact is expressed as follows:

"The evidence before the Committee establishes the fact in the clearest manner possible, that throughout the Southern Conferences, the ministry and membership of the church, amounting to nearly 500,000, in the proportion of about ninety-five in the hundred, deem a division of jurisdiction indispensable to the welfare of the church, in the Southern and Southwestern Conferences of the slaveholding States; and this fact alone must go far to establish the right, while it demonstrates the necessity, of the separate jurisdiction contemplated in the plan of the General Conference, and adopted by that body in view of such necessity as likely to exist. The interests of the State, civil law and public opinion, in the South, imperiously require that the Southern portion of the church shall have no part in the discussion and agitation of this subject in the chief councils of the church. In this opinion, nearly universal in the South, we concur."

It will be remembered that the relinquishment by the General Conference of its jurisdiction, right, power, authority and sovereignty over the Southern and Southwestern Annual Conferences was conditioned solely and alone upon a vote of a majority of the members of the societies, stations and Conferences adhering to the Southern Church; and the above finding of fact met that condition, and the relinquishment became absolute, and, thereupon, full, complete and undivided sovereignty vested in the Annual Conferences. Those Conferences then stood in the exact position as did the thirteen American Colonies when they had fought to a successful issue the war of the Revolution, and the definitive treaty of peace with Great Britain had been signed, acknowledging and recognizing their sovereignty and Independence, each, respectively.

And, accordingly, the report of the Committee declared that all the right and power of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the premises had been duly and formally transferred to the Annual Conferences in the slaveholding States, and exclusively vested in them without limitation; and that the delegates of the sixteen Annual Conferences then assembled in Convention had not only all the right and power of the General Conference, transferred, as aforesaid, to the said Annual Conferences, but, in addition, all the right and power of necessity inherent in those bodies, as constituent parties, giving birth and power to the General Conference itself, as the common federal council of the church; and that the Convention then assembled possessed all the right and power of both the General Conference and the sixteen participating Annual Conferences, jointly and severally considered; and that the ecclesiastical right of the Convention to act conclusively, irrespective of the whole church, and all its powers of government besides, is clear and undoubted.

That was in substance the opinion of the Committee on the point, and it was adopted by the Convention with only two dissenting votes.

V.

The Committee also found that the creation of a Separate Jurisdiction was necessary, basing its finding (1) upon the utter subversion of the constitution and laws of the church by the General Conference in the cases of Mr. Hardin and Bishop Andrew; (2) the continued agitation and discussion by the Northern section of the church of a "political and civil institution," wholly within the jurisdiction and control of the civil authorities, and upon which the church had no power to legislate; and (3) to submit to and acquiesce in the demands of the General Conference and continue under its jurisdiction would destroy Southern Methodism, degrade its ministry, and destroy both its reputation and influence.

VI.

No effort is made here to restate or even follow the great argument of Dr. Bascom contained in the report; its fine analysis, its invincible reasoning, its unity and structural compactness, and its culminating synthesis, defy restatement or description; but a careful reading of it leaves upon the mind an inescapable conviction of two propositions, namely:

(1) The utter destruction of Southern Methodism could have been averted only by Separation; (2) the delegates in the Convention of 1845 were the representatives of sixteen separate, distinct, independent ecclesiastical sovereignties, owing allegiance to no ecclesiastical power on earth, nor subordinate to any such power.

The Committee submitted to the Convention a series of resolutions, which were, in the due course of its proceedings, considered and adopted; but their consideration must be deferred to subsequent papers.

A SUPERANNUATE CAN'T DECIDE.

By Rev. T. W. Adams.

Several years ago a preacher asked Brother M——, of our Conference, an old man, "Which one of your appointments was the best? Brother M—— replied, "All of my appointments were good; but if I must say which was the best of all the good ones, I would say the Blank Mission." Of course, the brother asking the question smiled at the answer. He knew that there was not another man in the Conference who would have Blank Mission as a gracious gift.

To Brother M—— any place was good where there were sinners to be saved, where there were broken hearts to be healed, and where there were sorrowing and burdened souls to be comforted and helped. Was he not right? Was not his the right angle of vision? Will any of us say "no?" We are all right in principle, but some of us are very squeamish and sore over a hard application of it. We do like good salaries, good and well furnished parsonages, fine churches, and cultivated congregations. Isn't that so? It may not be true of some, but I have never been of that class. I just "fess up." It is said that "an honest confession is good for the soul." I believe it is true.

Of course, we pray that the Lord would send us where we are most needed, and where God would be most honored by our ministry and service; and then when we don't get what we think we ought to have, we say a whole lot of things that don't sound like prayers. If any of my preacher readers have not been guilty at this point, I'll apologize on notice.

I am afraid that many of our prayers just before Conference meets are like Dr. John Matthews' prayer. It is said that he, just before Conference, prayed, "Lord, Conference is at hand, and just send old John Matthews anywhere, but Lord please send him to a good place." That was an intensely human prayer. It strikes me as a typical one. Is there anything wrong about that prayer? I hope not, for if there is, I have been praying wrong ever since I have had a family.

At the last Conference held at Hazlehurst when the appointments were read, I hastened to the telephone exchange and called up my wife. I said "I am appointed to the Port Gibson District as presiding elder." With a tremor in her voice she said, "It is awful, I just can't stand it." I said to her, "Don't talk that way. Didn't we pray that God would direct in our appointment? Now let us go without a murmur, or stop praying that way." The appointment was a real affliction to me. I had served the Lumberton Church for three years, and was anxious to finish my quadrennium there. Bishop Morrison had kindly consulted me about the matter, and I had entered a very firm protest. So when he overruled me, I felt that I ought to take the appointment as divinely made. It was without doubt the hardest work I ever served. From beginning to end I was handicapped with the hardest possible conditions. I have never doubted that the Lord sent me there; I wish I could believe that He removed me from it at the end of the third year. I am sure that the Lord had nothing to do with it. However, I was glad to be rid of the job. I got thoroughly tired of the presiding eldership.

Pshaw! how I have wandered clean away from my text! Pardon me, Henry. It reminds me of some of my performances in the pulpit,—my intention was to write about my pastoral charges, and draw some comparisons. I got started right, but soon flew the track. I am going to get back and follow the line.

My appointments—which was the best? It is a hard question for me to answer. There are so many things for me to consider in making the decision. In what sense best? Best for my comfort and easy living? Or best in furnishing me opportunities to develop in ministerial character and Christly living? Or best in furnishing me the choicest field for pastoral activities to win souls for Christ and to build up His Kingdom? The question has a wide perspective. In running over the list of my appointments I find some good in every one of them. Not one of them was wholly bad, not one of them was wholly good. Some of them were short on pay, but had some mighty good perquisities; some of them paid well, but were short on other good things. A good deal of balancing up needs to be done before I can answer the question, "Which was my best appointment?"

In one particular my first charge, Franklinton Circuit, was the best. I had a considerable territory to cover, and having no horse I rode it afoot. I became expert in walking—It was good for me. I laid that year, 1875, a firm foundation on which my walking career for 45 years has safely rested. I have found walking—the ability to walk—to be a very valuable asset. I have never found any work where none of my members lived more than three or four miles from the parsonage, burdensome enough for me to need a buggy or car. I have done my pastoral work on my feet, and, in consequence, have kept my back and legs 100 per cent efficient. I am indebted to the Franklinton Circuit for starting me right. Good!

In one particular, Tranquil Circuit was my best appointment. It taught me that I must put all my trust in God—that "vain is the help of man." I had several weeks' tussle with typhoid fever; was not able to work for about four months; paid $20 for drugs used one month. The work paid me $162.45 for the year. How did I live? I don't know. God only knows. I have never forgotten the lesson that year taught me. It was well worth all it cost me. I paid a big price, but good things always come high. In some particulars, Dover Circuit was my best appointment. It was then I got my first vision of what it meant to be a real pastor. The circuit was completely "run down at the heels." The preacher immediately preceding me was worse than no pastor. He would go to one home and spend all the time of that trip at that place. He would not visit the next door neighbor. Things dried up. People quit going to preaching, and quit paying. The stewards couldn't collect—the year before I went to the circuit the entire work of four churches paid $184. From this measly sum came the living of the pastor, his wife and four children. It seemed to me that I had gotten to "the jumping off point."

I went to the Deasonville Church on the first Sunday in January—not a human being met me. Some chill, to-be-sure! I went to the home of the "most principalest" steward of the church, and asked him to tell me what it all meant, and to advise me what to do. Brother Ewing, of precious memory to me, said, "Brother Adams, we are all dead." I asked him to explain conditions to me. He said, "Our preachers have not visited and cared for us and we have lost out." I told him to give me a list of the neglected ones and I would visit them. He said, "Brother Adams, if anything can do us any good, that is it." He told me that an old invalid, Sister Peaster, living two miles north of him, had been a helpless invalid for a number of years, and that to his certain knowledge a pastor had not seen her in five years. I went at once and in a hurry to see and pray with the afflicted saint. When I went into the house I was met and welcomed by a lady of middle age and healthy. I said, not knowing who she was, "I came especially to see old Sister Peaster." She said, "Brother Adams, our mother has been dead five years." What a shock it was to me! I saw that I not only had a dead church, but some dead stewards, too, on my hands. When I left there I went back to Brother Ewing's, and told him that I had found one cog in the church wheel that was not functioning "worth shucks." We laughed over the matter, and prayed over it, and made up our minds as to what was needed. That began to move things. After that he was worth his weight in gold. I visited and he visited, and we soon had a great stir in the church. Never since then have I ever doubted the value of pastoral work. From that time until I wore out I devoted a large part of my time to it.

I not only learned the value of pastoral visiting, but I also learned how to mingle with people, how to shake hands, and how to get up to them, heart to heart.

I got these lessons from I. W. Cooper, who was my neighbor pastor. He and I were together a great deal helping each other in meetings. I watched Cooper closely in his touch with people. He would say nice things to them, and pat the men on their shoulders. It took well with them. They looked pleased. So I decided that I could do that too. I went at it deliberately. And sure enough, I found I could do it. I staid by the job and won out. I soon got to be almost as expert as Cooper. Dover circuit has meant much to my life. I got some mighty good things from it, in spite of the fact they made me and family live for two years in an old dilapidated house they called a parsonage that I would be ashamed to put a Negro tenant in. There was but one redeeming feature, that is, it was situated in the southwest corner of "Paradise."

I have used up my time, so I'll ring off. Goodbye, Henry.

Brookhaven, Miss.

THE SECRET OF A HAPPY LIFE.

"How can you look so pleasant to-night?" a man asked his friend. "You have had a score of interruptions this afternoon, when you had hoped to do a lot of work."

"That's all right," was the answer. "Every morning I give my day to Christ, then I take what he sends. These interruptions come in the way of duty. Why should I complain about the service he has appointed?"

It was a very wise saying. Many of us offer a partial consecraton, and, therefore, the interruptions are regarded as breaking the purpose of the day. The only way is to dedicate all our time, and then to take every action as prompted by the Lord. It is amazing how the moments are sanctified when they are thus accepted.—Advocate and Guardian.

A JOURNEY TO THE ORIENT—OUR CHINA MISSION.

By Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker.

VII.

In my former letter I wrote some description of the mission property on Quinsan Road, Shanghai, most of which is now being converted into income-producing apartments or has already been thus diverted from its original use for missionary residences or directly evangelistic and educational purposes. Further acquaintance with Shanghai confirms my judgment that this wise policy will have to be consistently carried out and a new compound for the residences purchased and built upon in a more open part of the city. The well-being and efficiency of the missionaries will soon require surroundings different from the closely built portions of the city. Already the rapid growth of Shanghai and the accelerated rate at which it is still going on make it difficult to secure land well located, and no time should be lost. Besides, the value of the present property as an income-producing investment makes it good financial policy to move the mission compound to a suburban location.

Shanghai, with its population of two and a quarter millions, its foreign settlements, its enormous commerce, its international character, its highly developed urban life and social and educational advantages, is the most important city in China. It has from the beginning been the center of the missionary activity of our church, which is still confined to the Provinces of Chekiang and Kiangsu, and must be made the stronghold of our China Mission. But we have not by any means fully improved our opportunity in this great center, in which as yet we are the only Methodism doing church work, although the episcopal residence of the Northern Methodists and some of their offices are here, employing in all a larger number of missionaries than we have residing in Shanghai. The Allen Memorial Church is still meeting in the same building with the middle school; Moor Memorial, though well situated, is destined to become merely the chapel of McTyeire Primary School, and Trinity, also superbly located between two of the most important streets of the city, is an old and inadequate structure, having all the available space that belongs to the church beside that on which the building stands occupied by rented apartments and stores. These produce income that is applied by the stewards to the support of the church, but that is of doubtful gain for this, our oldest congregation, which should be entirely self-supporting apart from endowment or other outside resources. Such is our church equipment in this mighty city. As we have so poorly cultivated our own field, which has by tacit consent been left to us on account of priority of occupation, it would not be strange if the Northern Methodists should soon come into it with their accustomed vigor. There is not the slightest reason for their entering Georgia and Florida, but they are there in force; there is every reason for their taking up evangelistic work in Shanghai, where Methodism is likely to be outranked very soon.

The one outstanding need of such situations as that in Shanghai, and it is unhappily not solitary, is continuous, resident episcopal superintendence. If there is room to doubt this as a theoretical proposition, the practical demonstration that has been made in the Methodist Episcopal missions in China from the days of the great Bashford down to the present time—when Bishop Birney is resident on the field and constantly on hand for the decision of questions, the pushing of enterprises, the inspiration of the workers and the pursuit of a definite and unified policy—leaves no room to question it. With nine resident bishops in Eastern mission fields, it is evident that the Methodist Episcopal Church is much more confident of the value of episcopal supervision than we are, however much we may pride ourselves upon our superior doctrine of the office, or order, of episcopacy. The desire for resident superintendence on the part of the missionaries and the conviction of its necessity are so strong as to constitute a demand for bishops who shall live in their fields just as the missionaries themselves live there, and who shall become thus sufficiently acquainted with the work to form independent judgments and shall be sufficiently accessible to insure a continuous, vigorous policy. There have sometimes arisen differences between bishops in charge of mission fields and the administrative secretaries that certainly would not have arisen had the bishops been actually in touch with the matters involved and acquainted at first hand with them.

I have been unable to see the church papers for some time, and do not know to what extent General Conference legislation is now being discussed; but I will venture to suggest—an unprecedented act on my part—that the law should fix episcopal residences in the foreign fields, and provide for resident bishops, resident in the full meaning of the term. The half-yearly residence now advised has done good; but we should go the whole way.

A great need in Shanghai to-day is a Methodist church for English-speaking people. There is a large union church and another community congregation of the same kind recently formed, but these lack the evangelistic thrust and the positiveness of Christian faith that a denominational church make possible. The American Episcopalians have such a church, as they usually have in accord with their conception of the especial mission of their own denomination, which out here they call with characteristic complacency "The American Church," but there is need for a Methodist Church for foreigners. Unfortunately no provision for such has been made in the Centenary askings, but it is probably that some shift might afford the money for its housing, and one of the best and most experienced of our pastors should be detailed to its pastorate.

The primary school of McTyeire is still located in the heart of the city. Three-fourths of its valuable land have been taken over from the work of the Woman's Council and a consideration paid sufficient to make possible the purchase of a magnificent domain with a palace upon it. On that part of the land which fronts the race track and athletic grounds, situated upon a street of broad dimensions and central to the business of the city, it is proposed to construct a great building which is to be used partly for renting and partly as an institutional church, also as a domicile for the Law School and for such other purposes as its situation may make it desirable. A magnificent plan, but in putting it into effect, let us not forget the lessons so dearly learned through the Trinity, Los Angeles, experience.

Of the other part of the results of the McTyeire transactions one can speak with confidence born of knowledge. The palatial residence of a wealthy Chinese, surrounded by gardens of about fifteen acres' extent, was purchased at about one-third of its present value, and is now occupied by the middle school (which in grade corresponds with our high schools). A handsome and commodious residence for the faculty has been built and is now occupied and a great dormitory is well under way. Than this plant there is nothing finer among our educational institutions in America. But my gratification was greater far when, after having been shown over the grounds and buildings by the accomplished principal, Miss Tuttle, I faced the seventy pupils at the hour of evening chapel service and addressed them in as good English as I could command upon the Life of Christ, I did not perceive a moment of wavering attention or an intimation that I was not being thoroughly understood. The intelligence and spirituality that the faces of these Chinese girls show is remarkable, and I am sure that I have never seen a group of girls in my own country who have better poise or give evidence of greater refinement. Possibly this fact is due to their coming from families of the better class; possibly it is the atmosphere of Christ that they enjoy through the ministry of the ladies who are teaching them and amongst whom they live. Out here the reputation of McTyeire is quite in keeping with the impressions that I received. At the session of the Mission there was much discussion of the desirability of elevating McTyeire to the grade of a college. Possibly it ought to be done; but are we prepared for the large cost that this will incur?

Of the Law School and the Middle School I do not speak in detail, though a visit to each was intensely interesting. The Law School is a monument to the zeal and insight of Mr. Rankin, the former Dean, who unhappily differed so greatly from the Mission concerning alleged doctrinal aberrations of some of the missionaries that he felt called upon to leave his work, in which he was influencing China as few men could do, and to devote himself to the accusation, trial and judging of these supposed "heretics." I had rather not write at all of this sad chapter in the history of the China Mission; but having read Mr. Rankin's pamphlet on "Modernism" in the China Mission and having been informed that he is devoting himself to traveling from place to place and accusing men and women of the Mission, I feel that a few words are due my brethren at home. I have diligently inquired concerning the attitude of the missionaries toward this matter. I conversed with one lady who was of the opinion that there was no other way to convict a person of heretical views than this, only she held this opinion; I would simply say that our law does not give any man over to die until it have the accused and the accuser face to face. An unfair and unjust procedure cannot be justified save from a Jesuitical code of conduct, even if the end is the preservation of the purity of doctrine in the church. The law of the church provides an orderly and equitable way for the trial of any person concerning whom suspicion may be entertained that he is denying the faith and teaching strange and erroneous doctrine. That all our preachers are indifferent to their vow to "drive away all strange and erroneous doctrine," and Mr. Rankin alone, a layman untaught in theology, must assume a revolutionary attitude and undertake the task against their judgment, I would not believe. After much conversation with the missionaries I have become convinced that the representations of their views in the pamphlet referred to are wholly misleading. In the few cases in which the pamphlet even professes to have anything but hearsay evidence, it is evident that the law of apperception has been at work and the accuser has allowed his own preconceptions to color his representations of what has been said to him, usually in the informal way of conversation without a suspicion that one was doing the work of an inquisitor among them. I am persuaded that much mischief is being done by these unfounded and unjust and unfairly laid accusations, and I will say that I am thoroughly convinced of the doctrinal integrity of our China missionaries. Of them no man has excelled Mr. Rankin in zeal; would that he were their equal in charity that "thinketh no evil," and in the moderation that should be known among all men. A fine sense of justice is better than a keen scent for heresy.

Among the men of our Mission whom other enterprises both of the church and various philanthropies covet one must include Dr. F. P. Manget, of Huchow Hospital. I had met him occasionally in America and had heard of him much oftener. After absence in army work he is back at his loved employ, a good physician and a great one. His invitation to accompany him to Huchow after the second day of my stay in Shanghai was gladly accepted. Floods made the usual boat trip from Shanghai impossible; so we took train for Hangshow, formerly a great Manchu city. The Manchu part was razed to the ground after the dethronement of the Manchu emperors ten years ago and a new and handsome city with wide streets and beautiful residences built upon the site. The walls and the ancient Chinese city remain to show a contrast with the newer buildings. A handsome Young Men's Christian Association building with a mediaeval clock-tower distinguishing its entrance gives assurance that this earnest agency of the kingdom of God is accomplishing its own work here and acquaintance with its earnest Secretary proves that the personnel is up the standard. After a pleasant period there Dr. Manget and I take 'rickshas for the landing where we are to catch the canal boat by which the remainder of the journey to Huchow is to be made. It was the thrill of my life to be whirled by the strongest and fleetest coolie I ever saw through streets so narrow that every moment marked the risk of some one's person or property; for we were not now in the new, but the old city. At the canal boat we met the rest of our party, Miss Lochie Rankin and Miss Mary Lou White of the Virginia School for girls, and Mr. Estes, Principal of the Soochow University Middle School. The canal boat is a long barge with a house over all that is divided into narrow compartments rudely resembling those of a compartment sleeper, but running quite across the boat, without the passageway. There are no furnishings exeept board bunks, upon which you lay your own bedding. The bedding and toilet kit that each traveller carries is ealled a pouquet (pookay) and without this there would be scant comfort. On top of the house is a flat deck on which for this trip at least there were as many Chinese as could be crowded promiscuously upon it, over them only an awning. The boat is towed by a steam launch and about midnight we arrive at the North Gate of Huchow and through the obscure moonlight I see the wonder of a city wall, and imagination adds the features of mediaeval civilization with its lawless maraudings and wars unmitigated by more civil methods of murder, howbeit also more efficient. Probably the old style retail business of war had its advantages over the wholesale butchery of Twentieth Century civilization, and it certainly has the best of us in the matter of romance. A walk of twenty minutes through the still waking streets of the Chinese city, so narrow that between the high walls in some places an umbrella could not be raised, elsewhere a part of the still open shops. I sometimes wonder when the Chinese sleep. At the end of the walk I experience the now familiar sensation and spiritual rest of the mission compound into which we come through high, solid gates to find ourselves in another world, a world of peace and gentleness and hope and domestic love, philanthropic endeavor and Christian culture. By the cloud-subdued moonlight I can see the handsome outlines of a church and the school and residence buildings that front upon the wide community lawn and school playground. Into the hospitable home of my princely Christian host I am ushered after the ladies have been conducted to their door; Mr. Estes leaves for his own home next door, and I soon prepare for sleep, thinking the while of Father Faber's lines—

All journeys end in welcome for the weary,
And heaven, the heart's true home, shall come at last.
Angels of Jesus, angels of light,
Singing to welcome the pilgrims of the night.

LOUISIANA SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

Mansfield Female College is the property of the Legal Conference of the Louisiana Annual Conference of the M. E. Church, South, and is responsible to the Conference for its policy and its teaching. It is one of the oldest colleges for women, and has a record of honored service since its founding in 1854.

It stands unequivocably for the education of girls in a separate institution from boys; and ten years' experience has fully demonstrated what common sense dictates.

It asks support not on denominational loyalty, but on its own demonstrated merit; makes no fight on other schools, State or church; does not cut prices nor make other inducements to get students. It is not trying to be cheap, but so run that it pays every bill in full, and adds each year from one to four thousand dollars to the upkeep and equipment.

It is accredited by the State in all grades of the High School Department, and in the Teachers' Course as well. It is a Junior College with 17 teachers from the best institutions. It makes no provision for the idle, the lazy, the snobbish, the disobedient and uncontrolled at home. The wealthy and the poor alike must work, learn self-control, form right habits of living, become obedient to rightful authority, acquire a sense of respect for law and order, and of social and moral values and obligations, and discover the basis for true and ennobling friendships. Books are but means to an end; teachers must be living epistles of Christian womanhood.

It offers advantages in Piano, Pipe Organ, Violin, Voice, Theory, Harmony, History of Music, and Expression. Graduate nurse of large and successful experience gives full time, and our health record is not excelled anywhere. Director of great abilities in charge of Athletics. Large swimming pool, Basketball and Tennis courts are maintained.

Give us the GIRLS of to-day, and we will make the life of to-morrow. As are our WOMEN, so are our men. The brawn of the race may come through the male line; but the brain, the culture, the refinement of almost every great character in all climes and through all time have been unquestionably and most lovingly attributed to great mothers.

Our buildings are in better condition and have more conveniences and comforts than ever before. We have gas heat, electric lights, hot and cold baths on every floor and in every building. We have a campus of eight acres and a total property valuation of $175,000.

If we but had $150,000, less than half of our apportionment, we would have room for 160 boarding girls (present capacity 115), and, with the local patronage, a school of 250 students.

Every time a Louisiana man feels it necessary to send his daughter out of the State, he acknowledges a debt to some institution at home. For if only fifty Louisiana girls (and more than fifty leave the State) would put each year an average of $500 into Mansfield, we, too, could meet most fair demands out of the $25,000 put elsewhere; and the pride in and devotion to the institution would be felt by all, and the acknowledged debt would be cheerfully paid.

Mansfield College is here to stay and serve. It has a place all its own. Its only enemies are its indifferent and careless friends. Those who know least about it are its poorest representatives.

The College now has 76 students of college grade; 30 Seniors, and 46 Juniors; and in spite of the times, lacks but ten of having its capacity. If our own Methodist people will send us just THREE in a thousand of our membership, we would have more than our capacity. If each minister would direct just one in a whole year, we could not take care of thirty of the number.

If some Louisianian would put $150,000 into an Administration Building, the donor would provide for a sore need and place his name in that list, all too small, of those who would "Live in Deeds, not Words." When we see the great gifts to schools of other sections, we stand a bit shame-faced and sad that our own Louisiana institutions have had so few who cared to put their wealth to such noble and glorious ends.

"Not what we give, but what we share;
For the gift without the giver is bare.
He who gives himself with his alms feeds three, Himself, his hungering neighbor and Me."

R. E. BOBBITT, President.

WITH THE METHODIST EDUCATORS.

The Methodist Educational Association, an organization composed of all the educators of the M. E. Church, South, held its annual meeting at Memphis recently, under the presideney of Dr. W. P. Few of Trinity College. The program, the details of which are already familiar to readers of the church press, was of a high grade, but the most noticeable thing about this convention was neither the program nor the attendance; it was the spirit which pervaded the gathering and dominated all of its activities.

The presidents of practically all the schools and colleges, the members of the staff of the Board of Education, the Conference Educational Secretaries, and representatives of various Boards of the church, were present. The sessions were pervaded with one dominating interest, namely, that these institutions are engaged in the work of an education possessing a distinctively Christian character. Every address expressed the very fundamentals of evangelical Christianity, and the climax of the meeting was reached in the adoption of a series of resolutions which will doubtless be long remembered as the platform of Christian education. These resolutions will be given wide circulation through various channels, and it is safe to say that they will give the whole church a new conception of the work of our institutions of learning.

This meeting made it apparent that the Christian Education Movement has indeed created a new spirit and attitude throughout the whole church with reference to Christian Education. This was not only the expressed conviction of practically every speaker; it was fully apparent in the very atmosphere of the place. The great Movement in which the church has for a year and a half been engaged has actually succeeded in developing in the mind of the church an adequate conception of the place of Christian education in the life of the church, of the nation, and of the world. This it has done in two directions: it has awakened the ministry and membership to the realization that our schools and colleges are doing a fundamental part of Methodism's evangelical task; it has made the educators themselves fully conscious that they are not only educators, but Christian educators. No greater gain than this has ever come to Methodism.

One report submitted to the Conference by Dr. Paul B. Kern, Dean of the Theological Department of Southern Methodist University, was most significant. There are in that institution thirty-four student pastors—young men serving as pastors of churches and thus supporting themselves while securing their theological education. Last year, while the university was being severely criticised in certain quarters, these thirty-four student pastors had 1500 conversions and received 1270 persons into church membership on profession of faith and baptism. This number was more than two hundred above the number similarly received during the same period in any whole district of the entire State of Texas. Such young men are being trained not only in Southern Methodist University, but in Emory and all the other institutions of the church.

The educational leaders of Methodism look to the future as the greatest era of progress ever experienced in our history. In their resolutions they have asked the General Conference to provide an adequate conservation program for the Christian Education Movement, and even suggested their willingness to merge into one all of the Boards and Commissions which are now dealing with any phase of Christian or religious education. They hail with much gratitude the dawn of such a day as this in the church—a day when educators and people altogether recognize that Christian education is a means and method of evangelism, when Methodism bids fair to adopt once more the slogan of the great Wesley, "Let us unite the two so long divided—knowledge and vital piety."—Board of Education Bulletin.

THE BEST IS YET TO BE.

For all men, small as well as great, even for those who have succeeded, and conquered apparently all honors, it is true that the best is yet to be. Heroic Paul, earth's most intrepid and earth's sublimest spirit, standing forth in old age, with a thousand victories behind him, knew that he had not yet attained. No matter what your success, I appeal from the seed to the coming sheaf, from the acorn to the coming oak, from this little spring to the future river, from your ignorance to wisdom, from your fragmentary tool or custom to perfect virtue, from the broken arc to the full circle, from the white cloud to the stars that are above the clouds. Because life is in a series of ascending climaxes, and because it waxes ever richer, for every man, whether young or old, it is better farther on, and the best is yet to be.—Newell Dwight Hillis.

DIGGING FOR GOLD IN KOREA.

By Rev. R. S. Stewart, D.D.

V.

"God makes the wrath of man to praise Him!" Policies intended to frustrate the revival in Korea have turned out "unto the furtherance of the Gospel." This is true of the efforts made by the police to suppress the Christian movement. Their efforts have resulted in a friendly reaction toward the church by thousands of Koreans. These people have themselves suffered much from the police, and they assume that anything so violently antagonized by their enemies must be their own friend. Police popularity would be more detrimental than otherwise to the church so long as their attitude toward the people is oppressive. And while their opposition has intimated and kept away from Christianity great numbers of the natives, it has failed utterly to keep away thousands of others who represent some of the most vigorous and fearless of the population. Their opposition therefore has exercised a sifting process by which the church has been defended against a large influx of weaklings who otherwise would have made a profession without having counted the cost, while, on the other hand, the church is being built up with the sturdy and robust personalities of the land.

It will be well to state that religious freedom has been legally declared througbout the Japanese Empire. The police administration in Korea therefore cannot legally restrain the orderly and legitimate work of the Christian church. But to accomplish their purpose they resort to methods of intimidation which are very effective among the ignorant, the weak and the helpless of the people. Dr. E. W. Anderson has recently spoken to me of a section of his district where the police have so terrorized the people that a general apostasy has resulted. In one church of 100 members only ten have stood the storm, and in some places the new converts have burned their Bibles to destroy evidence which the police might use against them. Dr. Anderson tells me of one of his preachers who was tortured and who carried the marks of the police upon his body for many days. Others were threatened and beaten until there has been a large falling away in that district. But nevertheless "the foundation of God standeth sure," and there is always a remnant whose faith is purged and not destroyed by the fire.

I did not witness any actions of the police like the above mentioned. It is possible that the presence of several foreign missionaries was some protection to the new believers where we were. But I did see something of police methods which were attempts to emharrass Christian work. We had moved to a new village and at nightfall Brother Stokes and I had just gotten our cots made up in a little 8x8 room. Suddenly our door opened and our host appeared, evidently in some alarm. A police officer had come and interviewed him about having taken in the missionaries. He had told the frightened Korean that he had no license to take in travelers for the night, and threatened him for breaking the law. Stokes promised our host to see the police and make things rigbt. He did not see him, however, until about midnight, just as the service was about to close at the tent. The police seemed quite stubborn about the room, and Stokes had decided that we would move out at 1 a.m., rather than get our host into trouble. Then it was that our evangelist, Yu Moksa, got into action. At one time, under the old regime, he was chief of police of the city of Seoul. He is a man of unusual personal force. As he talked, the police seemed to get smaller and the evangelist larger. He began to talk to the police of righteousness. "Is my doctrine which you have heard to-night a righteous thing?" "Yes," was the forced reply. "Then why don't you accept it?" said the evangelist. "I will," squirmed the police as he tried to wriggle out of the toils of truth and logic with which the evangelist had tied him. "The policeman has believed," Yu Moksa announced to the congregation that stood looking on and listening to the colloquy. And the result was that the man who had been intimidating the people was made to acknowledge the righteousness of Jesus before them all; he was unable to persecute them longer for accepting what he himself likewise had publicly acknowledged, and the missionaries were left unmolested in the possession of their room that night.

We remained for only one night in the above-mentioned village, but it was long enough to organize a group of about thirty-five new believers. Class leaders were elected and a temporary place of worship arranged for, but naturally they wanted a church building. The leaders accompanied us as we left the village the next morning and said they had subscribed 100 yen to buy a house of worsbip. It takes 300 yen to build a meeting-house in one of these villages, and this church not twelve hours old had pledged a third of it. Stokes told me that he was not able to supply the remainder, and this group must go without a church house as matters stand now. It is a situation that can be duplicated many times in Korea. I could not help but think of our folks at home, some of whom, if they knew the situation, could send Stokes a thousand dollars and enable him, with half as much more from the Koreans to give church houses to ten villages.

My last stop with the band was in a village about ten miles distant from the above-mentioned one. We reached it about 2 p.m. Saturday, and engaged a room at a village inn. While we were waiting for our pack horses to arrive with baggage and provisions, I noticed the wife of the innkeeper with a baby on her back. The little one's face was as red as a tomato. I called Stokes and told him that we had run in on a case of scarlet fever. He inquired of the mother about the baby's health, and she laughed and said, "He is all right; he is only drunk." The child was only two years old, and his mother had been feeding him wine because "he liked it." Surely, it was time for Jesus to be preached in this village.

That night the tent was jammed with people. The evangelist preached and thirty-seven people decided to believe. Next day was Sunday and we were expecting a great victory. But as I looked out early in the morning I saw two police officers circulating around the village. They had come from six miles away to attend to the revival. We didn't have many out at the morning service, but attributed it to the rain which had fallen quite heavily. But in the afternoon it faired off and we expected a great crowd that night. But at 9:30 o'clock they had not arrived. A few only had gathered and one of the police officers with jangling sword and fiery uniform entered the tent. Yu Moksa went to him and told him to leave the tent, go somewhere and take off his sword and uniform, and return properly dressed for a religious service and he would be welcomed. I have already said that this evangelist is a man of unusual personality, and the policeman obeyed. He returned dressed in civilian clothes.

But they had done their work well and only about fifty people dared the presence of the tent with the police officers on the job. Of this number, however, there were eleven who decided to believe, although they knew they were acting under the eyes of the determined and powerful opponents of the church.

In a previous letter I have spoken about the young Korean who plays "Dixie" on his flute while the personal work is on. But I did not mention that this young man is also a personal worker of great zeal and success. On one occasion he laid aside his flute and got out into the congregation to win souls. He was urging a certain man to become a Christian and told him that he would "perish" if he failed to believe. A police spy was sitting near and overheard the statement. The next day our flutist was summoned before the police and accused of intimidating the people. The spy bore witness that he had said men would "perish" who failed to believe. It was not difficult to establish the charge and the sentence was twenty days in jail. But our men appealed to a higher court. In a few days he appeared before the other police judge. "Why do you tell people they will perish if they do not believe?" asked the judge. "Because it is so written in the Bible," said the Christian. "Show it to me," demanded the judge. He showed him John 3:16, but the judge was sternly displeased. He insisted that the scripture did not teach positively that men would perish if they did not believe, but only the fact that they would not perish if they did believe. Then our friend turned over to Revelation 21:8 and showed him clearly written that the unbelieving should have their part in the lake of fire. Take notice, ye Moderns and Universalists, a Japanese police court was obliged to admit that the Bible taught the fact of hell, the sentence of the lower court was cancelled, our flutist was released, and is doubtless now keeping time with the Korean revival to the tune of Dixie, and urging others to believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.

UNANSWERED PRAYERS.

"Like some schoolmaster, kind in being stern,
Who hears the children crying o'er their slates,
And calling 'Help me, Master!' Yet help not,
Since in his silence and refusal lies
Their self-development, so God abides
Unheeding many prayers. He is not deaf
To any cry sent up from earnest hearts.

"He hears and strengthens when He must deny.
He hears us weeping over life's hard sums,
But should He dry our tears and give the key,
What would it profit us, when school were done,
And not one lesson mastered?

"What a world
Were this, if all our prayers were granted! Not
In Pandora's box were such vast ills
As lie in human hearts. Should our desires,
Voiced one by one in prayer, ascend to God
And come back as events shaped to our own wish.
What chaos would result!

"In my fierce youth
I sighed out breath enough to move a fleet,
Voicing wild prayers to heaven for fancied boons,
Which were denied, and that denial bends
My knee to prayers of gratitude each day
Of my maturer life. Yet from those prayers
I rose always regirded for the strife,
And conscious of new strength. Pray on, sad heart!
That which thou pleadest for may not be given,
But in the lofty altitude where souls
Who supplicate God's graces are lifted, there
Thou shalt find help to bear thy future lot,
Which is not elsewhere found."

THE DIVINE ART OF SOUL-WINNING.

Soul-winning is a divine art. The schools for mental culture cannot impart this spiritual accomplishment: it can be learned only in the school of the Holy Spirit by that oldest and greatest of teachers—experience.

No purely human philosophy ever valued the soul aright, nor devised a sufficient remedy for its recovery from sin and its renewal unto holiness. Divine revelation gives the highest conception of the soul's value, and divine wisdom alone can impart skill in winning men from hell to heaven. "The fruit of the righteous is a tree of life, and he that winneth souls is wise." In this proverb is found a logical and vital connection between the fruit of the righteous and the work of soul-winning. The righteous—those who are in Christ as the branch is in the vine—will necessarily bear this precious fruit. If the Christlike be in us, it will become manifest in fruit according to its nature. Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; so also has the church come into the world for a like purpose. As the Father sent the Son, so has the Son sent His disciples.—George Needham.

As nature lifts her gates from week to week,
New beauties rise, His wondrous power to speak,
And now, clad in her glory as of old,
The goldenrod uplifts her crowns of gold.

TRAVEL ON.

By Alice A. Smellie.

Does thy way seem dark and long?
Travel on!
In thy heart is there no song?
Travel on!
Just beyond the sky is bright;
Just beyond is love and light;
Just beyond there is no night;
Travel on!

Are thy loved ones gone before?
Travel on!
Is thy heart oft sick and sore?
Travel on!
Just beyond is heaven's gate;
Just beyond thy dear ones wait;
Just beyond is rest complete;
Travel on!

Do thy hope and courage fail?
Travel on!
Seems thy life of no avail?
Travel on!
Just beyond are fields elysian;
Just beyond is faith's bright vision;
Just beyond is hope's fruition;
Travel on!

THE NEW LEAVES.

"Wake up!" said a clear little voice. Tommy woke and sat up in bed. At the foot of the bed stood a boy about his own age, all dressed in white like fresh snow. He had very bright eyes, and he looked straight at Tommy.

"Who are you?" asked Tommy.

"I am the New Year!" said the boy. "This is my day, and I have brought you your leaves."

"What leaves?" asked Tommy.

"The new ones, to be sure," said the New Year. "I hear bad accounts of you from my daddy—"

"Who is your daddy?" asked Tommy.

"The Old Year, of course!" said the boy. "He said you asked too many needless questions, and I see he was right. He says you are greedy, too, and that you sometimes pinch your little sister, and that one day you threw your reader into the fire. Now, all this must stop."

"O, must it?" said Tommy. He felt frightened, and did not know just what to say.

The boy nodded. "If it doesn't stop," he said, "you will grow worse and worse every year, till you grow up into a horrid man. Do you want to be a horrid man?"

"N-no!" said Tommy.

"Then you must stop being a horrid boy!" said the New Year. "Take your leaves!" And he held out a packet of what looked like copybook leaves, all sparkling white like his own clothes.

"Turn over one of these leaves every day," he said, "and soon you will be a good boy instead of a horrid one."

Tommy took the leaves and looked at them. On each leaf a few words were written. On one it said: "Help your mother!" On another: "Don't pull the cat's tail!" On another: "Don't eat so much!" And on still another: "Don't fight Billy Jenkins!"

"O!" cried Tommy. "I have to fight Billy Jenkins! He said—"

"Good-by!" said the New Year. "I shall come again when I am old to see whether you have been a good boy or a horrid one. Remember

"Horrid boy makes horrid man;
You alone can change the plan."

He turned away and opened the window. A cold wind blew in and swept the leaves out of Tommy's hand. "Stop! stop!" he cried. "Tell me—" But the New Year was gone, and Tommy, staring after him, saw only his mother coming into the room. "Dear child," she said. "Why, the wind is blowing everything about."

"My leaves! My leaves!" cried Tommy; and jumping out of bed, he looked all over the room, but he could not find one.

"Never mind," said Tommy. "I can turn them just the same, and I mean to. I will not grow into a horrid man." And he didn't!—Selected.

A CHEERFUL GIVER.

"Pass the box around the class, Charles," said the teacher. Charles took the offering box and passed it to each one. Penny after penny was dropped into the slit at the top of the box and rang happily against the pennies that were already in the box. Every little while the box would pass boys or girls who shook their heads. They had no pennies to drop into the box.

Jimmy was one of these. After Sabbath school he sat in church with mother. He meant to stay awake, but sitting so quietly with mother's arm about him made it very easy to sleep. It was in his dreams that a strange thing happened. A penny sat up on two spindle legs like the pictures of the Brownies.

"I am the penny that Susie forgot last Sabbath," whispered the queer little fellow. "I did want to help in God's work, but Susie forgot me and Monday she took me to the store for some candy."

When he had finished another took his place. "I am the penny that Johnny Jones forgot. I thought he would keep me until to-day, but yesterday he used me to buy a string for his top and I wonder if I can ever help in God's work." The penny tumbled off and made Jimmy jump, so he waked up. He went straight home from church and put his penny away for next Sabbath, and with it went five that he was saving to buy some marbles. Jimmy's giving pleased God. "God loves a cheerful giver."—Selected.

The many prove the wisdom of Hesiod, who says that the road to wickedness is smooth and very short, and there is no need of perspiring; but before virtue the immortal gods have placed the sweat of labor, and long and steep is the way thither, and rugged at first; but when you have reached the top, then, however difficult, it becomes easy.—Plato.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

We begin the new year, first, by being sure that we have written the figures correctly, and, secondly, by wishing all the readers of the New Orleans Christian Advocate all the blessings that the Good Father can bestow upon those who love Him and strive to do His will. We cannot foretell what is in store for any one, but we do know that "all things work together for good to them that love God," and we know that it is possible even out of sorrows and disappointments to reap blessings that greatly enrich the soul. This year will be a good one to us all if we "grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." That there is a vital connection between material prosperity and spiritual well-being is evident from the words of the inspired writer: "Beloved, I wish above all things that thou mayest prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth." As the Psalmist says, "I have seen the wicked in great power, and spreading himself like a green bay tree. Yet he passed away, and, lo, he was not: yea, I sought him, but he could not be found. Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright: for the end of that man is peace."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The address of Rev. T. J. Warlick will remain Lake Providence, La.

Rev. H. B. Perritt asks us to state that his address for the new year is Wesson, Miss.

Rev. J. G. Snelling, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, preached in McDonoghville Sunday night.

Rev. F. B. Hill, Ponchatoula, La., expects to attend some of the Gipsy Smith meetings beginning in New Orleans on Thursday night of this week.

The Editor was called on Saturday to the bedside of his mother in Ellisville, Miss., who has been very sick. His many friends will remember him and the other members of the family in his time of trouble.

Rev. W. J. Newsom has been very cordially received at St. Francisville, La. He writes that the good things do not cease to come in to the parsonage, that prospects are bright and that he expects a good year.

Rev. A. S. Lutz, Conference Secretary of Education, Louisiana Conference, called at the Advocate office on last Saturday. He preached at Carrollton Avenue Church, this city, at 11 a.m. on last Sunday, and at Second Methodist Church in the evening.

Rev. P. A. Sowell, honored superannuate of the Tennessee Conference, whose fine articles appear at intervals in the Nashville Christian Advocate and in this Advocate, is visiting his daughter, Mrs. C. S. Williamson, Jr., at 1334 Webster Street, this city.

The Christmas offering of the Methodist church at Merryville, La., where Rev. R. M. Brown is pastor, was directed to the aid of starving Russian children. A check for $25 has been forwarded to the Honorable Carl E. Milliken, Treasurer, 105 East 22d Street, New York City.

Rev. E. H. Cunningham has been most kindly received at Okolona, Miss. The assessment for the pastor has been increased by the amount of $700. The budget system has been adopted, with the monthly payment of all obligations. The congregations are good and the outlook is encouraging.

On Saturday, December 31, the carrier brought a copy of the Journal of the One Hundred and Eighth Session of the Mississippi Conference. The Conference adjourned on December 5, and we congratulate Dr. A. F. Watkins and Dr. G. S. Harmon, editors, upon being able to bring the Journal so promptly from the press. The Journal is well arranged, the workmanship is good and it presents a very neat appearance.

Watch Night Service was observed at the McDonoghville Methodist Church, across the river from this city, on New Year's Eve by the Epworth League and others of the church. The pastor, Rev. J. D. Harper, and his family were given a substantial expression of appreciation by the congregation. Brother Harper stated that he and his bride, in coming to attend the session of the Conference in Carondelet Street Church forty years ago, had reached New Orleans aboard the "Jessie K. Bell," on Saturday, New Year's Eve.

The usual "Giving Christmas" entertainment of the First Methodist Church Sunday school of this city was given on Thursday evening, Dec. 22. The Wesleyan class of young people providing more than $100 in cash, besides other things, and leading in the preparation and distribution, the different departments of the school bringing on Thursday night such articles as were designated for each, thirty-six baskets of good things were filled and distributed to deserving poor. Each basket contained everything that was needed for a good Christmas dinner—twelve or more articles, and was valued at $5 or $6.

From the Magnolia Gazette, of December 22, we learn that Rev. Claude P. Jones has made a most favorable impression as the newly-appointed Methodist pastor at Magnolia, Miss. The Gazette states: "His subject Sunday morning—'A Live Church'—was handled exhaustively and its application was most appropriate. Mr. and Mrs. Jones were most cordially received by members of the church here. Arriving Saturday at noon, they were met at the train by Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Reid, who entertained them at dinner, and afterwards they were taken to the parsonage where a committee of the ladies' missionary society had made the preacher's home in readiness for their occupancy."

The following, written from Quanah, Texas, to the Texas Advocate of December 29, by Rev. Alonzo Early, will be of interest to the many friends among whom Brother Early has labored in Louisiana: "It has been about one month since I came to this charge, Quanah, and I have been happy every minute as I have gone about my work. The people are so thoughtful of their pastor and are always doing something for the comfort of him and his family. The full work of the church will be done by this loyal membership and many will know of their deeds of kindness and love. The congregations have been good and the interest is increasing. Our Sunday school is working to be one of the best in the Northwest Texas Conference."

The Laurel (Miss.) Daily Leader, of December 16, stated that the fine pipe organ of the Methodist Church, recently installed, was ready for use. An organ expert has given it as his opinion that the organ is easily worth $20,000. The organ was purchased from a Methodist church in Minnesota, which was installing a new $40,000 instrument, the gift of a member. The church at Laurel was thus enabled to purchase a very fine organ at a moderate price. It is a three manuel organ with 45 stops, and more than 1800 pipes. Special room had to be provided for the organ at an expense of $1500. The organ was used for the first time on December 18. At 4:30 in the afternoon a beautiful Christmas cantata was rendered by the choir. Miss Grace Kittrell was the organist and will continue to serve. Mr. W. J. Murdock was choir director. Rev. O. S. Lewis is the pastor. A large congregation heard the cantata.

The Daily American Press of Lake Charles, La., December 27, gives nearly two columns to the Christmas season activities of the Broad Street Methodist Church, of which Rev. W. W. Holmes is beginning his fourth year as pastor. A month has been given to the dramatic presentation of Scripture truth, the climax being reached in the program on Christmas night. As the local daily states, "wise men, shepherds, Herod, all were there," representing scenes with which they were connected. The Sunday school brought generous gifts for the poor, and cash was also received. The church was beautifully and appropriately decorated for the occasion. Speaking of the experiment of the church in giving plays to illustrate and enforce Biblical truth, the Lake Charles paper quotes Rev. W. W. Holmes as follows: "It has worked well. The drama had its birth in the church and for a long while was used most effectively to present the gospel of Christ. Because the drama has been so much abused the church has turned from it. Shall the church be robbed of her most effective teaching agencies, because they have fallen into unworthy hands? Very large congregations have witnessed the little plays. My impression is that all who have heard the sermons and seen the plays have a larger desire to 'make room for Christ' by the giving of substance, service and self."

EDUCATIONAL NOTES, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Our Annual Conference unanimously agreed on January 8 to 15 as Educational Pay-Up Week. We have promised: now let us perform. We have pledged: now let us pay. We have set our hands to the plow: let us not turn back nor falter until we have equipped Centenary and Mansfield Colleges for their very best service to the church in our Southland.

Let every pastor announce these dates. Preach a sermon on Christian Education. Urge your people to pay up their pledges. Put the notice in your church bulletin.

Through the Christian Education Movement, our Conference made its greatest advance this past year. Never before did our grand total for the Conference measure up to a million dollars. Study your minutes and see how the Educational Movement saved us from showing a loss this past year. The future is full of promise to us and we must move on to still larger things for Louisiana Methodism. Why not bring up everything in full? Start now and more than likely you will not fail.

ALBERT S. LUTZ,
Conference Secretary of Education.

TO THE PASTORS IN LOUISIANA.

Dear Co-Workers: The Anti-Saloon League of America is now engaged in a campaign for law enforcement, especially as regards the Eighteenth Amendment. Doubtless you have already seen the necessity for such a move in your parish.

Will you please appoint a committee of five or ten men and women of your congregation, whose duty shall be to co-operate with the regularly constituted city and parish authorities in the enforcement of all State and national prohibition laws? Where there is more than one pastor in a town or city, it may be well for the pastors jointly to appoint the committee as one. Such a committee, working harmoniously, would be able to render all necessary service.

Permit me to suggest that the committee call upon the sheriff and the district attorney and ask in what way it can assist them. Try as far as possible to work in harmony with your officials. Most of them will welcome your help.

The committee will also report all violations of the law to Hugh Laree, Prohibition Director, Room No. 311, Custom House, New Orleans, La., and keep this office posted as to the response received from the federal authorities.

MANSFIELD COLLEGE ANNOUNCES MR. WILLIAM J. ARKWELL AS DIRECTOR OF MUSIC.

Mr. Arkwell's musical training was begun in Boston where the study of piano, pipe organ, harmony and theory was taken up under George Morse and J. Vernon Butler. He has held several positions as church organist throughout New England.

In 1910 he took up the sudy of voice in New York City under Saenger, Bimboni and Witherspoon and in 1913 entered upon an opera career. From that time until 1917, Mr. Arkwell followed the profession as a baritone soloist in opera, concert and oratorio, playing many important roles in opera. Between seasons he taught regularly in his studio in New York.

Mr. Arkwell has made three successful transcontinental concert tours, including various opera and oratorio engagements.

In 1917 he entered the U. S. Army and was in command of one of the U. S. bands. Since his discharge from the army he has had a studio in Carnegie Hall, New York City, and has continued to fill engagements in the concert field. He has recently made a very successful trip in the west.

Mr. Arkwell delights in good church music, and has already won the esteem and appreciation of our people of all the churches by his willing and generous response to their requests for assistance.

Mansfield College has always maintained a good department of music—we feel that we have reason to be proud of our record—but under the new directorship we anticipate better and larger service to our patrons and friends.

Our very much esteemed Miss Marshall will continue with the Department of Music and will serve as gladly and efficiently as heretofore.

School reopens Tuesday, Jan. 3, 1922, and we have room for only eight or ten more girls. The second semester begins Jan. 21, and students may enter then.

TO THE PASTORS OF NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: You will soon receive an assortment of leaflets prepared by the Board of Managers of Tract and Evangelistic Literature for distibution among your people. You will know where it is best to place this literature for greatest good. It is being sent out by the Conference Board of Christian Literature, with the prayers of the Board for God to make it useful.

UNLIMITED POWER.

One of the facts written large upon the face of nature so that even the humblest can understand, is the limitless supply of power which is found in this universe. We think of our coal measures as supplying almost unlimited power, but a few thousand years may exhaust them. We think of our great rivers and the millions of horse-power which they may devlop, but this is but the outer fringe of the supply. We turn to the sunlight and are told that a section of the Sahara, forty miles square, receives in six hours of a day as much heat as is produced by all the coal burned in twenty-four hours throughout the world. But even this, we are told, is but a trifle compared with the energy which is held in leash in every cubic inch of matter in this and other worlds. And as we listen it begins to dawn upon us that this universe is a tremendous storehouse of energy. Every atom is vibrant with it; the whole ether is saturated with it; from one end of the universe to the other there rolls a limitless ocean of unexhausted energy.

What does it mean? To the Christian it means that the whole world is full of God. Spiritual and non-spiritual power in immeasurable might streams from the throne of the Eternal. All that we know as spirit, as intellect, as will, as force, or as matter comes from the one inexhaustible source. "In Him we live, and move, and have our being." We run up our wireless anywhere and we tap streams of invisible energy which amaze us by their power. The air, the earth, the seas, the suns and stars are all in motion responsive to an unseen and immeasurable urge. "The whole earth is full of His glory."

And to a church longing for power there is something thrilling in the thought that all about us are flowing tides of divine energy the force of which no man can measure. We can perhaps, measure scholarship and possibly we can guage the force of eloquence; we can estimate the value of money and the strength of human magnetism; but the divine power of dwelling in a consecrated man is simply immeasurable. God himself is in the man and the results of his work are out of all proportion to the known and measurable factors. And to every man these great stores of divine energy are fully accessible, needing only the touch of obedient faith. For us to-day there are no Meccas nor Jerusalem save at our own firesides and in our own immediate neighborhood. And we need no priestly hand to tap the source of limitless power for us, for Christ has made it our own proper possession.

To-day in the religious world men are eagerly scanning the ecclesiastical and evangelistic skies for new planets, and are planning for all kinds of success when they arrive. But the planets do not sweep into view and the work needs sorely to be done. What then? Why should we stand gazing into the heavens wistfully pleading for a leader who is already here? It is not in man that salvation lies for the church or the individual. "God is our helper. He shall help us, and that right early." There is power enough wasting all about us for a million Pentecosts, waiting only the obedient heart, the seeing eye, and the receptive hand. Once long ago the leader of Israel heard a voice saying, "Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward," and that voice is surely sounding the same message in every part of the Christian world to-day. On every hand are difficulties; unsolved problems are everywhere staring us in the face; the weakness of the church is plain and undoubted; and yet the weakest church and the weakest Christian is challenged with the fact that in our God lies limitless power which is available freely for us all. It is not our own weakness which defeats us, but the failure to link it up to God's omnipotence. We are weak! Of course we are and will always be; and yet still "we can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth us." Let us tap the illimitable reserves of divine power and in the name of our God go forward.—Christian Guardian.

THE RECKLESS RISK.

They were two innocent girls, perhaps sixteen or seventeen years of age, on their way to church. The road was muddy, and they were afoot. A man passed in an automobile. "Let us ride," called one of the girls. The man did not stop. He never will know the half-spiteful, half-scornful things the girls said about him to one another after he passed. But there were a few things that he did know. He knew they were taking a reckless risk; for he was a stranger, and the people should be careful with strangers of the opposite sex.

He knew, too, that two old mothers would not like to see their girls ride up to church with an utter stranger, though the girls might be ever so elated at the short triumph of riding up to the church door in an automobile, while their envying friends had to walk. The stranger knew that it would not be very acceptable to most people for a strange preacher at his first appointment to drive up with two young girls in his car picked up at random on the public road. He knew that this "chance acquaintance" business could very well lead to bad talk and hurt the girls as well as himself.

There were a few things that the girls, too, did not know. They did not know just how this looked to a strange man, even if his mind were pure, much less so if he were of the questionable sort. They did not know that this "Let me ride" call is so common that even this preacher has to adopt some private road rules something like these: (1) Do not take up every man you pass. (2) Take up very few boys or children. (3) Let women and girls go afoot unless you know them.

Automobilists are sometimes imposed upon even by grown men as mere loafers or those who want to "beat their way." It is even more unadvisable to pick up children who call for a "lift." How does he know the prank behind the call? Is the child out for a lark or for mere adventure? How can he tell? But as for women and girls, can they ever be too careful? Have they lost the old-time modesty in our modern craze for excitement, joy-riding, and other escapades? Why not return to common sense and be as careful as our mothers were? Let women and girls remember that it is possible to walk down the street or public road and hail a man in a car who might be anything but the company a good woman or girl would want. Let them avoid these reckless risks. —Selected.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S BIBLE.

The Bible which fed the soul of Abraham Lincoln in the Kentucky log cabin of his boyhood was one of the cheap little Bibles brought from England by vote of the American Congress in 1777. Lincoln loved the Bible above all books, and once paid the following tribute to it: "I am profitably engaged in reading the Bible. Take all of this book upon reason that you can, and the balance by faith, and you will live and die a better man. In regard to the great Book, I have only to say that it is the best book which God has given to men."—Selected.

The subject of this sketch, Mrs. ADDIE MAY MORELAND, was born March 22, 1868. On October 28, 1887, she was happily married to C. E. Moreland. She was a lovely character having early professd faith in Christ and joined the Methodist Church. Mrs. Moreland taught the intermediate class in Sunday school and only a few days before her death expressed the wish, while teaching her beloved class, that she might live to see each member of her class an active member of the church. Miss Addie (as she was lovingly called) was a kind neighbor, true friend, and loving wife. She was always ready to visit the sick and do all in her power to relieve pain and suffering. In July, 1921, she was carried to Memphis to undergo a very serious operation, and on the 26th of that month she was called home. Her remains were brought back to her home in Sherman, Miss., and she was lovingly laid to rest in Fairfield. Two children had preceded her to that better land, and she left a husband to mourn her going away.

Her pastor,
J. L. NABORS.

Mrs. J. HOWARD GRISHAM CURLIN died in a Memphis hospital, December 3, 1921. Mrs. Curlin was the wife of J. Howard Curlin, of Marion, Ark. She was born in Pontotoc, Miss., where she grew up and became a teacher in the High School. She was a member of the Methodist Church and a Sunday school teacher, assistant Sunday school superintendent, and Epworth League worker. In such religious activity this writer knew Miss "Zora," as she was generally known. I was her pastor for four years, and she never disappointed my expectation in her loyalty to duty to community, school and church, and her efficiency was a guarantee of success in all she undertook. As a member of the choir, with volume and sweetness of voice she charmed the people. I had the honor to marry this most excellent young woman to Mr. J. Howard Curlin, of Marion, Ark. In her new home she was readily acknowledged as a leader, and at once entered into the life of the church. Then she became a teacher in the public school, and was teaching when it became necessary to submit to an operation. As an evidence of how she had grown into the life of the community in three years, in addition to some close kindred who came with Mr. Curlin with the body of his good wife to Pontotoc, Miss., for burial, also the sheriff of the county, superintendent of the school, the superintendent of the Sunday school, and several others, came. On Sunday at 11 a.m., with all the congregations of the town joining in the service, many tributes to her high intellectual and spiritual qualities were given; then in the city cemetery we laid her to rest, leaving such a floral offering as I have hardly witnessed. Her mother had preceded her to Heaven about 18 months. Her father, sisters and brothers still live in Pontotoc. The good husband is greatly bereaved.

W. M. YOUNG.

WITH CHRIST IN PARADISE.

E. BELLE HOWELL was born July 29, 1880, and died December 15, 1921. She was born, lived and died in Holmes County, Mississippi. In early life she joined the Methodist Church at Bowling Green, but later moved her membership to Lexington. She taught in the public schools in this County for a number of years. For a while she taught in Pearl River County and one term in Calhoun County. Her life has been lived here, and people know what it was.

The following were left among her papers, as messages for her loved ones and friends: "Sometime this corruptible form must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. Then shall I see Him face to face and know Him as He is. Now I see dimly, but when all my trials and labors are o'er, and I am safe on that beautiful shore, I shall see Him—shall look on His face, and that will be glory, be glory for me. We'll never say good-by in heaven."

Again she writes: "Let me lay aside the sin that doth so easily beset me and run with patience the race that is set before me, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith. The light afflictions of this present life are not to be compared with the glory that is to come. The angel of the Lord encampeth around about them that fear Him, and delivereth them. I will fear no evil, for thou art with me."

Then comes her last message, which must have been written just a few days before the end: "Friends, in this world of hurry and work and sudden end, if a thought comes of doing a kindness to a friend, do it this very instant—don't put it off—don't wait. What's the use in doing a kindness, if you do it a day too late?"

Then comes the farewell: "To my family, my loved ones, my friends—Aunt Minerva, Katie and everybody: I want to thank every one of you for your kindness to me during my illness. Don't grieve when I am gone, for I have suffered so much that death will be a sweet relief. This has been a hard cross, but I have tried to bear it as best I could. May God's richest blessings be with each of you and keep you well, is my wish and prayer. Rejoice and be exceedingly glad, for great is your reward in heaven."

Do we need anything more to assure us that she rests with Christ in Paradise? May all of us strive to live so as to meet her where suffering and parting are not known. FATHER.

A STEWARDS' MEETING.

By A Pastor.

Dear Dr. Carley: I attended a stewards' meeting not long since that I regarded as a little unusual and thought it might be of interest to others. I give some of the reasons given for not raising and even lowering the assessments for the pastor and presiding elder. This charge had been divided by the Annual Conference and it was natural to suppose they would have to raise their assessment, but they gave the following reasons for not doing so:

1. Groceries are not as high as they were two or three years ago; therefore we ought to get preaching for less money.

2. We have had some very fine preaching in the past for the amount we are paying; therefore if you expect us to make a raise, you surely expect to give us extra good preaching.

3. We employ our pastor to do the preaching for us; therefore if he decides he wants or needs outside help in his meeting, he should pay for the help and we should not be expected to foot the bill.

4. We are appointed to look after the interests of the membership of the church and keep them from being imposed upon; therefore it is our religious duty to hold the assessment down and get preaching as cheap as possible.

It would be natural to suppose that the church that advanced this line of reasoning had raised its assessment while things were advancing, but such was not the case; they had religiously held the assessment down through all the years of high prices and thanked God that they had held their own. I heard Bishop Morrison say once a man was "holding his own when he was holding his own baby," and should not try to just hold his own in church work. I think the conclusion to be reached in this is that entirely too many of our churches are just holding their own and not making any progress or development. What we need is churches and official boards with a vision of greater things and that are willing to try to do something that is worth while for the kingdom of God.

FROM CHATHAM, LA.

Dear Mr. Editor: Here's wishing you a happy Christmas, and God's blessing upon you for another year. We were given a royal welcome here. We have had two poundings, and almost every day some one expresses in a material way, as well as by kindly word, his interest in our welfare.

We have sold the old parsonage, and have bought an acre of land, and have the foundation laid and a crew of hands will soon have a nice 5-room house for the pastor to move into. I feel proud of this house. The rooms will be large and nice, roomy closets built in, and two galleries.

This has been a very busy preacher, getting acquainted with the roads, mud holes, and with the people, and helping on the new building project in every way possible. Fraternally,

W. E. AKIN.

THE MID-YEAR MEETING OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

The mid-year meeting of the Executive Committee of the Woman's Missionary Council was held November 28 to December 2, 1921. Four days were spent in hearing reports of the officers and in transacting such business as could not be postponed until the regular meeting of the Council in April.

As echoes from this meeting we give below the outstanding items which show the great development and progress of the woman's missionary work.

Vashti Industrial School.

Since the last Council session the work of repairing, reconstructing, and remodeling the Vashti Industrial School for Dependent Girls, at Thomasville, Ga., has progressed. The farm has been refenced, fruit trees set out, and the large barn has been reroofed and lighted with electricity. Water, lights, and sanitary plumbing have been installed in the farmer's cottage. The contract has been let for the new dormitory that will accommodate forty-eight girls. This dormitory will cost $24,529.67 and will have hardwood floors, large sleeping porches, living room, library, and matron's room. There will be tiled floors in kitchen and baths and the entire building heated by steam and lighted by electricity. Vashti now has ninety-six girls on roll. The administration of the present superintendent, Miss Charlotte Dye, is businesslike, efficient, and deeply religious in tone.

Door of Hope, Macon, Ga.

The Door of Hope houses twenty-seven persons, including workers. This institution was taken over by the Woman's Missionary Council at its annual session of 1920 and is to be correlated with the Virginia K. Johnson School, at Dallas, Tex. The local committee of the Door of Hope and Mrs. R. W. Freeman, the Council worker appointed at the last session of the Council, are co-operating in an effort to fix the financial responsibility upon the fathers or upon the State for the maintenance of children born in the Door of Hope. The management is also following up vigorously the cases of seduction, the violation of the age of consent, and betrayal under the promise of marriage. One man was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary in October for violation of the age of consent, and another man is out on bond pending trial at the next session of the criminal court for the same offense. The Door of Hope, in addition to relieving individual human needs, has the following three-fold program:

1. Upholding a single standard of parenthood by fixing the responsibility of fatherhood and fatherhood's financial and moral obligations.

2. Protecting the helpless by prosecuting the criminal where there has been a crime.

3. Investigating the causes that lead to the moral tragedy of each young mother and a careful compilation of the facts thus discovered, with the constructive purpose in view of using this information to protect motherhood and childhood.

Italian Work at Birmingham.

The Italian work carried on in the suburb of Ensley, the great iron and coal center, has taken on new life with the completion of a handsome brick church for the Italian congregation. Reverend Mr. Caravallo is pastor. The new church has a membership of nearly one hundred adults. The building, which is free from debt, was erected with Centenary funds. This congregation was developed from the work at Ensley Community House under Miss Dorothy Crim, and she is radiantly happy over this fulfillment of her long-cherished dream of a church in her community. There are five thousand Italians in this community.

Houma, La.

The great outstanding need of the French mission field in Louisiana is reported to be educated Christian leadership, and Mrs. McCoy recommends the erection of a small vocational and agricultural school to be located at Houma, where nine bayous and the parish highways all converge. Fifteen thousand dollars of Centenary money was, by vote of the Executive Committee, loaned from another fund for the erection of this building.

Bluefield, W. Va.

No work in the Eastern Division sends in a more optimistic report than the Bluefield District. Six women are at work in this district, and the Advisory Board notifies the Secretary that they shall ask for eight workers at the next Council session. All the workers in this district are full of joy in their task. An urgent call has come for the erection of a Community House and workers' home at War, W. Va. In response to this call the Executive Committee voted that Centenary funds for this purpose be released and that plans and specifications be made for the building at once.

Oriental Work on the Coast.

In our Japanese work on the Pacific Coast there are three stations, one hundred and seventy-seven church members, eighty-one probationers, 4 Sunday schools with two hundred and thirty-two pupils, and three Epworth Leagues with forty-eight members. There are six Korean stations and missions with two hundred and fifty-nine members and four probationers and five Sunday schools with seventeen teachers and eighty-four pupils.

Foreign Work in the West.

Mrs. Downs reported that the Texas Conference is anxious to begin work with the Bohemians in that State. These people are as yet almost untouched by Protestantism. West, a town of some four or five thousand people, is in many respects an ideal place to begin this work. It is estimated that fully seventy-five per cent of the population of West is Bohemian, including many professional and business men. The majority of the people own their own homes, and the outlying district is peopled by well-to-do farmers of this nationality.

The East Oklahoma Conference requests that work be opened at Wilburton, Okla., which is the center of a large foreign population. There is only one Methodist church and a small chapel in the county. The East Oklahoma Conference offers to supplement with $400 the amount already offered by the people of Wilburton if the Council will give the balance and appoint a worker. The above proposals, being new enterprises, were postponed until annual Council meeting.

Rio De Janeiro.

The day schools of the Woman's Missionary Council in Rio at People's Central Institute, Villa Isabel, and Jardin Botanico Churches are correlated with Bennett College. The new pastor of the Villa Isabel Church is a converted priest, a splendid man, who was trained for architectural work in the Roman Catholic Church. He is to supervise the erection of the new church, parsonage, and day school buildings there. The workers at People's Central Institute up to this time have had no suitable residence. Plans were submitted for a cottage for the Council's workers, and authority was given by the Executive Committee for the immediate erection of this cottage.

GIRL HAD PAINFUL TIMES

Mothers—Read This Letter and Statement Which Follows

Portland, Indiana.—"I was troubled with irregularity and constipation and would often have to lie down because of pains. One Sunday my aunt was visiting us and she said her girls took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got well, so mother said she guessed she would let me try it. It is doing me good and I praise it highly. You are welcome to use this letter as a testimonial." — STELLA NEWTON, R. R. 8, Portland, Indiana.

Mothers—You should carefully guard your daughter's health. Advise her of the danger which comes from standing around with cold or wet feet, from lifting heavy articles, or overworking. Do not let her overstudy.

If she complains of headache, pains in back or lower limbs, or if you notice a slowness of thought, nervousness or irritability on the part of your daughter, give her careful attention.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an excellent medicine for your daughter to take, as it is especially adopted to relieve just such symptoms. Remember it contains nothing that can injure and can be taken in safety.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev R. H. Rodney, Sardis, Miss

A Happy New Year to our great teaching force in all our Sunday schools. Begin the year on your knees, remain in secret prayer until you can see the face of Him who is at the right hand of the Father, open your ears to hear what the Spirit has to say to you, and then you will understand the wish in the first line of this sentence.

When you are blue or discouraged it is God telling you that your soul is hungry, that you need to nourish your inner self upon the Bread of Life. Our troubles are not on the outside; they are heart troubles, troubles on the inside. God has promised to supply all our needs according to his riches in glory, by Christ Jesus. Is that not enough to make the heart happy?

Have you forgotten about that Missionary Special for your Sunday school? The time is flying by and boys and girls are perishing everywhere. God is calling us to work with him to carry the light of his love into the dark places of earth. Heed the cry before it is too late for some who are waiting to hear.

Boys and girls are eager to read, they are hungry. If they are not furnished with the right kind of reading matter, they will get hold of the vicious. Recently I have read five of the popular books; four had a real message, one was hurtful, had low ideas running through the story, coarse expressions gave the wrong kind of "spice" to the book. The church is making an effort to supply the best reading for our young people. They will never know about this effort upon the part of the church unless some one orders this literature and puts it into their hands. I have in mind the three new papers just issued, the Haversack for boys from 10 to 17; the Torchbearer for girls from 10 to 17; and Our Young People, for those 18 years and over. Give these papers a fair trial. If they are not eagerly read, write to the editors and tell them what you think.

We are anxious to find out what courses are preferred in our Training School to be held in Grenada College June 5-11, 1922. How many want a course in Story Telling instead of the elementary courses? If you are interested, write me as soon as you read this note.

How is it that some of our schools are crowded the year round? Such schools pay some attention to the organization of their adult, young people', senior, and intermediate classes. They also use the graded lessons for juniors, primaries, and beginners. They pay some attention to the laws of teaching. The teachers who are building character and making the young people love the church and our Lord are willing to study; they take their work seriously; they spend time on reading the best books and magazines. No one ever said all this is easy. The Cross was not easy for Christ to bear. Awake, thou that sleepest.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

I have had the pleasure and profit of being at home for the past two Sundays. One Sunday I spent with Galloway Memorial, and the other with Capitol Street.

I visited the Orphanage and conducted services for them two or three times. I trust that more of the Sunday schools will support the Orphans' Home this year than ever before.

I attended the Vicksburg District Stewards' Meeting. Dr. Jones starts the year well and there seems to be a very hopeful atmosphere. Brother Selby at Crawford Street starts well.

The District Stewards of the Jackson District met Thursday. This was a very fine meeting—a large, representative body. The work for the year was presented by those representing the different claims and all seemed to be in a cheerful mood.

The year starts well. Eight Wesley Bible Classes, one Four Times-a-Year Circuit Institute, and two Sunday schools have been organized since Conference.

The following Standard was adopted by the Sunday School Board for circuits with three or more schools:

1. Every school on the circuit open all the year.

2. The charge represented at the Conference Standard Training School, which meets at Jackson, June 8-14, 1922.

3. Sunday School Day observed by each school.

4. At least one person from each school enrolled in Teacher Training work.

5. Clean-Up-Fix-Up Day for each school, including grounds, cemetery, building inside and out, etc.

6. Circuit organization meeting at least twice a year.

7. (a) Each school supporting Orphans' Home. (b) Each school observing Missionary Day as provided in the Discipline.

8. Evangelism. Decision Day at least.

9. (a) Bible reading encouraged. (b) Children taught to pray.

10. (a) Tithing emphasized. (b) Sabbath observance emphasized.

Seven points out of ten place your school on the Roll of Honor. Points 1 and 7 are not optional.

In June 8-14, the Conference Standard Training School will be held at Jackson. Please let me hear from you as to prospective pupils. Cost, your railroad fare and $10. This $10 covers room and board and book. You will have to furnish sheets, towels, etc., and pencil and note books.

Let us make this the best and greatest school for religious development ever held anywhere.

Pray for the work and workers.

Yours in Him.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

Unimpeachable—If you were to see the unqualified volume of unimpeachable testimony in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla, you would upbraid yourself for so long delaying to take this effective medicine for that blood disease from which you are suffering.—Adv

CHRISTMAS EVE IN PARIS.

By William C. Carl, Mus. Doc.,
Organist and Director of the Music
First Presbyterian Church,
New York City.

Christmas eve in Paris for centuries past has been a magic word. When the night arrives the boulevards are always filled with gayly decorated booths extending from the Place de la Republique to the Church of La Madeline. Happy children in great numbers find what please them best at the Yule-tide season, and wander from one booth to the next, buying tempting articles. All Paris mingles with the throngs in brilliantly lighted thoroughfares until the time for the Midnight Mass. Then the churches are crowded with worshipers, offering their tribute to the Babe of Bethlehem.

The organ preludes are selected from the old Noels, many of which were arranged by Guilmant when he played at La Trinite—and there, in the organ gallery, the great master, surrounded by his pupils and friends, would play as if inspired, for Guilmant loved these old carols, and played them with a rare charm. First he would choose his Fantasic on two Christmas hymns—then in succession his Noel Brabacon, Noel Landuoclen, Noel Ecossais and Noel Saboly. Next the choir would sing one from Brittany, then one from Normandy, and again one from Alsace, so dear to all French hearts. It did not take many minutes for the pople to catch the Christmas spirit, for every one sings. Who in France does not know the charming Noels? No one who has attended can forget these services, for the people sing with rare enthusiasm and from the heart, producing a wonderful effect.

At St. Eustache, with Joseph Bonnet at the Grand Organ; Notre Dame Cathedral, with Louis Vierne; The Madeline, with Henri Dallier; St. Sulpice, with Charles Marie Widor, the old Noels, such as "Le petit Jesus," "Le Message des Anges," "Le Sommeil de l'enfant Jesus," "Les rois Magnes," "Le bel ange du ciel" are sung until the midnight hour approaches and Mass begins. At its conclusion, the organ is again heard in another Noel as the people slowly leave the church to join the happy crowds in the boulevards—for is it not Christmas and a feast of great joy? Surely the French understand and appreciate the spirit of Christmas.

THE CLASS OF 1922 OF THE MISSISSIPPI ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

On the 14th of December, 1919, sixteen young preachers made their way to Crystal Springs to be admitted on trial into the Mississippi Annual Conference, if found worthy.

On the morning of the 15th, we all came together at the old Methodist Church, where we were to be examined. Brother T. S. West and Brother B. Jones made the examination. All were received. This is one of the largest classes that have ever joined the Mississippi Conference and it is still the largest class in the Conference. In thirty-two years only two members of the class have died, and only one superannuated. Three left our ranks, hence only ten are in active service.

Three years ago when Conference met in McComb City, the class came together in a banquet; and at each session of the Annual Conference since, they have had a meeting. This year we met at the Edwards House, Jackson, Miss. The following members were present: G. H. Thompson, C. W. Crisler, J. T. Leggett, W. H. Lewis, J. C. Ellis, M. L. White, and B. W. Lewis. We had as our guest Brother G. W. Holloway. Rev. V. G. Clifford, Mrs. V. G. Clifford, Mrs. George Lipscomb, and Brother J. M. Session.

As Brother C. W. Crisler was leaving for another Conference, he gave us an impressive farewell message, promising to meet with us next year at Crystal Springs, where we joined thirty-two years ago.

A resolution was passed asking all the members of the class to write a short autobiography from the time he joined the Conference to the present, and forward the same to B. W. Lewis, Eden, Miss. It is hoped that each member of the class will comply with this request.

It is the earnest prayer that each member will have a prosperous year, and all of us be able to meet at Crystal Springs at the next Annual Conference.

B. W. LEWIS, Sec'y.

Eden, Miss.

MAKING BAD THINGS WORSE.

Winter, as if it were an evil spirit, seems to take delight in making bad things worse. Rheumatism twists harder, twinges sharper, catarrh becomes more annoying, and the many symptoms of scrofula are developed and aggravated. These are common diseases, and it is a wonder that more people don't get rid of them. Hood's Sarsaparilla has been very successful in the treatment of these complaints. It is easily obtained, and there is abundant testimony that its effects are radical and permanent. In cases where a laxative or cathartic is needed, it is well to supplement Hood's Sarsaparilla with Hood's Pills, which are gentle, thorough and effective.

FROM CAMPTI, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: Just a word from the Campti charge. We made our arrival here on November 22, and were most hospitably received by our people. In faet, we have been received all over the work with the usual Christian courtesy and hospitality that charaeterize our people.

We are looking forward to a great year, for we believe we are laboring with a people who will co-operate with their pastor in all he undertakes in the work of the kingdom. We have already made some progress on the work among our young people, having organized an Epworth League at Campti with a good membership, which makes two on the work, with the one at Davis Springs. Our first quarterly conference will be held at Campti, January 4, at which time stewards of the charge will make provisions for my support for the year, which I feel will be amply done. Some of our people are not unmindful of the needs of their pastor after a long and expensive move.

I am glad you spoke about the Advocate—I must get busy and get my dozen I pledged at Conferenge.

With best wishes and prayers that the old Advocate and the Editor may be used mightily the coming year in building the Kingdom.

Fraternally,
L. E. CROOKS.

THE TEST OF HUMILITY.

The test of humility is the capability of bearing a reproof or an affront without either anger or worry of mind. If I ean bear a slight reproof or an affront in this spirit, I am slightly humble; if I can bear a great reproof or insult I am very humble; if I can bear no reproof, no slight of any kind, I have no humillty at all.—The Seminary.

A SUGGESTION.

By Rev. W. C. Beasley.

Dear Brother Carley: I just have this word to say: December 8 was the occasion of the meeting of the District Stewards of Grenada, Miss. Our very efficient presiding elder, Rev. R. A. Tucker, called for a meeting of the pastors of the district at the same time. At this meeting, many very interesting things were said regarding our rural church. Some facts as given out by such men as Dr. J. R. Countiss, Grenada College; Rev. L. P. Wasson, Water Valley; Rev. J. W. Raper, Vaiden, and others, were appalling. The situation of our rural churches is grave and must have immediate attention, or we will suffer irreparable loss and hurt to our cause. One brother, who, by the way, has been in the ministry a long time, said, "It is the best meeting of the kind I've attended." It was a good meeting.

But one of the features that I especially enjoyed on this occasion was my visit and entertainment in Grenada College with my good friends, Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Stephens. As is well known, Brother Stephens has the Chair of Bible and Religious Education in the College. Why our church has not had such a department in our institutions until recently, I do not know. It was my pleasure to visit some of the classes and see what splendid work is being done in that department. As I saw this work carried on so splendidly, I felt the need in my own life. I feel that others have felt the same need. I am but the representative of a very large class.

Now, I am ready to say what I started out to say. Our Sunday School Training School, which meets at Grenada every year, is now a permanent meeting. They give us Religious Education of the best quality. But we have never had a course in the Bible offered us. Let's ask for a course this year. Certainly, we could not make a critical study of any book or group of books in ten days, but if the committee who arranges for the program will let us know before we go the course we are to take, it can be studied at home, and then, with a practical knowledge of our work, in ten days' spirited discussion, with a competent leader we could make it interesting and profitable. Certainly we could get a bird's-eye view.

Who says we do not need it? Who says we should not have it? Who says we do not have the place and the leader? Who will write Brother R. H. B. Gladney and other members of the Sunday School Board and ask for such a course? All in favor, say "Aye."

FROM LEESVILLE, LA.

The work here starts well. It was with sincere regret that we left our many friends at Amite, but we found a cordial reception awaiting us here. We were fed by the "pounding process" and great indeed was the pounding. It is still coming. All kinds of things came in for Christmas—a big turkey along with all the other things. We find here a people who are warm-hearted and kind.

The new elder, Brother J. Bloss Williams, came to us Sunday, December 18. He preached a great sermon. He held our first quarterly conference just after the service, and made such a splendid hit with the officials that they are still talking about the elder's visit.

We had three accessions to the church last Sunday morning. We married two couples last week. The prospects are bright for a great year. If you can possibly do it, Brother Carley, drop in on us this year; you will find a hearty welcome.

Yours truly,
LASTIE N. HOFFPAUIR.

DIFFERENCE IN MINDS.

To the living and affirmative mind difficulties and unintelligibilities are as dross, which successively rises to the surface and dims the splendor of ascertained and perceived truth, but which is cast away, time after time, until the molten silver remains unsullied; but the negative mind is lead, and, when all its formations of dross are skimmed away, nothing remains. —Coventry Patmore.

THE OTHER FELLOW'S SIDE.

When you're forming your opiuions,
Do it carefully—go slow;
Hasty judgments oft are followed
By regretting—that I know;
And in argument be careful
Not too quickly to deride—
Try to look upon the subject
From the other fellow's side.

Ah, if we would use but caution,
And a little less of self;
Think a little more of kindness,
And a little less of pelf;
Try to help the other fellow,
Not to hurt him—don't you see
How much fairer, brighter, better,
This old world of ours would be?

O'er and often I've discovered
That the other fellow knew
Lots of things about some subjects
Which I didn't think were true;
And I'd still be groping vainly
In my flick'ring light and dim,
If I hadn't hesitated
And hearkened unto him.

Keep the path your mind would travel,
Broad and open all the way;
Walk with Wisdom's comrade, Caution,
Heeding all he has to say;
And no matter what arises,
Ere against it you bave cried,
Try to look upon the subject
From the other fellow's side.

THE EDUCATION OF THE MINISTRY.

By Rev. E. N. Evans.

That our church must have a better educated ministry, there can be no argument. That our colleges are the best and shortest route to this desired end, there can be no question. That our church has all the while stood for higher education, is a fact, and it stands to our credit. That we need and must have our colleges enlarged, better equipped and more generously endowed, is a pressing and vital matter. That some men who never went to college have succeeded and done great work in the Christian ministry, is no argument against the college or men of collegiate training. And it may be readily admitted that these men might have doue greater work if they had had these advantages. Even more—it is desirable that all our young men in their preparation for the ministry have not only two, but four or more years in our colleges or universities, or both.

Yet the resolution or memorial passed by our leaders in our great and wise Educational Movement, at their meeting in Memphis last week, will not, and should not meet with the approval of our General Conference at Hot Springs next May. Our church is not yet ready to discount the noble men who have wrought so nobly in our making, and in the buildihg up of God's kingdom in our midst. It is not altogether how or where a man got his knowledge. The absence of collegiate training does not always mean an ignorant man, nor does such training always mean a competent man for this or any other great work. WE WANT MEN. And we still need both those who come through the colleges and those who by the dint of persistent effort duly inform themselves and are prepared to serve acceptably in our church or elsewhere. The big capitals after a man's name are often disappointing in the results attained. We make no plea for ignorant men in the Christian ministry, but we do claim and have always recognized the fact that the college is not the only school or the only way. Our church has wisely avoided any endorsement of an educational autocracy, and will continue to do so. Don't be alarmed; this is no new question that our "Elder Statesmen" shall meet and settle again next May. The needed improvement can and will be had through our Conference Committees.

WORTH REMEMBERING.

To be glad of life, because it gives you the chance to love and to work and to play and to look up at the stars;

To be satisfied with your possessions, but not content until you have made the best of them;

To despise nothing in the world except falsehood and meanness, and to fear nothing except cowardice;

To be governed by your admirations rather than by your disgusts;

To covet nothing that is your neighbor's except his kindness of heart and gentleness of manners;

To think seldom of your enemies, often of your friends, and every day of Christ;

And to spend as much time as you can with body and with spirit in God's out-of-doors—

These are little guideposts on the footpath of peace.—Henry Van Dyke.

POSITIVE CHRISTIANITY.

There are many good Christian people, whose piety is above question, who, nevertheless, are not living the positive Christian life. There is that indictment against them that "all men speak well of them." If all men were righteous, such a reputation would be consistent with the higbest type of loyalty to Christ; but they are not; many daily dishonor him. When one is always and unflinchingly uncompromising with sin, he will soon or late get the ill will of somebody who advocates it in one form or another. The torch and the fagot may be no longer applied in persecution, but the sneer, the scornful remark, and the tongue of slander are still available. Paul included Christians of all ages when he said to Timothy: "All who will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution."—Selected.

ASTHMA CURED BY SIMPLE REMEDY

Famous Druggist Discovers Simple Remedy for Asthma and Makes Generous FREE TRIAL Offer to Readers.

Thirty years ago Mr. C. Leavengood, a widely known Kansas druggist, discovered a simple, easy to take prescription for Asthma— he gave it to people who had suffered for years and, to their amazement, they say they were easily cured—these people told their friends, and in this way thousands have found the sure way to cure Asthma. Mr. Leavengood feels so confident that his prescription will cure in all cases that he generously offers to send a big bottle on 10 days' Free Trial to any reader of this paper who will write for it. If it cures pay $1.25, otherwise you owe nothing. Send no money—just write to C. LEAVENGOOD, 1648 S. W. Blvd. Rosedale, Kansas, and the big bottle will be mailed immediately.—Adv.

NEW ORLEANS
CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 69—No. 2. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3139.

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, JANUARY 12, 1922. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

"GIVE GOD A CHANCE."

The above slogan of the Gipsy Smith campaign in New Orleans is not irreverent. It does not reflect upon the power of God nor put any limitations about him other than those which God himself has fixed. Jesus wept over the city of his fathers and lamented, "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent into thee; how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings, and ye would not! In giving man a will, and we cannot see how there can be any moral responsibility and accounting without the will to choose, God gave man the awful power to frustrate his gracious designs toward man. Not until God makes a square a circle, between which he has set an irreconcilable difference, will he make man good against man's will to be good, and therefore break his will and make him less than a man, an automaton, a machine. God's blessings for man are as boundless as his own universe, and they are not limited by any lack or unwillingness on his part. But they may be sadly limited by our failure to receive them. How then should we "give God a chance" to work his will in us whatever that will may be. R. H. H.

GOD BROUGHT HIS LOVE.

On Monday in the noon meeting of Gipsy Smith he said that God did not send his love into the world but that he brought his love to the world in the life of Jesus Christ. And so this is the glory of the gospel that divine Love is not sent to earth but divine Love comes to earth. We must realize that to do the best work the followers of Christ must go into the midst of the people for whom Christ died—to bear the message as well as send it. Hard as it is for some people to contribute to Missions, doing that is far easier than going to the Mission field, easier than sending your own son or daughter. We must have more than a proxy service—we must have those who are ready to go, if need be, as well as those who provide the means for the workers to go. And whether we go or send we must have the spirit of real love, of sympathy and kinship with all the people of God. R. H. H.

VALUE OF RIGHT HABIT.

The wheel of an engine has dead points and centers, where the engine can exert no direct power over the machinery. The wheel has to rely on the impulse already received to carry it past the dead point. It goes over this point by the force of habit. The soul reaches dead points in its spiritual history. Perhaps some great trial has come, some change in circumstances; perhaps there is a temporary loss of interest; if one considers only the state of his feelings to-day, he would desert his closet and the place of prayer. Of course the effect of this would be to aggravate the spiritual ill whence it comes. Then is the time when religious habit is invaluable. It carries the man past the dead point—keeps him in the path of duty; and soon the way of duty becomes also the way of happiness.—Helpful Thoughts.

I WILL NOT DOUBT.

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

I will not doubt, though all my ships at sea
Come drifting home with broken masts and sails;
I will believe the hand which never fails
From seeming evil worketh good for me.
And though I weep because the sails are tattered,
Still will I cry, while my best hopes lie shattered:
"I trust in Thee."

I will not doubt, though all my prayers return
Unanswered from the still, white realm above;
I will believe it is an all-wise love
Which has refused these things for which I yearn;
And though at times I cannot keep from grieving,
Yet the pure ardor of my fixed believing
Undimmed shall burn.

I will not doubt, though sorrows fall like rain,
And troubles swarm like bees about a hive;
I will believe the heights for which I strive
Are only reached by anguish and by pain;
And though I groan and writhe beneath my crosses,
I yet shall see through my severest losses.
The greater gain.

I will not doubt. Well anchored is the faith.
Like some staunch ship, my soul braves every gale;
So strong its courage that it will not quail
To breast the mighty unknown sea of death.
O may I cry, though body parts with spirit,
"I do not doubt," so listening worlds may hear it,
With my last breath.

A GUIDE TO HAPPINESS IN 1922.

By Hon. J. B. Thornhill.

In Proverbs 27:1 we find these words: "Boast not thyself of to-morrow, for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth."

Demosthenes says: "No man can tell what the future may bring forth, and small opportunities are often the beginning of great enterprises."

Shakespeare tells us that "we know what we are, but not what we may be."

So, my friends, it would be unbecoming in me to attempt to say what the new year promises us. It is largely a matter of what we make it. But I do want to tell you what I believe to be a way to make 1922 the happiest year you have ever spent.

In all ages the search for happiness has been the ultimate aim and desire of human effort—happiness here and hereafter. When a common purpose actuates all men, it may seem strange that human life should be so diversified in method and so contrasted in achievement. It is in the idea of happiness, however, wherein men differ. To some happiness means fame; to others honor; to others wealth, and to others knowledge. Whether it be one or several of these, or something else, one must have an aim in life to live to good purpose. The ideal dominates the life, determines the character and fixes a man's place among his fellows. An ideal is above price. It must be far enough above us to keep us looking all of the time and must be far enough in advance of us to keep us struggling toward it to the end of life. Though it may never be attained, we are better for the effort. The highest ideal of human life this world has ever seen was that presented by the Man of Galilee, and the Bible says of him that "He went about doing good." Man was made to be happy especially through his own activities.

Every singer who has sung a pure, joyous song has given something to earth to make it better. Every artist who has painted a worthy and noble picture, or made the smallest thing of beauty which will stay in the world, has added something to the enriching of our human lives. Every lowly Christian who has lived a true, courageous life amid trials and temptations has made it a little easier for others to live right. Every one who has let fall into the stream of life wholesome words, good deeds and divine lessons has put into the current of humanity a handful of spices to sweeten a little the bitter waters. It is always worth while to live nobly, victoriously struggling to do right, showing the world even the smallest fragment of divine beauty. Few are called to do great deeds in life, but "he who does the best his circumstances allow does well, acts nobly; angels could do no more."

Our happiness, strength and ability to rise above the trials, troubles and conditions that surround us depend on our being in harmony with the divine. Without the union of the human and the divine no man can understand his true place and work in the world. He may be as rich as Rockefeller, as great as Alexander, and as wise as Solomon, but without this harmony in character he will ultimately be a failure. He must bring out the best development possible of body and spirit, of mind, conscience, heart and soul. This is the end; all else ought to be regarded as the means.

Therefore, that is not the most successful life in which a man gets the most pleasure, the most money, the most power or place, honor or fame, but that in which a man is most serviceable to his race and honorable to his Maker. His walk may be humble and his deeds unsung, but He whose great roll of honor bears no unworthy names and leaves no true life unrecorded, will recognize and reward such a life. For such a career a crown is being prepared, wrought by no human hands, but set around with gems that shine with luster fadeless as the stars.

So, my friends, let this be our guide to happiness for the year 1922:

"If I can help my fellow-man by thought, or word, or deed,
I'll feel my life has been well spent, I'll worry not of creed
If I can bring a smile of joy to eyes bedimmed with tears,
I'll worry not of sects, or isms; I'll free my thoughts of fears.
If I can lend a helping hand to one less strong than I,
Of heaven I'll reap here on this earth, not in some distant sky."

A VISIT TO THE ORIENT.

By Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker.

VIII.

China.

Flooded fields and bankfull canals and general wetness everywhere were not to the advantage of this west-central portion of China as show-off conditions; but the aesthetic dreariness becomes absolutely negligible when one sees the plight into which it plunges the peasants. It is the rice harvest, but the fields are full of water and the loss of the harvest means in this region a repetition of what befell northern China last spring and winter. With indifferncе to hard labor and with ingenuity that is proverbial the peasants have partly overcome their difficulties: standing in the water they cut the rice with their short sickles and tied it in bundles with bands made of straw and hung them over bamboo poles supported by trusses of the same indispensable material. What the Chinese would do without bamboo it is hard to imagine; fences, framing materials, furniture and innumerable other necessities depend upon bamboo, and in the spring the tender shoots are eaten much as we eat asparagus. In a practically treeless country bamboo is among the greatest of material blessings. Of the threatening need of these poor people I thought and so did not mind the rain and gloom through which I went to see the Huchow Hospital, the little rented community center and the excellent schools, at both of which I was permitted to speak to the student body.

The schools are conducted in line with the thoroughness that has always been characteristic of our educational work in China—that under the Council being presided over by Miss Stanford and that affiliated with Soochow University by Mr. Eates. The Community Center is a two-story Chinese house, once a shop and residence, where are a school, an industrial work, evangelistic preaching, Sunday schools, and other forms of service are carried on. The building is, like most Chinese houses, ill lighted, damp, inconvenient and exposed. But a fine piece of land has been purchased with Centenary money in the midst of the populous city and adequate buildings are soon to be erected in which to carry on the manifold work of the gospel in its threefold ministry of service, preaching and teaching. The church on the compound can never reach the city masses, although admirably situated for a school chapel and a gospel ministry to a limited community.

The hospital is a union organization, conducted under the Northern Baptist Board and our own Board. Like the community center this is an old residence converted into a hospital. It lacks everything that we commonly regard as essential to a hospital, yet these indefatigable men, Drs. Manget and Nelson, with their Chinese assistants, have made it to accomplish wonders. Until this year the operating table was a homemade affair, and yet upon it these skillful surgeons have performed wonderful operations. They have ingeniously provided for laboratories, in which thoroughly scientific methods of diagnosis and study are followed. The system of records for out-patients and in-patients is modern; the pharmacy is well equipped and the nurses manage to exist in narrow quarters, but are unable to have the freedom that they need for health's sake. The exigencies of space compel the management to use the same wards for surgical and other patients, and I saw an attendant washing bandages on a small porch overhanging the canal—there was nowhere else. One of the things the hospital needs immediately is a light plant. The danger from fire is great, as lamps and candles must be used at peril of making a crematory of the building; there is not a foot of land that is not under cover; the building cannot be screened; there is no proper place for an X-ray machine and some other instruments. The gentry of the city have purchased and presented to the Hospital an admirable piece of land, which, with another piece purchased for the erection of residences for the physicians and nurses, is eight hundred feet in length. Money will be forthcoming in the Centenary to construct the needed buildings, to which will be added $20,000 by the China Medical Board.

Through the courtesy of the Rev. J. L. Hendry, presiding elder of the Huchow District, I was enabled to enjoy a canal boat trip of a different character from that which landed me at Huchow in the dreary drizzle at midnight. Mr. Hendry has his own boat, in which a great deal of his district visiting is done. It is well arranged for "light housekeeping" and when towed by a steam launch affords rapid travel; even when rowed it is comfortable. Within and without the boat is surfaced with "ningpo" varnish, which is so hard and durable that the manufacturers of "valspar" might gain a few ideas from this native product. Through the night, after much conversation and a concluding prayer, we slept, and at six in the morning were landed at the stone steps that lead from a branch of the Grand Canal up to the street that divides Soochow University from the Laura Haygood School for Girls. The scene in the early morning was beautiful indeed as the slant rays of the sun made golden bars of the mist veil that hung over the earth. On each side of the well paved street rise high, handsome brick walls, which are pierced on the right as one walks from the landing by the gateway to the teachers' residences at Laura Haygood, and a little farther on by the entrance and porter's lodge by which one enters the campus; and yet farther up the street are the old buildings of the Mary Black Hospital, now used as the Language School of Soochow University. Yet beyond one comes to a handsome two-story building with the distinctive Chinese architectural expression, the entrance to the new Soochow Hospital, also intended as a lodging house for interns and for the out clinic. Behind this imposing structure the walls of the new hospital have risen above the second story, and still further up the street are a missionary residence and St. John's Church. This description has anticipated my walk; for I went no further on that early morning than the handsome arched portal of Soochow University, through which Mr. Hendry guided me; but I must again anticipate by pointing out the buildings that I afterwards saw on the left side of the street. Beyond the University are the residences of Dr. Snell and Dr. Park, the latter originally built by the sainted Bishop Lambuth and occupied by him as a residence, a large residence now occupied as the dormitory for the Language School, and the buildings at present occupied by the hospital.

Within the wall that surrounds the campus a short walk brings one to the residence of Professor Nance, the Acting President, an early riser and therefore prompt to admit his guest and supplement the comforts of the canal boat with bath and breakfast. Nance is one of those men whom it is good to see. The intense earnestness that has characterized him from the time when he went to China shortly after his visit to the Louisiana Conference in 1899 at Jackson down to this good day is still coupled with geniality and joyous sociability. He is a remarkable Chinese scholar, having mastered not only the colloquial but the written language, an achievement of very few missionaries, and he is an able administrator; withal an humble and devout follower of the Master. In his pamphlet on "Modernism" Mr. Charles G. Rankin accuses this good man of several sorts of heresy, and since Prof. Nance took occasion at the Board of Missions meeting last April to deny these allegations, Mr. Rankin repeats them and adds that they have been subsequently denied. It is a pity that a Christan man should make capital of what he at the same time admits to be at least questioned; it is strange that a Christian lawyer should slip in evidence that is inadmissible, knowing that it will be ruled out, but nevertheless have its influence with the jury.

The China Conference was not to open until the day following, October 19th, but the lectures that I was to deliver at the chapel hour each day at the University began on the day of my arrival and continued through eight days. To see the eager faces of between four and five hundred youths lifted to one whose message must penetrate not only interpretation into an utterly strange language, but minds that are adjusted to a register of thought and interest very different from that of the messenger, is to increase the ordinary anxiety of public speech. Preaching can be made very simple and the field of illustration may be found in the Bible and one's own experience, but as I wished in this case to study the Bible with the students through its literary forms and am in the habit of making large quotations from the magnificent and holy language of the Authorized Version and illustrating many points by historical and literary allusions to the life and thought of the Occident, I am afraid that I placed a heavy burden upon the polite Chinese teachers who enabled me to deliver the messages. I greatly enjoyed these meetings despite their limitations, but I sometimes coveted for my audience the English attainments of the McTyeire School. It would not be fair to Soochow not to say that many of the students are quite proficient in English and frequently I noticed the glow of appreciation in their faces before the interpreter had put it over; but the under class men usually need assistance.

Years ago there was a small day school operated in Soochow in a building given by Mr. George Buffington, of Erlanger, Ky., and known as Buffington Institute. Dr. A. P. Parker here taught also the admirable Dr. D. L. Anderson. At the great Missionary Conference in New Orleans in 1901, a sum of over fifty thousand dollars was given under the spell of Bishop Galloway's address on Master Missionaries, the first subscription of one thousand being made by a Chinese. In that day this offering was unprecedented. To-day it seems not so large, but it was the means of developing Soochow University out of the small beginning and making of it the great educational institute that it has become. The main building still stands, an ornament, a memorial and a useful administration building; Anderson Hall flanks it on the east; on the west Science Hall will soon rise to speak of the greater things of the Centenary; farther south on the campus are the athletic field and the dormitories.

The theological department of the University has been succeeded by a union seminary at Nanking, which is conducted under the authority of the two Methodist Episcopal Missionary Boards, the Northern and Southern Presbyterian Boards and the Northern Christian Association. Candidates for the degree of Bachelor of Divinity are recommended by the Seminary and the degree conferred by the University.

The genius and popularity of Dr. W. H. Park have made Soochow Hospital one of the noted institutions of China. Until the Centenary its work seemed destined to remain in the present inadequate quarters, where, with his associates, Drs. Snell and Henry; Dr. Parks still pursues his benevolent work; but all is now changing. A thoroughly modern hospital building, which, in America, could not be built for a quarter of a million dollars, is rising. Dr. Snell, one of the most gifted surgeons and determined Christian administrators, is giving personal attention to the building. Finding it difficult to get brick, he established a brick yard; lacking a supervising engineer, he has used his spare time in putting the work through. Years ago I heard Snell in making an address before his first setting out for China refer to the rumor of his own difficulties in securing his medical education and say: "There are no difficulties!" Yes, there are many difficulties, but he is of the type that make little of them and overcome. Dr. Park has struggled with difficulties and has overcome through patience and tact and genuine goodness. Probably he is the most loved citizen of Soochow to-day. He was decorated as a mandarin under the old Empire; and, during the brief time that he was declaring himself Emperor, Yuan Shih-K'ai bestowed another honor upon Dr. Park the like of which he bestowed upon only one other person.

Many were the reminiscences of providential aid and guidance with which Dr. Park entertained me from time to time. Here a piece of land had been acquired in a remarkable way; here another. It must be remembered that buying land in China is an art more difficult than international diplomacy. The acquisition of a cemetery is one of these romances of land buying. The plot of ground fronts the Grand Canal and already begins to have the atmosphere of Christian resignation and heavenly rest that we associate with the city of the dead. On the right of the main walk lies the body of the Rev. R. D. Smart, who preceded Bishop Lambuth but a little while in the better land. He was a noble and accomplished spirit and it will not be easy to find one to take his place in the mission. He died of cholera in the performance of his duties. A Gothic mortuary chapel is rising in the midst of the cemetery, the gift of Judge John S. Candler of Atlanta, Ga.

Toward the western side of the city is the Mo-cha Garden, formerly known as Miss Atkinson's school for girls. Within the high walls are four courts that divide the buildings in Chinese style, but the buildings are modern and Western. Beside the girls' school, there is an embroidery school, in which girls who otherwise would not be permitted to go to school at all and older women are taught to make the most exquisite embroidery and thereby add needed gain to their slender means. Other forms of social service are here carried on as opportunity and means admit. In the neighborhood the Chinese congregation of West Soochow Church have purchased land at the expense of $5000 (Mex.) upon which there is to be built a Centenary church much needed. I was unable to visit the great institutional work that is being conducted under the Rev. R. T. Henry in the Central Soochow Circuit, but enjoyed a pleasant dinner at the new mission home occupied by him and a renewal of friendship with Mrs. Henry, an Epworth League volunteer of the old Corpus Christi days. Mr. Henry had just experienced the loss of a fine hunting dog, stolen by a Chinese, and had recovered the carcass just as it was being prepared for a meal, for the Oriental appreciates a ragout of fat dog. Some one expressed the hope that we should not have sausage for dinner, and the hope was realized, nor did the thief enjoy that viand in the police cell, to which his evil deed against the dog had consigned him.

I have not spoken of the Conference and the Mission Meeting that followed hard upon the adjournment of Conference. The sadness that was experienced and the feeling of loss on account of Bishop Lambuth's passing were very manifest. Dr. A. P. Parker was elected President of each organization, and business went off as rapidly as was consistent with thoroughness. At the concluding session of the Mission a report was adopted recommending that the Conference enter the Manchurian field for work with Chinese. This was in accordance with Bishop Lambuth's desire. They are already doing mission work in far western Yunnan, but will still further branch out. Both missionaries and Chinese eagerly seek to carry out every known wish of Bishop Lambuth. Such devotion and loyalty and love I have never before seen. When the report was adopted there was a distinct consciousness of the presence of the Holy Spirit. Dr. Russell of the Chang Chow Hospital and Prof. Ritter of the Nanking Seminary declared themselves willing to go to Manchuria, the more so as both speak Mandarin, the language of that Province, which is quite different from the Soochow dialect. Others spoke of the abiding influence of the departed Bishop and declared anew their consecration. Under Christ he is still a uniting and inspiring power in the church.

A SUPERANNUATE HAS HEARD BIG PREACHERS.

By Rev. T. W. Adams.

About a dozen sermons I have heard in my life of seventy-two years remain in my memory as among its best treasures. The preachers delivering them impressed me so strongly that their impress is still upon me. It is a great blessing to any man to hear preaching that grips him, and to hear preachers who move him in such a wonderful way that he remains indefinitely under the spell of their personal power. Such has been my experience on a few occasions. It has been good for me. Thank God for all such experiences.

About sixty-five years ago I heard Dr. Light preach at Sharon. I was too young to remember the text or anything he said in preaching, but in some strange way I was impressed that the sermon was a great one. I recollect that when the services were concluded, and we had left the church, my father, a preacher himself and a very capable judge of preaching, said to some of his friends, "I would be happy to live to hear 'Bunk' preach such a sermon as Dr. Light preached today." I recollect that as if it had happened yesterday. What my father said that day has been used by the Spirit to call and pull me in the right way.

My Father lived to see me licensed to preach, and heard me in the pulpit a few times. On one occasion, at Lone Pine, Madison County, he heard me, and looked as if he thought that Dr. Light, nor any other preacher, could beat that preaching. The Lord was with us in great power. There were but few, if any, eyes dry. My father sat in the front pew, with head held high, face flushed and tears pouring down from his eyes. My subject was the "Love of Christ." It was a tender and precious hour. I remember my father as he looked that day more clearly, possibly, than at any other time of his life. I love to have my memory to hang on that happy picture.

My readers will understand, of course, that I cannot have the temerity to undertake to draw a pen-picture of Bishop Galloway as a preacher. In the pulpit and on the platform he was peerless. His wonderful physique, his marvelous voice, his graceful poise, and his matchless vocabulary conspired to make him the dominant pulpit orator of all the country. While I was always glad to hear him and never failed to be moved and inspired by him, I got most good from him in personal association. He was my friend; his friendship and esteem were of the greatest value to me. That his family chose me as one of the active pallbearers on the sad occasion of his burial is a fact of grateful memory.

At one session of our Conference I heard Dr. J. D. Barbee preach a great sermon from the text recorded in John's Gospel, sixth chapter and sixty-sixth and sixty-seventh verses: "Then said Jesus unto the twelve, will ye also go away? Then Simon Peter answered him, Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life." That was the best sermon on eternal life I ever heard. His analysis was splendid; his diction was faultless; his spiritual insight was clear; his pulpit mannerism was above criticism. It was a really great sermon. I admired, and honored, and loved Dr. Barbee. I had no patience with the fanatical "muck-raking" that leveled poisoned shafts at this great and good man. He was a great, useful and good man.

At a session of our Conference Bishop E. R. Hendrix preached on John 10:10: "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." That was a great sermon, viewed from any angle. There was more of the Spirit's power in that sermon than in any other one I have heard from him. It was a great feast to me, intellectually and spiritually. He gave us ravishing visions of the "more abundant life." His interpretative sense was very fine; his English was classical; his mysticism was charming. The common evaluation of Bishop Hendrix's pulpit ability is entirely too low, in my judgment—he is one of the greatest pulpit men of our church. I have regretted so much his connection with the Vanderbilt fiasco. It was such a great pity.

At Jackson, Sunday evening, during Conference, I heard Dr. C. W. Carter preach. The Spirit moved him, and he preached the audience up to the "third heaven." That was one of the great hours of my life. "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death," was the text. As the grand old man pictured the glorious victory through Jesus Christ, the Conference was thrilled. We all cried and shouted. We certainly made the house ring. Everybody seemed to be happy, and seemed unwilling to let anybody glorify God more vociferously than himself. If I were to live to be a thousand years old I would never forget the rapture of that hour.

Dr. Carter was uncertain as a preacher. If not in a preaching mood, he would deliver a neat sermonette about twenty minutes long. They were always neatly put up, and bound, so to speak, in silk ribbons. They were pretty little things; but when the preaching spirit gripped him, he was sublime. With one exception, he was the greatest preacher I ever heard.

A sermon I'll never forget was preached by Dr. Linus Parker, afterwards Bishop Parker. He preached on "The Witness of the Spirit." It was simplicity in its perfection. I am sure I never heard purer Anglo-Saxon. Every sentence of the sermon could have been understood by any normal child ten years of age. The great truths of the sermon went to all of our hearts and searched them through and through. It was a very trying and helpful sermon to me. Would that we had more preaching like that! Why don't we?

More than forty years ago, on a Conference occasion, I had the greatest pulpit treat of my life; I heard three giants in one day. Bishop Keener preached at 11 o'clock a.m. His text was taken from the thirteenth verse of the eighth chapter of St. Matthew. He dwelt on Cornelius' care of the sick servant. This pointed the Christian duty of masters. He then looked into the faith of Cornelius, and then into the question of faith in general. My, what a wonderful sermon! I have heard Bishop Keener preach many times, but I never heard him preach like he did that day. He reached the nth power. He impressed me as the personal embodiment of Wesleyanism. His very posture, his face, his eyes, and his movements were declarative of mastery. "This is right—I know it is right. This is the truth—I know it is the truth." Everything about him was assertive of certainty. The immense congregation hung on his wonderful periods as they saw him move with a master's tread in the realm of revealed truth. That was sure enough preaching, Henry. I wish you could have heard this great preacher in his palmy days.

Dr. R. A. Young preached at 3 p.m. "He was a burning and shining light." His picture of John the Baptist as a flaming prophet of God stirred my heart. I was a very young preacher; I was up for deacon's orders. That sermon has stayed with me about forty-two years. Dr. Young was about 7 feet in height, and weighed about 300 pounds. His physique gave me the idea of immensity. The sermon showed that his brain was as big as his body.

Dr. A. W. Wilson, afterwards Bishop Wilson, preached at night. In reading and in prayer his voice worried me. It was the most peculiarly droll voice I had ever heard. It grated on me. But when he had preached five minutes or a little more, I forgot all about his voice, or more truly, was so thrilled by his burning periods that I fell in love with the queer voice. He dug deep into the mines and brought up great golden nuggets of truth and served them to us as we sat as in a spell. He preached on the "Atonement." That was the greatest sermon I ever heard. The congregation was thoroughly responsive. The Spirit was with us in great power. I heard Bishop Wilson at Birmingham in a 10-minute protest against the plan to "revise our faith," under discussion in the General Conference of 1906. For pure oratory, I never heard the equal of it. I looked at him and listened to him with a feeling of unreality. It seemed to me that he was inspired. The leaders in that foolish and very menacing movement saw that their case was lost if the Conference should vote on it at once. They sought and got an adjournment. That alone saved them from rout. I wish we had him now to lead us in our fight against "unification."

THE OLD AND NEW COVENANTS.

By Rev. Samuel L. Fain.

(Foreword By Rev. Payton A. Sowell.)

To my mind, there is a growing sense of appreciation for the "old." There is richness in "old friendships." There is a charm in those things that were, and were a part of an order, far beyond the hills that separate the present from the past.

It pains my spirit to hear slight estimates of the ancient, or earlier Scriptures. Of one thing we are sure. Jesus had great respect for them. I cannot think of the beautiful finish of the New Testament, without admiring the deep and long-since laid foundations of the old Scriptures.

Any interpretation, any terms, by which the Old is made of no value, is disturbing to my spirit.

St. Paul's arguments, and in the 'Hebrews' (whether by Paul or not) seem to teach the passing of One covenant, and the coming in of a better one.

In this, I have thought, the difficulty chiefly lies in the inability to discriminate in the use of words. When I can make myself take the time to say, "The law of ordinances," I appear to have a composure of view.

I have a very dear friend, now with a snow-crowned head, and a little past midway between seventy and eighty—a superannuate of the Tennessee Conference, Rev. Samuel L. Fain.

I have great confidence in interpretations made by his thoughtful mind. He was a graduate of Emory and Henry, about the time Drs. Steel and Werlein were there.

I asked him to write me his understanding of the "Old and New Covenants," as they seemed to be set forth in the Epistles, especially in Hebrews.

The following is his reply. I only connect the parts into a newspaper article, and copy the language of the Scriptures, where he gave only the numbers of chapters and verses.

Dear Brother Sowell: I hardly know what to say, as to writing on the "Covenants." The subject has been to me an intricate and tangled one, but I believe I am clearer on it in my mind than I was once.

(a) The covenant that God made with Abraham, was, of course, long before there was any "House of Israel."

Abraham was Israel's grandfather. He was the great grandfather of the "heads of the twelve tribes."

That covenant with Abraham belongs to the whole world. The whole world is to share in its promised benefits.

That covenant cannot pass away, nor be abrogated. Its benefits can never cease. It is continuous not only with time but with eternity also.

(b) This covenant God entered into in person. There was no mediator. Gal. iii, 16. "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made," and verse 20: "Now a mediator is not a mediator of one; but God is one."

Gen. xvii:9-10, "And God said unto Abraham, 'thou shalt keep my covenant.' * * * 'This is my covenant, which ye shall keep between me and you and thy seed. * * * '"

This covenant God made to confirm Abraham's faith in the "Promise." He gave the command for circumcision, and enjoined it upon Abraham, as a "seal" of the righteousness of his faith in the "Promise."

This "Promise" was not given simply to Abraham and his natural descendants, but embraces all mankind who accept the "Promise." Gal. iii:9: "So then they which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham." Rom. iv:12: "And the father of circumcision, to them who are not of the circumcision only, but who also walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham, which he had being yet uncircumcised." Verse 13: "For the promise, that he should be the heir of the world, was not to Abraham, or to his seed, through the law, but through the righteousness of faith." Gal. iii:29: "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." Such a covenant is imperishable, because made by God himself, and is a covenant of promise, and the beneficiaries share in these promises by the same faith that Abraham shared in them.

(c) The "House of Israel" was not known as such, in this technical way, until the "Sinaic Covenant" had been made, and they had been organized, and had become an independent nation, having laws and institutions which they covenanted with God to keep. For some reason, a good one, no doubt, this covenant, rather than the covenant God made with Abraham, is called the "First Covenant," made with the "House of Israel"; also called the "Old Covenant." Considered as a covenant with organized Israel, it was the "first" and the "old" covenant with the "House of Israel."

(d) This covenant embraced civil laws, moral laws and laws of regulation, which included the long catalogue of "ceremonial" observances used in the exercise of their religion. (1) Their civil laws have become the foundation of civil codes throughout the Christian world, because founded upon the eternal principles of right. So they fit into Christian civilization, even in the purest forms in which we know it.

(2) The moral law is eternal, self-existing, since it is of the very essence of God: "God is love."

It appears that the moral law had never been formally (in form of enactment or decalogue) given to the world until given to the House of Israel, at Mt. Sinai. Rom. v, 13: "For until the law sin was in the world, but sin is not imputed where there is no law."

(3) The religion, or the manifestation of it, in its exercise, by Israel as it came from Moses, along with this covenant with the House of Israel, consisted of a great number of forms and ceremonies, which were symbolic in their nature and teaching, all looking to the coming of the dispensation of Christ.

I cannot handle them; indeed, I have never tried, as I have felt no particular need of them.

It is evident that those of Israel who expected to be saved through the law at the same time lost sight of or disregarded the "Promise."

By accepting the law and having no faith in the Covenant of Promise, all such became children of "Agar," or "children of the law," and therefore in bondage, and in such state not entitled to the blessings of the "Promise," since they are under a curse. Gal. iii, 10: "For as many as are of the works of the law are under the curse." Gal. iii, 13: "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law." Gal. iii, 18: "For if the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise; but God gave it to Abraham by promise."

Without faith, the faith that looks beyond the law, the cold, lifeless law, so far as salvation is concerned, the law is a failure. It can do nothing but convict, condemn, and punish, even to death. But, with faith in the "Promise," it is written in our hearts, or it is shed abroad in our hearts, for it is the "law of love."

The children of faith are the children of promise, and they are "free born," being born into the family of God. The law teaches us that we are sinners, and shows us how helpless we are. It was designed to show the Jew that he was a sinner and under the curse, so that he might turn to Him that was promised, and be set free.

The Israelite, through his symbolic worship and service, was constantly reminded of the "Promise." Perhaps God in this, as it is called, "the first covenant to the House of Israel," gave to the Jews the most perfect form of worship of which their untaught minds were capable. All its best parts, all its suggestions, pointed to "the Promise," and to the "faith in the Promise," Christ.

Now, since Christ has come, the "Covenant of Promise" to Abraham gathers up all the "bent and broken rays" of the covenant with the House of Israel and finds perfection in Christ.

"Abraham rejoiced to see Christ's day and saw it." "By faith Abel offered unto God a more acceptable sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous."

Note.—Some day I hope to have from my friend a further word, showing that the old is really the new, and is still here—that none of the ancient scaffolding came down except the "law of ordinances."—P. A. S.

A CONTEST IN WHICH FIVE CAN WIN $265 IN CASH PRIZES AND MANY CAN EARN $5 EACH.

The Board of Finance desires during the next three months to stimulate the thinking of our people with reference to the great needs of the superannuated preachers and the widows of preachers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; and, to accumulate effective reading matter which may be used in the special effort for Superannuate Endowment during the ensuing quadrennium. Therefore, attention is called to the following plan for the accomplishment of the purpose:

Five Cash Prizes.—For the best sermon, address, story, or poem, dealing with the necessity of an adequate support for the Conference Claimants and Superannuate Endowment as an important means of helping to meet that necessity, the Board will pay the author the sum of $100; for the second best, $75; for the third best, $50; for the fourth best, $25; and for the fifth best, $15. The Board will hold the prize articles as its own property, publish same as occasion may demand, but in every instance of publication the author's name will accompany the article. Provided, further, that the Board reserves the right to use any non-prize article submitted in the contest, upon payment to the author thereof the sum of $5.

Chips for Kindling.—The Board has an assortment of leaflets, pamphlets and a small book by Rev. J. R. Stewart, which furnishes a great amount of information on the subject. These publications will be sent free and postpaid to any one desiring them for the purpose of studying the convictions of others concerning this burning question. Address a post card to the Board, 510-13 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo., stating that you desire to enter the contest and would like to receive whatever helps we can furnish to assist you in your effort. It is expected, of course, that all contestants will write their articles from their own viewpoints and independently of matter already published on the subject by the Board. However, the publications referred to in the above will be useful at least to create for the contestants a proper atmosphere for their task.

The Honorable Judges.—Bishop W. F. McMurry, Dr. T. N. Ivey and Dr. A. J. Lamar will be asked to choose the judges who will decide "who's who." The office of the Board will arrange all the articles submitted in such convenient form that the prize winners may be determined in the shortest possible time after the end of the contest. The names of the contestants will not be submitted to the judges, as the manuscripts will be given numbers representing the names. This will be further explained in the rules.

Rules of the Contest.—Let the following stipulations be carefully understood:

1. The contest shall begin at once, and all the articles submitted must be in the office of the Board of Finance by April 1, 1922.

2. Every article submitted must be typewritten, using but one side of the paper, and three perfectly legible copies sent to the Board. The three copies are necessary that each of the three judges may have one.

3. If the article be a sermon or address, the maximum length should be approximately 3000 words; if it is a short story, the maximum length should be about 200 words; if it is a long story, the maximum length should be not over 1000 words; if it is a poem, the maximum length should be about 500 words.

4. The contestant must not sign his name to the manuscript, but write a letter to the Board and give the name and address in the letter. Send the letter and manuscript in the same envelope. The Board will give a number to the manuscript.

5. Every article, before it is submitted to the Board, must be read or spoken to a church congregation, or a Sunday school, or an Epworth League, or a woman's society, or some other organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, where at least twenty-five people are present. The contestant shall state, in his letter to the Board, what organization has heard his subject matter and when.

6. Incorrect spelling or poor punctuation will not be counted against an article, provided it is not so bad that the writer's meaning is obscured. The judges will be charged to select the prize articles strictly on the basis of effective subject matter alone, that is, whether the article carries the most effective message.

7. The contest is open to everybody—preacher, layman, laywoman, boy, girl, child. It does not matter what may be the relation of the preacher—whoever and whatever you are, if you want to win that $100 prize you are at liberty to do it if you can.

Don't Overlook This.—Bear in mind that the Board reserves the right to use any or all of the articles which fail to win prizes. But whenever the Board chooses one of these for publication, a check for five dollars will be sent to the author. So you see it is possible that a great many who fail to win one of the prizes, may each receive at least this small amount if their articles are ever used. There will be an urgent demand during the next four years for appealing matter touching an adequate support for the Conference Claimants. The Board expects, during the period of the special effort for superannuate endowment, to keep all the advocates of the church supplied with subject-matter that will stir the people to an intense and practical interest in the "Forgotten Man."

A HAPPY CHRISTMAS AT BRAXTON.

The new Methodist church at Braxton, Miss., for which we have so earnestly prayed and worked since the cyclone of last April, is now completed, the initial service having been held on Christmas Sunday.

The service was conducted by the new pastor, the Rev. A. A. Simmes, and was well attended. A two-fold theme relative to the "Babe of Bethlehem" and "Prayer" was well expounded by the pastor, and special Christmas music by the choir was an additional attractive feature. A vocal quartet, "Silent Night," was beautifully rendered by Miss A. B. Mangum, Prof. J. C. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Mahaffey. The entire service seemed to fill every one in the divine presence with inspiration and a deeper appreciation of Him who came on that day so many years ago to bless and save humanity.

Much credit is due our former pastor, Rev. C. H. Strait, and our presiding elder, Rev. M. L. Burton, for their untiring efforts in guiding and helping the membership in the building of so beautiful a structure.

Three carloads of lumber were donated by Brother W. S. F. Tatum, of Hattiesburg, and one day's earnings were given by the employees of the Tatum Lumber Company. Liberal donations were made and special favors shown by the Enochs Lumber and Manufacturing Company, of Jackson. Words are inadequate to express our deep sense of appreciation for all these kindnesses.

It is from hearts overflowing with gratitude and appreciation that we thank each and every one who has given assistance and in any way manifested an interest in the rebuilding of our church.

A beautiful and unselfish spirit has been shown by the entire citizenship of this place, and we feel that though the year 1921 has brought many trials and hardships, it has meant much in bringing us into a closer relationship to Him who "doeth all things well."

W. G. BELL, Steward.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT STEWARDS' MEETING.

The District Stewards' Meeting and Pastors' Conference of the Meridian District, was held in Central Church, Meridian, Dec. 30, 1921, Rev. P. D. Hardin, presiding elder, in the chair. There was a large attendance of both stewards and pastors. Visitors from outside the district were: Rev. J. M. Morse, Secretary of Education and Rev. J. M. Smith, Conference Evangelist. We are glad to learn that Brother Smith has decided to cast his lot among us. He will move to Meridian the first of the year. The meeting proved to be very interesting and helpful, consisting of discussions, reports and places for the work of the year. Brother Morse and Brother W. D. Hawkins, Missionary Secretary, presented their respective interests. The spirit of optimism was prevalent. We are entering into the year's work with faith and hope. Brother Hardin, our presiding elder, is in high favor throughout the district. His salary was fixed at $4200. A delightful luncheon was served by the good ladies of Central Church, at the noon hour.

W. A. HAYS, Secretary.

CENTENARY NOTES.

Doing Bigger Things.

We begin another year with our Church pledged to carry through a larger program of service to the world than ever before in its history. Our appropriations to missionary work in the homeland and in foreign fields, including woman's work, total $5,088,059.90. The regular appropriations to foreign work—income from assessments—total $720,919; Centenary appropriations to foreign work, not including woman's work, $2,038,454. Regular appropriations to home work, $146,236.30; Centenary appropriations to home field, not including woman's work, $725,040. And this does not include the ten per cent of amount paid on individual pledges to the Centenary that goes back to the Conferences for use in those Conferences. The total of Centenary money directed to the home field for 1922 is more than $1,000,000. For woman's work the appropriations are: Home, $443,796.30; Foreign, $913,914; total, $1,357,710.30.

All of these appropriations have been made on faith in the people who made the pledges. If they fail the church and the world in this day of opportunity, this day of pressing need, there must be retrenchment in every field. It would be a calamity indeed to recall any of our workers or abandon any enterprise at home or in foreign field. We will not do this; our people will make the sacrifices demanded that the church keep its vow and that the great enterprises of the Kingdom go forward. We have made our pledge that we shall undertake bigger things for all the years ahead. We are doing bigger things, and in all these enterprises we have the evidence, in results secured, that the Lord leads.

If We Were Paid to Date.

In all of the home Conferences of Southern Methodism, the Conference Boards of Missions face a most trying situation. More money is needed to launch new enterprises and to make better provision for the underpaid pastors who must receive help from their Conference boards. It would be a more distressing situation if Centenary funds were not available for work in the home field—the appropriations made by the Board of Missions out of the Centenary funds and the ten per cent of amount paid returned to each Conference. If our pledges were paid to date, there would be available more than $1,000,000 additional for our pastors in the mission charges of the home Conferences. In many of our Conferences more than one-half of the amount appropriated to the mission charges comes from Centenary funds; and even then the amount is inadequate. In the payment of your pledge you help the work in your own Conference; and there is pressing need there, as in every field of the church.

Another Good Record.

The Sunday schools of our church paid more on Centenary pledges during 1921 than during 1920; it is a record of which we are justly proud. And it shows what can be done if only we give regularly and according to the plan of the church in its Centenary program. The church outside the Sunday school did not make so good a record during 1921. But we are going to come to this better and higher standard during 1922.

Let's Begin Right.

Under the pressure of "hard times" some of us have delayed making our Centenary payments. We did not intend to do this, but many other matters pressed for attention and other obligations were given first place as against Centenary obligations. Let's get an early start in our Centenary giving for 1922. If any subscriber cannot pay to date, make such payments as is possible, and keep at it until these obligations are met. The great missionary enterprises of the church wait on your giving.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES.

By unanimous approval, the Louisiana Annual Conference, at Alexandria, set January 8 to 15 as the Educational Pay-Up Week for Louisiana Methodists. The friends and supporters of Centenary and Mansfield Colleges are asked to co-operate with us in these plans. The payment period of the mighty Christian Education Movement is at hand. Let all the pledges that fall due be paid promptly. Then we begin to translate our enthusiasm, consecration, and faith in Christian Education into terms of concrete reality.

Shall we not make this a point of emphasis in our Message? Shall we not do the thing that we have solemnly pledged ourselves to do? Shall we not come with unanimous accord to the help of our Christian institutions?

We rejoice with infinite gratitude in the most remarkable achievement in the history of our Louisiana Methodism. This has been the church's most courageous enterprise, and our avowed aim has been to capture the mind of the church and make dominant Christian Education in the home, and the school. Let us have no "slackers" in this enterprise, but wise, optimistic, courageous leaders who do not underrate the ability and willingness of our people to rise to the height of any great occasion.

ALBERT S. LUTZ,
Conference Secretary of Education.

The Christian Platform of the Schools and Colleges of the Church

Unanimously and enthusiastically adopted by the Methodist Educational Association, composed of all the schools, colleges, and universities of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Memphis, December 14, 1921.

I.

As institutions belonging to a great Christian denomination, the schools, colleges and universities of Southern Methodism recognize and accept the duties and obligations that necessarily go with such ownership. In this relationship they realize without reservation that each institution and all of them together are special agencies of the Church for the salvation of the world and for helping the Church itself the better to perform its own divinely appointed ministry of service.

II.

The institutions are profoundly convinced, particularly in this confusing crisis in the world's history, that they are called upon to join all other agencies of the Church in a supreme effort to steady and enlighten the faith of the people, to strengthen the moral foundations of the social order, to create in the minds of men the mind of Jesus, and to make known the saving power of his spirit.

III.

To these ends and to this service we solemnly commit ourselves, and while we must in no way lower intellectual standards as educational institutions, nor limit the spirit of inquiry in any worthy field of knowledge, nor refuse to give to men and women every opportunity for the broadening of outlook and the enrichment of personality,—nevertheless, we do not hesitate to affirm that we are best fulfilling our mission when we are doing most to fashion the character of youth in the image of the Master and to furnish manhood and womanhood with the light of his truth and guidance of his spirit.

IV.

Central, therefore, at the heart of the supreme educational process in which we are engaged, we are placing the Bible as the inspired word of God and the teaching of its truths as the only principles on which to build an enduring foundation for our individual and collective life. It is further clear to us that no part of our task is quite so important as that of teaching not only the principles of Jesus that they may be practically applied to the whole life, but also of bringing men to a knowledge of the transforming power of his spirit.

V.

By all this we mean that every institution in Southern Methodism is consecrated and pledged to the great spiritual objectives of the Christian Education Movement,—to the effort to put Jesus Christ, his truth and his spirit, into all education, to the application of educational processes to religious training for the better enlightenment and security of character, to the discovery of an adequate leadership for the various activities of the Church and the proper training of it, and to the deepening and broadening of the spiritual life of our Methodism that it may the more effectively accomplish its great mission to the world.

VI.

Finally, we ask of the Church at large its confidence, its support, its intelligent recognition of the contributions these institutions have made and are making to the Church, and of the difficulties that at this time confront us in the performance of our task, and a clear and definite understanding that the institutions which we represent cannot render the service that is required of them unless the Church furnishes promptly and fully the material resourses to which it has pledged itself. If the institutions of our Methodism shall keep faith in their purpose to make Christian Education a reality, the Church itself must also keep faith by supplying the necessary means in terms of equipment, buildings, and endowments. And this demands of all of us prayer, consecration, unfailing co-operation, and sacrifices inspired by a generous Christian stewardship,—more generous than it has ever been, because we understand now as never before the needs of the Church and the world and the nature of the service which the schools, colleges, and universities of the Church are called upon to render.

The Home Circle

THE FUSSING PLACE.

I have to go to the Fussing Place
When I am very bad;
And mother has such a sorry face,
And her eyes look sad.
But she says in just the firmest tone,
"The boy that fusses must stay alone,"
When I have been bad.

At first I pretend I do not care,
And I hum a tune
And walk off with my head in the air;
But pretty soon
I begin to hate the Fussing Place,
And to be there seems a great disgrace.
So I stop my tune.

And then I think of mother's eyes
With that sorry look;
And soon I think it is time to surprise
Her over her book.
So I hunt up a smile and put it on
(For I can't come out till the frowns are gone).
How happy she'll look!

The Fussing Place? O, it's where you're sent
When you are naughty and mean.
And there you must stay till you're good again
And fit to be seen.
It's up in the attic or under the stairs
Or seated on one of the kitchen chairs,
And O, you feel mean!

But it doesn't matter much where it is—
This old Fussing Place—
For the very spot that seems so bad
When you're in disgrace,
It's nice enough when you're loving and true,
So it's not where you are, but how you do,
That makes it a Fussing Place.

—Annie Willis McCullough, in exchange.

THE GUIDING OF IMAGINATION.

"When my boy was only four years old, I began to punish him every time he told a lie. It took great persistance to cure him, but now he is the most truthful child you ever knew. You can depend upon his word every time." The father spoke with great pride, ignorant that the merry little lad next door who was the companion of his own sullen boy had also passed through three years of "romancing," but with no punishment for lying, and consequently no unhappy memories to carry into later life.

Every little child passes through a mental stage when he finds it difficult, if not impossible, to distingulsh between memory and imagination.

Five-year-old Harold spent a very happy day with little Jack, whose mother had so tamed a squirrel that it came to the window and ate from the children's hands. "Wouldn't it be fun if it would come into the room and play with us?" "Yes, and get into the doll's bed and sit in a chair and eat from a table." Each child made his contribution to the delightful romance. Two or three weeks later something was said in Harold's presence about squirrels, and immediately there came to his mind all the memories of Jack's squirrel. Memory and imagination became confused so that the little lad thought he was telling the truth when he told of the squirrel which had eaten from his hand, slept in a doll's bed and sat in a chair, and he naturally resented as an injustice the punishment which followed.

"What is truth?" four-year-old Margaret asked earnestly of a loving friend who rebuked her for not telling the truth. The friend, by definite illustration, helped her to understand the difference between fact and imagination, and for several weeks the child's stories were followed by the question, "Was I telling the truth that time?" Finally she was able to distingulsh the difference and her imaginative stories were introduced by: "This isn't true, but—." "Once upon a time," etc. So she lived in her make-believe world joyously increasing a very valuable mental power, yet being saved the reproof and punishment too often meted out to children who are not understood.

Miss Elizabeth Harrison, in her book, "Misunderstood Children," tells of a little girl who prayed in her own simple, childlike way that the wonderful gift of imagination might be taken from her, because of the scorn and ridicule with which the teacher of geography treated her attempt to picture Arabia, about which she was studying, instead of merely bounding the country. "Please, God, help me not to see people and animals in Arabia instead of an old map on the wall," she prayed.

Fortunately that little girl's prayer was not answered, and her imagination developed and was so guided and controlled by a wise and understanding mother that when the child grew to womanhood she was able to use that imagination to write stories which have brought joy to thousands of little children.

The world of imagination is really the kingdom of the little child in which he lives with the companions we adults choose for him. Let us help him by telling him of the great heroes of history and literature, and cease to acquaint him with the cruel villians and coarse buffoons of the "movies" and the newspaper headlines. During their early impressionable years, children are influenced more by their imaginary companions than by the actual children with whom they come in contact.

"Let's pretend," the imaginative child says over and over again. "Yes, let's pretend," the wise mother answers, and jokingly may add: "Let's pretend that we are fairies and that all the specks of dust are wild animals for us to chase."

Let us pretend and pretend with the children and be thankful with reverent, humble gratitude when we as grown men and women are allowed to re-enter the wonderland of childhood, living with the little people and guiding them in their use of this very great gift of imagination.—Ex.

TWO PENNIES.

The selfish penny sank heavily,
Like a lump of lead, as it well might be;
No love went with it. "I might have bought
So much for myself!" was the only thought—
The mean little selfish giver!

The loving penny dropped softly down,
Like red, red gold from a royal crown;
Pity and love made his eyes grow dim
As he gave his all, and the Lord loved him—
The dear little cheerful giver!

"TIME OUT."

The New Way.

People used to commit suicide by blowing out the gas. Now they step on it.—New York American.

A Good Mop.

A woman lost her little curly poodle, and called on the police to find it. The next day one of the force came with the dog very wet and dirty. The woman was overjoyed and asked a number of foolish questions, among them: "Where did you find my dear darling?"

"Why, ma'am," said the officer, "a fellow had him on a pole and was washing windows with him."—Kind Words.

A Literalist.

A recently enlisted soldier was on "sentry-go" for the first time. A dark form approached him. "Halt!" he cried in a threatening tone. "Who are you?"

"Advance!"

The officer of the day advanced, but before he had proceeded half a dozen steps the sentinel again cried, "Halt!"

"This is the second time you have halted me," observed the officer. "What are you going to do next?"

"Never you mind. My orders are to call, 'Halt!' three times and then shoot."—Selected.

An Alibi.

The Sunday school superintendent was reviewing the lesson. "Who led the children of Israel out of Egypt?" he asked. There was no answer.

Pointing to a little boy at the end of the seat, he demanded, a little crossly, "Little boy, who led the children of Israel out of Egypt?"

The little boy was ready to cry as he piped out with a quavering voice, "Please, sir, it wasn't me. We just moved here last week. We're from Missoury."—Selected.

GIPSY SMITH IN NEW ORLEANS.

The Gipsy Smith meetings, for which the Protestants of New Orleans through the Ministerial Union have been preparing for almost a year, began on Thursday evening, January 5.

By Tuesday of last week Mr. William McEwan, song leader and manager for the great evangelist, and Mr. E. E. Young, pianist, had arrived, and they were entertained by the Executive Committee and the chairmen of other committees at a luncheon at the Monteleone Hotel, when final preparations were made for the big meetings. On Tuesday evening the choir of 500, perhaps the largest ever brought together in New Orleans, assembled in the tabernacle for their first rehearsal under Mr. McEwan.

On Thursday Gipsy Smith himself arrived and was royally received. At noon he spoke before the Members' Council of the Association of Commerce. From 4 to 6 in the afternoon he and his party were given a reception in the patio of the St. Charles Hotel. A large number of leading Christian workers of the city and leading citizens, including Mayor Andrew McSsane, were present.

New Orleans is a great and beautiful city of palms and flowers, of history and romance, and it has many attractions. But unfortunately it has no great auditorium, such as some cities have, where thousands of people may gather. The tabernacle erected on Clio Street for the Gipsy Smith meetings therefore easily has the distinction of being the largest auditorium in New Orleans. It is estimated that it will seat 5000 people.

Despite the rain on Thursday the tabernacle was comfortably filled. This fine showing on the first night, despite the bad weather, was due to the earnest efforts of the fifty or more co-operating churches, to the fine work of the chairman of the Executive Committee, Dr. U. D. Mooney, pastor of the Napoleon Avenue Presbyterian Church, of Dr. George Summey, Executive Secretary, and indeed of all who have had any part in preparing for the great meetings.

Great credit is due Mr. Reeks, a member of the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church, who has had charge of the publicity work. No other religious movement in this city has been so completely brought to the attention of the people or commanded so large a space in the papers. A large sign stretches over Canal street at Rampart and a large electric sign shines above the river side of St. Charles avenue at Clio, while billboards, the space in the front of street cars controlled by the car company, and a car card furnished by the car advertising company have daily called upon the people to "Give God a Chance," and attend the meetings where 500 sing in the choir and a world-renowned evangelist preaches. The daily papers have been giving a very large amount of space, for which, at the suggestion of Gipsy Smith, they have been thanked by the vast audiences that assemble in the tabernacle. The papers are giving every day as much space to the Gipsy Smith meetings as they gave to the recent visit of Marshal Foch to our city. A number of reporters are on hand at every service. At the close of the first meeting a photographer took a flashlight picture of the immense audience and the picture which appeared in the Daily States the following day is an indisputable evidence of the remarkable attendance on the first night. Other photographers and cartoonists have caught the Gipsy and his party in almost every pose imaginable. A cartoonist caught Mr. McEwan, who is a Scotchman hailing from Glasgow, seemingly as he was saying, "Sit doon, choir."

The Christian people of the city may well be satisfied by the fine meetings which have initiated the campaign, despite the bad weather. On Friday night, though the driving rain was coming down in torrents, the tabernacle was at least two-thirds filled. Probably 2500 were present. On Sunday night the tabernacle was soon filled to overflowing so that the doors had to be closed, shutting out a veritable multitude of people in the street outside. Gipsy stated that he had difficulty, when approaching the building, in making his way through the people, while the reporters had almost to "fight their way in."

Remarkable results have attended the meetings. Hundreds and hundreds of cards have been signed by persons desiring to surrender their lives to Christ or to unite with the churches here by certificate. No other religious movement, of which the writer knows, in the history of New Orleans, has ever commanded such an interest in all quarters and drawn so many people to the preaching of the Word, and the prospects are indeed bright for the greater awakening and ingathering this city has ever known.

The papers here have given intimate descriptions of the world-famed evangelist who is the center of the great movement. He is a well-built man of medium height; his hair is waving and very black, and his eyes are large and brown. He wears a mustache which is black. His complexion has a touch of the swarthiness that we generally associate with his race. He dresses faultlessly. He was born of Gipsy parents on the edge of the old forest in England where Robin Hood and his many men were said to have held high carnival. Though he did not learn to read and write until after he had passed childhood, he now commands the most chaste and beautiful English. His language is free from the coarse and crude expressions that sometimes characterize other evangelists. The papers have agreed that he is graceful and so graceful in fact that that is one of the features that help to give him such magnetism. And graceful he is. They have said that he preaches the gospel simply, with only now and then a flight of eloquence. And so he does, but so effectively that he holds his vast audience throughout his sermon and his closing fervent appeals. At times he sings for the congregation in a sweet tenor voice. When preaching his voice is ofttimes mellow and beautiful, and at all times it seems to carry to every part of the huge tabernacle with but little effort on his part.

Gipsy Smith is a man of God, and he has a real message, and we are glad that thousands of our people are eager to hear that message.

Meetings will be held throughout the month every day except Saturday and Sunday, at 12:10 p.m., in the Shubert Theatre, and at 7:45 p.m. in the tabernacle. No meetings will be held on Saturdays. On Sundays all the churches will have their morning services as usual, but will call in the evening services, also the prayer meetings on Wednesday evening. Meetings on Sunday will be held in the tabernacle at 3:30 p.m. and 7:45 p.m.

We have thought that our readers would like to hear at some length about these meetings. It would indeed be well worth the effort of our readers outside the city to arrange to visit New Orleans while Gipsy Smith is here and attend some of these great meetings. R. H. H.

DEATH OF MRS. LYMAN CARLEY.

Mrs. Lyman Carley, the mother of the editor of the Advocate, died last Sunday morning at 5 o'clock. She had been ill for a long time. Having grown worse about two weeks ago, the editor and other members of the family were summoned to her home in Ellisville, Miss., where they anxiously watched at her bedside until the end. She was buried on last Monday. So this faithful wife of a loved minister of Mississippi, and the mother of a son who has become a distinguished servant of the church, having finished her work here, has passed to the Church Triumphant. The readers of the Advocate will remember the bereaved family at the throne of grace. R. H. H.

ADDRESS OF MR. THORNHILL.

One of the features of the fine Watch Night service which was conducted at Columbia, La., by the pastor, Rev. W. J. Porter, was the able address of Hon. J. B. Thornhill, district attorney, and we are glad to give it to the readers of the Advocate. You will greatly profit by reading "A Guide to Happiness in 1922." R. H. H.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

We learn that Rev. O. W. Bradley is preaching to large congregations at Alexandria, La.

Rev. J. O. Ware, Mendenhall, Miss., writes that he is delighted with his new field and that the prospects for the year are good.

Rev. A. M. Shaw has made a fine impression at Oakdale, La., and there are many indications of great success there during this year.

We are asked to state that the address of Rev. J. L. Snelgrove, pastor of the Cleveland charge, Mississippi Conference, is De Kalb, Miss., Route 2, instead of Moscow, Miss.

A District Workers' Institute was held in Alexandria, La., on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. The program was a good one. Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., is the presiding elder.

Rev. Jas. L. Sills, pastor of our East End Church, Meridian, Miss., has been elected president of the Union Protestant Ministers Association of Meridian for the year 1922.

All the members of the Board of Stewards at Boyce gave their subscriptions to the Advocate at the recent quarterly conference held there by the presiding elder, Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr. Fine! This is a wholesome example unto others.

Rev. A. L. Davenport, our pastor at Brooksville, Miss., writes that he has received a most cordial welcome in his new field. He has arranged for a revival during the summer, with Rev. W. A. Wilson, Conference Evangelist, assisting.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, president of Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss., was in New Orleans Sunday and Monday of this week. He worshiped at First Methodist Church in the morning Sunday and attended the Gipsy Smith meetings later during the day.

We are in receipt of an announcement of the marriage of Miss Annie Mae, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. V. C. Curtis, to Mr. Henry Bonner McGee, on Wednesday, December 28, 1921, at Greenwood, Miss. They will reside at Tchula, Miss. May God's rich blessings rest upon this new home.

The Broad Street Methodist Church, of Lake Charles, La., has accepted the challenge of the Ruston (La.) Church for a contest in Sunday evening attendance.

Rev. J. Early Gray has been heartily received at Moss Point, Miss., and the outlook for the year is good.

Rev. Olin Ray has been cordially received at Kosciusko, Miss. The parsonage has been repainted and re-papered throughout.

Rev. W. H. Jordan, of Winnfield, La., writes that the year begins well with them and that the prospects are good. He plans to put the Advocate in every Methodist home. Good!

Rev. W. W. Holmes, pastor at Lake Charles, La., was present at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Louisiana Conference Board of Missions, held in New Orleans on last Monday.

We regret to learn through Rev. J. Early Gray that Rev. R. H. Barr died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Allen Elder, in Moss Point, Miss., at 2:30 p.m. on December 30, and was buried at Foxworth on New Year's Day.

The church at De Soto, Miss., where Rev. R. E. Rutledge is pastor, was destroyed by fire on January 1, and there was no insurance on the building. This was indeed a great loss but the pastor writes that they are planning to rebuild.

Rev. J. M. Smith, who was appointed Conference Evangelist at the recent session of the Mississippi Conference, asks us to state that his address is Poplar Springs Drive, Meridian, Miss., and not Hattlesburg, as appears in the Conference Journal.

The corner stone of the new church at Houma, La., has been laid, the ritual service being read by Rev. Martin Hebert, presiding elder of the French Mission District. The pastor, Rev. F. J. McCoy, writes that they expect to finish the building and have it ready for service by the first of March.

The Methodists of Meridian have engaged Rev. John E. Brown, one of the general evangelists of the church for a union revival campaign during the month of April. A large tabernacle will be erected in a central place and our seven Methodist churches of Meridian will co-operate in the meeting.

We regret to learn through her pastor of the death of Sister Honnoll, widow of the late Rev. Moses H. Honnoll, of the North Mississippi Conference. She was laid to rest in the cemetery at Verona, Miss., on New Year's Day. The services were conducted by Rev. J. A. Hall and her pastor, Rev. R. M. Evans.

Rev. J. T. Waltman has been cordially received at Elizabeth, La. The great Industrial Lumber Co., the headquarters of which are in Elizabeth, will build a church there for the Methodist people. To the present time the Methodists and the Baptists have been worshiping in a union church building owned by the mill company.

Rev. J. L. Nelli is doubtless on his way to Prague, as he expected to sail from New York, January 7, on the Finland of the Red Star Line, for Antwerp. In a recent letter to the editor he stated that he had a most delightful Christmas at home. Father, mother, and their seven children, together with sons-in-law and daughters-in-law and grandchildren were all present.

We take the following from the Fayette Chronicle, Fayette, Miss., December 30: "Rev. C. F. Emery, who was recently assigned to the Fayette Methodist Church, succeeding Rev. Claude P. Jones, transferred to Magnolia, preached to appreciative congregations on Christmas day, morning and evening. His sermons were very much appreciated for their liberality of thought and scholarly expression and have elicited much favorable comment not only from his own church members but from others who heard him."

TO THE METHODISTS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

My Dear Fellow-Worker: The Annual Conference unanimously passed a resolution requesting that January 15-22 be "Pay-Up Week" for the Education Fund. Owing to the closing out of the Conference year in November, some failed to pay to this cause when assessments were due. I am sure it was for no want of interest, but the urgent need of our Conference work, that caused it.

We now make this second appeal. Conference is out of the way. Christmas has passed, and let us show our appreciation of the Christmas spirit by making it possible for our Christian Colleges to do greater work than they have ever done heretofore.

Please hand your collection to your Church Collector, who will forward to me. I know you are interested. Let's make this the banner year and stand by our church.

With the greetings of the new year, I am

Cordially your brother,

J. M. MORSE,

Secretary-Treasurer.

Jackson, Miss.

NOTICE.

Rev. M. N. Hildebrand, formerly a member of the Baltimore and Louisiana Conferences, recently of the Pacific Conference, and transferred by Bishop DuBose to the Mississippi Conference during its last session, has withdrawn from the ministry and membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

TO THE PASTORS IN THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Please do not forget to urge upon your Sunday schools the setting aside of the offering on the fifth Sunday in January for our Sunday school work. Last year we had an increase in our enrollment of more than 5000. We now have 41,000 pupils in our schools. We raised last year $7,000 for the Centenary and a total of $52,000 for the year; 1872 people were received into the church during the year from the Sunday school. This special offering is for the district work, to enable our district officers to do the work assigned. It is an important matter and we plead for your earnest and hearty co-operation. Send all offerings to Rev. J. E. Stephens, Grenada, Miss. Each district will be credited with the amount raised within that district.

E. S. LEWIS,

Chairman Conference Board.

AN INSIGHT.

The engineer had just completed the sign. The parson had hung it up. And there now it was in gaudy red letters over the ranch-house door. They lived on a spur of Cheyenne Mountain—they and the Sick Man and the Kid—and they looked across the Colorado desert a hundred uninterrupted miles as they sat and took the cure. They were brothers of the order of T. B., and the sign they had just put up blazed the deepest feeling of their souls. It read: "No one can truthfully say any good of tuberculosis."

The midday sun beat down upon the plains. Seventy-five miles away a huge ledge of white sandstone, one hundred or more feet high, made a line like a board fence painted white. An insect whirred up in the stillness with the noise of a rattlesnake. A jaybird jeered from the top of a near-by pine tree. The four men lay dozing in their chairs. One of them had a dream; he had a vision of the burden of the world.

Across a vast, wide plain a mighty army toiled; the strangest army man had ever seen since that great host marched round the eastern desert seeking for the Promised Land. There were women no less than men; little children, and old folks bent with years; stalwart youths right ready for all venture and all strife, and they whose faces bore the horrid marks of wasted powers and challenges ignored. As they went, some were far ahead and blazed the course that should be followed; some prepared the road and built the bridges, cleft the rocks and filled the gaps; some scoured all the land and sought for food, and warned of danger or of storm; while others sang, playing on musical instruments, and cheered the march along; and others still bore heavy burdens on their backs, which seemed to be the baggage of the host.

And as the sleeper watched, these last claimed his attention. They held a place unique among the rest. For as he looked he saw that they it were who set the pace for the strange march. Progress could not be swifter than their feet. By reason of the loads they bore, the others walked all free and unencumbered, and yet these could not go more fast than they, than they who staggered and oft stumbled in their steps—for heavy were the weights upon their backs.

As they who carry its great load advance—not they who blaze its path or make its road or cheer its way along—the human race advances, quick or slow.

The sleeper saw, and as he saw he sought to know the nature of these loads, the contents of these packs. He went more close, and on each load he found a word was writ. On one was written "Injustice;" on another, "Bad Inheritance;" on another, "Vicarious Sufferings;" on another, "Grief;" on another, "Disease."

The dreamer slept, and when he awoke he thought upon his dream and what its meaning was, if meaning aught it had. And as he pondered it, he heard; he heard from out the old rebellion and long seeking of his soul for explanation of that fate which had been his—his broken hopes and good ambitions killed, his stricken life, his manhood sheathed in idleness and weakness—a voice:

"You sought to be a leader of the host; you chose to be a maker of the road; you would have been a helper or a singer in the throng. It could not be. Your task was nobler yet. You are a burden bearer of mankind. There is the burden of the race, the burden of its folly and its wrong, its ignorance, its stupid prejudice, its sin, its willful violation of the law, its innocent transgression of the rule. Some one must carry that—must carry that great sadness and great pain, that ineptitude, that care—must carry it that others should go forward and go up."

He heard, and as he heard he reached up and took the new-made sign from out its place and brake it in small pieces. His face showed a great content.

O, fellow bearers of the load we did not choose, the load we fain would have some other carry if we could, remember this—the burden bearers help the world along.

I know not how it is. I know not all the law. I am only sure of this: the fight that each man fights behind his chamber door for courage and for patience and for faith, he fights not for himself alone he fights for all mankind; he fights as one who is a helper of his kind, as a blood brother of that One who in little Galilee, obscure, almost alone, was wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquities, and who upon the cross became the Burden Bearer of the human race.—Alexis Stein.

THE MID-YEAR MEETING OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE, WOMAN'S MISSIONARY COUNCIL.

Holding Institute.

Up to November 1, Holding Institute had enrolled 286 students. Of this number, 110 are from old Mexico, 127 from Texas, and 5 from other States. There are among the students 16 Anglo-Saxons, 1 Jew, 2 Italians, 4 Cubans, and all the others are Mexicans.

Publishing House In Sao Paulo.

The Board of Missions has erected in Sao Paulo a new Publishing House for the church in Brazil. Miss Leila F. Epps will have charge of the work of preparing literature in Portuguese for the women and children of Brazil. She is now in Nashville taking specialized training under Miss Estelle Haskin in preparation for this editorial and literary work in the Publishing House in Brazil.

A New School.

At the last session of the Council a school was authorized in Santa Maria, Rio Grande do Sul, South Brazil Conference. The Executive Committee voted to name this institution "Collegio Centenario," in honor of our great Centenary, which is providing funds with which to open the school.

The Bennett-Gibson Lectures.

Dr. W. J. Young, of Emory University, was chosen to give the first course of lectures under the new Bennett-Gibson Lectureship. Because of the isolation of the missionaries in Brazil, this was selected as the first field to receive the benefits of the lectureship. Dr. Young delivered these splendid lectures at each of the three Annual Conferences in Brazil and thus made it possible for all the missionaries, men and women, to hear them.

A Missionary Magazine in Spanish.

The missionary societies in Mexico and Cuba are to have a periodical in Spanish. The Executive Committee voted to grant the necessary funds to start this monthly magazine, which is to be called, La vox Misionera (The Missionary Voice). Miss Norwood Wynn is to be the editor, and she hopes to make it self-supporting with the use of the small subsidy with which to begin it. This magazine will also be used in our work with the Spanish-speaking people in our own land.

The Best-Equipped Station in Mexico.

A representative of another board of missions has said that when our hospital is completed in Chihuahua, Mexico, our Board of Missions will have made it the best-equipped mission station in Latin America. A variety of activities have been conducted in Chihuahua by the Council and the Board of Missions, general work, to meet the needs of the people. Colegio Palmore provides day schools and boarding school facilities for both boys and girls. Centro Cristiano ministers to men, women, and children through its clubs, classes, kindergartens, clinics, and day nursery. The Publishing House sends out thousands of tracts, books, and periodicals. The beautiful church houses a harmonious congregation composed of what were formerly two separate and distinct churches—congregational and Methodist.

The New Lambuth Memorial.

All Centenary effort in the Woman's Work in Japan this year has been directed to the new Lambuth Memorial Training School for Christian workers at Osaka, Japan. The site was purchased at the close of 1920, and on this site was a well-built Japanese house, which, with but small expenditure, we were able to put in repairs and thus made it possible to move the kindergarten department up from Hiroshima and open work in the new center last April. Miss Margaret Cook is delighted with the situation. The city of Osaka has made much of our coming, and many unsought doors for service are opening for us. The Bible Training Department is still in Kobe, but is to be moved to Osaka as soon as the realization of hopes for the new building make it possible to do so. We are hoping and praying that the Week of Prayer offering will add to the Centenary funds an amount sufficient to make the desired building possible in the near future.

Plans For Work in Kobe.

As soon as the Bible department of the Lambuth Memorial Training School is moved to Osaka the Woman's Council will assume the responsibility of the woman's department of the business college, Palmore Institute, housing this work in our Kobe plant, which, with some remodeling, can be adapted to the new undertaking. This need is very pressing. In Kobe alone there are 11,000 young women in business. Miss Charlie Holland, who will have charge of this work, is now in New York taking a business course in the New York School of Commerce.

A New Station Opened At Kure.

By vote of the Japan Mission and by agreement of the secretary and the bishop of the field it was decided that, next to Osaka, the city of Kure, in Hirosima District, the greatest naval base of Japan, should be made the next center of development in social evangelism. Already the Council has a splendid kindergarten and Bible woman at this place. A house owned by the Presbyterians was rented, and Miss Worth, Miss Searcy, and Miss Callahan were sent to Kure to begin to study the situation.

Enlargement at Seoul, Korea.

Carolina Institute, Seoul, has had a very remarkable growth this year. Over three hundred and eighty pupils have enrolled, one hundred of them boarders, and the school carries a long waiting list. Carolina Institute has already a course of study covering eight grades, but is greatly in need of a building for the higher primary. Authorization was granted by the Executive Committee for this purpose.

Songdo, Korea.

Holston Institute, Songdo, Korea, is the Council's largest school in any foreign field, the enrollment this fall being 912 girls. This is a registered school of eight grades, the only school of our Council in Korea having government recognition. The students of this school are admitted to higher government institutions, and primary teachers' certificates are granted its graduates without examinations.

The Songdo City Evangelistic Plant.

The Songdo City Plant is almost complete, having cost about $15,000. It will minister to the women of the entire community of 150,000 and promises to be another very important evangelistic and educational center. Already there is a large enrollment of classes. Ivey Hospital is planning to conduct a dispensary in our building, and great enthusiasm prevails over this co-operative work.

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and till the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Last Sunday, the first Sunday of the new year, I was with Brother Sharpe on the Monterey charge. I had the pleasure of visiting the Mt. Carmel Church. This is a small church, but a very loyal one. Tbey are doing a good work in many respects. It was a real pleasure to find a nicely-painted building, and it cleaned up, and the yard in good shape. I enjoyed my visit with these dear folks.

Friday night was spent at Byram with the stereopticon lecture. It was a bad nigbt and a very few turned out. I trust to be able to go there again.

I am hopeful that this year we will have the best year of all. The Missions in tbe Sunday school sbowed a very creditable gain over last year. I trust that this year it will be still better. I hope that the Sunday schools that bave pledges will try and pay up during Pay-Up Week. It is a great thing to teach these coming on to have a heart for all the world.

I am hopeful that the Honor Roll for circuits will have many on it before long. It will be helping all around.

I am desirous of having a Cradle Roll for the Mississippi Conference. It should be composed of the babies of the preachers, and the babies of the superintendents and Sunday school workers. Who will be the first to send in a name for this Cradle Roll? If you will, send in a kodak picture, too.

The Conference Standard Training School is going to be the best yet. We are hard at work on the faculty and the Course of Study. We are going to do our best to so distribute the work that every Sunday school worker, no matter what place he holds, will have a place to go and get work. Send in the names of those who ought to go from your charge, so that we can get in touch with them and see that they are invited to come and help them feel their need of coming.

The Kingdom of God will not come to pass till people know God. We know God from what we are taught of God. Many of us would have lives much more productive of good if we had better teaching. Let us resolve, no matter what the cost, we will pay the price, that we may do tbe preaching we ought to do, that those coming on may be properly taught.

We need much prayer. Pray for the work and workers. Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

ZWOLLE AND NABORTON CHARGE.

Dear Dr. Carley: We had parts of three works to tie together and these lying in two districts; we have tied them pretty well and things are moving well with us. Our new presiding elder, Brother J. B. Williams, held his first quarterly conference with us and met all of our expectations; he is a good fit.

Zwolle bas the best organization it bas been my pleasure to be associated with. The Sunday school is starting its twenty-first year under that prince of laymen, S. H. Porter, and I think will meet the standard of efficiency. The enrollment exceeds tbe church enrollment by thirty-four. What we need is more room, which we hope to have before very long. Two large classes meet out of the church. The board of stewards is made up of the big business men of the town, who do things in a business-like way, budgeting everything, even to the Sunday school, and each child makes a pledge for church work, paid every Sunday. Practically every one of these men is a teacher in the Sunday school, and it is a great sight to see boys sitting at the feet of professional and business men learning of the work of the Master. We give two Sundays to Zwolle and preach in the afternoon at Bayou Scie and Belmont.

Naborton is in the oil and gas fields and we have only the production part left. Most of those now there are to stay as long as the gas and oil continue to flow. I have visited many churches, but have never had the reception given me as was given me there at Naborton—a fine Sunday school, a fine spirit of co-operation, a people with a mind to work. No concern as to finances paid monthly ample for all our needs, plenty of good home-made syrup, sausages, 'taters, a fine bunch of young people in the Epworth League, good parsonage, good water. We are expecting the best year of our lives. We are planning and praying for great revivals.

Fraternally yours,

W. F. HENDERSON, Jr.

The Inward Effects of humors are worse than the outward. They endanger the whole system. Hood's Sarsaparilla eradicates all humors, cures all their inward and outward effects. It is the great alterative and tonic, whose merit has been everywhere established.—Adv.

THE GOSPEL AND THE LIFE MORE ABUNDANT.

By Alfred W. Wasson.

The way the Gospel lifts individuals to higher levels of usefulness, and the way it is spreading through Korea, is well illustrated by the experience of Pastor Pai. He called at the school this morning to see if we could not take in a young man from his circuit whom he highly recommends and give him a chance to earn his school expenses by working in the Textile Department. As he pictured what it would mean for the young man to get to attend school and prepare for a life of larger service, my mind kept running back over the life of the speaker.

Some years ago he was an ordinary day laborer, with little education, no particular ability, and a narrow outlook on life. He was employed for a time as a servant in the home where the workers of tbe Woman's Council live. He became active in church work, was called to preach, worked for a time as a colporteur, improved his opportunities, was put in charge of a circuit and for some years has been a hard-working and successful "circuit walker." Two years ago he was sent to a hard circuit on the Choonchun District made up of five weak churches. In two years these five churches have increased to twenty-three and the one weak circuit has grown to two strong self-supporting ones.

Pastor Pai's oldest son graduated from this school and is now in Seoul continuing his preparation for entering the ministry. His oldest daughter graduated from Holston Institute a few years ago and is now teaching a church school in the country. What the gospel has meant to this home and through it to others in the way of a richer life is almost incalculable.

Some of his churches are uniting in a project to establish a Chrstian school. The people are offering to turn over considerable property, about eghteen hundred acres of land I believe, to the church for this enterprise if the Mission Board can furnish the additional amount needed for the establishment of the school. The pastor is here now to see the Mission Treasurer, Dr. Cram, on this business. I fear, however, that he will not be successful, for I have just heard Dr. Cram remark that the real hardship of his position lies in the fact that he has to turn down nine out of every ten requests for funds to be used in the extension of the work.

The Centenary has made it possible for him to grant about one in ten. For this we are grateful but surely we ought not to be content with it. As long as God entrusts the members of his church with as much wealth as they now control, we ought not to be content until every opportunity for extending the Kingdom by the use of money in ways approved by the consensus of missionary practice and opinion can be met.

Songdo, Korea.

WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT'S WITNESS TO THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION.

These are the words in which William Cullen Bryant gave his testimony to the truth of the Christian religion. They are found in Bigelow's Life of Bryant.

"I cannot but lament the tendency of the time, encouraged by some in the zealous prosecution of science, to turn its attention from the teachings of the gospel, from the beautiful example of Christ's life, and the supremely excellent precepts which He gave to His disciples, and the people who resorted to hear Him. To those teachings and that example the world owes its recovery from the abominations of heathenism. The very men who in the pride of their investigations into the secrets of the material world turn a look of scorn upon the Christian system of belief are not aware how much of the peace and order of society, how much of the happiness of their households, and the purity of those who are dearest to them, are owing to the religion extending beyond their sphere. There is no character in the whole range of qualities which distinguish men from each other so fitted to engage our admiration and so pregnant with salutary influence on society as that which is formed on the Christian pattern by the precepts of the gospel, and a zealous imitation of the example of the Great Master.

"This character, of which Christ was the perfect model, is in itself so attractive, so 'altogether lovely' that I cannot describe in language the admiration with which I regard it; nor can I express the gratitude I feel for the dispensation which bestowed that example of mankind, for the truth which he taught and the sufferings He endured for our sakes. I tremble to think what the world would be without Him. Take away the blessing of the advent of His life and the blessings purchased by His death, in what an abyss of guilt would man have been left! It would seem to be blotting the sun out of the heavens—to leave our system of words in chaos, frost and darkness."

"In my view of the life, the teachings, the labors, and the sufferings of the blessed Jesus, there can be no admiration too profound, no love of which the human heart is capable too warm, no gratitude too earnest and deep, of which He is justly the object. It is with sorrow that my love for Him is so cold, and my gratitude so inadequate. It is with sorrow that I see any attempt to put aside His teachings as a delusion, to turn men's eyes from His example, to meet with doubt and denial the story of His life."—Exchange.

CHARACTER BY SALVATION.

The great business of life is to achieve character. This is a world of mixed moral conditions, which practically means a sphere of discipline, or, as the fathers used to say, of probation. We live this life for the sake of itself, and of another life too. Meanwhile, it is vastly important, not to make money, but to make men; not to have all things, but to be the best kind of thing.

Yet just here some modern religionists have fallen into error, blazoning even on their fanes the legend "Salvation by character." It is of course true that salvation is associated with character—that is, the saved are the good; and evangelical religion is as much interested in this proposition as is any so-called liberal faith. This does not, however, carry with it an indorsement of the doctrine of good works, by which a man can buy his way into heaven as he could buy his way into Chicago on a Pullman; nor does it imply any disparagement of the great doctrine of the atonement. What evangelicalism insists upon may be, in part at least, expressed by saying "character by salvation," which means that goodness comes as a gracious product of the divine Christ's co-operating with the human spirit.

The late George B. Foster, the well-known Chicago professor, and by some esteemed a heretic, had, we believe, an insight when he declared that the legends "salvation by character" and "character by salvation" were both one-sided. It may be that a synthesis of the two is nearer the truth. Of course Christ does not save those who remain characterless, or have positively bad natures, except in the sense that He puts new for old, and good in the place of evil—in other words, precisely in the degree in which an individual receives the grace of Christ he acquires character. No one teaches today that a doctrine of grace means an antinomian concession to private vice or obdurate selfishness. But if in this sense and degree salvation is associated with character, so also we must insist that character is best achieved, we dare to say only attained, through connection personally and sympathetically with the redeeming Christ. Some may be more conscious of this connection than are others, a few may even have an exulting—though perilous—sense of "assurance," and others may hardly dare hope that they are Christ's, having no faith "to speak of." In some lives that relation may be more implicit than explicit, but it may exist, actually or potentially, in order to perfection of character.

If we had to make the choice, we would rather say "character by salvation" than "salvation by character," as the latter is liable to gross abuse by self-satisfied Pharisees of the pragmatic type. Yet really there is no antithesis between character and salvation, for here there is an ethical and spiritual parallelism. Let us be Christ's, utterly and forever, and we shall have all the character we shall need in any world.—Zion's Herald.

Our supreme aim as Christians is not comfort, but holiness—not to make things easy all round for ourselves, but to grow in clearness of spiritual vision and readiness to hear the voice divine.—Selected.

RENWAR VS. RHEUMATISM.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Salts. Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve or your money is refunded. It contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Boehmer says, "One 50c bottle has done me more good than all sanatorium treatment, and what it did for me, why should it not do the same for others? Should any one doubt the virtue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, refer them to me." For sale by druggists, price 50c; or by mail on receipt of price from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.—Adv.

Recipe For Gray Hair

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.—Adv.

CRAMPS, PAINS AND BACKACHE

St. Louis Woman Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

St. Louis, Mo.—"I was bothered with cramps and pains every month and had backache and had to go to bed as I could not work. My mother and my whole family always took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for such troubles and they induced me to try it and it has helped me very much. I don't have cramps any more, and I can do my housework all through the month. I recommend your Vegetable Compound to my friends for female troubles."—Mrs. DELLA SCHOLZ, 1412 Salisbury Street, St. Louis, Mo.

Just think for a moment. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been in use for nearly fifty years. It is prepared from medicinal plants, by the utmost pharmaceutical skill, and superior methods. The ingredients thus combined in the Compound correct the conditions which cause such annoying symptoms as had been troubling Mrs. Scholz. The Vegetable Compound exercises a restorative influence of the most desirable character, correcting the trouble in a gentle but efficient manner. This is noted, by the disappearance, one after another, of the disagreeable symptoms.

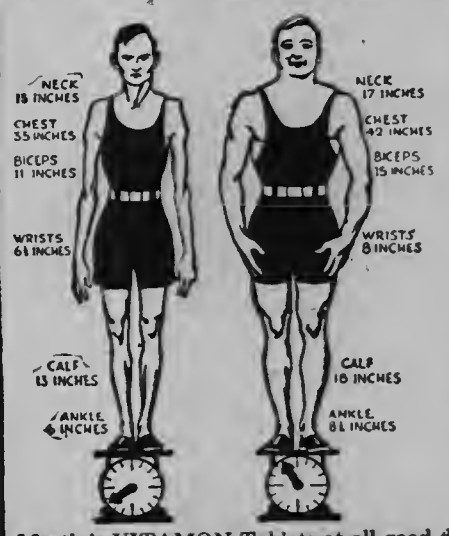
How Mastin's Yeast Vitamon Tablets Put Flesh On Thin Folks

Strengthen The Nerves and Invigorate The Body—Easy and Economical To Take—Results Surprisingly Quick.



If you want to put some firm, healthy flesh on your bones, increase your nerve force and power, clear the skin and complexion and look and feel 100 per cent. better, simply try taking two tiny Mastin's VITAMON tablets with each meal and watch results. Vitamon contains highly concentrated yeast-vitamines as well as the two other still more important vitamines (Fat Soluble A and Water Soluble C) and is now being used by thousands. It positively will not upset the stomach or cause gas, but, on the contrary, is a great aid to digestion, to overcome constipation and as a general conditioner of the whole system. Complete satisfaction absolutely guaranteed or the trial costs you nothing. Be sure to remember the name Mastin's VI-TA-MON—the original and genuine yeast-vitamine tablet—there is nothing else like it, so do not accept imitations or substitutes. You can get Mastin's VITAMON Tablets at all good druggists,

HOW MUCH PER MEMBER?

The $37,000,000 pledged to the Centenary sounds like a big sum, and it is a big sum as compared with our former giving to missionary enterprises. But it represents a pledge of about $16.50 per member for the five-year period, or about $3.30 per member per year. In amount per member pledged, the South Carolina Conference leads with an average of $38.11; next are the Pacific and Los Angeles Conferences, $25.64 each. The Soutb Georgia Conference pledged $23.08 per member; the New Mexico Conference, $22.48; the Kentucky, $21.94; the West Texas, $21.62; the Florida, $21.41; the Virginia, $20.99. All other Conferences were helow $20 per member.

In amount per member paid, the Pacific Conference leads all the rest with a per capita payment of $12.84. Next in order are the following Conferences holding the first ten places; Kentucky, $9.27; South Carolina, $9.18; Virginia, $8.83; Los Angeles, $8.83; Florida, $7.36; Denver, $7.24; New Mexico, $7.23; West Texas, $7.16; Baltimore, $7.09. Seventeen Conferences are above $5 per member and below $7. Ten Conferences have paid less than $5.00 per member. When we take into account the fact that payments to date cover practically three years of the Centenary period, it does not appear that our Centenary giving bas, in any measure, lmpoverished the church. The total amount to-date represents less than $6 per member for the three years.—Bulletin.

WATCH AND WAIT.

While it is true that we never know what trouble or disaster may befall us, we likewise never know what great opportunity is going to come into our lives from an unexpected quarter. If we read the lives of the men of our country who have risen from poverty and obscurity to the greatest heights of success, we find that tbere were certain times in their lives when great opportunities presented themselves, that much of the success of tbese men was due to the fact that they were able to take advantage of such opportunities when they came.

THE NEEDED SAVIOR.

By William C. Allen.

Some of us know very little about theology or creeds. The larger mysteries of the creation are too deep for us. We but dimly understand the beauty of the winning story of the Bible. Of one simple fact we are assured—we need a Savior. In the last analysis how little we have to depend upon within ourselves or in the world. We cast aside pride in our works, we acknowledge our sins, we bow at the foot of the cross and upon the humiliating tree find an invincible Deliverer. Antecedent to the pangs of Calvary were the pangs of the Nativity. It was of transcendent importance that the one should precede the otber. It was desirable tbat He who was to he the Great Rescuer of all who would accept Him sboud take upon Himself the form of a man. So it came about that tbe Savior appeared, not with a mighty host, not with fanfare and palms of victory but in swaddling clothes in a manger. O the graciousness of God, in sending His Son as of the poorest of mankind, seeing that it was the poorest of mankind He was sent to help! Could a better plan have been devised? Can we measure the boundlessness of the Eternal Love that has provided such a simple method for our redemption? Shall we listen to the cry of the Child of Bethlehem as He calls to repentance and the offices of love? Should not the radiancy shed nineteen hundred years ago upon the dark Judaean hills become the glorious light of the present era? Then shall the sweet strain of the angels become our triumphant song: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, goodwill toward men!"—Exchange.

ARGUING OR CONVINCING.

We dishonor the truth rather than serve it when we wound feelings in our zeal to show the truth to others. Such wounding of feelings is a not uncommon result of argument or discussion. One person sets out to prove a certain truth to another, who does not see it; and oftentimes the only result is bitterness, heart burnings, and estrangement. To say that this was caused by zeal for the truth is a travesty on the truth. A person who really has such zeal will care more about living the truth than arguing it; and such living not only never wounds, but is the most convincing of all arguments. When we find that in our efforts to show truth to others we have only done harm, let us ask ourselves wherein we were untrue to some truth that we profess to believe.—Sunday School Times.

A GOOD RECORD THIS.

From the beginning of the Century Movement, the Sunday schools of the church have made a splendid showing in support of the Centenary program. The record for 1921 will doubtless show a larger amount paid by the Sunday schools on Centenary pledges than was paid in 1920. This will be the showing provided the payments for December come to the December, 1920, standard, and this will be the case if every Sunday school makes report before January 1 of all Centenary moneys now in hand, and if the special effort is made to bring the pledge of each Sunday school up to date not later than December 31. Send your Sunday school Centenary money, without delay, to Col. John E. Edgerton, Centenary Building, Nashville, Tennessee, that your school may be included in the January 1 report. Help to carry the total far beyond the 1920 record.—Bulletin.

CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 69—No. 3. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3411.

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, JANUARY 19, 1922. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE POSSIBILITIES OF UNDEVELOPED POWER.

In a recent interview, Mr. Henry Ford, that wizard of modern industry, gave expression to his views concerning the development and utilization of the power generated by the Mississippi River in its flow to the Gulf. Among other things, he said: "Dams could be built in the Mississippi that would provide power for the lighting, heating, and cooking in millions of homes. Not only that, but lands would be saved from flooding; and then look at the benefit to transportation—locks could be operated by machinery in such way that a boat passing in the river would scarcely be stopped. * * * Revenues from the sale of power quickly would wipe out the cost of construction. Then they could be applied to other governmental purposes, and so taxes would be reduced. * * * Why, eventually the revenue from the power projects on the Mississippi, that one river alone, would pay the whole cost of the national government. In other words, it would run the United States." If Mr. Ford had not already demonstrated his ability to do the apparently impossible, we might think that he was letting his imagination run riot in the picture he has drawn of the possibilities of this source of undeveloped power. Even making allowance for an excess of optimism, he has opened wonderful prospects before us. But we are thinking of our undeveloped spiritual resources and the possibilities for progress in the kingdom of God if we should call into use the power that is available on every side. If we are spiritually poor and weak, it is only because we have not learned how to enter into possession of the spiritual riches and the spiritual strength that are offered us in infinite abundance. It was Dwight L. Moody, we believe, who said he wanted to see what God could do with a man who was absolutely consecrated to his service—and his life was a marvelous demonstration of what God can and will do with a surrendered will. As great as are the possibilities in our undeveloped physical resources, infinitely greater are the possibilities in our unused spiritual resources.

FROM ANOTHER ANGLE.

We have heard much of the moral evil of the public dance hall and of salacious moving pictures—and that evil cannot easily be overestimated—but we have a condemnation of them now from another angle. At the closing session of the New Orleans Public Health Institute, held in this city last week under the auspices of the United States Public Health Service, one of the speakers made the following statement: "I shall not dwell upon upon the moral side of the question. That, of course, is important. The health side also is important, for this affects not only the living, but also those who are to come. The statistics of the army, following the close of the war, show the advantages of good behavior. There were many who evaded orders with regard to health rules, but a far larger proportion of soldiers returned in excellent physical condition than is imagined. Dance halls, theatrical and motion picture productions which thrive alone on the sex appeal are responsible for much of the disease of the world. The evil to morals and danger to health of the saloon and resorts were recognized by army officials. That is why a 5-mile zone and later a 10-mile zone was established about a military camp in which such places were forbidden to operate. The United States is the first country to send her fighting men to war with no quarter shown to vice." Of course good health and good morals are inextricably bound together in such matters as these, but some people who will not consider the moral issues may be concerned about the health problem. In any case, everything ought to be done that can be done to get rid of dance halls and obscene pictures.

SO ARE WE.

A recent press dispatch indicates that President Harding is considerably concerned over the question of prohibition enforcement. It is known that the President regards law enforcement as the keystone of constitutional government, and he is greatly displeased with the attitude of some municipalities which, it is said, are openly countenancing the flouting of the prohibition laws. The President may well be concerned about this anarchistic attitude of apparently a large number of the citizens of this country—and so may be every man who has regard for the welfare of the nation as a whole. The question now is not so much one of prohibition as it is of the maintenance of the authority of the law. After making full allowance for the exaggerations of the daily press, it is still evident that there are many people throughout the country who are determined to brook no interference with their wholly selfish personal interests, law or no law—solemnly enacted statutes are to them no more than "scraps of paper." Without undertaking to say where the blame lies, we are convinced that many of our sworn officers of justice, and even some of our courts, are indifferent to the enforcement of the prohibition laws because they are not personally in sympathy with them. If laws are to be enforced only when they meet the approval of the individual affected, we might as well dispense with our legislative assemblies, dismiss our officers, tear down our temples of justice, burn the Constitution, and turn the government over to the criminal classes. Good citizens will obey the law, whether it suits them or not.

WORTH THINKING ABOUT.

In the current number of the Ladies' Home Journal appears an editorial, the concluding words of which we quote and commend to the earnest consideration of all our readers: "Look into the needs of your church and see where you can help. Ninety per cent of our pastors are miserably underpaid. Help build up your congregation. It'll never be any bigger or better than you as an individual help to make it. If you don't believe in religion or the church, it is your loss, and the older you grow the greater the loss. You'll freeze up inside. Science brings no balm to the unbeliever any more. Darwinsim has blown up. Most higher criticism of the Bible is empty sophistry. Faith, Hope, and Charity were the three superlative symbols of grace before the coming of Christ, before Abraham walked with God, before the Sumerians built their long-vanished civilization. You can possess them through the most trifling effort—possess them for yourself and for all who are near and dear to you. Only in such way can we have a new cycle, such as all the world is groping for. Let's go to it—every last little one of us. Then it's done!"

THE NEWBERRY CASE.

Apart from the political significance of its action, the vote of the Senate by which Senator Newberry of Michigan was confirmed in his seat in that body is a sad commentary upon the moral conscience of men who condemn the means but justify the end. After it had been shown that more than a quarter of a million dollars had been spent in the Newberry campaign, upon which showing the election was contested, the Senate decided that Mr. Newberry was entitled to his seat, but, in the same breath, it naively said, "The expenditure of such excessive sums in behalf of a candidate, either with or without his knowledge or consent, being contrary to sound public policy, harmful to the honor and dignity of the Senate, and dangerous to the perpetuity of free government, such excessive expenditures are hereby severely condemned and disapproved." These words are fair enough — but the action accompanying them leaves one in wonder as to what they really mean. Too often is it the case that our actions fall to square with our words.

A LITTLE FAULT.

Some circumstance may arise when a little fault will be the one thing by which people judge the life, and the verdict will be altogether unfavorable. As a keen observer has said, "a turn of events may bring that fault for a moment into a position of power." Therefore, beware!

MOTHER.

A host of friends and kindred, too,
We have to love each other;
But on this earth God gives to each
Of us just one dear mother.
She it is who first must hear
Of unexpected pleasure,
Rejoicing with us, and her joy
Makes full the heaping measure.

The first to comfort in distress,
The one to whom our sorrow
Brings keenest pain, and then again
Reminds us of "to-morrow."
We learn to lean upon her work,
Her wisdom guides and strengthens
Our character in youth and brings
Reward as time is lengthened.

And then the time to us must come
When mother's hands are folded—
To us the dearest, fairest hands
The Master Sculptor molded.
The angels kiss the loving eyes
And close the white-fringed keeper;
The pulseless breast is now at rest—
God keep the silent sleeper.

But let's not think of her as dead;
Just waiting over yonder
In that fair land, with loving hand,
That "sunshine land" of wonder,
We'll see her smile again some day.
His promise still rings true:
I'll go, and stay a little while,
Then I'll come back for you.

WHAT WILL THE Y. M. C. A. AND THE Y. W. C. A. DO ABOUT IT?

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

During the World War it was quite common for speakers and writers to say that the source of that conflict was in the rationalism of the German universities which finally filtered down among the common people and corrupted the faith and impaired the ethical life of the nation. The allegation had much to justify it.

But while decrying German rationalism overseas, not a few men among us are justifying it and propagating it among our own people. Indeed, there seems to be an organized movement, or common agreement, among some to spread this evil leaven in our country. Several of the leading publishers of the country are lending themselves to it, and men occupying conspicuous places in certain universities and colleges have become active propagandists of this rationalism of Graf, Kuenen, and Wellhausen.

A most subtle and sinister method of propagating this destructive criticism is through what is called "The Shorter Bible," "translated and arranged" by the Professor of Biblical Literature in Yale University, "with the collaboration" of another Professor in the same institution, the head of the department of religious literature of Charles Scribner's Sons, "the senior secretary of the publication department of the international committee of the Young Men's Christian Association," and "the religious work secretary of the national board of the Young Women's Christian Association."

That part of "The Shorter Bible" which is concerned with the New Testament appeared in 1918, and now the portion gathered from the Old Testament has been published.

The first part was bad enough. It pretended to "single out and set in logical and as far as possible in chronological order those parts of the Bible which are of vital interest and practical value to the present age"—a sort of pre-digested Bible adapted to the delicate system of the "present age." The result was nothing better than a mutilation of the New Testament to suit the preconceptions and prejudices of the rationalistic Professor Kent.

The part devoted to the Old Testament, just published, is even worse than that extracted from the New Testament. The rationalistic conclusions of the worst of the destructive critics are coolly assumed as if they had been established beyond all possibility of doubt or refutation, although they have been rejected by many of the most learned theologians in both Europe and America.

Dr. Kent and those who collaborate with him, in putting forth this mischievous publication, inject their rationalism into every page from the preface to the end, including even the titles which they print above the sections into which they have divided the work. The first few chapters of Genesis, after being chopped to suit the notions of these sapient editors, appear under the caption, "The Poem of Creation," clearly and intentionally implying that the matter thus arranged (or rather disarranged) has no historic value, but possesses nothing more than a certain poetic interest.

So much as is left of the major portion of the second chapter of Genesis is arranged under the caption, "The Provisions for Man's Physical, Moral, and Social Development," with never the slightest suggestion of man's spiritual needs or any other wants that might not be supplied by a process of "development."

The title above the fanciful fragment of the Biblical narrative of the confusion of tongues at Babel is "The Traditional Origin of the Nations and the Languages," manifestly designed to cast doubt on the historical value of the record. The emasculated story of the flood appears under the title, "The Survival of the Morally Fit."

Whole books of the Bible are dropped out: I and II Chronicles, two of the minor prophets, and four books of the New Testament.

Eighty-two of the Psalms are excluded, and many of the sixty-eight which are left are mutilated almost beyond recognition.

Not a trace of the book of Leviticus appears in the Pentateuch where it rightfully belongs, but parts of two chapters of the book are inserted after Nehemiah, thus deftly suggesting that it was composed after the exile.

Parts of Exodus and Deuteronomy stand in their proper places in the Pentateuch, but other parts come after Nehemiah, with the manifest purpose to assert that they also are post-exilic.

The historical portions of the Book of Daniel, duly revised according to the notions of the rationalists, are placed after II Kings; the prophetic parts (pulverized to the size of literary atoms) are inserted last in the list of the prophets, thus implying that the whole book was composed long after Daniel's time.

Of the forty-eight chapters of the book of Ezekiel forty-one disappear, and out of the seven chapters which remain, eighty-one of the one hundred and eighty-three verses which are found in our unmutilated Bible are cut out. No more than about one-twelfth of the entire book is left.

The books of Zechariah and Haggai are carved up even more mercilessly.

Not a single book of the Old Testament escapes untouched, and only the brief epistle of Paul to Philemon in the New Testament remains unslashed.

In brief, "The Shorter Bible" is the residuum of the Scriptures which is left after the most destructive school of the destructive critics has done its ruthless work upon the Holy Bible.

Informed men who are acquainted in even a moderate degree with destructive criticism will see this at a glance, and they will not be surprised at Professor Kent's work, nor misled by it. But unlearned men may be deceived by the fair pretences of the preface which is skillfully framed to put the real purpose of the "Shorter Bible" out of sight.

The worst feature about this wretched piece of rationalistic mutilation of the Bible is that it appears as being in part at least the work of leading Secretaries of the Young Men's Christian Association and the Young Women's Christian Association and that it receives in its entirety their approbation and endorsement.

These two Associations owe their lives to the evangelical churches, and without the support of these churches they can not survive a year. Liberalism and liberalists would never have created such associations and do not now support them.

A little while ago the Young Women's Christian Association severed its organic connection with the churches, causing such women as Miss Helen Gould to dissociate themselves from the body. Now, one of its secretaries goes farther, and lends countenance to this rationalistic publication.

It is time for the authorities of the Young Men's Christian Association and the Young Women's Christian Association to make plain what all this means. Let them tell the evangelical churches plainly and without equivocation, or concealment, if these bodies purpose to line up with rationalism and liberalism. They have no right to live upon the financial support of these churches while coalescing and co-operating with their foes.

The war record of the Young Men's Christian Association contains some chapters not wholly defensible, and, now if its record in time of peace is going to require explanation and excuse, the days of its usefulness will soon pass. If it is to countenance and support the rationalism of the destructive critics, it may be doubted if it has a just right to retain the word "Christian" in its name.

Let the authorities of these two Associations be well assured that the evangelical churches are going to make themselves heard in vigorous protest concerning this serious matter.

In a recent article in the Presbyterian of Philadelphia, Rev. Leander S. Keyser, D.D., says with reference to this "Shorter Bible": "We raise the question whether it is right and wise for the two Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. secretaries to lend their names and influence and aid to the making and circulating of such a book. These Associations are mostly supported by the evangelical churches. Ought not these churches to enter a vigorous protest? Do the evangelical churches want to support men who help along the liberalistic propaganda, which gradually and insiduously undermines the people's faith in the divine inspiration, integrity and authority of the Canonical Scriptures? Would it not also be advisable for the officers of these Christian Associations to look into this matter?"

Dr. John Fox of Easton, Penn., long-time one of the Executive Secretaries of the American Bible Society, in a searching review of the "Shorter Bible," speaks to the same purpose, saying at the close of his able article: "It is grievous to see the names of the official representatives of the Young Men's Christian Association and the Young Women's Christian Association appearing on the title page. Do the responsible managers of these two great institutions approve or disapprove of the rationalistic assault on the Bible? If they approve it or allow it, they must not be surprised if in due time the churches take official action withdrawing their support from the Associations themselves."

A thousand voices of stalwart men, who are able to gives a reason for their faith and resist victoriously the skepticism of the rationalists, will presently be heard in perfect accord with Dr. Keyser and Dr. Fox.

Perhaps the time has come to fight this issue out to a finish. If the rationalists have got the truth, let them show it in open, square, uncamouflaged fight. If the evangelical churches have the truth, let them proclaim it uncompromisingly.

The present is no time for pacificism between the destructive critics and the Christian people who stand for "the faith once for all delivered to the saints."

THE COVENANTS—OLD AND NEW.

II.

By Rev. S. L. Fain.

Foreword by Payton A. Sowell: These brief articles are elongated a bit, out of private letters from a very, very dear friend and brother. As the editor kindly admitted No. 1, so I am expecting No. 2 to be invited to a seat. The letter follows:

Dear Brother: Proceeding with the thought, "The covenants," in hand, I am disposed to say that "circumcision" did not have its origin in the "law," but was instituted in the "House of Abraham." It was expressive in the "House of Israel" of their faith in the promise God had made to Abraham. But with Abraham it sealed a "Promise."

This "promise"—confirmed, first by "God's covenant" with Abraham, later by "God's oath" to him—is the foundation upon which the "House of Israel" is built.

This "House of Israel" embraces the church, both under the Mosaic dispensation and that of Christ.

In the "House of Abraham," where babies were first brought into the Kingdom of God, through a faith in "His promises," where it was sheltered about with "His everlasting covenant" and "His terrible oath," we are to find the beginnings of "an original church."

I am sure in St. Paul's day the Jews did not understand the true significance of "circumcision." They never understood that from among them God intended to, and would, reveal his Son—the real "Head of a spiritual Israel"—a "second Adam," whose seed should fully satisfy His purpose in creation.

That "circumcision" was a symbol, is clearly shown in Romans ii, 28-29: "He is not a Jew, which is one outwardly: neither is that circumcision which is outwardly in the flesh." "But he is a Jew, which is one inwardly; and circumcision is that of the heart, in the Spirit," etc.

The "ordinance" passed out with the bringing in of the "New dispensation" and in that "wider dispensation" it was succeeded by "baptism." To have a view of this transition, read Col. ii, 10-15.

The Jews, as they expressed their faith in the exercise of their religion, submitted to a "bloody ordinance," as an outward expression of their faith in the "promises"; we submit to an "ordinance" symbolic of "cleansing" by the Holy Spirit as our expression of faith in the "Promise," which "Promise," by our faith, has already been fulfilled. Salvation for the world is in Christ.

The "giving of the law," in the "first covenant with the House of Israel," was a far and sure step in the development of God's plan for saving the world.

"Law" defines sin—Rom. vii: "* * * I had not known sin but by the law * * * except the law had said, Thou shalt not. * * *" And the "bloody" aspect of the ordinance of "circumcision" helped to reveal the safety from sin—through the atonement—suggested in symbol, and realized on "Calvary"—the "covenant of promise."

The Jews, I think, fell into the error of the heathen: they thought the literal eating of the sacrifices brought the blessing, not appreciating the "symbolic" message of the sacrifice: the real enactment was on Calvary.

The "covenant with Abraham was world-wide and eternal. The "covenant at Sinai," with the "House of Israel," was limited to the "House of Israel." And the "House of Israel" was founded for the sole purpose of introducing Christ into the affairs of the world—bringing Christ into the world. His coming into the world reached its limit when He rose from the dead.

Jesus was made of a woman, made under the law—under the law that had been broken by Adam, and under the Mosaic "covenant."

Under the first, he suffered death; under the second he was blameless—Heb. iv, 15—"* * * was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin."

Here we seem to see "legal guilt" without "personal fault."

I suppose this is the state of infants; but that the process may go on for preparing out of them adult life, it is necessary that they shall accept Christ as soon as the state of infancy is passed, or be personally guilty before God.

Jesus rose from the dead. He is "God's new covenant with the House of Israel." Also, he is the fulfillment of the "Abrahamic covenant of Promise."

In the "same as of one rising from the dead," so in "Isaac shall all nations be blessed."

The "covenant of promise" stretches from Abraham to eternity.

THE BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT INSTITUTE.

A District Preachers' Institute was held at the Brookhaven Methodist Church on January 3, 1922.

Rev. H. M. Ellis, P. E., presided over the meeting. His presidency was thoroughly good. He was pleasant and expeditious in handling the business. It adds greatly to the pleasure and profit of such meetings when the chair is filled by a wide-awake and resourceful man. P. E. Ellis is all of that.

Rev. W. B. Jones served as secretary; and he showed himself equal to the demands. Jones has fine secretarial sense. It isn't every man who knows how to note the proceedings of a meeting in a terse and intelligent way. Jones does it, and does it well.

The Institute was opened with a devotional service led by Rev. W. H. Lewis. It was a spiritual and refreshing service.

Nineteen pastors were in attendance. One presiding elder, one college president, one evangelist and one old, worn-out superannuate were present. Brother Fogarty, pastor of the Brookhaven Presbyterian church, was introduced to the Institute.

There was much life and some fire in the meeting. Some mighty good speeches were made, better than some we heard at the Annual Conference.

The Institute, by vote, asked the chair to appoint certain committees to examine into and report on several vital interests of the church in the bounds of the district. Every preacher present was appointed on some one of the committees ordered, even the "old worn-out superannuate" got an appointment. Good! Why not give the poor old fellows something to do?

The reports from the committees on the various district objectives were splendid. They were thoroughly sifted and passed after having been critically inspected.

If all the resolutions adopted should be faithfully carried out, the Brookhaven District will achieve wonders in promoting the interests of the Kingdom of our Christ in 1922. "So mote it be!"

A motion was adopted naming the fifth Sunday in January as Memorial Home Day, and urging that full assessment for that cause be raised on that day.

T. W. Adams was elected district reporter for the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The good women of the Brookhaven Church served a bountiful and delightful luncheon at 12:30 o'clock in the sub-story of the church. This reporter suspects that we preachers would get along very poorly if we didn't have some good women to feed us. Hurrah for the women! "Amen." T. W. ADAMS.

Brookhaven, Miss., Jan. 4, 1922.

LET US COMPLETE THE GREAT TASK.

By Dr. Stonewall Anderson.

At the General Conference at Atlanta two great church-wide projects were set on foot. The church was asked to subscribe $35,000,000, to be paid during a period of five years, to be expended for missionary purposes at home and abroad. The response to this request, made in the spring of 1919, was profoundly gratifying. The church was also asked to contribute $33,000,000 through a period of five years to be expended in strengthening our educational enterprises. The time set for the intensive financial appeal was the last days of May and the first days of June, 1921. The amount pledged in response to this appeal was more than $18,000,000. The subscriptions for education were taken at a time of great economic stress. Business conditions were thoroughly demoralized. The response of our people under such conditions undoubtedly shows that the cause of Christian education has a central place in their convictions and affections. They are loyal to the great cause. They are convinced that its success is essential to the maintenance and growth of the Kingdom of God in our nation and in the world.

Four months yet remain in which to complete the subscription to the educational campaign. There are a number of pastoral charges in the connection in which the every-member canvass was begun but for one reason or another was not completed. There are others in which the canvass has not yet been attempted. There are many of our loyal members who, at the time the canvass was made, subscribed nothing because of the uncertainty of business conditions. Many, for the same reason, made very small subscriptions. By making the every-member canvass where it has not been made, by securing additional subscriptions from those who ought to give and will give larger sums, and by securing subscriptions from those who for various reasons have not yet made subscriptions, we ought to be able, and will be able, to secure the whole amount asked for by the meeting of the General Conference in May, 1922.

It was said of old, in the matter of rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem, that "the people had a mind to work"—and the walls of Jerusalem were built, in spite of discouragement and opposition. With a mind to work, crippled with faith and hope and courage and with much prayer, we shall be able to do this thing. We believe in God, we believe in our church, we believe in the essential soundness of our country and in its well-nigh inexhaustible resources. We are quite sure also that the influence and power of our church and the moral greatness, as well as the financial prosperity of our country, are bound up with the success of the things for which the Christian Education Movement stands.

Let us as a church in this critical hour put aside our doubts and fears, and with faith and courage and in the spirit of great hopefulness finish this great task. It will take self-denial to do it. It will take sacrifices to do it. It will take courage to do it. Are we not the followers of Him who has shown us that self-denial and sacrifice are of the very essence of Christian character and Christian life, and does He not say to us in this hour and in this task, "Fear not, I am with you."

Faith and prayer represent habits of the soul which express our dependence on God and invite the divine intervention. This we shall never cease to need and, therefore, we are being trained by faith and prayer for that fuller appropriation of the divine which will differentiate the more perfect ministry of heaven from earth's imperfect service; and it is through temptation that the training comes.—W. Hay Aitken.

WHY GO TO CHURCH?

In the first place, because the church is the one place where the memory of the Lord is kept alive. Those who go to church regularly are those who believe in Jesus Christ and all he stands for. They gather together because they believe Him and His truth to be the one and only salvation of the world as well as their own heart's desire. Thus they keep Him in memory, alive in their own hearts and alive in the consciousness of the world. If you believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God and the ideal man, and that His teaching is the best and is the world's salvation, then you will want to meet week by week with those with whom you believe in common. You will want to have your own faith strengthened, but above all you will want to help keep Him and His teaching alive in your own heart and in the hearts of your fellow-Christians. You will want to talk Him over with your fellow-disciples. You will want to sit with them at the table of the Lord. If you do not believe in Jesus Christ, you will not want to go to church. Perhaps it will not do you much good to go unless you go hoping to believe. The fact that you do not go or do not enjoy going, is generally a very good sign that you are not very enthusiastic over Jesus Christ or what He stands for in the world. We know there are some who will contradict this and say discipleship to Jesus and love of His church and attendance thereon are not synonymous. We have heard this all our lives. Our experience has led us to believe it is largely a fable. With very few exceptions those who are really and deeply interested in Jesus are eager to meet with their fellow-disciples in His church and with them recall the memory of the Lord. It has been this common meeting of the disciples in the church that has preserved Him to the centuries. Should His disciples all suddenly stop meeting from week to week, close the church for good, He would be nearly forgotten in a century. If you want Him remembered, kept for the world, you will go to church. If you want Him forgotten, lost to the world, you will stay away. The church is the Ark in which Jesus Christ is carried safely through the ages.

The second reason for going to church is that the church is the one witness for Jesus Christ through the ages. We know many will say this is not true: that the real witnesses of Jesus Christ are individuals whether they go to church or not. Some of the most Christlike men do not attend church. (So we have heard all our lives, but seldom seen.) The witnesses for Jesus are the lives of His disciples. As a matter of historic fact, the witness for Jesus Christ through the ages has been His church. Some individuals have stood out, as did St. Augustine, St. Francis, Bernard of Clairvaux, David Livingstone—many others; but with very few exceptions these individuals were most ardent churchmen and acknowledged their oneness with the common Christian community. As a matter of fact, the one witness for Jesus Christ in the thousands of little towns and cities of the last two thousand years has been the church, the community of the faithful, the little flock, and the chief witness for Jesus Christ today is His church. If you believe that the hope of the world is in its consciousness of Christ; that His ethics are the only foundation of lasting civilization; that the recognition of Him in all personal, social and international relationships is the only security of a peaceful, happy world, you will want to be weekly with those who are holding Him up to the world, have your hand in the lifting Him up if He is to draw all men to Him. If you do not believe in these things, you will stay away.

The church of Jesus Christ stands for service. If you believe in service as the law of life, you will want to be actively identified with the institution which made this the law of all civilized communities and still, to a great extent, is the one institution which practices it. Here again there will be protest, louder than ever. Many will say service is not confined to the church or to churchmen. Thousands of individuals serve, give their money and their strength in service, who do not go near the church, do not even call themselves Christians. Well, do they? Perhaps some do, but the fact still remains that it is the church which has witnessed through the ages to service as the law of life, and still witnesses. Go to Mohammedan countries or Hindu countries. Do you see any service? No, except where the church has entered in and permeated foreign lands with some of its own idealism. In our own Christian land any of us who have had anything to do with raising the millions spent on relief work know just how much credence to put in all this talk about the Christian outside the church, the giver outside the Christian fold. (Was not the Interchurch World Movement wrecked on just this rock—misplaced faith in the Christian outside the church—the non-Christian believer in service?) Let us be fair and acknowledge that the Christian law of service has so permeated our social structure that some men outside the church feel its compelling touch and give; but it still remains true that the church is the institution that makes service, giving, sacrificial love, the foundation law of all our being, and if you believe in this as the law of life, you belong there with the others who do, and not with those who believe that golf, motoring, theatres, dinners and gaming are the real law of life. These latter may be very estimable people, but the Armenians, Serbs and Poles would never have been saved from starving nor the Red Cross have healed the millions of devasted Europe by their help. We know whereof we are talking, for we were on all those committees. We know who did the giving. If you want to be classed with the first group, you belong in the church—if with the latter, you do not.—The Christian Work.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Pap-Up Week has been a great success in a number of charges. Many thanks to the diligent collectors who have brought things to pass. It is not too late for those who are still on the job to push this matter of collections to an early completion. Send your report to me at Shreveport, La.

Let the pastors encourage the collectors. Plan with them to put over a successful campaign for Christian Education. This is our day of opportunity for Centenary and Mansfield Colleges.

This Christian Education Movement primarily is a call to a thoughtful reconsideration of the forces and agencies necessary to carry on the work of the Kingdom of God in the world. It is a call to prayer, to renewed consecration, to a deeper and fuller and richer life of Christian liberality. These are the all-important objectives. If these are secured, and they are all within our reach, it will follow "as the night the day," that funds to meet the crying needs of our educational institutions will be forthcoming.

"We give thee but thine own,
Whate'er the gift may be;
All that we have is thine alone,
A trust, O Lord, from thee.

"May we thy bounties thus
As stewards true receive,
And gladly, as thou blessest us,
To thee our first fruits give."

ALBERT S. LUTZ,
Conf. Secretary of Education.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE GENERAL EVANGELISTS.

The Annual Meeting of the General Evangelists was held in Birmingham, Alabama, December 28-29, 1921. All the authorized General Evangelists were present except a few who were providentially kept away.

Dr. George Stuart and his church made most careful and thoughtful preparation for our comfort and convenience.

The Committee on Evangelism met at the same place, December 27. All the Committee were present except Dr. H. K. Boyer, who was kept at home by the illness of his wife. Five new men were recommended as General Evangelists, to-wit.: R. J. Haskew, Dothan, Ala.; F. P. McCall, Jasper, Fla.; Jordan W. Carter, Harriman, Tenn.; S. M. Haynes, Clarkston, Ga.; and R. L. Flowers, Dallas, Texas. The Committee made plans for a school on Evangelism to be held at Junaluska, August 16 to 27.

I have attended five of these annual meetings with the general evangelists, but this was by all odds the best. The speeches were of an unusually high order. The optimism was palpable and contagious. The fellowship was delightful and without the least suspicion of anything unbrotherly. More than twenty thousand people have been added to the membership of the M. E. Church, South, under the ministry of the prophets of the Lord. Dr. Morrison, the dean of the group, and a prince of preachers, was present and in the vigor of health. He participated freely and frequently to the delight and edification of all present. The climax of the conference was his great sermon Thursday night.

Bishops Atkins, Ainsworth, and Darlington were there as members of the Committee on Evangelism and added much to the conference by their presence and godly advice. The next meeting will be held in Dallas about a week before Christmas of 1922.

The general evangelists have been loyal to all the great interests of the church. One of the members of the Committee on Evangelism who has served continuously since such a Committee was first created, said the evangelists had without exception complied with all the requirements of the Committee. Pastors are requested to use authorized evangelists and not self-appointed evangelists.

O. E. GODDARD.

TO THE PREACHERS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: The Sunday School Board of the Conference feels that we need the pastors in our Standard Training School at Grenada College June 1-7. It would greatly help the school and we feel that the pastors would get much benefit, too.

With this in mind, we have arranged for Dr. Norman E. Richardson, Dean of the Department of Religious Education, Northwestern University, to be in our faculty this year. If enough preachers will come to justify, Dr. Richardson will offer a course on Pentecost. He will require you to do some real study in connection with his lectures.

Now Dr. Richardson is to be with us whether you come in sufficient numbers to justify this course or not. Scores of the Sunday school workers in North Mississippi are anxious to have a course under him. He is recognized by Sunday school leaders the country over as one of the outstanding teachers in America to-day. He is a Methodist preacher. He will give lectures each evening for the benefit of the school.

My brethren, this is a great privilege. The thing I want you to consider is, Can you afford to stay away? Too, I want to know if you are coming. We must know within the next ten days how many preachers purpose to come so we will know what to advise Dr. Richardson and also the Sunday school workers of the Conference. Will you write me at once, "Count me one?"

Yours for better work,
J. E. STEPHENS,
Superintendent of Teacher Training.
Grenada, Miss.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Pastor: I am enclosing you herewith copy of a letter that has been mailed to each of your Centenary Treasurers. Will you kindly read it, that you may be familiar with our plan, and help them begin now to arrange to carry out the Campaign for FULL COLLECTIONS in the Centenary? Please see your Treasurers right away—and go over the matter with them, and inspire and help them to "put over" the Campaign.

It is more than a mere compliment to you as a preacher to say that this or no other interest can survive your neglect, or fail with your hearty co-operation and leadership, and of course you are the pastor of the Centenary, as of every other interest on your charge.

Let's make FEBRUARY 19 to 26 a "SURE ENOUGH" PAY-UP WEEK. To do this, begin NOW. If you can spare one service at each church to preach a sermon on the "Results of the Centenary," it would be fine, but if you cannot give all of a service to this, anyway give a part of it. Make use of your "Minute Men" to give three-minute messages before each service, telling something being done by the Centenary.

A new pamphlet has been, or will be, mailed to you from the Centenary office at Nashville, giving some very salient facts with reference to what the Centenary is doing.

Knowing of your great interest and capable service, in the cause of the Centenary, I count on your full co-operation in this crucial hour of the Centenary and the church.

On the bottom of this letter, I am giving you the records for the churches on your charge, as it appears on our books. Should it not tally with your Treasurer's books, please advise us. I am ready to help with lecture and pictures, or any way I can serve.

May this be the very best year of your service, and asking an interest in your prayers, I am,

Yours for service "In the Privileged Task of Giving the Gospel to All the World,"

W. D. HAWKINS,
Conference Missionary Secretary and Centenary Treasurer.

A CALL TO THE CHURCH.

It was in Memphis, Tennessee, April, 1918, that certain leaders of our Methodism, preachers and laymen, met to consider the great Centenary enterprise of the church. It was a meeting in which there was the conscious presence of the Holy Spirit, and because of the presence of the Head of the church the men who represented the various Conferences of Southern Methodism dared to call the church to the doing of a greater task than any until then we had undertaken. Their faith became later the faith of the entire church.

Another meeting is to be held in Memphis January 31-February 2. There will be preachers and laymen from every Annual Conference in the home field. These men are to give consideration to the present status of the Centenary Movement and to plan for the months ahead. They need to be much in prayer that there may be the guidance of the Holy Spirit in all their deliberations and in their plans. The entire church should be in prayer. In advance of the meeting, let every Methodist pray that God may lead in it all. And especially during the days of that meeting pray that the Head of the church may work his will in and through these representatives of Southern Methodism.—Bulletin.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL RECORD TO JANUARY 1.

The Sunday schools of Southern Methodism made a splendid showing in payments on Centenary pledges for 1921. In the face of discouraging conditions, and conditions that were felt in all church giving, the Sunday schools paid more to the Centenary during 1921 than during 1920. The total for 1920 was $313,839,17, and for 1921, $331,083.75. The grand total for the nearly three years of the Centenary is $863,206.09. We are within easy reach of the goal of $1,000,000 by March 1, 1922. We will reach this goal if our Sunday school people will make special efforts during January and February to bring their payments up to date. Let us not fail.

The Virginia Conference leads all the rest with a total of $105,281.63 paid by the Sunday schools to the Centenary. Other Conferences that have gone beyond $40,000 are: South Georgia, $49,986.76; North Georgia, $47,092.47; North Alabama, $44,509.25; Western North Carolina, $41,545.80.

DIGGING GOLD IN KOREA.

By Rev. S. S. Stewart, D.D.

VI.

The city of Seoul is the capital of a patriotic people. The clustered sentiment of many centuries makes it the center of interest both for the young and old of Korea. Many times I have walked along the wall which climbs mountains and spans valleys along its circle of the city. For five hundred years and more the pathway along portions of this wall has been beaten by the feet of many generations. A hundred years before Columbus discovered America a people proud of their imperial city gave to it the dignity and strength of a massive wall of granite. But the granite has fallen now. Gaps are found in a score of places, as if the artillery of war had opened a way, and carts are busy hauling the stone away from other buildings. In a few years the wall will stand only in remote sections, and there only as a grim reminder of a buried civilization.

But this wall of granite was symbolic of another wall with which these people had surrounded themselves. The plan of this other wall was inspired by the enemy of the souls of men. It was built out of superstition and idolatry and was intended as a barricade against true religion and love. For many centuries its forbidding strength has accomplished its purpose. But, thank God, this wall is falling down. Gaps are found all along the line and it no longer offers any real opposition to Christian advance.

One morning I stood upon a promontory of this granite wall. I saw the city stretching into the distance and spreading at my feet. And here and there occupying a place of prominence and beauty was the steeple of a Christian church or the substantial outlines of a Christian school, until it seemed as if about every strategic spot had been taken by the wise builders of the church in that land. Let us look briefly at some of these institutions in which we are interested as Southern Methodists.

The Pierson Memorial.

The Pierson Memorial Bible School is a plant of two modern buildings and a Korean planned dormitory. At present there are about 60 young men studying here. We are jointly interested with the Presbyterians and Northern Methodists in this work. Our Dr. Hardie is giving himself largely to this work, together with the editorship of the Union Theological Magazine, translation of Christian literature, and the conduct of the Theological Seminary. I had the pleasure of holding a revival in the Bible School for a week, during which time there were many evidences of the work of the Holy Ghost. It is an institution that is accomplishing much, and which has promise of great service. But it will not enter its sphere of greatest usefulness until our over-burdened missionaries there receive the assistance of a man who will be able to give himself wholly to this work. It is a big work for a big man. "Native leaders," are the crying need of the Mission Field, and the man who is able to develop these leaders will perform the greatest task of missions.

The Theological Seminary.

Standing on a hilltop and commanding the view of the whole city is the Theological Seminary. Here our two Methodisms are at work. Brother Hitch and Dr. Hardie are representing us there. Here also it was my privilege to preach the Gospel until God gave us a time of power and blessing. About 40 men are in the Seminary now, and daily this number was augmented by the presence of a like number from the Bible Woman's School and 50 more from the Pierson Memorial. Large numbers of these preachers and Bible women were blessed, some being reclaimed from a backslidden condition and others clearly testifying to the power of the blood which sanctifies wholly.

Bible Woman's Training School.

One of the most beautifully arranged Mission buildings that I know of is the Bible Woman's Training School at Seoul. Here we are at work with the Northern Methodists, and our Miss Tinsley is representing us. There are about 40 women in training there and we were blessed together with real revival power. The head Korean lady teacher was restored into the experience of sanctification and there was much repentance, confession and blessing among the students. Miss Tinsley and her associates are doing a work there which God can afford to bless.

Severance Hospital.

This great institution treats 40,000 patients annually. In addition to this, it looks after the health of the missionaries and foreign community and conducts a Medical College which has enrolled at present about 40 Korean students. Our Dr. F. M. Stites is representing Southern Methodism in this great institution. He has the Department of Medicine for his responsibility, and although he has been out only three years he has won the esteem of his associates. I counted seven missionary doctors at Severance besides a corps of splendidly efficient Japanese and Korean specialists. The staff is to be strengthened this fall by the arrival of a man who leaves a $30,000 practice in Chicago to enroll as a missionary. Thank God, there are many in the profession to whom the call of God is more imperative than the jingle of gold. It was a great privilege to be associated with these men at Severance. Our medical missionaries are evangelists as well as scientists. There is probably no class of men in missions who are making a better spiritual emphasis than they. In consequence, our hospitals are centers of salvation. For ten days I preached to the Medical College at Severance. The faculty were particularly burdened that this group of young men should go out into their profession recognizing that they are God's men and stewards of a sacred trust.

There lingers in my memory one incident that I must repeat here. The Hospital evangelist came one day and told me that a patient felt that he was going to die. He had heard a little about Jesus and somehow learned of the revival meeting among the medical students. He wanted me to come and see him. I went, accompanied by Dr. Van Buskirk, whose burden for souls is that of an evangelist, and who was my interpreter in all the work at Severance.

We went into a room and found our patient in a state of hysteria. His wife and little boy were standing by his side and he was filled with terror at the prospect of bidding them good-bye forever. I looked to God for a moment for a word that would comfort, then I said, "Brother, do you know that you have a great Friend who is all-powerful?" He leaned upon his elbow and eagerly pulled the cotton out of his ears so that nothing could hinder his hearing. I told him of the death of Christ for sinners and the doctor led in prayer. Then I repeated John 7:37 to him until he caught hold of the promise as a drowning man would seize a life preserver. And immediately there was a great calm in his soul. His fears fled and the light of a divine joy touched his face, and in his weakness he thanked God for his salvation. As I went away I thought of a storm tossed boat on Galilee, and a majestic Christ rising from his slumbers and rebuking the winds until they slunk away like whipped hounds. I saw the miracle of Galilee reenacted at Severance Hospital that morning, when at the name of Jesus the fiercest terrors that stir men's breasts gave way to the peace of God that passeth understanding. Thank God for a Christ triumphant upon every struggling battlefield of humanity!

God's promises are ever on the ascending scale. One leads up to another, fuller and more blessed than itself. In Mesopotamia God said, "I will show thee the land." At Bethel, "This is the land." In Canaan, "I will give thee all the land, and children innumerable as the grains of sand." It is thus that God allures us to saintliness. Not giving us anything until we have dared to act—that he may test us. Not giving everything at first—that he may not overwhelm us. And always keeping in hand an infinite reserve of blessing. O the unexplored remainders of God! Who ever saw his last star?—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

"CLERGYMAN HAD CARRIED GOSPEL TO REMOTE PARTS OF WORLD."

(The above was one of the headlines of the fine article on Bishop Lambuth which appeared in The Japan Advertiser, Tokyo, September 2?, 1921. It should be very interesting and valuable because of its accuracy, and because it was published in Japan the day after Bishop Lambuth's death.—Editor.)

Bishop Walter Russell Lambuth, head of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Japan, Korea, China, and Congo, Africa, who has been hailed as the greatest Christian missionary in the world, died of a blood clot on the brain at the Yokohama General Hospital at 5:35 o'clock yesterday morning. He was 67 years old.

Ill for a Month.

Although he had been ill for about a month, Bishop Lambuth's first illness was not the immediate cause of his death. Returning from a trip to Siberia and Manchuria late in August, he went to Karuizawa to conduct the annual mission meeting of his church. On the third day of this meeting, however, he became suddenly ill, and the Rev. W. E. Towson of Kyoto took him to the Yokohama General Hospital where an operation was found necessary. Although the operation was a serious one, he recovered rapidly, but on the eleventh day after the operation suffered from a severe chill. From that time onward he steadily declined, having been unconscious for 36 hours prior to his death.

Many persons connected with religious work all over the world have in the past declared their opinion that Bishop Lambuth was one of the greatest missionaries that the world ever has produced. Among his many friends in the Far East he is regarded as having done as much or more than any other person any of the churches have sent to this field.

Born in China in 1854.

He was born in Shanghai, China, on November 24, 1854, of American parentage, the Lambuth family being one of the oldest missionary families existing. His father and mother served six years in Japan. The former also was in China 30 years and his mother worked in that field for virtually 50 years. Both Bishop Lambuth's grandfather and great-grandfather were missionaries among the American Indians. His only surviving sister, Mrs. Hector Park, wife of Dr. Park of the Soochow Hospital, has served 40 years in China.

When 14 years old Bishop Lambuth was sent to the United States to be educated. After being gradnated from Emory and Henry College in Virginia and being ordained as a minister, he completed the medical course at Vanderbilt University and then served as an interne at Bellevue Hospital in New York City. Then followed a course of medical lectures in Edinburgh, Scotland.

Married in 1878.

After being married to Miss Daisy Kelley, of Nashville, Tenn., in 1878, they went to China where Bishop Lambuth was stationed by his church for the next eight years. During this time he established hospitals at both Peking and Soochow. In 1886 he followed his father and mother from China to this country, where he organized, with Kobe as the headquarters, the mission for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for the districts bordering along the Inland Sea. During the time that he served there he organized and founded the Kwansei Gakuin and the Palmore Institute, both at Kobe, and the Hiroshima Girls' School at Hiroshima. He was one of the six men to organize the work of his church in Japan.

Returning to the United States in 1890 Bishop Lambuth became assistant missionary secretary for his church with headquarters in Nashville, Tenn., and in 1896 was made missionary secretary, which position he held for the next 14 years. At the end of that time the general conference of his church, meeting at Asheville, North Carolina, conferred upon him the rank of bishop. Since then he has devoted virtually all of his time to foreign missionary work.

Started Mission in Congo.

Eight years ago, together with an American Negro minister, he walked 1,000 miles into the interior of the cannibal country, Congo Africa, where after much difficulty and many hardships a site for a mission was selected. Returning the following year with a troop of American missionaries he led them on foot through the jungles 700 miles, and they established the mission. He remained in charge of the mission work in that country from that time until his death. During these years he was connected with missionary work in many other countries, making eight trips to Brazil, sixteen to Mexico City, eight or ten to the Far East and many to Cuba.

Bishop Lambuth was the author of several books, most of them being on medical subjects. The latest of his works, "Medical Missions," was published in New York last year. He also wrote "Sidelights on the Orient."

Upon the entrance of the United States into the World War Bishop Lambuth was made a member of the Army Chaplain Board in Washington and during nine months of the war he served as a chaplain at the front and in Paris.

Sought Aid for Chinese.

At the outbreak of the North China famine, Bishop Lambuth, who was then in the Orient, toured the stricken section and returned to the United States to seek aid for the Chinese people. Arriving at Vancouver he was given a telegram from President Wilson appointing him a member of the American China Famine Committee. In addition to his efforts as a member of this committee he, through individual solicitation, obtained $1,000,000 for the relief of the famine, which was the largest total any one person obtained.

The last three years Bishop Lambuth has devoted virtually all of his time to work in China, Korea and Japan. He visited these countries each year, arriving in Japan on his last trip last spring. On this trip he had planned to organize work for his church in Siberia and Manchuria. He spent July and most of August in Siberia, where he founded the Siberia-Manchuria mission, which now has a membership of several hundred. Returning to Japan to conduct the annual Methodist Episcopal conference at Karuizawa he took ill there and was taken to the hospital in Yokohama on September 2. Bishop Lambuth had been forced to cancel annual conferences of his mission in both China and Korea, because of his illness.

Interested in Geography.

Before making his trip to Africa, Bishop Lambuth was made a fellow of the Royal Geographical Society. From the organization of the Federation Council of Churches in the United States, embracing about 30 denominations, he was active in the work and at the time of his death was chairman of the executive committee of that body. He was also vice-president of the General Secretaries' Union of Protestant Missionary Boards in the United States, a member of the commission for obtaining pastors for the union churches in Japan and honorary member of the Academy of Medicine at Nashville, Tenn.

Bishop Lambuth's home was at Oakdale, California. Besides his sister he is survived by his wife, who has been an invalid for the last several years, a daughter, Miss Mary Lambuth, of Oakdale, and a son, Prof. David K. Lambuth, head of the English department at Dartmouth College. Although Mrs. Lambuth has been ill for a long time she was so interested in Bishop Lambuth's work that she insisted that he leave her bedside to carry it on.

TO THE CENTENARY TREASURERS.

The Tragedy of Failure.

To fail in anything undertaken for God through the church is humiliating, yet there might be some circumstances that would explain why the failure was made.

But, a Failure in the Centenary Would be a Tragedy that Could not be Explained.

The converted heathen have been taught that "our God" is able to do all things; therefore, if we should fail in the Centenary collections, so we could not complete the work we have already begun, in other words, not do what we told them we would, they would charge the failure to our God. We would understand that it is our failure rather than God's, but they would not. Therefore, when we consider that our Methodism must collect $4,000,000 by May 1, in order that we may make the third payment to the participating Boards, and that our Conference is due $125,000 of this amount, you can realize that we are facing a crisis that merits our intense interest, earnest prayers, and hearty co-operation in collecting all due from each subscriber in every church before that time. With this in view, FEBRUARY 19 to 26 has been designated as "PAY-UP WEEK" in our Conference, with the purpose of beginning NOW, and pushing collections till the close of "PAY-UP WEEK" with a determined effort on the part of every one to succeed in collecting the 60 per cent due.

Plan Suggested For Collecting.

The Treasurer should at once make a statement for each subscriber showing the amount subscribed, the amount paid, and the amount due (blank statements will be furnished upon request), then get enough collectors to help, so that each subscriber may be called on, and earnestly requested that they pay the amount due. If they cannot pay all of it, collect what they will pay, and then have them promise when the remainder will be paid, and write it on the statement. If they cannot pay anything, ask when they can, and write the date on the statement, and when the time arrives, be sure to call on them that day, and continue to follow up the collections in this way. If this is done, most of the pledges will be PAID.

Remember to collect the fourth year from those who will pay it. Glad to furnish you with notices to subscribers and receipt books—ask for what you may need.

DO NOT WAIT UNTIL "PAY-UP WEEK," but begin NOW. Send me the names and addresses of all your delinquent subscribers who made a pledge of $200 or more, and I will have a special letter to go from the Centenary office to them.

Won't you begin NOW to PLAN, PRAY, and PUSH to make this a REAL "PAY-UP WEEK," with the purpose fixed in your mind to collect the account due by each subscriber in your church—and further, that you will keep the work going until all the money is collected that was pledged from your church? I am ready to help you in any way I can, either from the office, or by my lecture and pictures.

You have the opportunity NOW of doing real missionary work, as much as though you were in the Mission Field—for we must look to you to make possible the going or staying of the missionary. The Relief Work in Europe, the wonderful progress in Brazil, Africa, and Manchuria, the Student Movement in China, self-support in Cuba and Japan, the remarkable work of our church in Mexico and Korea, great Evangelistic Campaigns in Czecho-Slovakia, and our work in the Mountains, Cotton Mills, and among the Foreigners in our own Southland, should cause you to rejoice in what has been accomplished through your efforts, and to realize that much depends upon YOU NOW, with reference to the future of the Centenary, Methodism, and Christianity.

Last year was the greatest year in the history of our church. Will you help make this even greater?

On the bottom of this letter is given the amount subscribed by your church, the amount paid, and the amount due on first three years. If this is not in accordance with your records, please write me, or send me a report of all collections.

May God bless you, and help you measure up to the full stature of a MAN IN CHRIST JESUS, and that this may be the happiest, because it will be the most useful year of your life.

Yours for "Service in the Privileged Task of Giving the Gospel to All the World,"

W. D. HAWKINS,
Conference Missionary Secretary and Centenary Treasurer.

The Home Circle

OLD MOTHERS.

I love the old mothers—mothers with white hair
And kindly eyes and lips grown softly sweet
With murmured blessings over sleeping babes.
There is something in their quiet grace
That speaks of the calm of Sabbath afternoons;
A knowledge in their deep, unfaltering eyes
That far outstretches all philosophy.
Time with its caressing touch about them weaves
The silver-threaded fairy shawl of age,
While all the echoes of forgotten songs
Seem joined to lend a sweetness to their speech.
Old mothers! as they pace with slow-timed step,
Their trembling hands cling gently to youth's strength;
Sweet mothers! as they pass, one sees again
Old garden walks, old roses, and old loves.

THE UNEXPECTED GUESTS.

By Willie Conger Page.

"I dare not slight the stranger at my gate—
Threadbare of garb and sorrowful of lot,
Lest it be Christ that stands—and goes His way,
Because I, all unworthy, knew Him not.

I dare not miss one flash of love and cheer
From alien souls, in greeting glad and high—
Ah, what if God be moving very near—
And I, so blind, so deaf—had passed Him by."

"Father, mother, whom are you expecting to come to our home to-day? Why all this preparation?" asked the little boy of the home.

"Dear child, the good Master has just sent a messenger saying: 'I will take meat and tarry in your home this day.'"

Turning to the servants she said: "Hurry and prepare the feast; then bring the silken robes, the fine and purple linens; get ready the guest chambers—the Master is on the way."

There was a knock on the door.

"O, it may be that He has come." They ran and opened wide the door. But no, it was an old man stooped over and burdened under a heavy load of sin; in his bleared eyes was a haunted look; his clothing was soiled and ragged, his face furrowed by sorrow and dissipation, his feet bare and bleeding.

"Please let me come in out of the bitter cold," he cried. So they took him in, bathed, warmed, fed and comforted him, put on a garment of fine linen and left him to rest in one of the guest chambers.

They then sat down to await the coming of the Master.

There was a feeble call—a timid knock on the outer door. They ran to admit the expected guest. On the threshold there stood a woman, her broken, bleeding heart clasped tightly. She raised her sorrowful eyes and said:

"I am so weary, please let me come in and rest."

They bade her welcome and gave her every comfort the house afforded, put a silken robe around her shoulders, and left her to sleep and rest in one of the upper chambers.

It was now dark; it began to rain in torrents; the wind swept through the twisted limbs of the olive and almond trees in great gusts.

Then the snow began to cover the dark places of the earth, and make the whole world beautiful.

Suddenly there was a wailing cry to the door. They ran once more; sitting on the lower step was a shivering, starving child, its emaciated limbs scarcely covered by its scant, tattered clothing.

"O, poor little thing," cried the little boy. "Mother give it my portion of milk, my figs and oaten cake." After they had bathed and fed it the little boy took off his warm coat and wrapped the child. Then mother sat near the fire and held it clasped in her arms while it slept.

Looking up they beheld the Master sitting in their midst.

"How are my guests?" he asked softly.

"O Master, they were so in need of rest and sleep we, for Thy sake and in Thy name, are taking care of them till they are healed."

He smiled—whispered blessings and went His way.

And we who live on life's great highway, do we help and comfort the poor, the crippled, and blind who so often come to our door asking for help? Do we, for the sake of the Master, deny ourselves to aid or to make their lives better and easier?

Let us think before we carelessly turn away these sorrowing ones—it may be the Master's way of testing our faith and love for Him.

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me."

FINDING THE THIEF.

Toby was an old, old dog with stiffened joints and a curly black coat, but he never took anything that he knew did not belong to him. Sam was his master, and was very proud of Toby's honesty.

One day Sam's father sent him to the woods to pile stove wood. He took a great slice of cake along, for piling wood is hard work and makes a boy hungry in a little while. Of course, Toby went along, but all he did was to lie down on a nice pile of dry leaves and go to sleep.

Sam worked hard for a long time, then threw himself down in the shade and unwrapped the precious cake. Just as he was beginning to eat it a squirrel suddenly darted out of the bushes beside him. In an instant another followed, then another. Sam was so excited he forgot how tired he was, and, tossing the cake on the ground, dashed away after them.

Toby sat up and looked around in wonder. He was too old to even think of running after squirrels. Spying the cake, he limped questioingly over to it. When he had swallowed the last crumb, he hobbled back to his pile of leaves and went to sleep again.

Presently Sam came panting back and dropped down beside the empty paper. "Well, if that doesn't beat everything!" he exclaimed, looking under it and all about. "Toby, did you eat my cake?"

Toby's dumpy tail moved ever so little, but he kept his eyes closed.

"You're nothing but an old thief!" scolded Sam, and started home, half crying.

Toby rolled his eyes pitifully while Sam told his mother all about it. Had he been a boy he would have told her how it all came about.

"There's no question as to whether there is a thief," said mother, "but do you think you can tell me who it is?"

Sam's mouth dropped open. He had thought that mother understood, but evidently she did not.

"Haven't you taught Toby that anything he finds on the ground is his?" she asked.

Sam nodded.

"When you rushed away after the squirrels and left the cake on the ground, it was just the same as giving it to him; then, because he ate it, you rob him of his good name by calling him a thief. Now, who is the thief?"

Sam hung his head a moment and dug his bare toes into a crack in the porch, then patted Toby's shaggy neck. "I guess, old fellow, if you're not ashamed of me, I'd better not be of you!" he said, and walked away, thinking he would be more careful the next time.—Elizabeth White Ralston.

MR. FORGOT.

Mr. Forgot had a queer little shop,
Where Clara and Bertie and Tim liked to stop.
Of lazy excuses he kept quite a store.
I'm sure he had eighty or ninety or more!

The children, they took them each day to the school,
And used them at once if they broke any rule.
Until teacher she said, "I know well you have bought
Those lazy excuses from Mr. Forgot!"

Perhaps you have met him—this wily old man,
To sell such excuses—it still is his plan,
Though now Bert and Clara and Tim never stop,
But laugh as they run past his queer little shop.

MOTHER AND HEAVEN—A MEDITATION.

No man can realize what Heaven is until he suddenly awakes to the realization that his mother is there. And the realization comes suddenly, for until the actual moment of dissolution it is impossible to associate the thought of mother with the thought of death. As mother always has been, so she always must be—there is no way of filling the void that would be created by her absence. We hear of the death of other people, and we see our friends pass away almost daily—but somehow or other we seem never to think that mother must go away, too.

It is love that makes it so. The love for mother is not a thing that springs into existence through association, or through knowledge, or even through a desire to have affection for the one who gave us birth; it is born within us; we breathe it with our first breath; it is a part of our very being; before all other things are, it is.

And mother's love for the child is of the same kind. It shows itself in the wondrous light that shines in her eyes as she looks upon the newborn babe; it makes itself felt in the kisses she passionately impresses upon the lips and cheeks of the child of her heart; it is seen in the caressing touch of her gentle hands, and it is heard in the tender words she whispers into baby ears.

Mother's love does not cease with cradlehood days. As sons and daughters grow into stalwart youths and maidens, her love seems to grow stronger along with them. She watches over them with infinite solicitude and guides their footsteps with an unutterable longing to see them walk in right paths. She counsels them with words of wisdom. A prayer is ever upon her lips, welling up from the deepest recesses of her heart, for those who are indeed her very life. She loves them so much that sacrifice for them becomes a joy, and she denies herself that they may become enriched in mind and heart.

Mother loves her children when they have become men and women—and it is the same love they knew when they knelt at her knees and felt her hands resting in sweet benediction upon their heads. Sometimes these men and women, having homes and children of their own now, go back to the old home—and mother takes them into her arms and kisses them as she did when they were little children, and the love-light still shines in her eyes, and she does for them every one all the little things that only love could remember or think of. How like mother to have on the table for the grown man the very dish her little boy liked so well!

But death does come, in spite of love. One sad day—how sad only those who have seen it can know!—the weary heart ceases to beat, the breath fades away, the eyes are closed, the hands grow cold. Mother is dead.

No—mother is not dead! She has gone to Heaven. What a difference it makes! She is asleep for awhile—asleep in Jesus—and when she awakes, it will be in "the Home over there," the Home she has read about and talked about, the Home to which she has said she would be glad to go when the Master called her. It is a beautiful Home—all the more beautiful because beautiful mother is there. She is perfectly happy there because it is God's Home, and she is not suffering the pain she suffered on earth, and she still looks down upon us with the love she has loved us with always. And she is watching for us to come Home.

Yes, Mother, we are coming.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

"We are delighted here, and busy," writes Rev. R. M. Evans from Verona, Miss.

Rev. W. H. Lane, of Lauderdale, Miss., writes encouragingly of his work, and invites the editor to pay him a visit—for which we thank him.

Rev. E. J. Coker has been cordially received by the good people of Carriere, Miss., and he begins the year's work with bright prospects.

Through the activity of the pastor, Rev. F. B. Ormond, the Advocate now goes to the home of every steward of our church at Tylertown, Miss.

"The Lord is graciously blessing us, and everything points to a successful year on the Matherville charge," writes Rev. D. P. Yeager from Matherville, Miss.

Rev. J. B. Randolph, the presiding elder, reports that all goes well on the Corinth District, North Mississippi Conference. All the preachers are at their places and at work.

Rev. J. Lambuth Evans is preaching to large congregations at West Monroe, La., and the people are showing a splendid spirit of co-operation with their pastor's efforts.

Rev. C. H. Strait writes that he found a new parsonage and a fine people at his new appointment, Decatur, Miss., and that the work of the church is moving along well.

Columbia College, our only institution of learning in the Northwest, located at Milton, Oregon, has recently been raised from the rank of a junior college to that of a standard college.

The Southern Baptist Church reports the baptisms for the year 1921 as 250,814, the largest in the history of the demnomination. The number reported in Louisiana is 7000, and in Mississippi, 15,709.

The official board of Moore Memorial Methodist Church, Winona, Miss., has increased the salary of the pastor $500 this year, making it $2500. Rev. J. Tillery Lewis serves this fine congregation.

Rev. Chas. D. McGehee, who has many friends in Louisiana and Mississippi, is now pastor of the Haven Street Methodist Church, St. Louis, Mo. He has a splendid church and he is delighted with his work.

Rev. Chester M. Ray, of Caledonia, Miss., is highly pleased with his new field of labor. The people have been exceedingly kind, giving substantial tokens of their appreciation, and the outlook is pleasing.

Rev. P. H. Howse, our pastor at Silver Creek, Miss., writes that the people have received him kindly and have given many substantial tokens of their appreciation. He is looking forward to a great year's work.

Rev. W. H. Saunders was cordially received by the good people of Hazlehurst, Miss., to which place he was appointed at the recent session of the Mississippi Conference, and he is greatly pleased with the outlook.

The Intelligencer, the official organ of the Reformed Church in America, has been merged with The Mission Field, and will henceforth be known as The Christian Intelligencer and Mission Field. It is a very fine publication.

The work of our West End Church, Laurel, Miss., Rev. John W. Ramsey, pastor, is moving on well in all departments. The Leagues and the Sunday school are growing in numbers, and splendid congregations are attending the regular services.

A revival meeting recently held in Hendrix College, Conway, Ark., conducted by Dr. C. G. Hounshell, resulted in more than fifty conversions and forty volunteers for life-service. The college now has a ministerial band of twenty young men.

Rev. P. O. Lowrey, our pastor at Indian Bayou, La., is preaching a series of sermons on the Ten Commandments, the series to be concluded in February. The Sunday school at Indian Bayou is in an attendance contest with the school at Rayne.

The post office address of Rev. A. L. McQueen, who was recently appointed to supply the Franklinton circuit, is Mt. Hermon, La. Brother McQueen writes that he is delighted with his appointment and that the work of the year begins well.

Our church at Logansport, La., is thoroughly organized and active. Definite steps have been taken toward the building of a brick church on a more desirable site in the near future. The salary of the pastor, Rev. Leland Clegg, has been increased.

Mrs. Rosa M. Harvey recently willed to Morris Harvey College, located at Barboursville, West Virginia, an estate valued at $200,000. Mrs. Harvey was the widow of the late Morris Harvey, for whom the college was named and who was its leading benefactor.

Press dispatches last week announced the death of Dr. Sessler Hoss at his home in Muskogee, Oklahoma. Dr. Hoss was the son of Bishop and Mrs. E. E. Hoss, and was a prominent physician of Muskogee. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the bereaved family.

Rev. R. T. Ware begins his fourth year at Mooringsport, La., with bright prospects. The church is loyal and spiritual, and there are frequent accessions to its membership. Thirty-five people will lead in public prayer. The pastor's salary has been increased this year

On Monday, January 9, there was organized in Shreveport, La., what is to be known as "The Evangelical Association," consisting of pastors and official boards of all the Protestant churches. This co-operative movement promises to be of great value to the kingdom of Christ.

Rev. W. A. Langley, who has served the Mayhew and Sessums charge since the meeting of the North Mississippi Conference, has been appointed assistant to Rev. T. M. Brownlee, our pastor at Starkville, Miss., and Rev. N. N. Maxey has been appointed to Mayhew and Sessums.

Rev. R. E. Simpson has been appointed again as pastor of our church at Leachville, Ark., where he has a fine people with whom to work. The present year begins with encouraging prospects.

Brother Simpson keeps in toueh with his Mississippi friends through the Advocate

Dr. Charles Wesley Flint, of Corneli Coliege, has been elected chancellor of Syraeuse University to succeed Dr. James R. Day, resigned.

Port Gibson Female College, at Port Gibson, Miss., will open its spring term on January 24. Students desiring to enter at that time should notify the president, Dr. Rolfe Hunt, at once.

Dr. J. R. Countiss, Secretary of the North Mississippi Conference, requests us to say that if any brother has not received his quota of the Conference Minutes, he should write him eoncerning the matter.

In the Sunday night attendance contest now on between Lake Charles and Ruston in the Louisiana Conferenee. Ruston reported 329 last Sunday night, and Lake Charles 158. Other ehurehes will enter the contest next Sunday.

Rev. E. H. Cooley, of Bay Springs, Miss., requests us to state that through some oversight of the Auditing Committee, the Bay Springs eharge gets no credit in Table 3 of the Conference Journal for $70 whieh was paid on the assessment for General Work.

The Minutes of the North Mississippi Conference have come from the press, and a copy has reached the Advocate office. It is a splendidly printed volume—one that maintains the high standard set by the secretary, Dr. J. R. Countiss, in preeeding years. We congratulate the seeretary upon the fine work he has done.

Rev. Lee R. Sparks, our pastor at Franklin, La., is making splendid use of the local press to help him in his work. In a recent issue of his town paper he gave an interesting aecount of his trip through the country to his new appointment, and of his reception, concluding with a most appropriate New Year's greeting to his new friends and parishioners.

By invitation of the Ministerial Association of Shreveport, La., Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, the well-known preacher and author, recently delivered a ten days' series of lectures in Shreveport. The result has been a decided quiekening of interest on the part of the people in systematie Bible study, and a marked promotion of their spiritual life.

Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Bowdon announee the marriage of their daughter, Frances Lucille, to Rev. C. E. McLean on December 26, 1921, at Pelican, La. The Advocate extends hearty good wishes to this fine young couple and prays that the richest blessings of Heaven may be bestowed upon them. Brother McLean is pastor of the Istrouma Church, Baton Rouge, La.

The Executive Committee of the Louisiana State Epworth League is calling for enlistments in the "Loyalty Legion" in order that the Statewide work may not have to be diseontinued. The payment of one dollar is the condition of membership in the "Legion." Miss Grace Cook, 614 North Fourth Street, Monroe, La., is the treasurer, to whom contributions may be sent.

Rev. J. M. Smith, who was appointed a Conference evangelist at the reeent session of the Mississippi Conference, desires it to be known that his address is now Poplar Springs Drive, Meridian, Miss., and not Hattiesburg, as it appears in the Conference Journal. Brother Smith will be glad to assist the brethren in their meetings, and he may be reached at the above address.

Rev. W. J. Porter, our pastor at Columbia, La., sent out very unique and pleasing New Year greetings, in the form of a check drawn upon the "Kingdom Bank of Good Cheer." The editor thanks Brother Porter for the reeeipt of sueh a valuable eheek. It reads as follows: "Pay to the order of the bearer hereof three hundred and sixty-five days of health and happiness."

Rev. L. L. Roberts, of Columbia, Miss., passed through New Orleans on Thursday of last week, being on the sad mission of carrying the body of his little daughter, Virginia McCray, to Zachary, La., for interment, she having died, after a lingering iliness, on January 11. Our deepest sympathy is extended to Brother and Sister Roberts in their sorrow and we pray that sustaining graee may be given them in this sad hour.

Just before the Advoeate went to press on Tuesday, we received a message announcing the death of the mother of Mr. Stephen S. Thomas, Centenary Seeretary-Treasurer of the Louisiana Conference, at her home in Peebles, Ohio, and announcing also the very serious illness of his father. The many friends of Brother Thomas will sympathize deeply with him in this great sorrow. Brother Thomas left immediately to be with the bereaved family at the funeral serviee.

A note from Rev. A. T. Mellwain, presiding elder of the Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference, gives an encouraging statement eoncerning the beginning of this year's work. Seven quarterly eonferenees had been held at the time of writing, and four charges had increased the assessment for pastors' salaries, the increase aggregating $1100. A fine spirit of eo-opefation is evident among both preachers and laymen in carrying out plans for the work of the year.

The editor greatly enjoyed a eall by Dr. H. F. Brooks, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Shreveport, La., on Saturday of last week. Dr. Brooks had eome to the eity to attend the Gipsy Smith meetings. He gave a good report of Methodism in Shreveport. The reception given him and his family by the members of First Chureh was eordial in the extreme, and he is in love with his new home. About one hundred members have been received into the ehurch since Conference, about half of them on profession of faith.

The basket ball teams maintained in eonneetion with the work at St. Mark's Hall have made a remarkable record during the past two years in amateur athletic cireles of the city, having won a great majority of the games played. A banquet was given in honor of the teams reeently at one of the leading restaurants of the city, Dr. T. P. Bell, who has taken great interest in the boys' work at St. Mark's, acting as master of eeremonies. The editor of the Advocate was an invited guest, and he greatly enjoyed the delightful oecasion.

Mr. A. S. Daniels died at his home on the Seashore Camp Grounds, Biloxi, Miss., on Saturday of last week. He had been a life-long member of the Algiers Methodist Chureh, of this city, his home for many years having been in Algiers. He was one of the eonspicuous laymen of the elty as long as he made his home here, serving a long time as steward and Sunday sehool superintendent of his loeal church. Interment was in Greenwood Cemetery on Sunday, the service being conducted by Rev. C. C. Wier, St. John's Masonie Lodge, of which he was a past master, taking part in the service. He is survived by his widow and three grown daughters, to whom the Advocate extends sineere sympathy in their great sorrow.

Rev. E. N. Evans, of this city, has heen appointed financial commissioner of the Memorial Home, the institution maintained by our church in this city for unfortunate girls. Brother Evans is admirably suited to the work he has undertaken, and we commend him heartily to the friends of the institution in Louisiana and Mississippi. Although now in the local ranks, he was for many years in the traveling eonnection, serving as pastor of some of our leading ehurches. He is one of the ablest preachers of our aequaintanee, possessing unusual pulpit ability. His heart is in the work in whieh he is now engaged, and he has a way of presenting it that is altogether delicate and unobjectionable. We trust he will be given every opportunity to present this great cause throughout our territory.

Among the out-of-town preachers who have been in the city to attend the Gipsy Smith meetings, Dr. I. W. Cooper, Brookhaven, Miss., Dr. H. F. Brooks, Shreveport, La., Rev. R. W. Vaughan, Ruston, La., Rev. F. B Hill, Ponchatoula, La., and Rev. F. M. Freeman, Crowley, La., have paid appreciated calls to the Advocate offiee. The meetings will continue throughout this month, affording opportunity for many people of neighboring towns to hear the great evangelist. No other meeting that we have heard of in the long history of religous activites in New Orleans has made such impression upon the city as this meeting is making. The tabernacle, which seats between five and six thousand people, is filled at every serviee, and thousands of cards have been signed by people who are confessing Christ for the first time or who are reconsecrating their lives to the serviee of God. We hope as many of our readers as can do so will attend the meetings; and we earnestly request all of them to pray for the succes of this great revival campaign.

We take the following from the Midland Methodist of January 11: "Rev. John W. Pearson, who was recently transferred from the Tennessee Conferenee to the Louisiana Conference and stationed at Mansfield, La., has received a royal welcome. The board of stewards fixed the salary at $1000, and throws in for good measure a splendid parsonage beautifully furnished. Brother Pearson is one of our strongest young men, and the Midland wishes him well in his new field of labor. We have not the slightest doubt he will measure up to every requirement."

TO A FRIEND.

The editor of the Advocate has been brought under renewed obligations to Rev. R. H. Harper, pastor of the First Methodist Church of this city, by his kindness in rendering editorial assistanee during the recent bereavement in the editor's family. Brother Harper's eheerful willingness to help a brother in need is one of the bright spots in the editor's life.

PUT IT IN THE BUDGET.

We know of no better way of securing the circulation of the church organ than that of including its eost in the budget of the chureh and sending it to every home represented in the membership of the ehureh. This is the plan adopted by our church at Holly Springs, Miss., Rev. W. R. Lott, pastor, and 140 names have been sent the Advocate for its subscription files. This plan may not be practicable in some instanees, but it is in a great many, and we are convinced that the money so directed is a good investment. Try it!

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions reeently: Mrs. W. S. Calhoun, Kilbourne, La., 2; Rev. W. M. Young, Leland, Miss., 6; Rev. W. W. Mitchell, Cleveland, Miss., 8; Rev. D. P. Yeager, Matherville, Miss., 4; Rev. J. A. Hall, Tupelo, Miss., 2; Rev. J. B. Cain, Oak Ridge, Miss., 6; Rev. M. L. Ward, Walnut, Miss., 10; Rev. J. F. Waltman, Elizabeth, La., 11; Rev. T. H. Porter, Senatobia, Miss., 2; Rev. W. R. Liming, Sallis, Miss., 3; Rev. J. F. Owen, Amory, Miss., 10; Rev. J. M. Boykin, Boyce, La., 5; Rev. P. F. W. A. WILKINSON was born in Wilkinson County, Miss., March 30, 1844, and departed this life Oct. 27, 1921. He was married in 1873 to Miss Martha Ellen Danson. To this union there were three children. One died in infancy. The wife, one son and a daughter are left to mourn their loss; also many relatives and friends. In early life he united with the Methodist church and lived a consistent member. He loved his church and loved to read his church paper, which has been in his home for sixty years. He was for many years a Sunday school teacher and superintendent. In his declining years he was never known to murmur or complain, but bore his suffering with patience and Christian fortitude. He was loved by all who knew him, and his life was an inspiration to help others to a higher plane of living. He was happy when he could gather little children about him to tell them of God and heaven. So unselfish was his life that his thoughts, in his last hours, were to help his fellow-man. His constant prayer was to die at his post of duty, and there God found him, when He said, "Well done, good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." We miss him, but we grieve not as those who are without hope.

On December 21 there passed from earth to heaven the sainted spirit of Brother JAMES BEARD, a life-long and faithful member of the M. E. Church, South, at Lake Providence, La. Brother Beard was born in East Carroll Parish in the year 1843 and reared in the parish of his nativity. When but scarcely grown he enlisted in the Confederate Army and served through the whole four years of that desperate struggle. After the war, he returned to his native parish and later was happily married to Miss Mary C. Bass, of Lake Providence. To this union were born four sons and two daughters, all of whom grew to manhood and womanhood as sterling Christian characters, prominent in church life and service. One daughter, Mrs. Anna Belle Trieschman, a beautiful Christian young woman, went home to heaven nine years ago. His noble wife, a most estimable character and saintly Christian, was translated and crowned in 1916.

I was closely associated with Brother Beard and his good wife through a pastorate of four years at Lake Providence, and found in them sweet fellowship and encouragement, for they were true to the church and abounded in good works. Brother Beard was an outstanding personality in the town in which he lived, always contending for righteousness and civic progress and reform. I counted him among my most intimate and warmest friends. He has been called home: I shall meet him again some glad day. His body sleeps in Ruston by the side of his wife.

J. W. LEE.

Gently, tranquilly and peacefully as she had lived, the spirit of Mrs. MULLINAX fell in the last long sleep and was borne to the Home beyond the skies on Saturday morning, December 10, 1921, at 12 o'clock. She was struck with a light stroke of paralysis on the seventh day of July. Then she had another stroke four weeks before her death. The funeral was held at the home of her only child, Mrs. W. R. Williams, Saturday afternoon, at 3:30 o'clock, when appropriate services were conducted by Rev. R. I. Collins. I never knew a purer, sweeter, nobler, or more self-sacrificing Christian woman than Mrs. Mullinax. Her life on earth was a chapter of testimony for her Master, and when the angels of death came to call her from earth to the Paradise of God, she crowned that testimony with implicit and loyal submission to Him whom she so faithfully and patiently followed in life. It is sad indeed for us to be bereft of such a queenly Christian, but God our Father knows best. May the blessings of our divine Master be upon the bereaved daughter, and dear grandchildren, who mourn to-day for their sweet one who has gone home to her Savior. After awhile, crossing the river one by one, may there be a united family in Heaven.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas God called to his eternal rest JOHN L. DAVIS on December 30, 1921; and he was a faithful member of our church, therefore be it resolved

That in the death of this good man the Concord Sunday school has lost one of its most earnest workers.

That we tender to this heart-broken family our deepest sympathy, and pray God's blessings upon them.

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy spread upon the minutes of the Sunday school, and a copy be spent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

CUT COTTON COST BY MAKING FOOD.

"The cotton farmer got his 'bumps' again in 1921 between boll weevil, unfavorable seasons, food and grain buying on credit, combined with a price on cotton insufficient to 'pay him out.' Same old story, the same thing that has happened three or four times in the last dozen years," said H. G. Hastings, President of the Georgia Association, an organization for State-wide development.

"We might just as well face the fact that with the world-wide financial and political mix-up in Europe following the world war, there is no possible chance for using normal quantities of cotton at profitable prices to us if we continue to grow cotton on the high cost basis that we have been doing.

"Cotton is the one best money crop for the South, and probably always will be. The time of war prices is over and the problem from now on is to lower cost of production and at the same time afford the cotton grower a fair profit.

"Cost of making cotton is primarily the cost of food, grain and forage for the farmer, his family, his laborers or tenants, and his work stock. Cutting food, grain and forage costs by home production will reduce cotton costs from one-third to one-half.

"Plant for an abundance of food, grain and forage, thus cutting down store bills, and the lower prices for cotton will not hurt so much. We cannot, with European countries so thoroughly disorganized, reasonably expect high prices for cotton for several years, and we must make cotton at lower cost, or else quit cotton growing.

"Most of us cannot quit cotton, hence the absolute necessity of food, grain and forage planting in 1922—the making on home acres of every pound of food and grain needed to see us through.

"In this food production program, take the home vegetable garden seriously. Give the home garden a square deal, and it will surprise you in the amount of healthful food produced. It takes the least ground, can be planted the earliest, brings quick returns and if kept replanted and worked will stay by you all the season through."

FROM PLEASANT HILL CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: Just a few words for the Advocate relative to the Pleasant Hill charge, which compose the following: Pleasant Hill, Marthaville, Montrose, and Williams Chapel.

We have been very cordially received by the good people of Pleasant Hill and other points. The people have been thougtful and kind to us, all of which, of course, we appreciate very much. We find some very fine and loyal people here, people who know and love God. They seem to appreciate their personal obligation to the church, hence they are trying to live up to it. It is a great pleasure to work for and with people of unity of spirit.

I appreciate the financial system here at Pleasant Hill and Montrose for the support of the ministry, which is the monthly and the only really successful plan. Upon the whole, the outlook is encouraging for a good year in the interest of the kingdom of our Lord. We are determined to press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

Brethren, pray for us, that this may be a great year indeed, for the prosperity of Zion.

Yours in His service,

E. L. CARGILL.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

Nearly Time for the Annual Meeting.

December seemed full for the active members of the Missionary Society of North Mississippi Conference, because it meant so often the finishing up of the many things started during the year and often a chance at the parsonage, and the election of a new body of officers.

And now, as we look over and see the dawn of January, we feel it is surely the busiest month of the year. If you have not done so it is the president's place to see that every officer has sent to district secretary and Conference officers the reports that end the year, that of the fourth quarter. It is her place to arrange to install the new officers for 1922, oftimes making it the first meeting in January and inviting the minister and others to see the personnel of the church that is going to be the pastor's aid during the ensuing year. Then comes the raising of the pledges, which are to be added together and form a basis of the auxiliary's work during the year. At this last meeting the pledges are to be given to the treasurer, be brought forward with those of the January meeting and sent to the conference treasurer at the meetings all during the year to "take" other lines, please note. The average woman of today runs her home on a budget system and it should be easy for her to see that it is the only system the Council can use and know definitely what to expect.

Then comes the Annual Meeting. This year we meet in the beautiful city of Water Valley about the first of March. Date to be given out as soon as Mrs. Conner can arrange it with Council officers who expect to attend, and is convenient to the business auxiliary. Every auxiliary in this Conference is expected to have a representative there and her duties are too well known to be set here. Yet, I must remind you to send a woman who can bring you a message back. All this year I have carried with me the memory of a little lady at her first annual meeting, and she can tell you today the details of that meeting at Okolona. As a whole the delegates get what they go for, and it is to the credit of that body that so much is crowded into the few days and the delegates do not go home in such a whirl that they cannot give the details. MRS. C. A. NEAL.

Next month we expect to print the name of the auxiliary who has not sent in list of officers for 1922, but I hope there will not be one to print.

Notice, Auxiliary Superintendents of Supplies.

Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, our local base secretary, is now directing the Department of Supplies and is sending to each Conference society some connectional institution whose needs she wishes supplied by that Conference society.

To North Mississippi Conference Society the Wesley House at Biloxi and the Door of Hope at Macon, Ga. have been assigned.

Catarrh Means Impure Blood

It is a Constitutional Disease.

When it affects the nose and throat and becomes chronic it weakens the delicate lung tissues, deranges the digestive organs, and may lead to consumption. It impairs the taste, smell and hearing.

Take Hood's Sarsaparilla, which by purifying the blood removes the cause of the disease, so troublesome at this time of year, and gives permanent relief.

"I had catarrh of the head and stomach, and dreadful ringing noises in my ears. I decided to try Hood's Sarsaparilla; my health improved wonderfully, and I adopted Hood's Sarsaparilla as my family medicine." Mrs. M. Jenney Shaw, St. Johns, O.

What This Buffalo Physician Has Done For Humanity

The picture which appears here of Dr. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y., was taken in 1870. As a young man Dr. Pierce practised medicine in Pennsylvania and was known far and wide for his great success in alleviating disease. He early moved to Buffalo and put up in ready-to-use form, his Golden Medical Discovery, the well-known tonic for the blood. This strength-builder is made from a formula which Dr. Pierce found most effective in diseases of the blood. It contains no alcohol and is an extract of native roots with the ingredients plainly stated on the wrapper. Good red blood, vim, vigor and vitality are sure to follow if you take this Alterative Extract. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery clears away pimples and annoying eruptions and tends to keep the complexion fresh and clear. This Discovery corrects the disordered conditions in a sick stomach, aids digestion, acts as a tonic and purifies the blood. Write Dr. Pierce's Invalids Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., and receive confidential medical advice without charge. All druggists sell Discovery, tablets or liquid. Send 10c for trial pkg.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Last Sunday, the 8th, I was completely rained out. It is a disappointment to me, but then it doesn't happen often on this wise.

Wednesday night in spite of the cold and rain I had the pleasure of attending the Capitol Street prayer meeting. This was one of the best services I have been in in a long time. We had a real good time together—testimony meeting that went to the very heart of things.

Thursday night I attended the Galloway Memorial quarterly conference. This was a very fine quarterly conference. There was the air of hope and signs of activity. They have employed an assistant to the pastor and two young men to look after the Scout work of the church. Their Epworth League has taken on new life and the Sunday school is growing. Their Men's Bible Class, which has had no great activity for some time, seems to have been aroused and they are feeling that they will line up a large number of men.

Friday night was at Forest Hill with the stereopticon. A very few were out.

We are going to have a mighty fine faculty at the Standard Training School. Mr. French will give a course on the School. I wish every pastor in the Conference would try to get this course. It will mean much for you and your future work.

Dr. Bowen, of the Chair of Religious Education at Millsaps, will give a course on Pupil Study. This will mean much to teachers of whatever class or department you may be working in.

Other teachers will be announced from time to time. But you simply cannot afford to miss this opportunity of making your efficiency greater for reaching souls and bringing them to know God.

Our Conference is not measuring up to other Conferences in some respects. I wish ours was the leading Conference in every way. We are not the largest, we never will be perhaps, but we can do as thorough work and as good work, if our people will dedicate themselves to the cause. Let us prepare so that instead of the one talent we can have the ten or twenty or thirty to give back to our Lord.

Pray for the work and workers.

Help with the Conference Cradle Roll. Help with the Standard for Circuits. Have heard from one circuit only on this. Let us put the Mississippi Conference up close to the top and not at place 23. Pray for me.

Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It rarely takes more than one ounce to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

In this good year 1922 we want to help you organize more Bible classes, to the end that these classes may do more and better work in building up the Kingdom through the church.

We want to help you train your teachers and officers, that these workers may grow in grace and learn how to win and nurture the lives of our children and young people.

We want to help carry a blessing to the last child, to the last parent, to the most neglected individual in our Conference through the organized efforts of the Four-Times-a-Year Circuit Institutes.

We want all our schools to respond to the call of the Conference and give us the offering on the fifth Sunday in January to help pay the expense of making these desires a reality.

We are planning to hold a Conference Standard Training School at Grenada, June 1-7, and four District Standard Training Schools in such districts as will give the proper backing. We have secured a faculty for our Conference school that will command the attention of our most ambitious people. We will have strong faculties in all our district schools. We are projecting these large plans believing our people will give a full and hearty response. Through the Conference and district schools we hope to reach every charge in the Conference.

A meeting of the Sunday School Workers' Council was held at Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 5-11. This Council is composed of members of the General Office Staff, the Field Workers, the Elementary Workers, and the Board Chairmen. Rev. E. S. Lewis, Miss Lynda Ramey and R. H. B. Gladney attended these meetings and took part in the work of the Council. The Council affords an opportunity for correcting mistakes in our policies of giving religious education, an exchange of methods of work, plan our work to more fully meet the needs of the people, shape legislation, and enrich our lives with a rare fellowship. The Centenary Campaign and the Educational Movement of our church have attracted the attention and stirred the conscience of the church to help meet the needs of a distracted world. While these two movements have profoundly stirred the church, the Sunday school forces have quietly and resolutely gone forward with the gospel message, laying a foundation deep and broad in the hearts of the rising generation, with the hope of building Christian character that shall save our civilization.

"The race moves forward on the feet of little children."

"Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

"Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Upon the truth of these wise sayings we base our plea to the Sunday schools of the Conference to give us the offering on the fifth Sunday in January. The schools will not turn a deaf ear to this call. Some of the leaders may do so. I am ashamed that we have not asked for this offering before. We are more willing to give money to rescue a "fallen girl" than we are to give to save a girl from the horrible experience of sin and shame. It is good to throw out the "life line" to rescue the perishing; but it is infinitely better to build a wall so high and strong that the girl will not have to be rescued. Let us invest our prayers, our time, and our money where they shall count for most.

FROM LUMBERTON, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: Bear with a few words from me, as you never have many from me.

I was returned to Lumberton for the third year, which was greatly appreciated by me and family. From the acts and expressions of the people, we have been made to feel that they also were glad, and that they appreciate us.

The night after our return from Conference, the people, regardless of denomination, gathered into the parsonage and we had a good time, both socially and religiously, and by examining our dining-room we found that they had not come empty-handed. We found almost everything good, from a pound of money to 24-pound sack of flour. I tell you, Carley, we have been feeling good and faring sumptuously ever since.

Then, on Monday night the board of stewards met and organized and planned for the new year's work. We had a real religious meeting. My stewards' meeting was quite different from the one reported in this week's Advocate. My official board is composed of men of wisdom, who are not satisfied in just holding their own, but want to make progress, and do something for the glory of God. Instead of lowering the salary for the preacher, they unanimously voted a raise of $500, which is a $900 raise since I came here. The church here is advancing on all lines, as would be supposed when a preacher is backed by such an official board.

Our prayer meeting has averaged 45 the last quarter, and our Sunday school, under the efficient leadership of H. H. Hinton, continues to grow in interest and attendance. We had a very delightful and interesting Christmas service in the Sunday school, with a hundred and fifty-eight present. I don't know what our Sunday school would do if we had room, which we are very much in need of.

Our first quarterly conference was held on the 5th of January. Though a week day, it was well attended, and very encouraging under the leadership of our wide-awake presiding elder.

In short, we have the best town and best people in the Mississippi Conference—best in every respect mentioned by Brother Adams. If Wiley J. Ferguson did say he had the best, he doesn't know; I do—I have been here two years.

Come to see me some time, Carley, and I will honor you by letting you preach to them. They are used to a good looking preacher.

Fraternally, J. M. CORLEY.

FROM SILVER CREEK, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We are now in our new field of labor. Our reception was royal. Both Baptists and Methodists contributed substantial tokens of their appreciation of the pastor and family. There was in the shower flour, rice, coffee, sugar, meat, molasses, potatoes, sausage, canned fruits, etc., with some cash.

I am neither moping nor am I in mourning. God is with us.

We have married two couples. On Sunday evening, at the Methodist Church, Jan. 1, Mr. Dewey Weathersby, of New Hebron, Miss., was married to Miss Thelma Allen, of Silver Creek, Miss.; and on Monday evening, at the parsonage, Mr. Branton, of Columbia, Miss., was married to Miss Lena Langston. The youngsters went away rejoicing. Your brother,

P. H. HOWSE.

SUFFERING?

Most of the pain we suffer is unnecessary. Why continue to endure it—to sacrifice your youth, beauty, and enjoyment to it?

The combination of simple harmless medicines found in

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills

is especially effective in relieving pain without bad after-effects.

For more than thirty-five years sufferers from headache, neuralgia, backache, toothache, sciatica and pains from other causes have found relief by taking these pills. Why don't you try them?

ASTHMA CURED BY SIMPLE REMEDY

Famous Druggist Discovers Simple Remedy for Asthma and Makes Generous FREE TRIAL Offer to Readers.

Thirty years ago Mr. C. Leavengood, a widely known Kansas druggist, discovered a simple, easy to take prescription for Asthma— he gave it to people who had suffered for years and, to their amazement, they say they were easily cured—these people told their friends, and in this way thousands have found the sure way to cure Asthma. Mr. Leavengood feels so confident that his prescription will cure in all cases that he generously offers to send a big bottle on 10 days' Free Trial to any reader of this paper who will write for it. If it cures pay $1.25, otherwise you owe nothing. Send no money—just write to C. LEAVENGOOD, 1648 S. W. Blvd., Rosedale, Kansas, and the big bottle will be mailed immediately.—Adv.

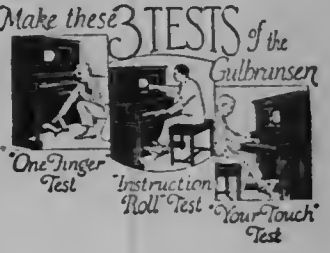
Go into your dealer's store. Play a Gulbransen. Make the three tests shown below. You'll realize the pleasure a Gulbransen will bring you and—further than that—you'll understand why the Gulbransen encourages the interest of children in good music, and music study.

Make these 3 TESTS of the Gulbransen



"Ten Minutes With the Gulbransen and I Was Enthusiastic"

"I thought—as many people do—that a player-piano was simply a mechanical instrument that ground out tunes—much as a machine turns out bolts!

"But after the salesman had me sit down and play the Gulbransen, I changed my idea. I found the Gulbransen a finished musical instrument—a tremendous advance over the player-pianos I had known in years past.

"I became enthusiastic. I wanted it for my home.

"Now that I have it I am more pleased than ever. Between business and social duties I never had much time for music. But in a few evenings Gulbransen Instruction Rolls taught me to play—well. In fact, better than my wife, who has taken lessons for years.

"I bring out every shade of expression I desire—I do everything the pianist of ability does—without the tedious finger work."

FROM LAFAYETTE, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: The year 1921 A. D., has closed. It was by far the happiest and most useful year of my life. As I take a retrospective look and recall the accomplisments of the year, I feel that God really helped me do the impossible. I had the best year of the five in my pastorate at Hammond. I preached every Sunday I was there to a practically full house at both services. During the long and hot summer we had last year, my congregations, instead of falling off, increased. Better still, I had conversions of adults at the regular services. In addition, I preached at three places about Hammond—Livingston, Ebenezer and Zenobia—and had conversions at all three places.

I assisted in 10 revivals. I believe we had a revival at every place, for people were converted, the saints were strengthened and many tithing covenants were entered into. Fully four hundred people promised to tithe in the meetings I held. I preached in the year about 260 times, and my health was never better than last year.

As I consider the results of the year's work, I feel that I have been a real Methodist.

I heard the gospel preached but a few times until I was grown. After I was twenty-one I went to confession to a Roman Catholic priest. About this time, I went one night to a little Methodist church and heard the real gospel preached, was religiously awakened, and called to preach, all at the one service. After that I tried to be a conscientious Roman Catholic, but I could not be. I went to confession and communion and to mass after mass, but I could get no more comfort and satisfaction out of the services and ministrations of the Romish church. The light had come and I never had peace in my heart until I consented to walk in it.

I was not born in a Methodist cradle, but I believe I am entitled to full adoption. Faithfully yours,

LEON I. McCAIN.

FROM TYLERTOWN, MISS.

My Dear Brother Carley: At the recent session of the Mississippi Conference held in Jackson, I, with several other preachers, agreed to secure as early as possible in the new year at least ten new subscribers for the New Orleans Christian Advocate. In compliance with that agreement I am sending you herewith a list of ten brand-new subscribers, together with check to cover same, and feel sure another list will go forward soon.

The people of Tylertown have given me a most cordial reception and the outlook for the new year is the brightest this pastor has ever experienced.

Our first quarterly conference is scheduled to be held to-morrow, January 11, and it is with a degree of special pleasure to me as I look forward to the official visit of our presiding elder, Brother Hicks Ellis, whom I count as my personal friend.

Wishing you and the Advocate family a happy and prosperous new year, and extending to you as the Editor of our Conference organ a special invitation to visit us here in Tylertown, where we will allow you the pleasure of preaching in one of the best equipped and most modern houses of worship in our Conference.

Yours truly,

F. B. ORMOND.

ERROR IN JOURNAL, ENTERPRISE CHARGE.

In the Journal of the 108th Session of the Mississippi Conference, the Enterprise charge appeared as having paid nothing on General Work; but W. D. Davis, Conference Treasurer, writes: "I beg to advise that my records show the sum of $120 credited on General Work from the Enterprise charge." Also Rev. Jno. D. Ellis, Statistical Secretary in charge of Table 3, writes: "Your report to the Annual Conference shows that Enterprise paid $120 for General Work, and was a model for neatness and exactitude. Who made the error I do not know, whether the printer in failing to follow copy, or myself in properly transcribing. If made by me, I'll take the blame; but in either event you are not to blame."

H. G. HAWKINS.

Newton, Miss., Jan. 9, 1922.

FROM LEAKESVILLE, MISS.

Dear Mr. Editor: We are here on the work, and, as the weather is inclined to be bad and we can not get out and do much running around, we are here burning wood. In as much as we were doing nothing much but burning wood in this bad weather, we secured the services of Dr. S. A. Steel, of Mansfield, La., to deliver a series of lectures. Everybody knows Dr. Steel, the lecturer and writer of the "Pelican Pines." We feel fortunate in securing a great man like this to come to Leakesville with those stirring lectures of his. He is to be with us, including Jan. 8 to 15.

There is one thing noticeable and very striking about the man of his age—he is young in his preaching, but he has no young or fogy ideas. He pushes the horizon back, and looks upon all goodness in the world as God's goodness, all truth as God's truth. He wants to reach his hand out and claim everything for God, and redeem everything that is God's that is being used in the other direction. He looks upon the church as being the biggest organization in the world that has the biggest mission in the world to fulfill. The church as he preaches it is unlimited in its usefulness.

As a young man, I am growing in vision and rich ideas under this series of lectures he is giving us. It is worth a year's schooling to me in a theological way.

Your brother,

S. W. JOHNSON.

WOMAN TOO WEAK TO WALK

Now Works Nine Hours a Day.—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Strength

Union Village, Vt.—"I was weak and nervous and all run-down. I could not walk across the floor without resting and I had been that way for weeks. I saw your advertisement in the paper and after taking one bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I felt the good it was doing me and I took seven more in all. Before I finished I was able to work nine hours a day in a steam laundry. I cannot say too much in favor of your medicine. I trust all sick and suffering women will take it. It has been two years since I took it and I am strong and well."—Mrs. L. A. GUIMANN, Union Village, Vermont.

This is only one of such letters we are continually publishing showing what Lydia E. Pinkham has done for women, and whether you work or not Mrs. Guimann's letter should interest you.

Many women get into a weak, nervous run down condition because of ailments they often have. Such women should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at the first sign of trouble. Good health is necessary and this splendid medicine will help you to keep it.

NEW ORLEANS

CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 69—No. 4. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South Whole No. 3442.

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, JANUARY 26, 1922. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE ADVOCATE IN 1922.

Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Louisiana and Mississippi who desire to keep in touch with the affairs of the church this year—a General Conference year—will see to it that their names are entered as subscribers to their official organ at once. The subscription price of the Advocate is two dollars a year, payable in advance. For this small amount of money a sixteen-page religious newspaper, devoted to the interests of orthodox Christianity, utterly loyal to the doctrines and polity of the church of which it is an official organ, filled with reading matter designed to interest, instruct, inspire and help every member of every family that takes it, can be kept coming into the home every week for fifty-two consecutive weeks. With the exception of the space necessarily devoted to advertising, this means that eight hundred and thirty-two pages of good reading matter may be had for a whole year at a cost of less than a nickel a week. Who can have the temerity to say that this is too much to pay for such a paper?

In Detail.

An analysis of the weekly contents of the paper will show that it is indispensable to every well-informed Methodist in the territory it serves—the Louisiana, the Mississippi, and the North Mississippi Conferences. For those who do not care for the editorial comments—written with an earnest desire to provoke good thoughts and good works—there are other departments of the paper that cannot fail to be helpful if carefully read. There are contributed articles from some of the best writers of our own and other Conferences; thought-provoking articles selected from a wide range of current religious literature; interesting reports from busy pastors of the work being carried on by them; news articles dealing with the great interests of the church—missions, education, evangelism, church extension, Sunday school, young people's and women's organizations, and other phases of our manifold activities; official announcements by presiding elders and other church authorities; a page especially devoted to the children, upon which appear frequently choice bits of clean humor; short poems, both original and selected, in which some of the great religious truths are beautifully and strikingly expressed; short sentences and paragraphs called "fillers," but selected because they contain thoughts worth passing on; obituaries—short tributes of affection to the sainted dead; personal and other notes which, to some extent at least, give an interesting glimpse of people and events of both local and church-wide importance. In short—as we said in the beginning—the Advocate is indispensable to every well-informed Methodist in this territory.

This Year Especially.

Our General Conference meets this year and it promises to be one of the most eventful in all our history. Some new bishops will be elected; much new legislation—some of it radical, much of it thoroughly constructive in character—will be proposed and discussed; the unification issue will be up for discussion and settlement; other questions in which every member of the church ought to feel a vital interest will be acted upon. If the editor himself is not able to attend the sessions of the Conference at Hot Springs, he will make arrangements to give weekly reports of the proceedings of that great body from competent sources. It seems to us that at least five thousand new names ought to be added to the list of our subscribers this year for the sake of General Conference news alone.

A Word To Our Pastors.

The Advocate is the friend and helper of the pastor, as it is the friend and helper of the people whom he serves. It relies, as it must, upon the pastors to put it in circulation among their people, and it recognizes them as its friends and helpers. To them we earnestly appeal for their best efforts in helping us put the Advocate into the hands of the people; of them we confidently expect the heartiest co-operation in our work; to them we extend sincere thanks for their interest hitherto manifested and for their pledges of co-operation this year. We have it in our heart to believe that this is going to be a good year, and so, with Tiny Tim, we say, "God bless us every one."

PAY THOSE PLEDGES.

A pledge to pay a specified amount to a good cause is only the formal expression of a good intention—that intention is not carried out until the pledge is redeemed. It is always to be taken for granted that such pledges are made in good faith and that in due time the amount promised will be forthcoming. Of course, in a few cases circumstances may arise which make impracticable the payment according to expectation, but in most cases the obligation voluntarily assumed is a binding one, and neglect or indifference concerning it is a mighty poor excuse for not meeting it fully and promptly. We cannot urge too earnestly the importance of paying our Centenary and Christian Education Movement pledges at this time. The payment of these pledges should not be merely a matter of convenience, but of conscience. The success of our missionary enterprises at home and abroad, and of our educational institutions is largely dependent upon securing these amounts and securing them as quickly as possible. If we would "clean up" these obligations as we go, the work of the church would be greatly strengthened and our own business affairs would, in all probability, be kept in better shape. Let us pay those pledges!

THE GOSPEL APPEAL.

The tabernacle in which Gipsy Smith is preaching in New Orleans will seat 5,200 people. It has been crowded at practically every service, and in several instances people have been turned away, unable even to get into the building. The meeting has already been in progress about two weeks, and the interest seems to be increasing all the while. What is the explanation of this remarkable manifestation of religious interest in "the city that care forget?" There are several answers to the question, as we see it. In the first place, the romantic history of the preacher—a converted Gipsy—has its appeal; secondly, the world-wide fame of the speaker commands respect; again, the very effective organization among the Protestant churches of the city that are supporting the meeting has to be taken into account. But the chief answer, we believe, is to be found in the fact that a transparently good man is preaching a simple gospel of salvation that is in accord with the teachings of the New Testament and that he knows, through personal experience, is able to save men and women from sin and death. Gipsy Smith is a great preacher of salvation through faith in Jesus Christ, and he makes no apology for the form or content of his message. He is not an orator in the popularly accepted meaning of that word—but he grips his hearers' attention from the beginning of the service, and he holds it to the end; and thousands of people, old and young, have made decisions to live the Christian life. It is the gospel appeal, persuasively and powerfully put, that wins the hearts of men and women the world over.

BEGIN THE DAY RIGHT.

We have no faith in the old saying that "a good beginning makes a bad ending," nor in the converse, that "a bad beginning makes a good ending." The way to end right is to begin right; and the way to begin the day is by establishing communion with God through reading His Word and through prayer. As a recent writer has said, "A little contact with Scripture at the beginning of the day is like the touch of fresh water upon the face. It clears our mental vision; it freshens our better instincts; it stimulates our spiritual pulse. Not seldom some verse will come home to our spirits with a new meaning and a new power, and will thus sing all day in the background of our thoughts like some strain from some lovely and remembered music." If we begin the day right ourselves, it is more than likely that we shall help somebody else to finish it right.

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

By Hon. C. L. Bates.

Eighth Paper.

I

The one hundred delegates who assembled in Louisville May 1, 1845, did not convene as a legislative body nor as a provisional body for some temporary purpose, but as a sovereign delegated Constitutional Convention, representing sixteen separate ecclesiastical sovereignties, with the full power to, and for the definite purpose of organizing them into a separate, distinct and independent ecclesiastical federation, and to make and promulgate for it a Constitution, and erect for it a government, and distribute and define the powers of the different branches of that government, create its executive officers and define their qualifications and duties and powers and the manner of their appointment, and to provide constitutional guaranties for the security of its preachers, officers, and private membership, and to make such other provisions as the Convention should under its instructions deem necessary; and the first of the series of Resolutions reported by the Committee on Organization—The Great Constitutive Act—adopted by the Convention with only three dissenting votes is as follows:

"Be it Resolved, by the delegates of the several Annual Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in the slave-holding States, in General Convention assembled, That it is right, expedient and necessary to erect the Annual Conferences, represented in this Convention, into a distinct ecclesiastical connection, separate from the jurisdiction of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, as at present constituted; and, accordingly, we, the Delegates of said Annual Conferences, acting under the Provisional Plan of Separation adopted by the General Conference of 1844, do solemnly declare the jurisdiction hitherto exercised over said Annual Conferences, by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, entirely dissolved; and that said Annual Conferences shall be, and they hereby are constituted, a separate ecclesiastical connection, under the Provisional Plan of Separation aforesaid, and based upon the Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church, comprehending the doctrines, and entire moral, ecclesiastical, and economical rules and regulations of said Discipline, except only in so far as verbal alterations may be necessary to a distinct organization, and to be known by the style and title of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South."

Upon analysis it is seen that this resolution contains the following elements, briefly stated:

(1) The body declares itself to be not a mass convention, but a Delegated Convention, representing sixteen Annual Conferences, severally; (2) it was right, expedient and necessary to erect the Annual Conferences there represented into a distinct ecclesiastical connection, separate from the jurisdiction of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church; (3) the Resolution contained a formal, final, absolute Declaration of the Ecclesiastical Independence of the sixteen Annual Conferences represented in the Convention; (4) said Annual Conferences were by the Resolution constituted a separate ecclesiastical connection; (5) this separate ecclesiastical connection was "based upon the Discipline," mutatis mutandis, of the Methodist Episcopal Church; (6) "the doctrines, and entire moral, ecclesiastical, and economical rules and regulations of said Discipline" were adopted, except necessary "verbal alterations;" and (7) the name—the old name with the word "South" added.

II

By subsequent resolutions it was directed that specified parts of the Book of Discipline be so altered and amended as to read that the General Conference shall meet on May 1, 1864, at Petersburg, Virginia, and thencefoward in the month of April or May, once in four years, in such place and on such day as shall be fixed by the preceding General Conference; and that each Annual Conference shall be entitled to one delegate for every fourteen members; and "that a committee of three be appointed, whose duty it shall be to prepare and present to the General Conference of 1846 a revised copy of the present Discipline, with such changes as are necessary to conform it to the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South."

III

A majority of the Annual Conferences had specifically instructed their delegates to oppose any material alterations in the Book of Discipline, the resolution of the Alabama Conference being as follows:

"That this Conference is decided in its attachment to Methodism as it exists in the Book of Discipline, and hopes that the Louisville Convention will not make the slightest alteration, except so far as may be absolutely necessary for the formation of a separate jurisdiction."

And it appears from the proceedings of the Conferences that this sentiment was universal throughout Southern Methodism; and, indeed, the gravamen of the complaint against the General Conference of 1844 was that it had flagrantly violated the Constitution and laws of the church as set forth in the Book of Discipline.

In the report of the Committee on Organization, it is declared:

"To the Discipline the South has always been loyal. By it she has abided in every trial. Jealously has she cherished and guarded that 'form of sound words'—the faith, the ritual, and the government of the church. It was Southern defense against Northern invasion of the Discipline which brought on the present struggle; and upon the Discipline, the whole Discipline, the South proposes to organize * * * a separate connection of the Methodist Episcopal Church."

IV.

The Committee of the Convention appointed to revise the Book of Discipline performed its work, and reported to the General Conference of 1846, "a revised copy," which was in that year published as "The Doctrines and Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," the introductory address being signed by Joshua Soule, James O. Andrew, William Capers and Robert Paine, all of them active participants in the proceedings of the Louisville Convention

V.

The "Separate Ecclesiastical Connection" was, by the Resolution, "based upon the Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church, comprehending the doctrines, and entire moral, ecclesiastical, and economical rules and regulations of said Discipline."

It will be noted that the Resolution stresses four great points in the contents of the Discipline which are adopted by the Convention as the base, bottom, and fundamental principles of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, namely:

1. The Doctrines of said Discipline.
2. The Entire Moral Rules and Regulations of said Discipline.
3. The Entire Ecclesiastical Rules and Regulations of said Discipline.
4. The Entire Economical Rules and Regulations of said Discipline.

As was expressed in the body of the Report of the Committee upon Organization, it was upon "the faith, the ritual, and the government of the church"—"upon the Discipline, the whole Discipline," the Southern Church was organized, and upon which it was based.

These four great elements of the Discipline, as promulgated in 1846, by authority of the convention in connection with the constitutional documents heretofore enumerated in these papers, constitute the Constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, except in so far as it has been by Constitutional methods amended, since its promulgation in 1846, by the authority of the Convention.

VI.

What is meant by "the doctrines * * * of said Discipline," as used in the Resolution of the Convention? It is respectfully submitted that the phrase embraces (1) the articles of religion; (2) the whole ritual contained in the Discipline, "for ritual is doctrine," and the report declared that the purpose was to build on "the faith, the ritual, and the government of the church;" and (3) the doctrines of Methodism as then defined in the doctrinal standards of the Methodist Episcopal Church. No. V of the Articles of Religion then, as now, declared the list of canonical books of both the Old and New Testaments, and they became a part of the Constitution of the church.

The "Entire moral * * * rules and regulations" would, it seems, embrace (1) the General Rules, and (2) any moral or disciplinary requirement binding on the private members of the church or its officers and preachers; and they likewise became a part of the fundamental law.

VII.

What is meant by the "Entire * * * Ecclesiastical * * * rules and regulations," as used in the Resolution of the Convention? Evidently that is something entirely different from "doctrine" and "moral" rules.

Ecclesiastical rules and regulations are, and must be, the rules, regulations and laws which pertain to the church as an organized body, and its organization and government; and in the Resolution of the Convention it embraces the whole scheme of the creation, organization, existence, operation and government of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as adopted from the Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church of 1840, and set forth in its own Discipline of 1846.

The entire body of ecclesiastical rules, regulations and laws in anywise pertaining to the Ecclesiastical Organization, its officers, preachers, members, operation and government, were fixed and embodied in the Constitution. And the same is true of the "economical rules and regulations of said Discipline," which are set forth in the Discipline of 1846 in "Part Second," under the head of "The Temporal Economy of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," and which were taken bodily from the Discipline of 1840 of the Methodist Episcopal Church, under the very same head.

VIII.

The Convention made no distinction in point of legal dignity, importance, superiority, binding force, and permanence, between ecclesiastical rules and doctrine, or economical rules and moral rules, nor between any of the four great points or elements upon which the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was based; but the whole body of doctrines and rules was treated as one coherent, harmonious, indivisible whole, forming one unified foundation for the church. There is nothing in the Resolution of the Convention, nor in any of its proceedings, which indicates any purpose to divide the foundation into constitutional and statutory provisions, nor to make one element inferior to another; but, on the contrary, the intent is clear to bind all the elements into one concrete whole.

When the proceedings of the Convention are considered in the light of contemporaneous history, it is not surprising that it should have made the ecclesiastical rules and regulations a part of the fundamental law of the church; it was a violation of those rules and regulations by the General Conference of 1844 which caused the Separation, and to prevent a repetition of that trouble by a Southern General Conference, when one should be created, the Southern and Southwestern Annual Conferences determined to make the whole of the Ecclesiastical Rules a part of their fundamental law, and invest them with the character and qualities of constitutional guaranties, and the church is now passing through a crisis which demonstrates the wisdom of the Convention.

A JOURNEY TO THE ORIENT—SHANGHAI TO PEKING.

By Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker.

VIII.

After the meetings of the Annual Conference and the China Mission at Soochow I returned to Shanghai in order to gain a somewhat more complete knowledge of our work there than had been possible during my former very short stay. Returning to the hospitable home of Dr. A. P. Parker on the Qunisan Road compound was like a sure enough home-coming; so soon do these excellent people banish the sojourner's feelings of strangeness. Several important matters that I was to attend to according to a memorandum dictated by Bishop Lambuth from his death bed, I tried conscientiously to adjust. A call upon Dr. J. B. Fearn, formerly of our Mission, now superintendent of the Municipal Hospital, a dining given by his talented wife, Dr. Annie W. Fearn, at her sanitarium home, visits to the shops under the direction of Mrs. Parker, the enjoyment of the hospitality of our missionaries and much converse with Dr. Shipley, who is happy in the gift of restored health by which he has been enabled to resume his loved employ—these and other enjoyments varied the program of duties and made my second departure from Shanghai more difficult than the former. I was sorry to have to leave Sung Klang unvisited thus missing the Girls' Bible School and the other important works there, beside something of the fellowship of Messrs. Bowen and Bussbey; but I was feeling the call of the North. A day spent at Wu Sih with the Rev. John C. Hawk in surveying the fifteen acres that have been purchased as a site for an Industrial school that is to be built with Centenary money, and the social center, to which Miss Anderson gives all the time she can spare from her school duties, means for which have been provided by a wealthy Chinese manufacturer, who is sincerely desirous of advancing the welfare of his operatives and finds no way of doing so equal to that through the church; a visit to the church and tea in the pleasant parsonage with our Chinese pastor; and then on to Chang Chow, where we have an excellent church, Miss Leverett's famous school, a boy's school, a girls' school, a hospital and one of the most beautiful churches in our territory, and to the enjoyment of the delightful hospitality of Brother Hawk's home. Adjoining the church and opening into it is one of the best kindergartens I have seen. It is a memorial to a little girl who was taken from Mr. and Mrs. Hawk. They had saved against the expense of her education the additional allowance made by the Board of Missions, and after her death added something to these sacred savings and with the resulting fund built this beautiful memorial for the Chinese children.

The Chang Chow hospital under the care of Dr. Russell shows the same thorough scientific arrangement and operation that I have found elsewhere in our missions, this time also as in Huchow, despite the fact that a Chinese house, ill adapted to the work, has had to be forced into service. However it will not be long before a new Centenary plant will rise upon the finely located site that has been purchased for the housing of the hospital. At present Dr. Russell has only Chinese assistants. There is immediate and pressing need for an American nurse. It would be one of the most serviceful things that a graduated Christian nurse could do to come to the aid of Dr. Russell. There is a class of Chinese nurses now almost ready for graduation, that Dr. Russell feels that he cannot graduate until they have had service under an American nurse.

My next northward point was Nanking, a city on the south bank of the Yangtsze River one hundred and ninety-three miles from Shanghai. At one time it was the capital of the empire and was abandoned for the present northern capital by later emperors of the Ming dynasty. The walls are among the finest productions of the Chinese, those past-masters in the art of wall building; they are twenty-two miles in length and forty feet in thickness at the base and in some parts attain a height of sixty feet. It is said that the population within the walls once numbered a million, but it has now shrunken to four hundred thousand, leaving only massive camel-back bridges that cross the streams and canals within the walls to indicate where once the thronged streets of the city lay. Like Chanchow it was once taken and partly destroyed by the Tai Pings. The ruins of one of China's finest porcelain pagodas bears evidence to the vandalism of these rebels; and the soil when turned by spade or plek also bears witness by the large quantity of broken brick and tile that is mixed with it. On fine macadam roads, past bamboo thickets and groves and fields, one drives through the great area within the walls. Public buildings, schools and hospitals are finely housed. The Methodist Episcopal Church has extensive mission property here and a large missionary force. The Annual Conference for this part of China was in session and I looked in on Sunday morning where Bishop Birney was ordaining elders in the presence of a congregation of about a thousand, which comfortably filled the great church building, which is equipped with all the paraphernalia for institutional church work and has an ample staff of workers. I was interested chiefly in the Nanking University, which is carried on by a union of several Christian denominations. The buildings are in excellent Chinese architecture and would do credit to an institution of learning anywhere. I am not certain that it is wise thus to adapt the Chinese architectural types to Western uses. The cost is much greater and the absence of the minute and elaborate embellishments that the Chinese use deprives them of the softness and completeness that constitute one of the charms of the consistent Chinese types. In the case of the chapel, the ambitious attempt has been made to employ the architecture of the Buddhist temple, and the lofty red lacquered pillars and the delicate red and blue and gold tracery of the interior adornment of those splendid structures have been imitated. In this case the result seems to me to be excellent; an almost perfect auditorium capable of seating a thousand has been achieved. In it I had the privilege of preaching to the English-speaking congregation in the afternoon. In the morning of the same day I attended service, which is usually in Chinese, and heard a well prepared sermon on the Divinity of Christ read with fine effect in English. I should have judged several of its propositions to be, at best, inadequate; its statement of the divinity of our Lord was positive, but limited. After the service I said to the preacher, "I was interested in your discourse." He did not reply directly, but said that he had been suddenly called upon and fortunately happened to have with him a volume of sermons by Prof. Ames, of Chicago, one of which he had read.

In China we have no denominational theological seminary, but unite with the Methodist Episcopal, the Presbyterian and the Christian churches in the maintenance of the Union Theological Seminary. On the faculty we are represented by Prof. Ritter, a South Carolinian, who came out five years ago and has mastered the Mandarin dialect, which is used in this part of China and by seventy per cent of the entire population of the Republic. He is making good as a teacher. I addressed the theological students in the evening on the Life of Bishop Lambuth, availing myself of the service of an interpreter, as these young men are not up to the standard of the girls of McTyeire in English. There is a magnificent building filling one side of the seminary quadrangle known as Centenary Hall, one of our contributions to the Seminary plant. The inscription on the corner-stone is in Chinese and English. The English is as follows:

CENTENARY HALL.
The Gift of Trinity Church,
Sumter, S. C., U. S. A.
To Commemorate a Century of Foreign Missionary Activity in The Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

In Nanking is located also Ginling College for girls, another of the several union enterprises in which we join the Methodist Episcopal Church. Miss Watkins and Miss Hanowalt of our church are on the faculty, which consists of fifteen professors. The college is at present fairly well housed in a building that was once a palatial residence and preserves all the beauty and inconvenience of this type of architecture with its successive courts and gridiron arrangement of houses. The ladies have done well in the way of adapting this erstwhile palace of a nephew of the great Li Hung Chang to the purposes of a woman's college; but they are doing better: on a large piece of open land they are building permanently and adequately for a college in which Western ideals of education can be inculcated and realized.

There is a well marked tendency among missionary administrators to unite forces of the several denominations for the purpose of carrying on medical and higher educational work. The difficulties that we meet with in America are not encountered in foreign fields. If the decision of the question of Methodist union could have been decided on the mission fields, instead of in agreement with the distinguished Committee of One Hundred that reported adversely to the Des Moines General Conference, there can be no doubt that Methodist Union would now be fairly under way to becoming an accomplished fact. I have not become fully convinced that the union missionary enterprise in all cases affords as good results as the division of territory and concentration within a more limited area. In the case of the theological seminaries both in Seoul and Nanking there is less cordiality on the part of the native preachers and even some of the missionaries than is requisite if we are to reap the full benefits of these excellent means of training our ministers. At the China Conference there was clear evidence of a tendency among the older Chinese brethren to disparage men coming from the seminary; but I have seen the same thing in some conferences in America. We have a few students at Nanking, more at Seoul, meanwhile we are seriously suffering for lack of a trained ministry and shall never be able to do our full duty as a church in the foreign field until we insist upon the thorough training of our ministry; nor, for that matter, at home. It is a fact both at home and abroad, that many of our ministers who have not themselves enjoyed the advantages of training in theological seminaries manifest a prejudice against these institutions and those who graduate from them. In the China Conference a young man, well educated and a graduate of the seminary, was turned down on examination, it is said, for the real reason that the older men are distrustful of modern education. Such an attitude is suicidal. I speak the more freely, for I myself am not a seminary graduate. That I am not is a source of permanent regret and is due to the advice and influence of older men whom I unwisely heeded when I had made all arrangements to attend Vanderbilt University Theological Department. My life has been a long struggle to compensate for inadequate preparation at the beginning.

The Yangtsze Kiang is a mighty river. It appears to be about two miles wide at Nanking, two hundred miles from its mouth, and great ocean-going steamships I saw steaming its muddy current bound for ports much farther west. One crosses on a steam launch to take the Pukow Tiensin Railway for Peking. The run is from half-past four in the afternoon to ten thirty the following night. The compartment sleepers are comfortable, but the compartment plan is not as good as the Pullman. It is far pleasanter and safer to be in an open car than to be shut up in a compartment with one disagreeable; cigarette-smoking individual. However, in this case I had good luck; my companion was a Chinese gentleman whose courtesy and considerateness were typical of a race that can give the French points in their own art of pleasing and whose fidelity to a friendship is stronger than the alleged devotion of an American Indian.

On the train I had the pleasure of meeting the Rev. Dr. S. Lavington Hart, Director of the Distribution Committee of the China Relief Fund We were passing through the broad wheat lands of northern China and looking over plains of loess, the fertility of which centuries of cultivation have not impaired and it seemed as if we were in Manitoba or North Dakota on a Northern Pacific instead of a Pukow-Tiensin train. Dreadful had been the ravages of famine, however, and but for the timely work of the China Relief Committee millions of persons would have perished. In this connection we must recall Bishop Lambuth's raising by personal appeal of one million dollars for this fund. He was always the first to perceive a need and the promptest to arouse the church to a response. Because he was utterly unselfish his mind and heart were delicately sensitive to the needs of others. I have known no other life that so closely resembled the Master's. He was a St. Francis without fanaticism or eccentricity, a Xavier without bigotry and a Luther without coarseness or violence.

On account of drought the broad plains of Northern China failed to bring forth their harvest and the intervention of foreigners for relief arose out of the incapacity of the Chinese themselves to sink their selfish concerns in a great rescue movement. The Distribution Committee proceeded most sanely by making accurate lists of persons in actual need. In this they were ably assisted by the local magistrates. The grain was bought in Manchuria and shipped over the Peking-Mouxdew and the South Manchuria Railways, sometimes despite great difficulties interposed by official meddlesomeness or incapacity. No money under any circumstances was given; thus not only did the relief go to the root of the need, but profiteering on the part of local merchants and speculators was forestalled. One beautiful measure was the conducting of relief schools in which girls about to be sold into slavery or prostitution were fed, cared for, taught to read by the phonetic alphabet, and to sing, and were given a joyous experience despite the ravages of famine. Thus does the touch of the Christian hand, like the Providence of God, give "beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning and the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness." The Relief Committee have been perpetuated in a permanent Famine Prevention organization and have already distributed six hundred tons of seed to destitute farmers for whom otherwise the former and the latter rains would fall in vain upon the gerrnless earth.

I resisted Dr. Hart's cordial invitation to get off at Tientsin, much as I wished to see the place where the allied expeditionary force landed in 1900 for the relief of the foreign settlements which were besieged by the Boxers in Peking. The great walls that had surrounded the city for centuries were leveled with the earth in order that a permanent lesson of the sin and futility of perfidious dealing might be impressed upon the present and the future generations. Alone in Peking at 11 p.m., surrounded by coolies who seemed ready to tear each other in pieces for the possession of the American and his bags, I found my way by ricksha to a hotel of which I knew, operated by Chinese, where I found lodgment and rest after my long journeying.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

This is the year for the assembling of the General Conference and our church papers are crowded with suggestions for changes in our polity. Episcopal Methodism, North and South, has been moving onward for these years, and its growth in numbers, wealth and influence at home and abroad is second to none of the great Protestant churches. Crass interference with a system of government so long tried and well proven is hazardous, if not foolish. From close observation and experience, I have marked the results of some changes made by the last two General Conferences and consider them detrimental to the progress of our church.

Among these changes, the unusual power given to our General Boards, I consider an infringement on the executive rights of the episcopacy. This assumption or grant of power has been the cause of doubt and an insecure feeling on my part, and also of other men. And some are asking the question of the Western Senator, "Where are we at?"

Again I think, and many agree with me, that taking from the quarterly conference the right of licensing preachers is the direct and leading cause of the paucity of ministers in the church to-day. Our preachers come from the people, are sent to the people, preach to the people; and the people hear them, support them, and know vastly more about them than all the district conferences ever held. The quarterly conference is the one body in which the officials of the church have freedom of speech unrestrained by the presence of a majority of preachers before whom they feel a natural modesty in expression.

Now I do not believe that our bishops are infallible. I have known some of them to do unwise things and to use the authority placed in their hands in a way that caused worthy men to wonder and suffer. But may the good Lord deliver us from the modern Nadabs and Abihus who seemingly want to ordain a man to a sacred office for four years.

No sir! Give me a bishop that is a bishop—none of your four-yearlings. It was not done in the early church nor in any other church that amounted to much in the Kingdom of Christ. Your quadrennial episcopus would make more breaks in his limited term than some of the upper-state men do in the pronounciation of Louisiana bayous and parishes.

No, your changes may sound well, and make fine subjects for writing and discussion, but you will get more sand than gold in the panning if you induce the men entrusted with legislation for the church to do away with the rights of our episcopacy. And I for one consider this four-year term proposal an entering wedge to destroy the best system of church government ever devised by man and blessed of God.

IF JESUS SHOULD COME TO HOT SPRINGS?

By Dr. O. E. Goddard.

All Southern Methodists' eyes are turning toward Hot Springs, Arkansas. All lovers of our Lord are solicitous as to what will be the outcome of that Conference. May we not assume that Jesus Christ is looking in the same direction with more solicitude than any human being? May we not assert that He is more intensely concerned about what shall happen there than any other person in the universe? Blunders, if blunders are made, will grieve Him more than they will any one else. His honor and His reputation are at stake more than the honor and reputation of all human beings and all institutions. His pleasure, displeasure, honor and dishonor will be the deepest, the greatest and the most abiding.

If on the morning of May 3, 1922, when our chief pastors shall call the General Conference to order, there should appear on the platform Jesus Christ, what effect would His presence have upon the Conference? Of course, the bishops would be deferential and reverential toward Him, desiring that He should have His way in all deliberations of the body. In every matter to be considered, the first question with the bishops and with all the Conference would be, "What is the will of Jesus on this question?" If bishops had different views among themselves concerning the policy of the church and other matters, there would not be the least danger of these differences in opinion descending into personal differences. Personal differences could not exist in the presence of Him who commanded us to love one another. If men came with grievances to be palliated by legislation, if members had planned to carry measures in a divine institution by carnal methods, if men came with unholy ambitions, how would all this look in the presence of Him who taught and illustrated self-abnegation and self-immolation? In the presence of Him whose we are, on whom we are dependent for power, who is the source of all power in this Methodist program, where would we likely put the emphasis? In the clear light of His immaculate countenance, would not the distinction between essentials and non-essentials be more distict? Would not things primary and things secondary be more easily classified in His presence? If He should visit the committees in the afternoon work, what effect would his Presence have upon the work of the committees? If He should appear at every private conference, would His presence be embarrassing in the caucus? Would His presence in the lobby of the Eastman suppress anything that would otherwise go on in story, anecdote and self-indulgence? Suppose He should sometimes walk in the galleries and overhear what was being said and done among the visitors? Would He be pleased or displeased? Would Methodism, as seen in delegates and visitors, be such a Methodism as would delight Him, whose we are?

Of course He would be invited to address the Conference. He who organized the church and fixed the church would be heard before any one else should offer any suggestions as to policy. To adopt any policy before hearing Him would be presumptuous, indeed, unpardonable. A special order to hear Jesus would be made. Every delegate and visitor would be in his or her seat. The tension would be unprecedented. Never was there such intense concern in the mind of the Conference. What will Jesus say? Where will He put the emphasis? What lies nearest His heart? What does He expect of the Southern Methodist Church? Many members would expect Him to put emphasis on their hobby. Men and women with hobbies will be there. Those who want to curtail the power of the bishops would expect Him to begin there. Would He? Those whose hobby is limiting the power of the boards would expect Him to champion their cause. Would He? Those who are determined that presiding elders shall not be perpetuated in office indefinitely would confidently expect His support in their measure. Would they get it? Those who want a change in the present hybrid law about the time limit on pastors would expect Him to be their ally. Would He be? Would any of these secondary, temporary, ephemeral matters make a strong appeal to Him? Why should they? But what would Jesus say in his address to the General Conference? Would it be lengthy or brief? Would he commend or condemn us? What a tense moment with the whole Conference waiting in breathless suspense to hear what Jesus would say! (Now the writer is aware that any propagandist could here put into the mouth of Jesus anything he might desire to advocate. In so doing he might do a very irreverent and impudent thing. See if this writer does that.)

What would Jesus say? What did He say on another momentous occasion? It was brief, pertinent, pointed and complete. He laid bare His heart's deepest desires, and outlined the policy of his church: "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, teach all nations, baptising them in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." This one task which He committed to His church on the eve of His ascension is the one unfinished task of the church to-day. Southern Methodism has its share in this unfinished program. All measures that relate themselves to this one grand objective of the church would, of course, appeal to the Son of God. Matters irrelevant to this would not likely be of much concern to Him. Will this world vision, the compelling appeal of a world, sad, sin-cursed and ruined, so move the General Conference that it will be so absorbed in these great enterprises that it shall have time to waste on trivial matters? Would not the atmosphere that Jesus would infuse into that Conference so stir it that it would feel impelled, propelled and compelled to devote all its powers to carry out the will of our Lord? Would His Holy passion for world-conquest not become contagious? How much time would a body thus stirred waste on "points of order," parliamentary manipulation, and other time-killing unessentials? Would it not be so absorbed in worth-while matters that it would be intolerant toward these trivial matters?

Jesus will be in Hot Springs. His presence is guaranteed to His church so long as it is engaged in this one objective. He will be on the platform with the bishops as well as with them in their private conferences; will be an interested auditor in all the public sessions of the Conference; will sit with the committees; will be cognizant of all private conferences and will overhear the lobby talk. The pity is that our moral sense is so obtuse that we do not vividly realize His presence. We have such gross, materialistic conceptions of His coming, such exaggerated notions of his spiritual presence, that it would require His bodily presence to restrain some from doing unseemly things. If our spiritual perceptions can be made adequately acute, if our souls can be made conscious of His presence, if we deliberate actually in His presence, with our souls responsive to His will and sensitive to His pleasure, what a glorious General Conference that will be! Why not? The great unfinished work of the Centenary, the completion of which is so essential to the carrying out of the Great Commission, the superb work of Christian Education Movement so auspiciously begun, and so necessary in this world program, and the great revival just in its inception, which ought to assume vast proportions, the Christianizing of America that America may do her part of Christianizing the world, the making of Southern Methodism the mightiest factor that God and man can make it, surely these matters of such supreme moment offer such powerful incentives for self-denying devotion, present such a challenge to all that is good or heroic in us, that we shall not fritter away our time on trivial matters. May Jesus be present in the consciousness of every delegate in Hot Springs and may He have His way!

EDUCATIONAL NOTES, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The returns are steadily coming in from Pay-Up Week. Let every collector make a full report to date. Then let us know if we can be of assistance to you in the personal approach.

Bishop W. F. McMurry wrote to every preacher as follows: "It is important that we make a good beginning in the matter of collections during this week. The schools are in need of money. Prompt payment of the first installment due on a subscription is almost a guarantee of the payment of subsequent installments. 'Of course, you will give this matter the attention to which it is entitled."

When the pastor enthusiastically and wisely plans to put over a campaign, success usually crowns his effort.

If any one has been overlooked during our Pay-Up Week, and they do not know who their local collector may be, let them send direct to me at Shreveport, La. ALBERT S. LUTZ.

A WORTH-WHILE SUGGESTION.

Dear Brother Carley: After having attended a number of the Gipsy Smith meetings, and having observed the results of them, I am of the mind that they are the clear prophecy of a better day for New Orleans, the answer to the prayers of many, many, who are gone to glory, and of the many who labor for the salvation of the lost of that great city to-day.

However, there is an indirect result of these meetings that I have had some opportunity of observing, and of which I want to speak. All over the State, and I am told also over the State of Mississippi, people are being blessed by the meetings held there in New Orleans. The press of the city makes this possible. Let's thank them. Let's vote by congregations, and send the great dailies of New Orleans the appreciation of the Protestants of these two States, especially the thanks of the people called Methodists. These papers have done a great work for our Lord in giving so much space to the Gipsy Smith meetings. They should be told about it and thanked for it. Brethren, let's do it.

Fraternally yours,

QUARTERLY CONFERENCE ATTENDED BY 125.

The first quarterly conference for First Church, Columbus, Miss., was a great occasion. The pastor, T. H. Lipscomb, invited all the church officials, including Sunday school teachers, officers of W. M. S., and Epworth League, and their wives and husbands, with the above results. Despite the fact that it was pouring down rain, they came in large numbers. The reports from all the various activities of the church were very gratifying indeed.

One encouraging feature of the new year's work is to see the increased interest in the quarterly conferences. At the first conference for West Point Station, out of a board of twenty-one all but one were present. In addition to this unusual attendance on the part of the stewards, every person present for the prayer meeting, between 60 and 80, remained for the business session. On many of the circuits we are having 100 per cent attendance from many of the churches. This, of course, is very encouraging to both pastor and presiding elder. We have heard it suggested that our people are losing interest in the quarterly conference, but our experience convinces us that this is not the case. We have held ten conferences so far this year and we have found the interest keen and attendance good at practically every conference.

We have never seen a finer spirit of loyalty and co-operation among both preachers and laymen than is manifest throughout the Columbus District. A. T. McILWAIN.

A WORD OF APPRECIATION.

Through the Advocate I wish to express my deep appreciation to friends all over the State for their loving words of sympathy and comfort, and for the many acts of kindness extended to us in our great and crushing sorrow. Only God can know how these tender expressions of love warmed and cheered our hearts. They will never be forgotten. The wonderful people of Ruston are enshrined in our hearts. Their kindness is unending, and the beautiful little home they have given, which will soon be completed, will always be a monument to the generous, loving Methodists of this splendid little town. We wish all our friends could see it.

We can only pray God's richest blessing upon all who sought to lighten our burden in any way, whatever. God has held our weak hands in His, and is leading us in this sad Valley of Sorrow.

HOW TO HELP THE MISSISSIPPI METHODIST ORPHANAGE.

Dear Brother Carley: The following is a copy of a letter from the Superintendent of the Mississippi Orphans' Home to the Superintendent of our Sunday school, which I hope you will see fit to publish, as it may inspire others to try to help the orphans. T. J. O'NEIL.

Rolling Fork, Miss.

"Dear Brother Parham: In looking over our record books, we note that your Sunday school made a contribution to the support of this Home each month during 1921. It is possible for only those in this office to appreciate what this means to us. For these regular contributions, we most sincerely thank you. May we ask a continuance of this interest?

"With wishes for a successful year, I am

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION ORGANIZED.

On Thursday, January 19, all the Methodist pastors of the city of Jackson, Miss., together with all residential members of the Mississippi Conference, met at the residence of the presiding elder, Rev. M. L. Burton, for the purpose of organizing a Methodist Ministerial Association. There were fifteen ministers present, all members of the Mississippi Conference.

The purposes of this meeting were two-fold—mutual helpfulness and Methodist aggression. Meetings will be held once a month, and by this united effort we are expecting the best year in the history of Jackson Methodism. REPORTER.

THE BETTER THING.

It is better to lose with a conscience clean
Than win by a trick unfair;
It is better to fail and to know you've been,
Whatever the prize was, square,
Than to claim the joy of a far-off goal
And the cheers of the standers-by
And to know down deep in your inmost soul
A cheat you must live and die.

And who wins by trick may take the prize,
And at first he may think it sweet,
But many a day in the future lies
When he'll wish he had met defeat,
For the man who lost shall be glad at heart
And walk with his head up high,
While his conqueror knows he must play the part
Of a cheat and a living lie.

The prize seems fair when the fight is on,
But save it is truly won,
You will hate the thing when the crowds are gone,
For it stands for a false deed done,
And it's better you never should reach your goal,
Than ever success to buy
At the price of knowing down in your soul
That your glory is all a lie.

HAVING AND GETTING.

The most obvious lesson in Christ's teaching is that there is no happiness in having and getting anything, but only in giving. I repeat, there is no happiness in having or in getting, but only in giving. And half the world is on the wrong scent in the pursuit of happiness. They think it consists in having and getting, and in being served by others. It consists in giving, and in serving others. He that would be great among you, said Christ, let him serve. He that would be happy, let him remember that there is but one way; it is more blessed, it is more happy, to give than to receive.—Professor Drummond.

It is said of Solomon's temple that it was built without the sound of hammer. The soul is a temple, and God is silently building it by night and by day. Precious thoughts are building it. Disinterested love is building it. All penetrating faith is building it. All virtue and all goodness are workmen upon that invisible temple which every man is.... It shall be a temple built in the darkness to reveal light, built in sorrow to produce joy which shall never die.—H. W. Beecher.

A SUPERANNUATE ON FALLING FROM GRACE.

By Rev. T. W. Adams.

Some preachers state to their congregations that the Methodist Church believes in "falling from grace." Nothing is farther from the truth than that we do not believe in "falling from grace." We do believe in the possibility of it. Indeed we know that Christians can, and painfully frequently, do fall. Our preachers spend much of their time and pulpit efforts warning people of the danger, and exhorting them to watch and pray. The issues involved are so great that we feel justified in making our best efforts to steady Christians, and inspire them to lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset them, and to run with patience the race that is set before them. In spite of everything the church does to prevent it, many fall. Too sad!

After having closely watched for nearly a half a century, I am fully convinced that it takes more grace to keep us living right after we are converted than it did to get us converted de novo. It is mighty easy to backslide, and mighty hard to prevent it. When one is converted he comes into a life which needs constant care and nurture. To fail to meet its constantly recurring needs results in a decline in its vitality. It must be nourished with food convenient, and have its activities employed in suitable directions. The only possible way to prevent backsliding and falling is to "grow in grace." Constant replenishings of grace are necessary to keep the spiritual life in a normal and safe condition. Neglect "the means of grace," and the life will wither, wilt and die.

Christians can, and many of them do, fall from grace. If the matter were up in a court for trial, I could get a favorable verdict from any jury. I could get a thousand Methodists at least, to testify that they know that Christians can fall—that they know it from personal experience, having fallen themselves. I would get outside the Methodist fold, too, for witnesses. I could prove it from members of churches that teach that a Christian cannot fall. I have in mind now three lawyers, Calvinists, who frankly said to me; "Brother Adams, your church is right in teaching 'conditional perseverance.' We know that Christians can, and many of them do fall."

To my way of thinking, the difference on this question between Calvinists and Methodists is, that the Calvinists fall and deny it, and the Methodists fall and confess it. I believe the Methodists' way is better. If one falls, he makes it worse by denying it. Let us tell the truth, by all means. I know Christians can fall from grace. I have seen too many of them do it. Many Methodists are in such a hurry to fall that they do not take time to make a decent fall, they just "flop over." It is too bad!

But while Christians may fall, and many of them do fall, it is not necessary. While trials are fiery and temptations abound, "My grace is sufficient for thee" is a joyous assurance of safety to every earnest and true child of God. We can all stand faithful in our integrity if we will only let God have his way with us. Jesus showed the way to triumph in the wilderness. For forty days he tasted the bitterness of an awful testing. He was equal to it all. His triumph was complete. So may ours be if we will but be true to God. In His grievous temptation, He said "Get the hence, Satan." "Then the devil leaveth Him, and, behold, angels came and ministered unto Him." In this Jesus shows His people how to overcome in their temptations. Happy are we if we learn the lesson from Him. The angels will come and minister to us if we will always worship and serve God. We will never backslide and fall if we keep unbroken touch with God.

I said to a Baptist friend to-day, "We are in danger of falling from grace." He said, "Brother Adams, we Bapptists never fall from grace, we just backslide." I said, "But if you continue to backslide, and stay in a backslidden condition, won't you fall after awhile?" He laughed and said, "I reckon so."

The Scriptures abound in warnings and exhortations. It is always well for us to heed these messages that come to us from our Father in Heaven. He knows our dangers, and loves us, and would help us to escape the bad, and be always ready for the coming of the "Son of Man." The foolish virgins took their lamps and went forth to meet the bridegroom, but took no oil with them. They were foolish because they took no oil with them. They presumed that the oil in their lamps was adequate to all demands. They never reckoned on any need for more than they now had. Their theology, in up-to-date phraseology, means, "once in grace, always in grace." They presumed that they had enough at the beginning to meet every demand for all the future. The oil in their lamps wasted away, and in the great hour in great perturbation they found that their lamps had gone out. What an appalling picture in this parable of Christians who waste their grace and have none for the final test! Sad, too sad! I hope that all who read these lines may escape such a tragic experience.

I advise all to be wise and not to presume on God's unconditional keeping of them. Carry "oil in your vessels with your lamps." If so, you will always be ready and safe. "Ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of Man cometh." It is wise to get ready and to keep ready.

We will learn a good deal about our spiritual lives, if we examine them in the light of the analogy between them and our physical lives. The child born of the flesh would be in a bad fix if he were dealt with as many Christians deal with their spiritual lives. Give no attention to the babe, give him no food, give him nothing to nourish his body, or give him food at long intervals and quite irregularly—what would be the consequence? The body would waste away and die. It would be the same with an infant in the family of God. Health and vigor and welfare depend upon suitable nurture and training. Neglect to use the means to promote the powers of this life, and decay and death ensue. This seems plain enough for any one to see.

If the Bible were silent on the subject, I could not doubt that the conditional perseverance of the saints was true. The philosophy of pragmatism applied to the doctrine would attest its truth. Belief in this doctrine inspires and urges to the best efforts to attain to the highest demands and possibilities of the life. The doctrine of unconditional perseverance depresses and negatives life. What helps is true; what hinders is not true.

Thinking on this subject calls to mind an incident that occurred about three years ago. I was spending the night with a friend, living in the Delta. He was a Methodist; his wife was a Baptist, and the governess was a Presbyterian. The wife said: "Brother Adams, I attended my home church some time ago and heard a wonderfully fine sermon. The preacher preached on the Christian virtues catalogued by St. Peter." She had enjoyed the sermon very much, and enjoyed, very evidently, telling me all about it. When the time came to have family worship she said, "Brother Adams, if you do not object, I wish you would read the first chapter of second Peter." I was glad to grant her request. I read deliberately that list of virtues showing the additive character of Christianity. I read it as impressively as I could. I wanted her to have a clear view of things when I reached the climacteric points.

When I reached the 8th verse I said, "Sister E., I am surprised that you asked me to read this passage, for it is thoroughly and most emphatically a Methodist passage. It doesn't give the Baptist church a square inch on which to stand! Listen: 'For if these things be in you and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.'"

I said, "Now listen what follows: 'But he that lacketh these things is blind and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins.'" He had been converted and purged from his sins, but he had not been earnest in his diligence to add and to continue to add virtue to virtue, hence he had lost out. He was worse than backslidden; he had gone entirely away, so far that he had forgotten that he had been pardoned and purged—he had "fallen from grace." I told her that I believed it all, but that her church did not preach it. She seemed dazed, and I prayed, and closed the meeting.

I am mighty glad that I am a Methodist. There is nothing in her teachings hard for me to believe. I believe, and am glad to preach, her doctrines. Hurrah for Methodism!

HALLOWED MEMORIES.

There are hallowed memories in every normal life. They connect us with the past, and bring again voices and faces and scenes that once were to us as the wine of life itself. There are the memories of a mother's face, a father's counsel, a song that once quivered on lips now silent. There are memories of graves and deathbeds and fond farewells. These all are hallowed memories. There are other memories of the struggle of the soul when at last it came to see the light and hear the voice of pardoning love. The memories of the old church with her songs of inspiration; of times when heaven came down to greet the earth, and mercy sat full of joy and glory upon the altars of Zion. Memories of the moments when temptation came upon us, and we cried for the passing away of the cup, but at last lay weary and exhausted upon the bosom of Christ and said to him: "Not my will, but thine, be done." Home memories, soul memories, how hallowed they are! Some of them have been long with us, and some of them are of but yesterday, but among our treasures they hold a high place, and no merchantman with goodliest pearls could buy them from us.

Even the bitterest experiences of life are often in the end transmitted into golden memories. When death came into the home, the thought of the loved one filled us with an agony of grief. The object or the sound that reminded us of them broke down the gates and let pour the flood of tears. But, with the years, the memory has become soft and sweet. The mother tenderly caresses the toy of her departed child, and her memory brings back again the dear form. She hears again its foot upon the stair, and there is a chastened joy in the memory of that which once filled her with inconsolable sorrow. In heaven memory will do that for us, and we shall recall the sorrows of earth only to rejoice in the fact that "earth has no sorrow that heaven cannot heal."—Selected.

FLIGHT.

By F. R. Jerome.

I saw a blue-black martin ride
Atop the choppy, deep, and wide
Blue ocean of the air. He steered
Around green isles of trees, and veered
Away. Far, far away, then turned,
And with two swift wing flaps he churned
The air, and then began to rise
High, far-above cloud foam of skies.
Anon, on down to earth he oared;
Twittered to me, and proudly soared
Up to the cote to tell his mate
He heard sweet songs at heaven's gate.

Have you ever noticed that magnificent turn which the apostle gives to a certain pasage in his second letter to the Corinthians? "I will tarry at Ephesus . . . for a great door and effectual is opened unto me, and there are many adversaries!" "There are many adversaries . . . I will tarry!" The majestic opposition constitutes a reason to remain! "There are many adversaries;" I will hold on!—J. H. Jowett.

SHE WOULD NEVER SAY "PLEASE."

There was once a small child who would never say
"please,"
I believe if you even went down on your knees;
But her arms on the table, would sit at her ease,
And call to her mother in words such as these:
"I want some potatoes!" "Give me some peas!"
"Hand me the butter." "Cut me some cheese!"
So the fairies, this very rude daughter to tease,
Once blew her away in a powerful breeze
Over the mountains, and over the seas,
To a valley, where never a dinner she sees;
But down with the ants, the wasps, and the bees.
In the woods she must live until she learns to say
"please." —M. S. P., in St. Nicholas.

FAITHFUL CHUM AND FEARLESS GUARD.

By Albert Payson Terhune.

If you live in a big city, don't keep a collie. It is as cruel as to keep an eagle in a cage or a deer in a cellar. But if you live in the country, you will find him a wonderful chum and a fearless guard. Besides, he is the easiest of all dogs to train for herding cattle or sheep.

This last is because of his ancestry. You know, in Scotland and in other countries, for many centuries, the collie was kept as an aid to shepherds and drovers. He was taught to handle sheep and cows, especially sheep, more efficiently than a dozen men could handle them. This, for centuries and centuries.

The modern collie has all these hundreds of years of training hidden away in the back of his queer, brilliant brain, ready to re-learn it at the slightest chance. Sometimes, he remembers it by instinct—or part of it. For instance:

I knew a collie named Lad that had never seen a sheep in his life. A flock of twenty sheep were shut in a paddock on Lad's master's place, one evening, on their way to the county fair. In the night, the twenty sheep broke out of the paddock and stampeded. Now, mind you, Lad had never before set eyes on a sheep. Yet he went after that widely-scattered runaway flock, and "rounded up" all twenty of them as skillfully as any veteran shepherd could have done it.

He did it without hurting or even scaring any of the sheep. And, after that, he was so proud of his new accomplishment that he used to "round up" chickens and ducks and kittens and every other bird or animal he could find. It was the ancestral instinct working out.

The collie is descended more directly from the wolf than is any other domestic canine—except possibly the German police dog. And he has the wolf's quick brain and agile body and resourcefulness and unerring instinct. But he has lost the wolf's treachery and other of the latter's evil traits. A collie that has been brought up rightly has none of his ancestors' unpleasant ways. He is loyal and gallant and fun-loving and wise. Here is a case—a true story—to prove how he has clung to one wolf-trait, namely, the mysterious sense of direction:

A man named Roy M. Coe left Fort Scott, Kas., and went to Albuquerque, New Mexico, to live. He took along his collie, Bud. The dog was not happy at Albuquerque. He wanted to get back to Kansas, to Mr. Coe's sister-in-law, whom the dog loved better than any one else. Now, Bud had come to New Mexico in a baggage car. So he had not been able to see the country he passed through. Soon after he reached Albuquerque he disappeared. For eight months, nothing was heard of him. Then, in July, 1920, he limped into the office of Mr. Coe's sister-in-law, at Fort Scott, Kas., and lay down exhausted at her feet.

Bud had traveled nine hundred and fifty-six miles alone and through unfamiliar country, with nothing to guide him except that queer, wolf-like sense of direction. As I said, this is a true story.

In the old days, the collies were known as "shepherds' dogs." It is said that shepherds, long, long ago, caught baby wolves and tamed them and crossed them with their own domestic dogs in order that the puppies might inherit their wild parents' cleverness. Then, after a few generations of this, the dogs were brought up among sheep, to cure their savage tendency to kill the woolly creatures; and then were set to guarding the flock against their own fierce cousins, the wolves.

There are several theories as to how the collie got his name. The most likely of these is that he took it from the old English word, "coll," meaning "dark." For the first collies were either black or of very dark brown. "Coll" was pronounced like "coal." And in parts of Scotland, you will still hear the collie called a "coalie."

There are two kinds of collies—the rough and smooth. In America, the smooth collie is very rare. He is shaped like his rough brother, but has a coat almost as short and as harsh as a bulldog's. The rough collie is the type you are familiar with. He is found in three different kinds of coloring: the "sable," the "merle" and the "tri-color."

The tri-color collie is the collie whose principal hue is black and who has white and tan markings and usually a white chest. The merle is gray, with white chest and with tan on the cheek-bones, and with black spots scattered here and there through his gray coat. Sometimes he has what is called a "marled eye;" one eye with a whitish iris that gives a false impression of blindness. Every other shade of color comes under the head of "sable," whether pale gold or dark brown, or red. There is also a "white" collie—white all over, except for a brown spot or so. But he is more or less in a class by himself.

Your collie needs all the exercise he can comfortably get. He needs plenty of fresh water to drink. He needs frequent hard brushings, if his coat is to stay beautiful. And while he is the easiest of dogs to train, he is much the easiest to ruin by wrong treatment in puppyhood.

If you own the right kind of a collie, you own a treasure. If you own the wrong kind, the fault is not his, but the person's who brought him up.—In The American Boy.

You never get to the end of Christ's words. There is something in them always behind. They pass into proverbs—they pass into laws—they pass into doctrines—they pass into consolation; but they never pass away, and, after all the use that is made of them they are still not exhausted.—Dean Stanley.

A Good Classification.

There are three kinds of church members, as Professor Barber remarked the other evening at the Harvard Summer School, in the campaign for increasing our members. DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

TO THE PATRONIZING CONFERENCES.

The Publishing Committee of the Advocate at its meeting last October, in view of the need of an increased subscription if the Advocate were to be continued, planned to request each of the Conferences served by the New Orleans Christian Advocate to put in a campaign for renewals and new subscribers.

This movement met with a hearty response at the late sessions of the several Conferences, which was most gratifying to your Publishing Committee, manifesting, as it did, your vital interest in our church paper and your evident willingness to do all you possibly could to place the paper on a sound financial basis. The pastors voluntarily planned to secure a minimum of new subscribers and all renewals possible on their charges — the minimum being accepted and named by the individual pastors with the implied promise that said figure was to be raised whenever practical.

Your Publishing Committee have not pressed this matter, feeling it best to abide awhile and wait until every man was settled in his new field and had gotten acquainted with his people.

Now that everyone is at home, we come before you, both pastors and church members, and urge that the campaign be pressed, and that in recognition of our pledges assumed at Conference and our duty to the church and our obligations to the editor and manager of the Advocate, that we do all possible to increase the subscription of our church paper. Brother pastors and fellow church members, let us get busy, and that immediately, sending in our lists of new subscribers to the Advocate office, 512 Camp street, New Orleans, La., with each daily mail.

JNO. F. FOSTER, Chairman.
Publishing Committee of the Advocate.
Covington, La., Jan. 26, 1922.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The District Institute of the Alexandria District, Louisiana Conference, will be held at Alexandria, La., February 8-9.

All the Protestant churches of Mount Hope, West Virginia, united recently in a great revival campaign conducted by Dr. Theodore Copeland.

Rev. R. F. Harrell, of Tallulah, La., attended the Gipsy Smith meetings last week, and honored the Advocate office with a call while in the city.

During January and February, Dr. H. F. Brooks, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., is preaching a series of sermons on the Holy Spirit.

Blackstone Female Institute, at Blackstone, Va., was destroyed by fire on January 10, entailing a loss of about $175,000. We understand that rebuilding will begin at once.

The congregations of First Methodist Church, Laurel, Miss., are steadily growing, and the Sunday school is also making gains. Rev. Osmond S. Lewis serves this fine charge.

The Woman's Missionary Council will hold it twelfth Annual Meeting at Travis Park Methodist Episcopal Church, South, San Antonio, Texas, March 29-April 5, 1922.

Rev. Lyman Carley, of Ellisville, Miss., father of the editor of the Advocate, is spending several days in New Orleans, visiting his son and family, and attending the Gipsy Smith meetings.

"The Circuit Rider," the official organ of the Georgetown circuit, Mississippi Conference, has made its appearance. The first number contains much interesting news concerning the charge.

"The good people of Portland and Parkdale are still 'pounding' us—everything goes well with us in church work," writes Rev. F. R. Power, formerly of the Louisiana Conference, from Portland, Ark.

Belcher circuit, Louisiana Conference, has given Rev. A. S. J. Neill a cordial welcome to his new charge, and he has begun his work with his accustomed fidelity and care. His salary has been increased.

Rev. Paul H. Grice, Johns, Miss., reports an encouraging outlook for his charge this year. He serves an appreciative people, who respond readily to his call for co-operation in the work of the Kingdom.

We regret to learn that the health of Mrs. T. J. Holladay, wife of our faithful pastor at Plain Dealing, La., is not robust. She is a splendid Christian woman, and her friends will pray that she may be restored to health.

One of the old-time and appreciative readers of the Advocate is Mrs. S. D. Love, of Memphis, Tenn. Though her physical suffering are great, she is conscious of the presence of the Holy Spirit. The Bible is her great source of comfort.

The American Bible Society has issued more than 33 "diglots"—versions of the Scripture or portions of it printed in two languages in parallel columns. These two-language books are used as a means of Christianizing and Americanizing the immigrants within our borders.

Rev. Casper W. Avery, of Swiftown, Miss., writes: "The work here is progressing nicely. We have two prayer meetings, church attendance is on the increase, and since the Conference at Amory we have bought a parsonage for the Swiftown charge."

Rev. Dan Anders is greatly encouraged with the outlook on the Ida charge, Louisiana Conference. The salary has been increased. The Hosston church is now entirely clear of debt, and will be dedicated on Sunday, March 12. A new church has been organized at Mira.

The Advocate office appreciated a call on Thursday of last week by Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Van Buren and daughter, of Jackson, Miss. Brother Van Buren expressed great interest in the circulation of the Advocate—which means that he is a faithful and loyal Methodist.

"Pussyfoot" Johnson, the world-famous prohibition worker, delivered an address in Laurel, Miss., on last Sunday evening. On his recent return from Europe, the people of his home town, Westerville, Ohio, gave him the greatest ovation ever accorded any citizen of the town.

Rev. Jno. F. Foster, chairman of the Publishing Committee of the Advocate, and pastor of our church at Covington, La., spent a day or two in New Orleans last week in attendance upon the Gipsy Smith meetings. Of course he paid the Advocate office an appreciated call.

The only church we had heard from at the time of going to press in the Sunday evening attendance contest, was Trinity, Ruston, La. A telegram from the pastor, Rev. N. E. Joyner, stated that, in spite of rain and sleet, 175 persons were present, and a fine service was held.

Rev. and Mrs. H. W. Van Hook announce the marriage of their daughter, Eugene Henrietta, to Mr. Charles M. Redding, on Monday, Jan. 2. The young couple will make their home at Biloxi, Miss. The Advocate extends hearty good wishes and prays the blessings of Heaven upon them.

Rev. J. T. Leggett, pastor of Main Street Methodist Church, Hattiesburg, Miss., was in New Orleans the early part of this week, attending the Gipsy Smith meetings. Brother Leggett is a member of the Publishing Committee of the Advocate, and he made an appreciated call at the office.

Dr. E. W. Anderson, formerly engaged in medical missionary work at Chulwon, Korea, is spending several months in New Orleans taking post graduate work in further preparation for service in Korea. He is contributing largely to the missionary interest in the New Orleans Methodist churches by his inspiring addresses.

Rev. E. R. Smoot, the gracious host of the North Mississippi Conference at Amory recently, has been most cordially received at his new appointment, Corinth, Miss. The congregations are filling the church, and the prayer meeting attendance has reached 110. Who can beat that for a prayer meeting?

Rev. W. W. Bruner, Victoria, Miss., is in love with his work and people. He writes: "You can tell the people that that great big 'pounding' Victoria gave the parsonage on New Year's Day is still lasting. There is no better charge to serve and no better place to live than on the Red Banks charge."

Rev. I. T. Reames reports the brightest prospects at Vivian, La., since the organization of the church there. The revival meeting held last fall by Rev. Dan Kelley greatly strengthened the membership in numbers and in tone. There has been an increase in the assessment for the pastor's salary this year.

The Sunday school at Rolling Fork, Miss., recorded a one hundred per cent improvement last year, and it has made an excellent beginning this year. It has outgrown the capacity of the present building, and plans are being made for the erection of additional rooms at once. Rev. T. J. O'Neil is the pastor.

We hope our readers have been following the series of articles dealing with the Constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, written by Hon. C. L. Bates, of Holly Springs, Miss. Judge Bates has gone carefully into this difficult subject, and his articles constitute a real contribution to the constitutional history of our church.

Rev. L. H. Floyd, of Horn Lake, Miss., writes: "Everything is moving along well with us. We were heartily welcomed back for the second year to the charge, and the people are always sending something good to the parsonage. There is good Sunday school spirit all over the charge, and we are having good congregations at most of the churches."

Rev. Henry T. Young, our accomplished pastor at Natchitoches, La., spent several days last week in New Orleans, attending the Gipsy Smith meetings. He came as the guest of his congregation, who generously supplied the funds for the trip. We commend this thoughtful action on the part of his people to other congregations in Louisiana and Mississippi.

Good attendance on the regular preaching services and at prayer meeting is reported at Coushatta, La., where Rev. S. J. Davies is pastor. The Epworth League and the Sunday school are active, and the work prospers. Natural gas is now being piped to Coushatta, and the church and the parsonage have been provided with it for both light and heat.

The last dollar of indebtedness on our church at Greenwood, La., has been paid and the building is now ready for dedication. This church is a two-story brick, with ample Sunday school facilities, and its erection by a small congregation is a splendid achievement. Rev. B. T. Crews, the pastor, is greatly encouraged with the outlook at the beginning of his third year.

We learn through Judge Bates, to whose series of articles on the Constitution of the church we have referred in another place, that he is greatly indebted to Rev. N. G. Augustus, Byhalia, Miss., for access to all the old Books of Discipline needed in his investigations. He says of Brother Augustus's library : "He has a wonderful library, and many old, valuable books—real treasures."

Rev. Bob Shuler, the famous pastor of our Trinity Church, Los Angeles, Calif., has issued a pamphlet, "A Deadly Comparison," in which he gives a startling revelation of conditions as they exist in the "movie colony" in Los Angeles. This pamphlet can be had of the author at actual cost —five cents a copy, or $2 a hundred. His address is 1201 South Flower Street, Los Angeles, Calif.

From a personal note from Rev. James H. Felts, presiding elder of the Greenville District, North Mississippi Conference, we learn that the year begins remarkably well on the district. All the preachers are happily at work, the two "transfers," Rev. Del Longgear, at Coahoma, and Rev. C. M. Chapman, at Shelby, being in great favor with their brethren and with their congregations.

Rev. and Mrs. F. B. Hill, of Ponchatoula, La., who attended the Gipsy Smith meeting in New Orleans last week, gave a report of the meeting to their congregations last Sunday, and sang two of the songs that are popular in the meeting. The officials of the church gave them a purse sufficient for them to attend the meeting again this week—a most gracious act which other boards might well imitate.

Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the Alexandria District, Louisiana Conference, is suffering from a recent very painful though, happily, not serious automobile accident. While crossing a street in Alexandria, he was struck by a passing automobile and considerably bruised. Although confined to his home for a considerable length of time, he is now beginning to be able to attend to the work of the district.

The following is taken from a recent number of the Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser: "Dr. H. S Spragins, pastor of Court Street Methodist Church, Montgomery, has completed his first year in this city. He came here a year ago, and Sunday ended the first twelve months of his service. This good man has been an able pastor, a leader and a power among the pastors, as well as a pastor who has the love and confidence of his flock."

The new publications of the General Sunday School Board—the Haversack, for boys from ten to seventeen, the Torchbearer, for girls from ten to seventeen, and Our Young People, for young people from eighteen and above—seem to have been cordially received throughout the church. It is believed that they will be unusually helpful in keeping the boys and girls interested in the work of the Sunday school and church.

Rev. W. L. Broome, who has many friends in Mississippi, is beginning his third year as pastor of the University Church, Norman, Oklahoma. The University of Oklahoma is located at Norman, and it is a rapidly growing institution. During the session of 1919-20, it enrolled 3,914 students, one out of every five of them being from a Southern Methodist home. Plans are being made for the erection of a $200,000 church building for this important center.

The good people of Franklin, La., have shown their appreciation of their new pastor, Rev. Lee R. Sparks, by paying his salary in full to date and by other substantial tokens. Brother Sparks writes that he will be glad to assist in two or three revival meetings during the year if the brethren who desire his help will communicate with him far enough in advance for him to arrange his work accordingly.

Viscount Bryce, the distinguished Englishman, of who it was said that he knew America better than most Americans, died on January 22. He was the author of "The American Commonwealth," which has been a standard text book in the schools of America for many years. He was a son of Rev. James Bryce, of Glasgow, Scotland, a minister of the Established Church. He was more than eighty years of age.

Rev. Jas. S. Duke, Industrial Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Louin, Miss., writes us as follows: "We are in need of a medium-size bell to call the folks to Sunday school and church, and I am writing to ask if you can put me in touch with some church that has quit using its bell and would sell it to us." If any reader of the Advocate knows of such bell, he will confer a favor by writing Brother Duke at the address given above.

Rev. E. L. Cargill, Pleasant Hill, La., gives us the following sad news: "Mr. Noah Maines, a member of long standing of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who held his membership in the Pleasant Hill congregation, was buried here to-day, January 19. Brother Maines was eighty-two years old. He died in the triumphs of a living faith." The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing relatives and friends.

Pope Benedict XV died on last Sunday morning. As the head of the Roman Catholic Church he was revered by millions of people throughout the world, and his manifest interest in the great problem of world peace had gained for him the respect of those who were not of his church. His successor will be elected by the conclave of cardinals, which, according to its constitution, must be called within ten days of the death of a pope.

A District Preacher's Meeting was held in Shreveport, La., on Friday, Jan. 6, with a good attendance. There are fifty preachers in the Shreveport District, counting only members of the Annual Conference and supplies. The program was prepared and carried out on schedule time, closing with a luncheon at noon, served by the ladies of First Church. "What we promised to do at Annual Conference" was a general topic for discussion, which introduced many phases of our work.

A note from Rev. C. E. Fike, formerly of the Louisiana Conference but now pastor at Paducah, Tex., states that he is enjoying his work in the Lone Star State. He is rapidly regaining his voice. A movement for a new parsonage at Paducah will soon be launched. One of the pleasures of his present situation is the opportunity he has of visiting Rev. Alonzo Early, also formerly of the Louisiana Conference, who is now pastor at Quanah, Texas, near by. Brother Fike sends his affectionate regards to his Louisiana brethren.

Work on the Haynesville charge, Louisiana Conference is taking on very interesting proportions, as the oil field is steadily expanding. The church is planning for a new building and also a new parsonage, in the near future. Rev. A. J. Gearheard, who enjoys a big task, is enthusiastic over the opportunity. With the assistance of Rev. J. F. Dring, who remains in Haynesville, much needed work will be opened in the oil field, where we already have a building. Better provision than heretofore has been made for the pastor's salary.

For the first time in his life, the editor of the Advocate has been refused admission to a religious service! On last Sunday evening he, with his family, arrived at the tabernacle where the Gipsy Smith meetings are being held, at 7:10 for the service that was advertised to begin at 7:30. But the tabernacle was crowded to its capacity, and hundreds of people were standing in the streets, wanting to get in. And to think this happened in New Orleans! Well, we are glad of it. This city is in the midst of the greatest religious awakening in its history—a miracle of grace is taking place.

For several years Brother D. W. Heidelberg, of Shubuta, Miss., has given a year's subscription to the Advocate to the member of his Sunday school class having the best attendance record for the year. This year the award was made to Mr. J. W. Braswell and Mr. J. E. Rainwater. Mr. Braswell was present every Sunday except one, when he was out of town, and Mr. Rainwater was present every time when not prevented by absence from town or sickness. Brother Heidelberg says, "The Advocate is a good paper and I feel that the money cannot be better invested than by sending it to these gentlemen."

We clip the following well deserved tribute to one of the most useful members of the Louisiana Conference from the St. Tammany Farmer, published in Covington, La.: "Those who have attended the services of the Methodist church and listened to the discourses of Rev. Jno. F. Foster, have gone away with a better understanding of Christian duty and a greater desire for the fulfillment of the obligations resting upon the member of a church. There is probably no better informed minister in the Southwest, and none who is more filled with the desire to serve God; hence the charm of his personality goes out to his audience, and his influence for good becomes a valuable asset to any church."

There were some interesting features in connection with the morning service at the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, this city, last Sunday. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. Peacock, a distinguished minister of the Northern Baptist Church. In the congregation were Rev. R. A. Davis, a superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference, Rev. Lyman Carley, a superannuate member of the Mississippi Conference, and Rev. P. A. Sowell, a superannuate member of the Tennessee Conference. In addition, Dr. F. W. Anderson, a returned medical missionary from Korea was present, having taken part in the missionary program of the Sunday school. The pastor of the church, Rev. Ellis Smith, was able to conduct the service for the second time since his serious automobile accident several weeks ago.

Last week we announced the sad news of the death of the mother of Mr. Stephen S. Thomas, Centenary secretary-treasurer of the Louisiana Conference, at her home in Peebles, Ohio. On Friday of last week we received a telegram from him announcing that his father had also passed away, and that the two would be buried on Sunday. They were both in advanced age, having been married nearly sixty-nine years. They were faithful followers of Christ, and their prayer that they might pass away together was beautifully answered. They are survived by six of the eight children born to them, and all were present at the funeral services except one son, whose home is in California. The friends of Brother Thomas will remember him tenderly in their prayers in this double sorrow that has come to him.

Bishop W. F. McDowell, chairman of the Methodist Episcopal Commission on Unification, has suggested that the two great branches of American Methodism might get together in a way different from the plan proposed by unification, though he does not offer his suggestion as a substitute for anything now being considered by the Commission on Unification. He suggests a joint meeting of the College of Bishops of our church and the Board of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church at least once a year, at which meeting there could be a "frank, careful, brotherly consideration of the common interests of Methodism in the world." He suggests also a similar joint meeting of the executive committees of the mission boards, the educational boards, and the Sunday school boards of the two churches. He believes that good results would follow the adoption of some such plan.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. L. M. Sharp, Jackson, Miss., 2; Miss Amelia Pharr, New Iberia, La., 2; Rev. J. D. Simpson, Shaw, Miss., 2; Rev. J. L. Cady, Baker, La., 3; Rev. O. S. Lewis, Laurel, Miss., 4; Rev. W. L. Linfield, Gulfport, Miss., 7; Rev. A. F. Moore, Sarah, Miss., 2; Rev. T. M. Ainsworth, Lorman, Miss., 2; Mrs. Mary Goza Matthews, Bude, Miss., 6; Rev. H. J. Boltz, Simsboro, La., 2; Mrs. A. L. Robbins, Coffeeville, Miss., 2; Rev. T. W. Adams, Brookhaven, Miss., 2; Rev. P. H. Grice, Johns, Miss., 2; Rev. C. W. Avery, Swiftown, Miss., 2. D. W. Heidelberg, Shubuta, Miss., 2; Rev. J. T. Leggett, Hattiesburg, Miss., 10.

Mrs. CLARA AUGUSTA TURNER, eldest daughter of Rev. W. C. and Mrs. Phoebe Black, was born in Copiah County, Mississippi, September 12, 1867; and died in Birmingham, Ala., December 17, 1921. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. H. M. Stevenson, pastor of West End Methodist Episcopal Church, South; and her remains were laid to rest in Elmwood cemetery of the city where her last days were spent.

Sister Turner's earlier days were marked by the simplicity of the period in which she was born. Her father was her first instructor, and the task which he began was completed in the public schools of the various towns where he was pastor. In 1885, when her father was pastor of Central Church, Meridian, she entered East Mississippi Female College, from which institution she graduated in 1888. In the fall of this same year she entered Peabody Normal College, Nashville, Tenn., and after two years of study received her degree from that institution. She then entered upon the work for which she had prepared herself, beginning at Waynesboro, Miss. But after four years of service in the schoolroom, she was for six years private secretary to her father, who was at that time editor and publisher of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. On March 21, 1900, she was married to Mr. J. P. Turner, of Thomasville, Ala. They lived for some time at Thomasville, and then moved to Dickinson, Ala., where Mr. Turner died in September, 1910. The year previous to this Sister Turner's mother had died; and, she having no children of her own, and her husband's children by his first marriage being of age, she returned to Mississippi and lived with her father, first in Tupelo and then in Meridian, where Dr. Black died in 1915.

After the death of her father, Sister Turner's mind and heart turned again to the task of her earlier days. Accordingly in 1915 she entered the Mississippi Normal College at Hattiesburg, and took a two years' course preparatory to teaching. She then taught in country communities near Birmingham, Ala., until her active career was terminated by an accident which confined her to a hospital for four months, and doomed her to be a cripple and a great sufferer for the remainder of her life.

Sister Turner joined the church at an early age, and was throughout a devoted follower of her Master. She was reticent and retiring to a degree that kept her real worth concealed from the casual observer; but the inner circle of her friends and loved ones knew the treasures of her heart and soul. In her home relations she was an affectionate and unselfish sister, and in all her work she freely gave her best. Two brothers and a sister survive her: Rev. M. M. Black, of the Mississippi Conference, Warren F. and Miss Ada Black, both of Birmingham, Ala.

Such are the details of which we think when life is done; and the most that we can say of such a detail is that it is a clumsy geography of our place in time. It is the grating through which recollection sees the golden romance of a soul's passage through life. But, still, it is enough, for, after this recital of labors and sacrifices covering more than half a century, Sister Turner's diligence and industry need no commendation. And in the face of all the changes which came in her career, it is useless to speak of her heroism of soul. Grounded as she was in the things of God, when a losing fight against affliction and pain and disappointment had robbed the years of hope, it is not to be wondered at that she should have beckoned the angel of death because of the desire to pass over the River and rest. May those who linger in the shadow of her going be consoled and kept by the grace which kept her steadfast and patient through every toil and sorrow. And when in God's good time the beautiful gate shall stand ajar for them, may they be gathered with the translated ones in the glorious realization that only heaven is home. W. L. DUREN.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas our Heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to take from us our beloved sister, Mrs. MAY ELEY; and whereas she has been a member of this Sunday school from infancy and an efficient member of Class No. 8 for the past fifteen years, and a place has been made vacant which can never be filled; therefore be it resolved:

1. That while we bow in humble submission to the will of an all-wise God, we grieve and deeply sympathize with the family and loved ones in their great loss.

2. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes, a copy be sent to the bereaved family, to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and to the Jasper County News for publication. Respectfully submitted,

Mrs. ZORA LAMB,
Mrs. LOLA LIGHTSEY,
Committee

Montrose, Miss.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas we stand in the shadow of a great sorrow and are deeply conscious of an inestimable loss in the sudden death of a dear friend and sister, Mrs. M. M. WIGGS, which occurred on Sunday, August 7, 1921; and whereas Mrs. Wiggs was a faithful wife and mother, and a faithful member of the Camp Ground Methodist Church for a member of years; therefore be it resolved:

1. That we bow our heads in humble submission to God, who doeth all things well.

2. That the members of the Camp Ground Missionary Society have, in the passing away of Mrs. Wiggs, lost a faithful co-laborer, and that her cheerful service and wise counsel will be sadly missed while the hand that wrought so well will be richly rewarded in due season.

3. That we, the committee, tender to Mr. Wiggs and family our sympathy in this dark hour, and pray that God will comfort them with that comfort that he alone can give.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent the bereaved family, a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and a page in our minutes be dedicated to her memory.

Signed by: Mrs. W. W. Davidson, Mrs. W. T. Crump, Miss Olivia Pegram.

No better description of prayer can be found than in Macdonald's words about old Janet in "Sir Gibbie:" "She never said she prayed; she held the gate open." For the deepest prayer is not found in our words to God; it is rather the keeping the soul open to him that he may speak to us.

The Lord make us glad this year because lost children are born again unto us, and wanders are come home!

As the years come and go, yea, go in their coming, may we find at last that we have been all the while undergoing preparation for higher life, for wider service, for profounder worship! —Joseph Parker.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference will be held this year in the hospitable little city of DeRidder. The same will begin with Tuesday evening, February 14 and continue through the 15th, 16th and 17th.

Therefore please elect delegates at your earliest opportunity and send names to the chairman of the entertainment committee, Mrs. T. C. Moody, DeRidder, La. It will greatly facilitate matters if you will also state office, if any, held by delegates in your local auxiliary. (For number of delegates see page 99, article 21, eleventh annual report of the Louisiana Conference.)

We would also urge that your delegate or delegates to this meeting be the woman or women who will be the greatest help in your work during the year. Your President, the Superintendent of your Young People, or of your Children's work will probably get some inspiration, if sent, that may benefit not only themselves but the entire auxiliary.

If your pledge for the coming year has not already been made and sent to your District Secretary, please do this so your district may make the pledge it should at the annual meeting. Last, but far from least in importance, begin now to pray that this may be the best meeting we have ever held in Louisiana, because the greatest good shall result from same. Cordially,

Mrs. GEO. S. BROWN.
Rec. Secretary.

Yeast Vitamon Greatest Secret of Complexion Beauty

Clear Skin, Firm Flesh and Strong Nerves

Of what use are fine features, with an ugly skin, flabby flesh, sunken cheeks, a scrawny neck or a care-worn face?

If you want to quickly clear your skin and complexion, put some firm, healthy flesh on your bones, increase your nerve force and power and look and feel 100 per cent. better, simply try taking two of Mastin's tiny yeast VITAMON tablets with each meal and watch for the results. Mastin's VITAMON Tablets contain highly concentrated yeast-vitamines as well as the two other still more important vitamines (Fat Soluble A and Water Soluble C) and are now being used by thousands. They positively will not upset the stomach or cause gas, but, on the contrary, are a great aid to digestion, to overcome constipation and as a general conditioner of the whole system. Pimples, boils and skin eruptions seem to vanish like magic under their purifying influence, the complexion becomes fresh and beautiful, the cheeks rosy instead of pale, the lips red instead of colorless, the eyes bright instead of dull. Mastin's VITAMON is positively guaranteed to give you new health, beauty and a more well-rounded face and figure whether you are young or old or the trial costs you nothing. Make the test yourself and see. Be sure to remember the name—Mastin's VI-TA-MON—the original and genuine yeast-vitamine tablet—there is nothing else like it, so do not accept imitations or substitutes. You can get Mastin's VITAMON Tablets at all good druggists.

From The Corresponding Secretary.

Dear Auxiliaries:

We have come to the close of the fourth quarter with fewer auxiliaries reported and a decrease in the number of members reported. From the reports sent in, I am unable to determine whether we have really lost these members or whether some auxiliary corresponding secretary has them tucked safely away in her book—having not sent her report to the District Secretary, who in turn, would have sent them to me. If we only realized what a few figures and a little time meant to the machinery of our missionary organization, I am sure we would not be forgetful or negligent about our reports.

The Council report will be incomplete without every Conference report.

The Conference report will be incomplete without every district report.

The district report will be incomplete without every auxiliary report.

The auxiliary report will be incomplete unless every officer and every member is faithful and prompt in what she has promised—or should promise to do.

So, auxiliaries, you see that you must be the "Power behind the throne" that moves this great Missionary car, as it were the oil that makes the machinery run smoothly: Now every shoulder to the wheel and let's push her forward even if the grade is up hill. Yours in loving service,

Mrs. S. A. MONTGOMERY,
Cor. Secretary.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Notice.

The tenth annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference will convene in Water Valley, March 7-11. The Executive Committee will meet on March 7, at 3 p.m.

Societies will please elect delegates as soon as possible and send names to Mrs. W. B. Barry, Chairman Reception Committee. An interesting program has been prepared. Some of the chief attractions are the instructive and inspirational addresses of our Council officers and returned missionaries who are expected to be present at this meeting.

NERVOUS AND HALF-SICK WOMEN

These Letters Recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Will Interest You

For Your Own Good Please Read Them

Youngstown, Ohio.—"Last fall I began to feel mean and my back hurt me and I could hardly do my little bit of housework. I was played out when I would just sweep one room and would have to rest. I would have to put a cushion behind me when I would sit down and at night I could not sleep unless I had something under my back. I had awful cramps every month and was just nearly all in. Finally my husband said to me one day, 'Why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine?' and I said, 'I am willing to take anything if I could get well again.' So I took one bottle and a second one and felt better and the neighbors asked me what I was doing and said, 'Surely it must be doing you good all right.' I have just finished my eighth bottle and I cannot express to you how I feel, the way I would like to. If you can use this letter you are welcome to it and if any woman does not believe what I have written to be true, she can write to me and I will describe my condition to her as I have to you."—Mrs. ELMER HEASLEY, 141 S. Jackson St., Youngstown, Ohio.

"I was very nervous and run-down," writes Mrs. L. E. Wiese of 706 Louisa St., New Orleans, La. "I would often sit down and cry, and was always blue and had no ambition. I was this way for over a year and had allowed myself to get into quite a serious condition. One day I saw your advertisement in the daily paper and began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once. I have improved ever since taking the third bottle and find it is the best medicine I have ever taken."

Benefited by First Bottle

"I was completely run down and not able to do my housework. I just dragged myself around and did not have energy to get up when once I sat down. I read advertisements of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in our paper 'The Indiana Daily Times,' and learned all about it. I received results from the very first bottle and now I am doing all my own work, even washing and ironing, and I never felt better in my life. I tell all my friends it is due to you."—Mrs. ELIZABETH REINBOLD, 403 N. Pine St., Indianapolis, Indiana.

You should pay heed to the experiences of these women. They know how they felt before taking the Vegetable Compound, and afterwards, too. Their words are true.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent you free upon request. Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts.

THE GREENWOOD CHURCH, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

A Statement.

The minutes of the North Mississippi Conference, which have just come from the press, show that the Greenwood Church lacked $120 of paying its assessment for Conference collections for 1921. An inquiry concerning this discrepancy revealed the following facts:

The assessment was sent to the Treasurer of the Board of Stewards by the Secretary of the Board of District Stewards, but the notice was misplaced. The Treasurer asked for the second notice and the Secretary of the Board of District Stewards, by an oversight, consulted the wrong sheet and sent the Treasurer the assessment for the preceding year. The Treasurer accepted this as accurate and the checks were made out accordingly, after the pastor had gone to Conference. Greenwood has always borne its part and paid its assessments in full, and this explanation is due all parties concerned.

CENTENARY INFORMATION.

The Department of Publicity of the Missionary Centenary has issued recently a leaflet—"Has the Centenary Made Good?" This 6-page leaflet carries such information concerning the Centenary as many of our people wish to secure, and such information as every subscriber to the Centenary should have. The demand for the leaflet has gone far beyond the expectations of the Publicity Department, and several editions have been printed. One or more copies will be sent to any person on request and free of charge. Address John S. Chadwick, Secretary, Centenary Building, Nashville, Tennessee.

AMOUNT PER MEMBER.

The Centenary pledge of our church, approximately $37,000,000, was $16.50 per member for five years—or $3.50 per member per year for the Centenary period. This does not look like "big business," but it is so far beyond the figures of the years before the Centenary period that it is, after all, a record worth while. However, we believe that none can say that giving on a scale such as this for special missionary enterprises at home and abroad will impoverish the church.

For nearly three years of the Centenary period we have paid $6.50 per member, or slightly less than $2.20 per member per year. The Conferences above this average for the entire church are: Pacific, $13.02; South Carolina, $9.40; Kentucky, $9.31; Los Angeles, $8.95; Virginia, $8.90; Florida, $7.44; Denver, $7.44; West Texas, $7.28; New Mexico, $7.23; Baltimore, $7.21; North Carolina, $6.93; Louisiana, $6.93; Tennessee, $6.88. These are amounts per member for three years, or practically so.

The Conferences below the average for the entire church in payments per member for three years are: Missouri, $5.92; Central Texas, $5.90; Upper South Carolina, $5.83; Holston, $5.81; Little Rock, $5.78; South Georgia, $5.69; Louisville, $5.67; Southwest Missouri, $5.60; West Oklahoma, $5.48; Western Virginia, $5.17; St. Louis, $5.35; Northwest, $5.32; East Oklahoma, $5.31; Memphis, $5.25; North Texas, $5.10; North Arkansas, $5.09; Western North Carolina, $5; Mississippi, $4.89; North Georgia, $4.80; Illinois, $4.80; Alabama, $4.79; North Mississippi, $4.55; North Alabama, $4.29; Texas, $3.84; Northwest Texas, $3.52.

These figures give our investments per member for a period of three years in the Centenary enterprises of the church. Certainly it is not too heavy a load for our people to carry even in such times as these. Let us make even a better record than this!

THE LEAK IN THE ROOF.

A famous old painting of the "Last Supper," a treasure of art that monks for generations had carefully guarded, was ruined, it is said, by an imperfect tile in a roof. The building was supposed to be secure, the workmen to have done their part faithfully, but one of the tiles held a hole that passed unnoticed! Did the maker think the flaw too trivial to call for the casting aside of the piece? Did the workman who fastened it into its place decide that what his employer had accepted was none of his business to criticize? However it was, when driving rain came from the right direction, the water found its way in at that small opening, streamed down the wall and made a path across the painting that stained and defaced it for all time.

It is just the old story and the old lesson that runs through all history and repeats itself in every human life—it is the little neglects, the unnoticed trifles, that work the greater harm. Hinges are small, comers and goers never give them a thought, but upon them all the doors are hung that swing outward to opportunity or close hopelessly against success. It is faithfulness in the little things that binds up character; it is small sins and failures in duty that far more than great vices ruin the life.—New Guide.

WATCH NIGHT SERVICE AT COLUMBIA, LA.

I was very much impressed by the watch night service I attended at the Methodist church in Columbia, La., conducted by the pastor, W. J. Porter, while visiting my daughter, Mrs. C. W. Traylor, in that little city during the holidays.

It was opened by a song by the choir, and prayer, led by Rev. W. W. Lantrip. A beautiful picture of Washington at Valley Forge, taken just before the battle, showing where he had led his horse out to a thicket and hitched to a tree, and then fell on his knees pouring out from the very depths of his heart pleadings to God for victory ("Ask in my name and it shall be given"), was presented to the church by Mr. C. P. Thornhill, and was received with a very fitting speech by Mr. J. J. Meridith.

Plans for the new year were discussed by the Sunday school superintendent, each teacher joining in with hearty interest. I was very much inspired by the splendid reports given by each teacher, of their past year's work, showing that the splendid progress they are making was planned with prayerful thought. Mrs. J. S. Satterley, of Shreveport, La., gave a talk on how to improve Sunday school work, bringing out the thought that prayer and personal work by every member of the Sunday school as well as the superintendent and teachers is necessary for a wide-awake Sunday school.

They had splendid reports from the League also. Mrs. Angie Swift gave a very effective talk on "Our Missionary Society."

Beautiful music followed, then all passed out of the auditorium into the dining room, where they were served a much enjoyed luncheon of delicious home-made cake, coffee, hot chocolate, and sandwiches. Then we returned to the auditorium to hear Mr. B. S. Porter give a splendid farewell to the Old Year, leaving with us the fact that the old blood must give way to the young. Where we are to-day our children will be to-morrow. This was answered by greetings to the New Year from Mr. J. B. Thornhill. Then a beautiful sight took place. The lights all went out, all was in darkness except one lone candle, whose light was not hid but shining its bright rays upon a snow-white cross. Then twelve little girls marched one by one up to the altar, bearing in their hands a candle, representing each month of the year; then twelve little boys took candles and passed to each one in the auditorium, with a check reading: "The Kingdom Bank of Good Cheer: Pay to the order of The Bearer Hereof Three Hundred and Sixty-five days of Health and Happiness. 'Ye are the light of the world.'—W. J. Porter."

After all had been served thus, the twelve little girls and boys lighted each candle, showing the lights burning for our Savior and King all over the world. Some very fitting comments by the pastor were made; then a number of sentence prayers was lifted to the throne of God for a better world. Just as the bells and whistles of the town began to ring the joyful tiding of the birth of the New Year, the voice of a little child of about five years could be heard between the strokes of the bell, pleading for blessings upon her pastor, the teachers, and the Sunday school.

Recipe For Gray Hair

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.—Adv.

Ousts Rheumatism.

Here it is. Those awful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold rainy weather are completely forgotten, and the rheumatism is expelled from your system by the very simple treatment of taking Renwar Salts which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood, and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expells the uric acid from the system. Renwar is entirely dependable. It does not in any way injure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar fails to relieve you of rheumatism. Give Renwar a trial and you will never regret it. Mr. Benagh of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says, "Within two or three days after using Renwar my rheumatism disappeared." Price 50c. Ask your druggist for it, or write Warner Drug Company, Nashville, Tenn.—Adv.

The Best Cough Syrup is Home-made.

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? Thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will soon earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

WOMAN'S WORK IN THE MANCHURIA-SIBERIAN MISSION.

At the request of the Korea Mission, it was voted to allow Miss Myers and Miss Tucker to spend one month this spring in Manchuria and Siberia, holding Bible institutes for women, provided adequate provision can be made to take care of their work during their absence. The opportunities in this field are very great and are intimately related to the Korean Mission, several of the Korean evangelists in Siberia and Manchuria being supported by the native church of Korea.

Quarterly Record—MacDonell Wesley Community House Fourth Quarter, 1921.

"Whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." I John 5:4.

In many respects this Christmas season was the best we have ever had. The boxes from our "Auxiliary coworkers" came in early, the numerous gifts from friends in Detroit and the school children in Massachusetts were just what children delight in, and the loyal, enthusiastic co-operation of our own young people and missionary women gave us joy.

The Missionary Society at Point au Chene took charge of the distribution of the gifts there. On the last regular meeting day before Christmas the Ford arrived, heavily laden, both as to passengers and curious and interesting bundles. The children had refused to go to school that day, so after the business meeting some of our number conducted a rousing entertainment in the yard with them, while others assisted the mothers in selecting and wrapping the gifts. The thing that gladdened our hearts most was the fact that not one of the mothers thought of picking out the best things for her own children, but all seemed most eager to select something especially nice for the orphans and widows. Of course, after that the day of service was a good one. One of the Houma merchants contributed a box of toys, so that each child received an extra gift—a paper horn, a spider, or a bright windmill, and they were so happy over it all that they didn't even miss the candy which the writer forgot to take.

They didn't forget the writer, however, as the following gifts will indicate: two pairs of ducks, a dozen eggs, a cake, a handkerchief, and a large bunch of beautiful roses.

The young people of Bayou Blue planned their own service and the Missionary Society took charge of the gifts for the poorer members. They all testify to a wonderfully good time.

A consecrated, Christian woman, lovingly called "Miss Esther," now lives on "The Island" and had gathered the children together in a little school and for Sunday school. With her co-operation we planned the first real Christmas service for those children. Everybody was included, even the three colored children and their mothers. A boat had to be procured for that occasion and when we landed a happy crowd awaited us. The tree was ready for the gifts, a splendid program of songs and Bible verses had been prepared by the children, and popcorn and cakes by the mothers, and we hadn't forgotten the candy this time. It is impossible to describe the scene that followed, or to tell who was happiest, the children, their parents, the young teacher, or the boat crowd.

The Wesley family has now been increased to ten, four new members coming in this past quarter. The first was Anita Dufrene, a thirteen-year-old girl who had long hoped for just such a chance. At the Annual Conference, which Mrs. White attended, a group of laymen assumed her support. She entered immediately and promises to be a credit to those who show such great interest in her development. She has had her teeth put in order, been supplied with clothing, and has started earnestly upon her career. Christmas was overwhelmingly full of joy and happy surprise for her. The box from the Sunday scool class in Rayne was the biggest and best of these. Could the girls have seen the great delight with which their beautiful gifts were received, it would have added much to their gladness.

Soon after Christmas Mr. Geo. LaGrange, his wife and little boy, of Labadieville, east in their lot with us. Mr. LaGrange is assistant pastor in this section, his wife is assistant housekeeper at the Wesley House, and they are both studying to prepare further for service. Their coming gives us new opportunity for service and greatly enlarges the scope of influence of the Wesley House. It also emphasizes the great need for the school for the training of Christian leadership which the Council has planned to provide.

The Gospel tent given to the Council by Mrs. Kirkwood, of South Carolina, for the French work, has reached us in time to begin the new year. Will you pray with us that we may be enabled to give a good account of its use in the next bulletin?

HIGH POINTS FROM ADDRESS OF ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL GUY D. GOFF.

(Delivered before the National Law Enforcement Conference, Washington, D. C., December 6.)

We may bite our chains as we will, but we shall be made to know that man is born to be governed by law, and he that will substitute will in the place of it is an enemy of God.

To have good government, we must have good citizens—and always, continuously, a warfare without truce or quarter against those who violate the law. It is strange but true that bad men are combined and good citizens are divided and that therein lies the cause of law breaking. If the good would join hands, the lawless could do nothing.

We must legislate and prosecute, and drastically punish, but principally we must educate, and practice what we preach.

It is not for an executive, State or Federal, to say whether a law is good or bad. He should enforce it, or confess failure and resign.

Prohibition is not the only law which is difficult to enforce.

Any new law which interferes with the so-called personal liberty of the community must pass through the stages of open violation, secret violation, passive enforcement, and then universal observance throughout the land.

The man who cannot obey the law, the man who cannot fearlessly enforce the law, and with the courage of his convictions bring before our judicial tribunals every dastardly and contemptible crook no matter how high his rank, has no place in our system.

The law stands, proclaiming "Thou shalt not break," and when that commandment is broken the Nation should bend its efforts to see that atonement is made. The quickest and surest way of setting any law at naught is to relax its enforcement; while the quickest and surest way of instilling respect for the law in the hearts of a people is to vigorously press its enforcement.

Our government and our Constitution are not to be overthrown by the whims or the depravity of those who speculate in public justice and view it as an article of personal favor. The parasites that fatten on crime and live on human sin shall not be permitted to traffic in our liberties and, vulture-like, sink their gorging beaks into our laws.

Today all mankind is suspicious, doing nothing, playing safe. America must not and will not yield to this condition. Instead, she must be the positive Nation. She will. And she will, I am sure, be positively good.

We have no room for those who would have us exchange our liberty and freedom for isms and licentious license. Such people, as the Attorney General well says, "should go to a country which gives them their peculiar liberty."

The law must be and it shall be enforced as it is conceived and written, and always without fear or favor. And I bring the pledge that in so far as it lies within the power of the Department of Justice to execute and enforce the law of the land, there will be no backward step, no retreat, in preserving the Constitution and carrying out the mandate of the people.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

WHAT TO PREACH.

In this day of fads and fancies, it may be interesting to note that the human heart responds as quickly and as fully as ever to the simple appeal of the gospel. After hearing Gipsy Smith preach numerous times during the campaign in this city, which came to a close Wednesday night of this week, we must bear testimony to the fact that his one effort has been to hold up Christ as the sufficient Savior of even the most sinful man. In all his preaching he has struck telling blows against various evils and manifold forms of sin, but he has not frittered away his strength in dealing with incidentals—he has emphasized the fact that sin is the product of the unregenerate heart and that the only way to overcome sin is to enter into a new life through Jesus Christ. The burden of his every message has been the glorious truth that Christ died to save men, and in all his sermons he has preached nothing but "Christ and him crucified." And the response has been marvelous. Night after night the great tabernacle has been crowded to the doors with eager listeners, and night after night hundreds of men and women have pledged themselves to live henceforth for God. In the meetings we have attended there have been no waves of hysterical emotionalism, but the atmosphere has been unmistakably charged with a spiritual influence that stilled and sobered and impelled to action hundreds in the vast audience. We cannot but believe that a great work of grace has been wrought in New Orleans, and it has been wrought through the simple preaching of the gospel of Christ. For those who may wonder sometimes what to preach about, we commend the example of the Gipsy—people are always glad to hear the story of Jesus and his love.

THE RIGHT KIND OF TALK.

We commend heartily the remarks of Judge G. W. Jack, of Shreveport, La., as reported recently in the public press, in his charge to the Federal grand jury at Alexandria, La. In connection with the enforcement of the prohibition law, Judge Jack said: "When we consider the magnitude of the work and the difficulties which beset the way, there is no need for discouragement over the manner in which the Federal prohibition law is being enforced. There are, of course, many violations, but this is to be expected in the enforcement of any new law of this character. We see the result of its enforcement in fewer drunken men on the streets, better dressed children, crowded schools, and full larders in the home. * * *. Disregard for one law begets disregard for law in general, and failure to enforce a particular law must necessarily result in an encouragement of the spirit of lawlessness which the courts and the law-abiding, law-enforcement citizens must combat. The matter is one which should especially concern the substantial people of the State, those who own their homes and those who by their labor and frugality have acquired property, for the man who is permitted to enrich himself by the illicit sale of whisky will next enrich himself at the expense of the property rights of these. Once let down the bars, relax in the diligent enforcement of law and order, and no man's property, or even his life, will be safe." That is the right kind of talk, and if it is followed up by the right kind of action on the part of grand juries, trial juries, judges, and officers of the law generally, the bootlegger will soon be put out of business.

ALTOGETHER COMMENDABLE.

The daily newspapers of New Orleans are to be commended for the interest they have taken in giving to the public full reports of the Gipsy Smith meetings. Not only have they given much space to the campaign in general, but they have also printed the sermons in full, giving their readers at a distance the privilege of benefiting by the discourses that have been such a blessing to thousands in the city. Of course it was good business on their part to give as much publicity as possible to an event that was so noteworthy in the history of the city; but there was a higher motive than "good business" back of their action—they were both willing and glad to co-operate in a movement that held promise of lifting the moral standards of the city. Their attitude in reference to the meetings has been altogether commendable.

THE LYNCHING RECORD FOR 1921.

The lynching record for 1921 is not one to bring much satisfaction to the law-abiding citizenship of this country. As comprised by the Department of Records and Research of Tuskegee Institute, the figures are as follows: There were 63 persons lynched in 1921. Of these, 62 were in the South and 1 in the North. This is two more than the number, 61, for the year 1920. Of those lynched, 59 were Negroes and 4 were whites. Two of those put to death were Negro women. Nineteen, or fewer than one-third of those put to death, were charged with rape or attempted rape. Four of the victims were burned to death, and the bodies of three were burned after they had been put to death. The one encouraging fact in connection with the record is that there were 72 instances in which officers of the law prevented lynchings, 64 of these instances occurring in the South and 8 in the North. This would seem to indicate that there is a growing determination that the law shall be allowed to take its course, and that public sentiment is making itself felt in the protection of those upon whom justice has already laid its hands. We believe that the situation concerning lynchings is growing better.

WORTH NOTING.

We are very much interested, of course, in the circulation of church literature, and especially in the circulation of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. With a total membership in Mississippi of 127,387, and in Louisiana of 45,820, making a grand total of 173,207 Methodists in these two States, it has seemed to us that we ought not to think that we are even moderately succeeding in circulating our official Conference organ unless we have a circulation of at least 15,000. We certainly cannot afford to be satisfied with our present circulation, which is far below what ought to be a minimum. In this connection it is interesting to note that the Baptist Record, the official organ of the Mississippi Baptist Convention Board, reports that 53 Baptist churches in Mississippi have put the cost of the Record into their local budgets and are sending the paper to every home represented in their membership. That is a fine record, and we congratulate our Baptist brethren upon the success they are having in working this thoroughly business-like plan of circulating their official church organ. This plan may not be practicable in every church, but where it is, it is certainly worth trying. And where the budget plan is not practicable, there are other practicable ways of increasing the number of those who read their church paper. Any plan that works is a good one. Would that all the Methodist churches in Louisiana and Mississippi would adopt some plan that would keep their members in touch with the affairs of the church!

ONLY AN ELEPHANT.

Considerable excitement was created in the downtown section of this city one day last week by the escape of an elephant from his moorings at a circus and his consequent tour of investigation in some of the streets. There were hurry calls for the police forces, and a great crowd of people, so the newspapers reported, gathered to assist in returning the great beast to his quarters. We wonder what would happen if the people of the city could be made to realize that the devil is at large, too, and that he is taking his toll of human souls every day!

EXPLAIN THIS, THEN.

According to the chairman of the Retail Merchants' Bureau of the Association of Commerce of this city, retail dealers bitterly resent the statement of Attorney General Daugherty to the effect that retail prices throughout the country are still too high. These prices may not be too high—but we should like to have it explained why we were recently asked $13 for a pair of shoes exactly like one we paid $12 for about a year ago. We commend to these brethren the pointed saying of an eminent philosopher: "What you are speaks so loud I cannot hear what you say."

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

By Hon. C. L. Bates.

Ninth Paper.

I.

That the Louisville Convention intended to, and did, by its first Resolution, embody in the Constitution of the church (1) its doctrines and ritual, (2) its general rules, (3) its whole scheme of church government, embracing all the laws, rules, and regulations respecting the Conferences, General, Annual and Quarterly, and all laws, rules and regulations respecting the preachers, their qualifications, ordination, rights, duties, service, and the presiding elders and bishops, their qualifications, selection, rights, duties and tenure of office, and (4) the whole body of economical rules and regulations, is made perfectly clear by the constitutional discussion contained in the Report of the Committee on Organization, which was adopted by the Convention.

That discussion presents, as one of the grievances of Southern Methodism, the erroneous and restricted views, as to the limits of the Constitution, which were claimed and acted upon by the majority in the General Conference of 1844, and which were declared "novel and dangerous doctrines" by the Convention.

The following quotation will show the view of the Convention as to the scope and purview of the church constitution, namely:

"Among the many weighty reasons which influence the Southern Conferences in seeking to be released from the jurisdiction of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, as now constituted, are the novel, and we think, dangerous doctrines, practically avowed and endorsed by that body and the Northern portion of the church generally, with regard to the Constitution of the church, and the constitutional rights and powers, respectively, of the Episcopacy and the General Conference.

"In relation to the first, it is confidently, although most unaccountably, maintained that the six short Restrictive Rules which were adopted in 1808, and first became obligatory, as an amendment to the Constitution, in 1812; are in fact the true and only constitution of the church.

"This single position, should it become an established principle of action to the extent it found favor with the last General Conference, must subvert the government of the Methodist Episcopal Church. It must be seen at once, that the position leaves many of the organic laws and most important institutions of the church entirely unprotected and at the mercy of a mere and ever-fluctuating majority of the General Conference. Episcopacy, for example, although protected in the abstract, in general terms, may be entirely superseded or destroyed by the simple omission to elect or consecrate bishops, neither of which is provided for in the Restrictive Articles.

"The whole itinerant system, except general superintendency, is without protection in the Restrictive Rules; and there is nothing in them preventing the episcopacy from restricting their superintendency to local and settled pastors, rather than a traveling ministry, and thus destroying the most distinctive feature of Wesleyan Methodism.

"So far as the Restrictive Rules are concerned, the Annual Conferences are without protection, and might also be destroyed by the General Conference at any time. * * * Very few indeed of the more fundamental and distinguishing elements of Methodism, deeply and imperishably imbedded in the affection and veneration of the church, and vital to its very existence, are even alluded to in the Restrictive Articles. This theory assumes the self-refuted absurdity, that the General Conference is in fact the government of the church, if not the church itself.

"With no other constitution than these mere restrictions upon the powers and rights of the General Conference, the government and discipline of the Methodist Epipscopal Church as a system of organized laws and well-adjusted instrumentalities for the spread and the diffusion of piety, and whose living principles of energy and action have so long commanded the admiration of the world, would soon cease even to exist.

"The startling assumption that a bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, instead of holding office under the Constitution, and by tenure of law, and the faithful performance of duty, is nothing in his character of bishop but a mere officer at will of the General Conference, and may accordingly be deposed at any time, with or without cause, accusation, proof, or form of trial, as a dominant majority may capriciously elect or party interest may suggest—and that the General Conference may do, by right, whatever is not prohibited by the Restrictive Rules, and, with this single exception, possess power, 'Supreme and all-controlling;' and this, in all possible forms of its manifestation, legislative, judicial, and executive—the same men claiming to be at the same time both the fountain and functionaries of all the powers of government, which powers, thus mingled and concentrated into a common force, may at any time be employed, at the prompting of their own interests, caprice, or ambition.

"Such wild and revolutionary assumptions, so unlike the faith and discipline of Methodism, as we have been taught them, we are compelled to regard as fraught with mischief and ruin to the best interests of the church, and as furnishing a strong additional reason why we should avail ourselves of the warrant we now have, but may never again obtain, from the General Conference, to 'establish an ecclesiastical connection' embracing only the Annual Conferences in the slave-holding States."

II.

The above declaration of the Convention must be accepted as defining its intent, in the adoption of its first Resolution, to embody the entire government of the church in its constitution, and thus safeguard the church and all its interests against the unbridled and arbitrary power of the General Conference, which it, the Convention, was then in the act of creating.

In constitutional construction, contemporaneous discussion, exposition, definition and declarations, of the constitutional body, are of the very highest authority, as to purpose and intention; and that is especially so when the discussion turns upon the very evils and mischiefs then being remedied by new constitutional guaranties.

The controlling purpose and intent of the Convention were to protect the whole of organic Methodism in the South, and all its interests, by constitutional guaranties: the Itinerancy, the Annual Conferences, the General Superintendency, the Presiding Eldership, the preachers and their personal and ecclesiastical rights, as the same then existed, were to be no longer subject to the interests, caprice or ambition of men, or the bitter antagonisms of party politics, but all were to be brought under protection of the fundamental law of the church.

III.

The "novel and dangerous" constitutional theory which the Convention denounced and repudiated is known as "Hamlineism," which was invoked and applied by the majority in the General Conference of 1844, for the purpose of retiring Mr. Harding and degrading Bishop Andrew, in open, flagrant and shameless violation of the Constitution and laws of the church (McTyeire 631; Tigert 2d Ed. 374-379); and it is precisely that "novel and dangerous" constitutional theory which the "Commission on the Constitution" adopted in its recent report.

And so it has come about that after a lapse of 78 years, "Hamlineism" has appeared, both couchant and rampant, in the ranks of Southern Methodism; and the friends of free, honorable, clean ecclesiastical government, who are delegates to the General Conference in May next, must accept the gage of battle or else let the Constitution go down in ignominious defeat.

The report of the Commission shows a purpose to claim that the General Conference is vested with supreme power, legislative, executive and judicial; and that no other branch or department of the church has any rights protected by the Constitution, and that the whole of Southern Methodism, preachers and people, and their institutions, churches, colleges, universities, and their vast properties, to accumulate which they have been "bled white," are all at the disposal of an ecclesiastical despotism. In this auspicious era of freedom and self-determination, Southern men and women in general, and Southern Methodists in particular, are very far from submitting to the despotism of an ecclesiastical oligarchy, and they are resourceful enough to protect themselves against such a fate.

The whole sovereignty and governmental power of Southern Methodism is vested in the Annual Conferences; and the General Conference is a body of delegated, limited, specified, and enumerated powers, and it can lawfully exercise only such powers as have been granted to it by the Annual Conferences; that is the doctrine of the Convention of 1815. It is true that since then the General Conference has been guilty of the usurpation of many powers, and arrangements are now being made for an extension of its usurpations on a large scale; but it is thought that loyalty and conservatism enough remain to rescue from ruin the heritage left by the Convention of 1845.

TRAVEL LETTER FROM DR. AND MRS. I. W. COOPER.

We had often heard, or read, of the luxurious fare and accommodations of Mediterranean cruisers and we found it "even so" on the good ship Graz, of the Lloyd Trieste Line, which bore us in three days from Alexandria, Egypt, to Brindisi, Italy.

The approach to Brindisi, through its very remarkable harbor, promises a much more interesting city than one finds. However, romance and history have long been busy here, and though it is now no more than an ordinary Italian town, we can not forget that it was, in the days of Horace, one of the most important Roman seaports. Here the Via Appia terminated, and some remains of this famous old road are still to be found, just beyond the city. Here, too, is the last resting place of Virgil, and mediaeval remains of a castle and a cathedral. These historic sights were more or less spoiled for us by the fact that the half-day we spent at Brandisi was one of great discomfort. The heat was intense, the fare was miserable, the people and the streets were dirty. Here, late in the afternoon, we saw, as in the East, herds of goats being driven to the doors of milk customers. The vendor rang his bell, the home-keeper brought out his bucket, the herdsman took his stool from under his arm and sat down and milked one of the goats in the presence of the purchaser. In this rather unique and unattractive manner, undiluted milk is assured.

But, if we thought our experience at Brindisi rather a "raw deal," as one of our party expressed it, the night which followed was much worse. It was the last but perhaps the greatest discomfort that we suffered on our journey. We failed to get sleeping-car accommodations, but left Brindisi thinking that we had a special coach for our party of fifty Americans, and that we would have some room to spread out and make ourselves comfortable. We had not gone many miles, however, before the conductor informed our leaders that our tickets did not call for special accommodations and other travelers must be allowed to enter our compartments. So from six o'clock in the afternoon until ten the next morning we were most uncomfortably hot and crowded. The class of Italians traveling that night were neither clean nor orderly. In fact, some of the "natives" were so bolsterous and troublesome that two of the men in our party got into a regular fist-fight with some Italian men and pushed them out of their compartment. Then there was trouble with the Italian police and conductor who, of course, sided with the natives. Nevertheless, our men held their position.

When morning finally dawned, we found ourselves in a gloriously beautiful and very interesting section of Italy. Our attention was often diverted from the natural scenery to the picturesque villages which stretched in almost continuous line for twenty or thirty miles before we came to Naples. Some of these little cities looked quite business-like and progressive. Their most interesting feature, to us, was their macaroni factories. The macaroni, cut in strips ten or twelve yards in length, was placed on racks on top of factories and houses, to be dried, or baked by the sun. We saw so much macaroni here and on the tables of all Italian hotels that we finally felt as great a disgust for it as the Orient had given us for mutton.

From the car window, we had our first sight of Vesuvius, with its huge canopy of smoke hovering above it. Few things on the entire trip gave us such a thrill. We will tell you, later, more about this great marvel of nature, for we had a much nearer view of it.

We wish that we were able to give you some picture of the beauty of Naples as you approach it, either by land or by sea. The city spreads itself out in horseshoe shape along the Bay of Naples—seems to "bask in the sun" and to "thrust itself out for the ripples to run over." Then tier after tier of shining streets, beautiful boulevards, enchanting shops and handsome hotels and dwellings rear themselves along the heights which overlook the Bay. Truly, it looks like a fairy city—from a distance.

Arrived at the railroad station, we drove in old-fashioned carriages for miles up the slopes until we came to a lovely English hotel—Hotel Britannique. There, after our "wild" night on the train, it was fine to be able to rest until three o'clock, when we went down to afternoon tea. It certainly seemed good to have pretty, cleanly, modern surroundings once more—and above all, English service.

A few minutes later, as we started out for an automobile drive over the city, we heard, in the lobby, that Caruso had died that very morning in one of the larger hotels of the city. Later, we called, in a body, at the hotel where this great artist's remains lay in state. Our drive that afternoon proved very refreshing and instructive. Most of the streets through which we passed were cleanly and many of them beautiful. Quite often we stopped on various heights to enjoy beautiful views of the city and Bay. Though some of the streets were modern, we never got quite away from the foreign and Catholic flavor of the town. For the first time we saw almost countless shrines to the Virgin Mary built into the walls of stores and dwellings along the streets. Within a space of twenty or thirty blocks we counted over fifty of these shrines, most of them decorated with fresh flowers and burning candles.

Our drive ended with short visits to some of the most representative stores. These shops proved very interesting. We made a few purchases of souvenirs, but would have bought more had we known, what we learned later, that Naples is the best of all Italian cities for the purchase of corals, gloves and cameos.

Next morning, we started early for a most wonderful day of sight-seeing. Automobiles carried us swiftly for ten or twelve miles to the village of Pugliano, which lies at the foot of Mt. Vesuvius. Here we waited a few minutes in a wonderfully pretty, clean little station until our electric tramway car arrived. Then we wound up and up, for four and a half miles, to the summit of the mountain. On the way up, we found much to interest us, for our car moved quite slowly and we had time to observe the soil and vegetation. We found that certain types of lava, at certain degrees of disintegration, made very fertile soil and produced luxuriant growth. Quite a number of fruits, flowers and vegetables were growing in the little farm plots at the base of the mountain. Here we saw at close range hundreds and thousands of tomatoes drying in the sun. They are not cut open but dried whole—never canned as we can them here—so our guide told us. This same guide sold us pretty strings of coral and a unique souvenir of Vesuvius—a glass tube containing seven different varieties of ashes thrown up by Vesuvius in its eruption in April, 1906. Arrived at the end of the car line, our guide "walked us" for a quarter of a mile over ashes and lava to a place where we could see the crater. We had pictured this cup-like basin as about the size of an ordinary house, but we found it much larger than a city block. From the center of it arose, constantly, tongues of flame, of various colors and the smell of sulphur was very strong. We felt that we had seen a miniature of the lake which "burns with fire and brimstone." Our guide told us that the mountain was always as active as it was that day, and often much more so. Not far from the crater is an "observatory" where a watchman, or rather a scientist, lives, day and night, to note any changes and to study the phenomena of the volcano's activities. Sometimes he sends out warnings to those who live below that the mountain is "restless." We asked if the people who lived nearby left their homes on these occasions, but the guide said, "Oh, no! They just get a little uneasy." So foolhardy and callous do men become who live constantly in the presence of this most terrific and awe-inspiring spectacle of nature!

At the foot of the mountain, once more we took our waiting automobiles for the drive to Pompeii. For fifteen miles we drove through a line of continuous little villages whose inhabitants seemed ragged, busy and merry. The most astonishing sights of the streets through which we drove were the endless racks of drying macaroni and occasional apparitions of naked children. These little urchins were so evidently accustomed to their lack of garb, that though several of them looked large enough to be ten or twelve years of age they were as unabashed as their friends and neighbors who stood by them in groups on the streets.

By the time we reached the hotel at the entrance of Pompeii, it was long past the hour for luncheon. We took good appetites to the table and found most polite waiters and a good bill of fare. But in spite of this, we were unable to eat much because of swarms of flies. This reminds us to tell you that in all our travels in Europe—and even in England—we did not find a single screened door or window. Most places, however, were so cleanly that we saw few flies.

Immediately after lunch, we started for the "unburied" city. A short walk brought us to the entrance, which is where one of the gates of the old city used to be. Authorities tell us that Pompeii was a walled city with eight gates. When excavations were made, at one of these gates they found the body of a Roman sentry, guarding his post of duty. Passing through the entrance, we walked for five hundred or more yards through a parkway of beautiful shrubs and flowers. We had noticed before the fertility of some of the lava soil, but here it was most marked. Our path led us to the Official Museum. Here we found many objects of uncanny interest; bodies of people and of dogs, showing the terrible contortions of their last moments of earthly agony. Here, too, were many domestic implements and utensils—and even petrified loaves of bread.

Our guide took us from the museum to the most interesting streets of the city which have been opened—for though excavations have been going on for more than a hundred and seventy years, the work is said to be only about half done, and at the rate it is now progressing, it will take fifty years more to bring to light the whole of this city, which has been buried for over eighteen hundred years. These streets—the best of them—seemed very narrow, in many places only fourteen feet wide and the broadest only twenty-four feet. We often looked in astonishment, but then reminded ourselves that Roman chariots were not as wide as automobiles. Chariots, by the way, had worn deep ruts in the rude pavements of these streets. The street-crossings looked to us like rough cobble-stone flags, but we were told they were "stepping-stones of lava blocks." Not infrequently we found, on the sides of the streets, old wells which were evidently for general service. This is rather surprising when we know that they had a system of waterworks which led into their public baths. These baths were very interesting and quite up-to-date in some ways. There were sections for Turkish or steam baths, hot water baths, cold baths and separate dressing rooms.

But the public baths were no more astonishing than some of their other buildings. Here we found an old bank with the remains of a safe very similar to some to be found in our country banks to-day—only smaller. The ruins of the amphitheater and the Temples of Jupiter and of Fortune interested us because of their ample proportions and some evidences of great beauty. But our most vital interest was in the private dwellings of these people, for here we fancied we could best reconstruct their daily lives. Only the shells, or fronts, of many of these homes were to be seen, but often we got some idea of the rank or the importance of the dwellers by the patterns of the wonderful mosaics which covered the court gardens, or patios, of the entrances. One of these houses was pointed out to us as the home of Glaucus, made famous by Bulwer Lytton's great novel. In this house, we were told, the excavators found the bodies of thirty-four persons and twenty more in the wine cellars of the same dwelling.

The most elaborate of all the Pompeian houses and the one in the state of best preservation is known as the House of Vettii—a rich fuller. Here we had a chance to see not only the shape and arrangement of a Pompeian dwelling, but even the size of the rooms and the mural adornment. The house is built around an open court which was adorned with fountains, statues, mosaics and flowers. It is almost unbelievable—but none the less true—that some of the frescoes, which follow the Alexandrian type of painting, still retain their original tints. The gorgeous red backgrounds from which these pictures stand out have come to be classed as typical of all Pompeian pictures. Some of these decorations are very fanciful—cupids and nymphs being the predominating figures. Other mural pictures are of such obscene nature that the bathroom and one or two other rooms of the house are shown to men only.

As we passed along one of the narrow streets of this city, we spied a marble slab deep set in the masonry of a wall. On this slab were several Masonic emblems—familiar enough to every Mason in our party. One of the official photographers of the Art Institute of Chicago was with us and took a picture of the senior member of this firm (Dr. Cooper) standing quite near the sign. We regard this as one of the most interesting pictures that we collected on our journey, for in these signs we have one of the many evidences of the great age of Masonry.

We were within the walls of Pompeii for about four hours only, and felt it quite a grievance to be obliged to leave when we did, for we knew that there were many other objects of interest which we had not seen.

When we reached our cars, we found that our leaders were not planning to take us back to Naples that night, but we were to begin one of the most enchanting experiences of our trip—the Amalfi Drive. The next twenty-four hours were to stretch out before us, we believe, one of the most beautiful panoramas of natural scenery in all this world. The sights which we were now to see were not to stimulate the mind in the same way as many of which we have spoken, but they fed our love of natural beauty as nothing else did—unless it was the scenery of Switzerland.

The first thirty miles of the drive were not, however, at all enjoyable. During that time we passed through numerous little Italian villages and farm lands. We got into quite a disagreeable dust storm and felt, for a little while, rather uneasy lest our chauffeur had lost his way. Talking to him did not reassure us, for we could make nothing of his Italian and he could not "get" our English. At length, however, we reached the Bay of Salerno and drove for ten miles along its wonderful shore, until we reached Amalfi, which marked the half-way of this wonderful drive. It was dusk when we came into the village of Amalv, so we stopped there for the night. We put up at a most interesting place—formerly a Capuchian monastery—since the war confiscated by the government and used as a hotel. Even the situation of this hostelry is remarkable. It stands way up on a cliff overlooking the Bay of Salerno. To reach it, you must climb 210 stone steps, or pay two men to carry you up in a chair. The evening we were there, the moonlight made the whole scene one of enchantment. After we had secured our rooms, we were asked out to supper on a vine-covered porch which overlooked the water. To add to the romance and pleasure of the occasion, two little Italian boys sang most sweetly to the accompaniment of guitars. One of their songs had a most haunting melody. Some of its words when roughly translated are:

O Italia, Italia, beloved,
Land of beauty, of sunlight and song,
How I long for thy hills and thy mountains,
For the dearest and fairest of earth.

After an early breakfast we started for the other half of the drive. It took us over a road scarcely less beautiful than the one we had traveled the evening before. It brought us to the lovely little town of Sorento. Here we spent two delightful hours browsing around the streets and shops. Then we took a steamer for the Blue Grotto. Arrived near the mouth of this wonderful little cave, we had to leave the steamer and get into rowboats. The entrance to the grotto is so low that even in these boats one has to stoop the head and sometimes get down in the bottom of the boat to pass in. The cave is 175 feet by 100 feet and about forty feet high. No light gets into it save from the low entrance way and by a wonderful reflection from the bottom, sixty feet below. The effect of this lighting on the water, is most wonderful—"magical and indescribable." As you paddle around, you think you are on enchanted waters. The best description we have seen of it is, "the water looks like a lambent sheet of blue flame."

As you come out of the cave, you are beset by numerous coral peddlers who come out in their boats to meet you.

We went from the Blue Grotto to Capri, where we dined at a hotel overlooking the Bay of Naples. Soon after dinner, we found ourselves again aboard the steamer—this time bound for Naples.

The trip across the Bay was very pleasant for we met another party of American tourists and heard some good English spoken.

We were glad to approach Naples this time by water, rather than by land. Here we had a restful night and started next morning for Rome, of which city we will write in our next letter.

SEEING AND BELIEVING.

By Rev. James H. Felts.

This world is all the while being saved and going to the dumpheap. Righteousness abounds. The evidences of sin are not wanting. The wheels of pleasure turn fast and furious. When the brakes fail there is a shuddering crash, and the remains tell the story of reckless abandon that wrought its own undoing.

The tendency of provincial teachers and preachers is to unload the whole responsibility on the particular fad or fancy of the hour. Men are judged by the conditions under which they work or play. No one act damns them. Not the dance, strong drink, triangle movies, or any other visible act tells the story, but a great undercurrent, undertow, sweeps men out to death. The visible ills are but symptoms of a disease hidden away. "The menace of Prussian paganism and the conquerlust of the Hohenzollerns, which plunged a whole world into war," was the result of a definite propaganda dating back many years. It is now common property. It really was all along, but the inside was not seriously observed till hell broke loose. Disease does not often so appear on the surface as to voice its own death-knell. Seeing is not always believing. "Man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart."

Take society that spells itself with a capital S. The average woman who dabbles in the squirt-gun affairs so necessary to her happiness has not even the desire to be taken seriously and treated as an intelligent human being. Her very attitude makes her a prey to the gibbering assininity of nameless buffoons who tickle her fancy, feed her vanity, satisfy her craving for notoriety. It is so easy to substitute paint and perfume for beauty and cleanliness. Boldness always claims virtue. Suggested liasons are all but irresistible. Here the flower of youth is despoiled, life's dependencies multiplied, the road to nonentity, not to say the underworld, crowded to suffication. The make-believe life is very expensive. It generally substitutes loudness, lack of thought and excess of ignorance for reality.

Not every man who struts and swaggers, looks owlish and speaks solemnly of modern research, is drafted—MANY OF THEM ARE VOLUNTEERS. They are self-discovered. They are neither better trained nor informed than scores of modest men who are giving their lives unselfishly to the service of their fellows. They often remind one of a peacock in May—a front view is decidedly preferable. Again you think of a vicious bull—just as good looking, and decidedly less dangerous, DEHORNED. Boldness can no more take the place of evidence than earnestness. Over-training, like over-organization, is likely to produce under-nourishment.

Human nature is about the same through all the years. Styles and customs change, men seldom do. The yesterday preacher denounced with fiery zeal plug hats, top buggies, "hug-me-tights" and suspenders. He also "took a drop occasionally for his stomach's sake and oft infirmities." His faith failed not. Good men wore plug hats and suspenders. Some even ventured forth in top buggies. Nor were all young people bad who rode in "hug-me-tights." Clean men and women are constantly doing things that are inveighed against with finality. Some modern David said, "All lawyers are liars." It would have been equally true to have said, "all liars are lawyers." The latter premise accepted, the bar would certainly be overcrowded, for there are some "fair to midlin'" liers who never looked into a lawbook. Glass diamonds are as beautiful and desirable to the man who knows no better as the real article. The real task of the church is to change men's hearts by the grace of God. The outside will take pretty good care of itself IF THE HEART IS RIGHT. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

Fatty degeneration of the head is as often a result of a diseased heart as otherwise. Purity is not generated by costly cover. Religion is not fostered by ritualism and ceremony. Methodism is a protest against robe-covered sin. The growing demand for Christian education is but the cry of the human heart for LIFE. An educated ass is no less an ass. A polite thief is still a thief. A college-trained destructive critic is no less dangerous. The obsequious little satellites who echo the "findings" of self-advertised FINAL COURTS OF APPEAL are not particularly bad—they are a nulsance.

When a recent writer spoke of a dashing, vivacious young woman as being "too gorgeous to be called pretty, too alluring to be called handsome," he did not mean to damn her. He really admired her. She was the child of his genius. Are we not constantly meeting men and women in real life whose tastes and tendencies shock us even while we are forced to say that virtue has not gone out of them? The censorious spirit is not always helpful. I am by no mean sure that preachers, for instance, who play "politics," discount and disregard each other, war and wrangle over non-essentials, preach brotherly love, sacrifice and sanctification, and practice selfishness and doubtful disputation, having itching ears and acid tongues, are any special improvement over their bridge-playing, dancing, profane, tattling, pleasure-loving members. The one may be bad, the other is not worse. All these things are but surface indications. They may be incidental. A good man naked is better than a bad man clothed. Consecrated ignorance is a more potent factor for good than educated arrogance. Good clothes may be so worn as to give emphasis to crass vulgarity, though no part of the body be exposed. Conduct and character should be inseparable. The man who preaches repentance, faith, salvation and consecration is, and ought to be, THE MAN OF THE HOUR. Let us not despise symptoms; that were worse than foolish, but don't unload on fads and fancies till nothing is left for weightier matters. "Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them."

The wise man builds on a rock, ties on to a great faith, MAKES FIRST THINGS FIRST. The silly, sentimental, notoriety seeker makes "stunts" first. A childless woman often gets in the limelight with a poodle dog or the absence of clothes that ordinary folks can notice. A big dog-fight will attract more attention than a big sermon. The Master said, "He that looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart." The state of mind, when deliberate, is always worse than the act itself. The visible often provokes the invisible. If Bathsheba had protected her person better, David might have been spared the sin of his life. The display of wares has a tendency to provoke a desire therefor. Many women are expert psychologists without ever having studied psychology. They are such by instinct, training and practice. If we look only at the surface of things, there is cause for doubt. "But between the peals of thunder I could hear the brave song of the sky-lark climbing his silver stairway of music, undismayed, hopeful, UNCONQUERABLE." Even so above the roar of surf, the din of discordant voices, tho jazz of modernity, faith sings her matin song undismayed. "Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of my enemies."

To-day looks at yesterday's ruins nonchalantly. Yesterday is cynical with reference to to-day. Yesterday's immodesty is often to-day's chief attraction. The dress of a few years since would attract more attention on our streets than rolled stockings and short skirts. Amusement without tragedy is dull. Men and women are ungirdled. Moral blinkers are the common property of parents. Yet is there more of sin per heart or more of righteousness per dollar? Sin is still sin, black, damning. Righteousness is still righteousness, leavening, building, preserving. The things that really count are still inveighed against, yet character is a greater asset than ever before, and Jesus Christ is touching the world with a surer hand than at any time in her history. Even the marts of trade are being shot through with His teachings. We need to remember that He seemed to have more respect for a wanton sinner than a parading ceremonialist. He it was who stripped men of charity's clothes that were hiding "multitudes" of sin.

Faith must discover again and again the hidden things. If we judge entirely by surface indications, destruction is just ahead. If the "evidence of things not seen" is beyond our ken, we are helpless and hopeless. It is a time for faith and works to be girded anew. If the iconoclasts can jar the church to her foundations, disturb her complacency and self-sufficiency, bring her to her knees, and send her from the place of prayer with courage and zeal that finds no insuperable task; if simple faith can shoot to the heart littleness, arrogance and foolish criticism that is even more marked and silly, if possible, than holy-rollerism, though perpetrated in the name of scholarship; if faith and good works can but function properly, we will not only glimpse Canaan but will come into the clear light of God's truth. This will not JUST HAPPEN. It will be when we "look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen: for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal."

"Some trust in chariots, and some in horses: but we will remember the name of the Lord our God."

DIGGING FOR GOLD IN KOREA.

By Rev. R. S. Stewart, D.D.

VII.

During the latter part of April and running into May I was engaged in a series of revival meetings among the students in Seoul. Preaching is a delightful task in Korea because the people are such eager and attentive listeners. During a stay of twenty-four days in Seoul I preached seventy sermons, besides conducting a number of prayer meetings, interviews, visits, etc. If there is a preacher with a message who finds himself but partially employed, let him look over in this direction and see a hungry nation eager for the Word.

I have described the work in some of our institutions in Seoul, but there are others also which deserve mention. Just outside the city is the Chosen Christian College, which is the joint undertaking of the two Methodisms and the Presbyterian Church. They have a plot of two hundred acres of beautifully wooded land, which would be prized by any college or university. The one building now erected is made of granite found on our own property, and is in consequence not only a handsome, but very economical material. The building is of elegant appearance and splendid workmanship.

We have a hundred or more young men in college here and I had the pleasure of preaching to them for a week. The meeting was not everything which it might have been spiritually, but it was by no means a barren undertaking. From time to time there was a response, and on the last day thirteen of these men responded to the strongest Life Service proposition that I knew how to make.

In the middle of the service one day we had a visit from some Japanese officials connected with the Department of Education. They were very polite in their conduct, but warned Mr. Billings, the Vice-President, that unless he used great care he was in danger of mixing religion and education. With this admonition they left us in peace.

The fraternity between the different Missions in Korea is a delightful thing. It was therefore a pleasure to me to do some work among the students of the two M. E. schools. The first of these was the Girls' School in Seoul, which has the most advanced course for women in Korea. For more than a week I preached to these girls and there was a good response and some were deeply blessed. The larger part of this revival occurred, however, after I left, when Miss Walter, the principal, took charge and the interest spread to the Day School as well as the Dormitory.

An interesting incident in this meeting was the happy conversion of a young girl who is a member of the erstwhile royal family of Korea. She is engaged to marry a man of education and her family decided to place her in this Christian school for a while. She had, perhaps, never heard any direct message about Christ until she entered there a month before the revival. I preached one evening on "The New Name" which God gives to his people. Two days later this little princess received a genuine experience of heart religion and in her testimony said, "My name is no longer Li Ik Tu; God has given me a new name," and her joy was manifest to the whole school, for she had indeed received a royal designation beside which all the aristocratic titles of this world are cheap and empty things.

I was invited by the M. E. folks to speak to seven hundred boys in their Middle School, and for a week I told this company about the young men's Savior. There were already about two hundred professing Christians among them, but the greater part were new students who had not heard the message before. But at the last service it seemed as if every boy in that great company had accepted Christ. Only here and there were some who would not accept the Gospel invitation. Probably five hundred new believers started the Christian life in this school during a week's meetings. Great numbers can thus be won in Korea to-day, but this is not a completed work. If these young Christians do not have teachers who will lead them "on to perfection," the great bulk of the Korean revival will perish from malnutrition and cumber the future progress of the church in that land.

THE ILLITERACY OF EDUCATED PEOPLE.

By Henry Noble MacCracken,
President of Vassar College.

There is need of a united effort to reduce the illiteracy of educated people. It is not enough for us to offer better opportunities to our new citizens and others whose chance of schooling has been limited. We must try to develop among ourselves better habits of reading. Let us include four good resolutions about our own illiteracy among our New Year's stock. They may not last longer than other good resolutions, but at least we shall have confessed our illiteracy and next year we can try again.

First: That we will remember what we read. It would be far better for us all if we read less and remembered more. Our present habit is born of the theory that we can always find a mental filling station a little further on down the road. Life proves this untrue. When the times occur of illness, loneliness, depression, crisis, or catastrophe, we have no reservoirs of memory to draw upon for comfort and for guidance. Lord Bacon said, "Reading maketh a full man." It is not too much to add that our wasteful habit of skimming over the surface of books and newspapers makes empty minds instead of full ones.

Second good resolution: We will think over what we read. It is a good practice to close the book and ask ourselves, "Is it true? Does my experience or thought confirm this?" Of course this kind of reading takes longer, but educated people would be less illiterate if we practiced mental Fletcherism and gave fifty intellectual "chews" to every chapter. A friend of mine made a rule never to buy a book until he had read it. As a result, his shelves were filled with books that he was proud of. They were his friends. He knew them, liked them, valued them. How many of us would have a large library if we followed his plan? Have we any real scale of values in reading? We shall never get it until we read less and think more. This is particularly true of newspaper reading. It is our duty to form our own opinions on the day's news. Too often we only echo the editorial or the opinion of some one who is quoted in the news. Every true editor will wish his readers to go with him, not blindly, but upon reflection. He can't write for thinking people unless people will think. Did you ever realize your responsibility as a reader for the kind of reading you get? Granville Barker, the dramatist, said lately, "The audience makes the play." It is still more true that the reader makes the newspaper.

Third good resolution: We will apply what we read. The illiteracy of educated people is most striking in this regard. We read as if in a vacuum. The innumerable contacts which the author makes with our own lives are never energized by the current which we alone can supply. Our mind's batteries are dead. We need to recharge them. Nine books in ten we read not in order to apply them to life, but to distract our minds from life. Books are a dissipation, a scattering of our energies, not a changing and strengthening of them. This is not fair to books. Can we not change the proportion and make nine books help us to live, while the tenth book alone serves as an opiate to drug our senses?

Fourth good resolution: We will grow with our reading. Most of us read one elementary book after another, with no direction or plan. We never think, "Where is our reading taking us?" We never stop to consider that books are steps upward. We keep on exercising with eight-ounce weights when our mental muscles are trained for two-pounders. The way to correct this bad habit is to choose our lines of reading: one connected with our occupation; one connected with a hobby, pastime, recreation or vocation. Then we can plan to go on from the easy book to the more difficult one, from the known to the unknown, from the narrow to the broad horizon. How many parlor tables are filled with a random lot of primary books? Let us go to school to our books, we educated illiterates, and not stay always in the first grade.—Christian Advocate (N. Y.).

THE BETTER METHOD.

We all recall the old alleged incident of the mother who told her child not to put beans up his nose during her absence—how the child received the suggestion as a new play, and how the mother, upon her return, found that "the worst had happened." This illustrates the negative mother.

The positive mother employs a different method. In leading her child over a muddy street, she says, "Let us step on all the high places," and they both reach the other side dry-shod.

The negative mother or teacher is so full of "don'ts" that she herself and the little ones under her become mystified and discouraged. It is like constantly knocking down blocks before anything has been built.

The positive educator constructs. A bit of honest praise for something well done builds up within the heart of a little child love for the one who praises, discernment and love of the right, confidence in the good that he can do, and a great desire to do another good thing. Such moments of recognition even please the grown-ups, and how much more are children helped! The mother says, "My child was generous to-day in sharing his toys with his visiting cousin;" and the child glows with joy at the words, pondering over them. Thus his character is being formed, and on the side of good.

Why should mothers and teachers ever fall into the fruitless, negative way, when the good fruit is all on the positive side of the fence?

If we are tired or worried, we cannot inspire our children. We ourselves must first seek inspiration and the calm and poise which it brings.

Froebel says:

"If you would bind your little one to you,
Bind your own soul to all that is high and true,
And let its light shine clear through all you do!"

Some people always meet us with a tale of woe and continue to talk negative. We come away fagged. Others talk about the beautiful, seeing good all about us. We are then able to give something constructive to those we meet, especially to the children, who will surely grow through our recognition and nurture of every little impulse of good springing up within them.

If we look for good in our little ones, we will surely find it. Yet we must look searchingly with those wiser eyes of love, for—alas!—the negative things are far too easy to see.

So let us try for one day to emphasize the good in those about us, to recognize every good attempt in our children, however small, and we will find ourselves on the true highway of peace.—Henrietta W. Brown.

THOSE ENGLISH METHODISTS.

Dear Brother Carley: I want to reply to the last letter which Dr. Briscoe Carter wrote from England and which was published in your issue of December 1. As editor of the Advocate you are not responsible for opinions expressed by your correspondents, and also are willing, I know, to hear both sides of a question.

Dr. Carter's criticisms of English Methodists are not, I am sure, wilfully inaccurate, but made through far too short a visit and inadequate information. It is helpful at all times to see ourselves as others see us. Some time ago in writing to you, I quoted what Bishop W. A. Candler said to me in his home at Atlanta, Ga. He said he regretted that when Wesleyan delegates came to America from England—say, for instance, when sent to our General Conference—they generally visited New York, Chicago, Washington, Philadelphia—a few big cities—and then went back to write on American Methodism. He had never known but one, Dr. J. S. Simon (by the way a former pastor of mine), who was delegate to our General Conference at Oklahoma and who visited Bishop Candler in Atlanta, come so far South as Atlanta before. The comparison is similar, but unfair; and applies to Dr. Carter's letter. How many Sundays did he spend in London? How many sermons did he hear in Methodist churches in London apart from the Conference? Any service outside London? I venture to say, of the latter, none. Yet he passes judgment on the whole bunch (excuse the Americanism). He went to Oxford and Cambridge, where he attended—to his sorrow—a Church of England service. Many of the delegates went to Paris. He did well to visit Scotland. He writes as if the Ecumenical Conference were a purely English Methodist Conference, when it was a World Conference. Men were sent over to America to consult and arrange the program. I have a full report of speeches made and papers read, which shows that eight out of twelve subjects were alloted to Americans. We know now that in many respects the Conference was a failure. It is amusing to read that Dr. Carter thought of suggesting as a subject for discussion "The whensomeness of the WAS, and the whereforeness of the IS," but preferred to be "incog." How can we, by any stretch of imagination, imagine Briscoe Carter to remain "incog?" Wonder what hindered him? Not surely that he was "a fraid cat," as he dubs the English Methodists. It certainly would have been an interesting discussion, replete with the fund of anecdotes and humor in Briscoe's repertoire. It certainly would have caused "those smug-faced Englishmen" to laugh, and therefore be unable "to keep their faces straight." He says "they are full of smug "complacency, and are world-beaters for thinking they are The People, and the only "ones who did things." This is his opinion. I am sure he did not hear an Englishman say, "We can whip the world."

He says he attended a Wesleyan Methodist Service "where the FULL ritual service of the Church of England was used." I am sure he is mistaken. The Wesleyan Methodist Church has an abridged ritual prepared for the use of Methodist congregations, a copy of which I have. There is not a single Methodist church in England that uses a "full ritual." Ninety-eight per cent of Methodist congregations do not even use an abridged ritual; it is not popular. Ninety-nine per cent do not even repeat the Apostles' Creed. Yet Briçoe says "the Wesleyans ape the Church of England." English Wesleyans do not call their church "Episcopal Methodist." nor have they any bishops, elders, deacons, or presiding elders. (The latter office I find many readers of our Nashville Advocate desire to abolish.) I wish to remind Dr. Carter that the Thirty-nine Articles of the Church of England are incorporated in our M. E. Church, South—that the ritual of our sacramental, burial, baptismal, marriage ceremony is word for word almost as the Church of England. Do we "ape the Church of England?" He further says the ritual which we have incorporated is "fodder which the world starved on." If it is so, why has this "starvation fodder" been included in our Discipline?

He further says of English Methodist theology, it is "stuff," and that "there are question marks at the end of all their theology." Are there no question marks opposite American Methodist theology? Is the theology of the M. E. Church, South, different from that of the parent body? Why, if it is "stuff," do our book rooms at Nashville and Dallas send those theological books broadcast? Space forbids me to give names of eminent divines that have enriched the world on this "stuff" and "fodder."

He was amused at the oak dining table and the bare-backed seats in the Cambridge University, as compared with the elaborate provision made for American university students. English university students are not coddled nor reared in luxury. Taking their meals from an oak table "three inches thick and four feet wide" has helped to give them by nature "hearts of oak." John Wesley, Tindale, Latimer, Ridley, Cranmer, and in later days Gladstone, Asquith, Balfour, Lords Reading, Curzon, Roseberry, Haig and Beatty, have eaten their meals from similar tables in student days. He dares not call such men "fraid-cats." From the college I attended seven hundred boys gave their lives and services to "God and Country" in the late war, all of them coming from Methodist families.

Thank God, theology will not save the world; and I prefer a higher ideal man than the one chosen by Dr. Carter—Opie Read's Judge. "Reunion" he says is "stage talk." I do not think he will find it so. Wishes father thoughts, but they do not breed evidence.

F. B. HILL.

Ponchatoula, La.

GOING ON TO SIX THOUSAND.

By Dr. R. H. Bennett.

Southern Methodism may well be proud of her young people. The heart of our church has been thrilled during the past year by their splendid answer to the life service call. The objective set by the Christian Education Movement in this field, of five thousand volunteers for the ministry, the mission field and other forms of Christian work, has been more than met. It breaks all previous records. Several of the leaders in life service in different other denominations have stated emphatically that no such program for Christian volunteering as our church has enterprised during the past year was ever put through by any church.

How could it be otherwise when every department of our church has responded so well to the summons? We have presented the urgent need of the church for workers through the pulpit, the school and college, the Sunday school, the Epworth League, the Woman's Missionary Society, the Educational Department of the Board of Missions, and through special literature and the church press.

No call was ever made for a wider field of service or for more varied needs. To freshen our memories for the renewal of this call during the next few months, let us repeat the items of service asked for. The summons included the following:

Home Service—The ministry; religious education; rural work; Sunday school work; work in congested city areas; work with Negroes and foreign-speaking peoples; work with boys; Y. M. C. A.; teaching; pastors' assistants; deaconess' work; nursing; industrial communities; Mexicans, Indians, Orient; work with girls; Y. W. C. A.

Foreign Service—The ministry; Sunday school work; education; nursing; medical work; physical education; work with boys; agricultural work; work with girls; industrial work; work with women; architect and builder; printer; engineer; Y. M. C. A.; Y. W. C. A.

Could any call be broader?

Splendid has been the answer. More than five thousand of our young people have seen the vision and replied, "Here am I, send me." It is a new day in Christian volunteering. It calls for devout thanksgiving. And the recruits continue to enlise. Almost daily new names are received. We are going on to six thousand.

The mission of this pen just now is to ask that every pastor who has not made this call shall do so promptly. Literature on the subject will be mailed by this office upon request. Send us a post card. And will the brethren let me have the names of all volunteers not already sent in? Moreover (to use a pulpit word), this life service appeal ought to be regularly repeated in every congregation. Young people are constantly growing up to the age of decision, and some may not have been present when the appeal was first made, etc. Six thousand will not be too many. There will be the usual sifting in all large enrollments. The love of some volunteers may wax cold. New fields of action will ever be opened by the church. We need a continuous supply of new recruits from which to select the army of the church of to-morrow.

Nearly a year has passed since this subject was presented simultaneously throughout the church. Is it not time to preach on it again and to present it in the different organizations of the church?

Have all new volunteers fill up life service cards. Send these cards to the writer at 160 Fourth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn., in order that they may be referred to the proper Board of the church for correspondence and cultivation. Let me have also the names of all volunteering for life service in the college revivals.

May we not have a large addition to the honor list already on hand?

It may be well to state again that the Students' Aid Fund of the Christian Education Movement will not be available during the present college session, as the first money received from the Movement is to go to the colleges to reimburse them for the expenses of the campaign. But, meantime it is surely a small thing in dollars, though large in results to the Kingdom of God, for individual congregations or friends to help with their college expenses those young people needing assistance.

Is there not, in the offer of their lives by these five thousand young people, an overwhelming demand upon us to enlarge and equip our colleges in order to educate them? Five thousand of our own children were turned away from our colleges last year for lack of room. Here are thousands of others saying, "Here am I; equip me for the work to which God calls me." Can any one hesitate for a moment to vow a mighty vow, "It shall be done?" Make your subscription to the Christian Education Movement, Brother Hesitator. Pay up your subscription, Brother Leisurely. God's cause is suffering for lack of your help, brethren.

Let us each put in our program early in the year and every year the sounding of the life service call.

Saul, perchance, is hid among the stuff in your home or church, my brother. Let us find him and call him to his kingdom, so that he that soweth and he that reapeth may rejoice together, as we thus hasten apace God's Kingdom. For what else are we living?

STRENGTH IN DELICACY.

The cat's energy is subdued into an exquisite moderation. Other animals roughly employ what strength they happen to possess, without reference to the smallness of the occasion, but the cat uses only the necessary force. One day I watched a kitten playing with a daffodil. She sat on her hind legs and patted the flower with her paws; first with the right paw, then with the left, making the light yellow bell sway from side to side, yet not injuring a petal or stamen. She took delight evidently in the very delicacy of the exercise; whereas a dog or horse has no enjoyment of delicacy in its own movements, but acts strongly when it is strong, without calculating whether the energy used may not be in part superfluous. This proportioning of force to the need is an evidence of refinement in manners and in art. If animals could speak, the dog would be a blunt, blundering, outspoken, honest fellow; but the cat would have the rare grace of never saying a word too much.—Philip Gilbert Hamerton in "Our Dumb Animals."

The Home Circle

WHEN ROBBIE RAN AWAY.

By Willie C. Page.

Late in the summer afternoon, Robbie was sitting on the porch step, with his head leaning against a large column, listening to his Aunt Julia read aloud "The Legends of Sleep Hollow." Robbie's brothers were so much interested they could hardly wait to hear the end of the story.

Aunt Julia had a soft, pleasant voice, with little trills like rain-drops falling on the window panes, or the wind playing little tunes among the leaves, thought Robbie drowsily.

Aunt Julia read on and on, about a headless horseman, and a curious man named Brom Bones, and a funny man, Ichobod Crane, he did not quite understand. Then he watched the road, for father and mother had gone to town in the car. He thought he would run down the road to meet them. Then he began to notice the sunbeams play in the water of the fountain as it trickled and fell into the basin below.

Robbie thought he ran to meet his mother through the green woods, where many pretty flowers grew, and then on to an old deserted house inclosed on two sides by an orchard.

He stopped under some shade trees to listen. What a commotion! Were the birds having a picnic? There were trills, quivers, excited chirps, high notes of anger, coos of soothing sweetness, sad, mournful sounds. Robbie crept near and peered over the fence.

To his horror he saw two baby birds lying cold and dead on the ground. He put his hands over his eyes. Only yesterday he had thrown a rock, knocked the nest from the apple tree, and killed the two birds. He had not told his mother when she came to hear his prayers, but had covered up his head and pretended he was asleep. He could not sleep for a long time, thinking of the innocent little birds; and now to see the mother-birds' grief almost made him sick.

Bobbie began to tremble and crouched low on the ground as the birds flew about him scolding and pecking at his head.

"Chip-churr, Chip-churr."

Robbie held his hands over his ears, for he knew exactly what they were saying: "That-is-the-very-bad-boy. It's he—Robbie Calwell. He killed my baby birds," mourned the mocking bird.

There were shrill calls of alarm; fliers were sent out for more help; twitterings of fear sounded in Rob's ears as the birds flocked about him. "Watch him! Watch him!" the birds all called at once.

"He is the boy who robbed my nest last year; it was in his grandmother's garden," piped the bobolink.

"He stole my little ones and carried them away to starve," moaned the dove sadly.

"Bob White, Bob White," whistled the quail. "He stole my eggs and set a trap for my little ones."

Bobbie never felt so ashamed in his life. He got up and ran as fast as ever he could, the birds flying after, pecking and scolding. He ran until his breath came in gasps, on and on, falling, stumbling, struggling, wishing his father would come by in the car and carry him home. Suddenly he fell plump in the middle of the verbena bed.

"Why Rob, whom have you been fighting in your sleep?"

Robbie got up rubbing his eyes, but he said not a word. That night he told his mother all about it. She had often warned him not to hurt the little innocent birds, or rob their nests. Now she was so much grieved to know he had disobeyed her.

"Robbie, God made the birds for some good purpose. They brighten our lives by their merry songs and cheerful twittering. Why, our common song birds migrate by night, flying at a height of a mile above the earth. The humming-birds, you know, spend the winters among the flowers of Mexico."

"Go on," said the little boy breathlessly.

"The golden plovers' summer homes are on the barren coasts far north, under the midnight sun, where they make their nests among the mosses and lichens, and raise their little ones. In about two months they start south again, the old ones in the lead, the young following. It is known to be true that every year a plover travels twenty thousand miles, and they keep going back and forth until their hearts cease to beat."

"But, mother, how do they know the way?"

"By acute sight and sound, and by instinct. Many are lost in the storms, and many others dash against lighthouses and are drowned in the sea. There are so many interesting facts about the little people of the woods that if you will promise never wilfully to molest them in any way, I will buy you a book on ornithology, or bird life, with pretty pictures of them, so you will know them by sight and study their ways and habits."

"Mother, so long as I live I will never rob a nest or kill another bird."

The next morning Robbie was up early making box-nests for the wrens and martins. These he nailed on the trees in the garden and orchard. He made shelves for grain and crumbs, and placed vessels of fresh drinking water where they could be seen. Soon he interested other boys in the neighborhood and they made bird sanctuaries. Ever afterward Robbie Calwell was a friend and protector of our merry songsters.

THE KEY TO THE SUNSHINE BOX.

It was plain that Elva's old enemy, Ill Temper, had her in his possession again. We were all sorry, too. She had kept away from him so long a time that we felt she had almost entirely overcome him. But this morning she was very cross. One had to wonder how she could be so cross on such a bright and beautiful morning.

"It is very cloudy this morning," said mamma, as they took their places at the breakfast table.

"Yes," said Uncle Dave, with a sly glance at Elva's scowling face. "If the clouds keep on gathering it will certainly take an April shower to scatter them."

"I wonder where Sunshine is," said mamma. "If he were here, they would soon scatter."

"Sunshine is in the box and can not get out," replied Uncle Dave, with another sly glance. "Good Temper ran off with the key, and we will not be able to see Sunshine until he comes back and lets him out."

"I wish he would return soon," said mamma. "We do miss Sunshine so much; and then, too, we need him all the time. I wonder how we could find Good Temper?"

"That will not be hard to do. Just pull the cork out of the smile bottle and that will soon bring him back. There is nothing that holds him fast like smiles, but frowns soon chase him away."

"Oh, Uncle Dave, how can you tease me so?" And two bright drops on Elva's long lashes showed that the "April shower" was not far off.

"Why-ee," said Uncle Dave, looking at his niece in much surprise, "we were talking about Sunshine. What makes you think we were talking about you?"

"Because you mean me; you know you do." And Elva had a mind to get real angry and let the shower come down in a torrent. But just then she caught herself. She thought of how she had asked Uncle Dave to show her her faults and help her overcome them, and in what a kind, jolly way he had just done so. And then she thought how very true it was—Good Temper running away with the key as fast as he could and poor Sunshine longing to get out. Her rosy face dimpled all over, the cork to the smile bottle flew out, and sure enough, that very minute Good Temper came back and let Sunshine out.—Our Boys and Girls.

"TIME OUT."

Hard Work.

"What are you going to be when you grow up, Jennie?"

"I'm going to be an old maid."

"An old maid, dear. Why?"

"'Cause I don't think I'd like to kiss a man a hundred times and tell him he's handsome every time I do shopping. I'd rather earn money and buy things for myself."—Baptist Boys and Girls.

Not Always.

Three boys were discussing the greatness of their fathers, each one bragging more than the other. The first boy said: "My father just takes a piece of paper with lines on it, and makes a few dots on them. That's music, and he gets $50 for it." "Oh, that's nothing," said the second boy. "My father writes some words on a piece of paper in verse. That's poetry, and he gets $100 for it." The third boy came back strong. He said: "My father writes out some words on paper and then preaches them in church. That's a sermon, and it takes six men to bring in the money."—Boston Globe.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Lab l on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

"BO" McMILLIN'S PHILOSOPHY OF LIFE.

The fact that "Bo" McMillin, the famous football player of Centre College, is now the coach of our own Centenary College at Shreveport, La., gives to us special interest, of course, in anything he has to say about the game in which he has achieved distinction—and about other things that are more important than football. In the current number of the American Magazine there is an article by "Bo" which we wish every young man in the land would read—and a good many of the old ones, too. Under the title, "Fighting For Old Centre," he says a good many things that every one of us might very well make use of in whatever we are fighting for.

In explanation of the marvelous success that the Centre team has met with since 1917, "Bo" quotes from a letter received by each member of the squad last summer from "Chief" Myers, the athletic director: "Don't forget that somebody is working at this thing. It didn't just happen. * * * I want to say to you that brotherly love and team-spirit 'made' us, more than anything else. Now, if each man of us were ten times as good, we wouldn't get anywhere without that spirit. I am anxious, above all things, to keep that spirit sweet and clean and strong, because I know that without it we shall be back among the second- and third-raters." And then "Bo" says for himself: "If any other man on the squad was able to read the Chief's message without tears coming into his eyes, he is made of different stuff than I am." The application is plain enough—brotherly love and team spirit can do wonders in anything!

In explanation of how the Centre team has come to be known as the "Praying Colonels," he relates the following incident: "We were in the gymnasium getting ready for the game" (with Kentucky State) "and Uncle Charlie" (the coach) "had been outlining our battle tactics. Presently he stopped short, and when he spoke again his voice was low and serious. 'Boys,' he said, 'I suppose I've been what some folks would call a rough cuss, but I've always played the game of life straight. You know that. I don't go in for religion, and I reckon most of you don't, either. But I believe in God and I'm sure he looks after folks who are doing their best. Won't one of you say just a word of prayer?'" And then one of the players, asking the privilege of doing so in a very unconventional way, to say the least, prayed.

"Bo" says: "It wasn't a prayer for victory. It was just an honest, whole-hearted appeal that every man that day might give the best he had in him for Old Centre; that he might play a clean game, and not be hurt badly enough so that he would have to be taken out." And Centre won the game, 3-0! That is a prayer for all of us—that we may play a clean game, and that we may not be hurt badly enough to have to be taken out. "Bo" continues: "Since that afternoon no Centre College football team has gone onto the field for a game without that word of prayer. * * * We don't pray to win. We play to win, and pray to play our best." Maybe the trouble with some people is that they don't combine work with their prayers. Rather resenting the idea that the members of the team are to be thought of as "pious," "Bo" adds: "But we believe there's a God who wants people to be square and give the best they've got to everything they go into. I have noticed, however, that there has seldom been any profanity or rough talk around the dressing-room or on the field since we started this particular habit. And I don't think there's a man of us who doesn't feel that he's stronger and finer as a result of it."

Writing of the victory over Harvard last fall, he says: "When the referee handed me the ball and said, 'You've won the game,' I was so excited that I started running around in little circles and yelling to the fellows at the top of my voice: 'We've beaten them! We've beaten them!' * * * But in a moment that whole shouting crowd passed out of the picture—just as if it had been wiped out with a sponge—and I seemed to see the face of my mother, who died last summer. I remembered the interest she had taken in me, how proud she had been of every little triumph, and I found myself saying over and over: 'Mother, if you were only here, how happy this would make you.' Sometimes since then I have wondered if she were not there—much, much more truly than I knew. Anyway, I like to think so."

If we have read "Fighting For Old Centre" aright, "Bo's" philosophy of life may be summed up in these words: hard work, brotherly love, team-spirit, fair play, prayer—and that's a pretty good philosophy. We believe his mother's spirit does linger near him—just as another mother's spirit lingers with those who loved her and have lost her for awhile.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. E. M. Allen writes from Vancleave, Miss., that everything is moving along well on his charge.

Dr. Rex Singletary of Hammond, La., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call while in the city one day last week.

The year's work begins well at Wesson, Miss., where Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson is pastor. All departments of the church have gone forward since Conference.

Rev. C. C. Griffin wishes his friends to know that he has changed his post office from Oloh to Clyde, Miss. Correspondents will please address him accordingly.

The editor of the Advocate is attending the great Centenary meeting at Memphis, Tenn., this week. He will give some account of the meeting in next week's paper.

Rev. J. F. Owen, pastor of the Smithville circuit, North Mississippi Conference, writes that the church at Tranquil was completely destroyed by a cyclone on Dec. 24. The damage, however, was covered by tornado insurance.

A heating plant has recently been installed in our church at Tylertown, Miss., which adds greatly to the comfort of the congregations. The work of the Tylertown charge is moving along splendidly. Rev. F. B. Ormond is the pastor.

Rev. D. E. Vickers, pastor of our Seventh Avenue Church, Meridian, Miss., reports that things are going well on his charge. Every organization of the church is in fine shape, and this, the third year of his pastorate, promises to be the best thus far.

Rev. D. C. Bennett, pastor of the Wesley circuit, Louisiana Conference, writes from Coushatta, La., that he has been royally received by the good people of his charge, is domiciled in a new parsonage, and is beginning the year with bright prospects.

"Methodist Matters" is a weekly bulletin issued by Rev. Del Longgrear, pastor of the Coahoma and Lyon charge, North Mississippi Conference. It is full of interesting news concerning the local work. Brother Longgrear is in great favor with his people.

Rev. Jno. F. Foster, our pastor at Covington, La., recently gave his lecture on the Holy Land at that place. In spite of very inclement weather, the auditorium of the church was crowded and one of the Sunday school rooms had to be opened to accomodate the people.

Rev. H. M. Young is beginning his second year at Artesia, Miss., under most favorable auspices. Artesia is the old home of Rev. A. T. Mellwain, presiding elder of the Columbus District, and the pastor writes that he is in great favor with those among whom he was reared.

Rev. E. C. Driskell, our pastor at Buena Vista, Miss., faces an encouraging outlook this year. The pastor has been "pounded;" the parsonage has undergone needed repairs and some new furniture has been bought, and good congregations are attending the services of the church.

Rev. Geo. H. Thompson, of McComb, Miss., Rev. N. E. Joyner, of Ruston, La., Rev. and Mrs. F. B. Hill, of Ponchatoula, La., Dr. Brisco Carter, of Minden, La., and Rev. L. C. Wilson, of Clinton, La., honored the Advocate office with calls last week. They were in the city to attend the Gipsy Smith meetings.

A press dispatch from Blue Mountain, Miss., states that a fine meeting had just been brought to a close in that place, conducted by Rev. W. A. Wilson, North Mississippi Conference evangelist. There were many conversions during the services and all the local churches received accessions to their membership.

By unanimous vote, the board of stewards of our church at Lafayette, La., recently increased the salary of the pastor, Rev. Leon I. McCain, by the splendid sum of $700. Brother McCain is preaching to large congregations at every service, additional seating capacity having to be provided to accommodate the crowds.

The death of Mrs. Fulton M. Godat, of this city, on Thursday, January 19, brought great sorrow to a large circle of friends. She was a member of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, a woman of beautiful Christian character. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the grief-stricken husband and family of the deceased.

This highly appreciated word comes from Rev. Lee R. Sparks, our pastor at Franklin, La.: "I for one did not make any promises at Conference, but I am going to read your excellent editorial, 'The Advocate In 1922,' to my congregation next Sunday morning, and start the ball rolling for new subscribers. * * * May the good Lord not only 'bless us every one,' but help us preachers to give the Advocate the support it is so justly entitled to."

The Advocate acknowledges the honor of an invitation to attend the golden wedding anniversary of Rev. and Mrs. S. W. Miller, at the home of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Rogers, near Frisco, Texas, on February 8. We extend hearty good wishes to Brother and Sister Miller on the completion of half a century of wedded happiness, and we pray the richest blessings of Heaven upon them as they travel together the downward slope.

Brother W. C. Cason, of Jackson, Tenn., has issued a pamphlet in which he advocates small boards of stewards who have been thoroughly instructed in the duties of their office and who will Undertake to instruct the congregation in the obligations of church membership, believing that in this way both material and spiritual prosperity will be assured the church. He is circulating tho pamphlet with the hope that sufficient interest may be aroused to cause the General Conference to take appropriate action.

We learn from press dispatches that Hon. James Asbury Lewis, father of Rev. T. W. Lewis and Rev. E. S. Lewis, died at his home in Houston, Miss., on January 25, after a brief illness. He was one of the oldest and most prominent citizens of Chickasaw County, having been active in the affairs of the county for a long time. He had been superintendent of the Friendship Sunday school for forty years. We extend sincere sympathy to the sorrowing family. We trust a memoir will be furnished the Advocate for publication.

Dr. T. N. Ivey, in the Nashville Christian Advocate, gives some advance statistics of the church from the Southern Methodist Handbook, which will soon come from the press. These figures show that the present membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is 2,345,077, the net gain for the year being 91,315, the largest in the history of the church. More than 200,000 were added to the church during the year, the net gain showing either that the loss of members by death, removal, or otherwise is abnormal, or that our preachers are poor bookkeepers. The total number of traveling preachers is 7,842, and of local preachers 4,994, a net gain in both cases.

At the first quarterly conference of the Booneville charge, North Mississippi Conference, Rev. H. P. Lewis, pastor, the following reports were made: 21 added to the church—8 on profession; an Intermediate League, with 35 members, organized and flourishing; Sunday school and Prayer meeting growing in attendance and interest; monies collected as follows: Centenary, $754.50; Education, $944; furnishing church (song books), $85; insurance, $81; incidentals, $60; Sunday school supplies, $67; presiding elder, $78.75; pastor, $496. Total, $2561.25. That is a fine report. Rev. J. O. Hanes, of Birmingham, Ala., will assist the pastor in a meeting at Booneville, to begin on May 28.

On Sunday afternoon, January 8, at a public meeting in Birmingham, Ala., there was a joint discussion between Dr. W. G. Henry, pastor of the Eleventh Avenue Methodist Church, and Dr. M. S. Barnwell, rector of the Church of the Advent, concerning the question of Sunday amusements, Dr. Barnwell advocating and Dr. Henry opposing. The Birmingham News gives their speeches in full, and we have read them both carefully. If we are any judge of the strength of arguments, Dr. Henry left no ground upon which Dr. Barnwell could stand. There is no sound argument for a commercialized Sabbath—a thing the Christian church is called upon to fight with all its might to-day.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Some of our collectors report great joy in this kind of service for the Master. They are Kingdom builders. When work of this nature is irksome and a nuisance, it argues for a low spiritual vision. Love for the Kingdom moves one to give freely for such constructive work as is being done by our institutions of learning.

On the day of Pentecost, the early church received a great blessing. A large number were added to the church. They took up a big collection, as it is said in Acts 2:45, "And they sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all, according as any man had need."

The Christian Education Movement has brought to the church a great blessing in the stirring of the conscience of our people on the need for religious education. As a matter of fact, we have had our largest ingathering of souls. Then the financial appeal has resulted in lifting us up to the highest mark that we have made as a Conference.

We make a further appeal for the payment of the first year's pledges. Let the 35,000 Methodists in Louisiana who did not pledge for Christian Education wake up and take advantage of this opportunity to equip our colleges for the great day that is before them. In James 4::17 we read, "To him therefore that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin."

ALBERT S. LUTZ,
Conference Secretary of Education.
Shreveport, La.

THE FACTS IN THE CASE.

At the beginning of the present year our church had paid on Centenary pledges $12,648,046, this including $863,206 by the Sunday schools and $170,706 by the Epworth Leagues. There was due on pledges—counting 60 per cent of the total due at the close of 1921—$9,498,652.

While there was allowance in appropriations for the deficit in payments, yet not such allowance as the figures here given. The shrinkage in amount paid on regular assessments for missions and Church Extension made heavy drafts on Centenary funds, for in the program of the Centenary these amounts were guaranteed. This and the shrinkage in Centenary payments together make the situation a serious one. The seriousness of the situation is in the following:

1. In every home Conference the needs of the Conference field demand larger appropriations for mission charges. But for the ten per cent out of Centenary payments by each Conference for 1921 appropriations, we could not have taken care of our Conference missions in any adequate way in any section of the church. The amount now available for 1922 is far short of needs and demands. Large payments must be made within the next few months, or the appropriations to these mission pastors must be reduced. We must not do this.

2. In the foreign fields we have undertaken such work as has heartened our missionaries and has given new life to the native church. Our members in foreign lands have gone more than half way in meeting the giving of the church at home. In liberality and in evangelistic spirit they have gone beyond us in America. To abandon any enterprise, to recall any missionaries, or to fail to send reinforcements will be disastrous. We must keep faith with the church in foreign lands; we must hold the church overseas to faith in the church in America.

3. For the church at home to fail to meet its obligations would mean serious hurt to the church itself—far more than to the Centenary. To lose this world vision which has been ours, to fail to go to the limit of our ability in meeting our obligations, would work irreparable injury to the church's morale—the church's faith.

These considerations make imperative the supreme effort to bring our Centenary payments to the highest possible mark. All connected with the movement understand what unfavorable conditions now exist in the business world. But we can do more than has been done, and the situation is such that we must rally our forces for this supreme effort. The church must place at least $4,000,000 of additional Centenary money on the altar by May 1, or fail to carry through its program.

A SAD MESSAGE FROM BROTHER RIGGS.

Dear Brother Carley: I have been under the weather for the past few days and now my physician tells me it will be necessary for me to undergo an operation for appendicitis. I expect to go into the Sanitarium here in Opelousas tomorrow, Monday, January 30. Notify the brethren through the columns of the Advocate, so those to whom I have consented to do certain things may know the reason for the delay in fulfilling their requests. May the brethren also remember me at the Throne that God's will may be done.

Your brother,
S. L. RIGGS.

Opelousas, Jan 29, 1922.

DEFERENCE TO LAW.

Marshal Foch's physician announces that the Marshal has not brought with him any wine or other liquors, and that he will scrupulously refrain from the use of alcoholic liquor in any form while in this country.

This is a significant thing for any foreigner to do, especially a man 71 years old, who, though frugal and temperate in his habits, has been accustomed all his life to drink a little wine with his meals, like other Frenchmen. In such cases the lack of wine is said to result often in digestive difficulties.

The great French soldier could bring wine with him, of course, if he wanted to, and could obtain wine here if he wanted it. His abstention is a mark of deliberate deference to the American prohibition law.—Exchange.

ETHICS OF MEDICINE.

The decision of the supreme court of Massachusetts declaring moral fitness to be a prerequisite to the proper practice of the medical profession is one that will generally commend itself. The written opinion of the court, given adversely in the case of a doctor who sought legal relief from a summons to appear before the State board of registration in medicine and show cause why his certificate should not be revoked for alleged "gross misconduct in the practice of his profession," contains the following striking paragraph:

"Highly trained intelligence combined with disregard of the fundamental virtues is a menace. A physician, however skilful, who is guilty of deceit, malpractice or gross misconduct in the practice of his profession even though not amounting to an offense against the criminal laws, well may be thought to be pernicious in relation to the health of the community."

In laying down the further principle that mere intellectual power and scientific achievement without uprightness of character may be more harmful than ignorance, the court established a form of conduct which is a safeguard to the public and which at the same time no one will accept more readily than the great majority of physicians and surgeons themselves.—Washington, (D. C.) Post.

Death visited an humble little home near Cedar Grove a few days past and claimed one of our promising Methodist boys, J. L. BAKER, aged 22 years. A few months ago while an employee of Harmon oil field he visited our town of Natchitoches, a splendid revival being then in session at the Methodist church. This boy, being a guest in the writer's home, was urged to attend the service one night; doing so, memories of the early training of a Christian mother, long since gone to her reward, were awakened and conviction was so deep and pungent that a few days later he gave his heart and life to God.

He remained in the oil fields a few weeks, proving to his companions what a marvelous transformation Christ can make of a human life. Later he felt the call to the ministry, entered school at Wilmore, Ky., in the early fall, was called home during the holidays by the illness of an aged father, and was stricken with pneumonia Friday, January 6, dying two days later. His last words were a prayer that God would call another boy to take up the work he had to lay down. He was laid to rest in the Shreveport cemetery, Monday, Jan. 8. He is safe in the arms of Jesus, and when the stormy turmoil of life shall have ended and the curtains fall on the last sad scene of our life, then we shall meet our friend and loved one in a world where parting tears will be no more. A loving friend,

MRS. J. G. IDOM.

Natchitoches, La.

Mrs. JULIA A. ABNEY, daughter of M. E. and William Risher, was born November 25, 1846, near Garlandsville, Miss. She was reared and spent most of her life in Jasper County. She was married on November 30, 1865, to W. W. Abney. To this union were born ten children. Of those surviving to mourn their loss are her husband, W. W. Abney, and eight children: S. W. and R. R. Abney, of Heidelberg; J. H. Abney, of Pachuta; Dr. W. R. Abney, of Lake Arthur, La.; Mrs. E. D. Travis, of Laurel; M. G. Abney, of Laurel; Mrs. G. C. Partin, of Montcagle, Tenn., and Mrs. M. V. Hickman, of Heidelberg. Mrs. Abney died January 8, 1922. She joined the Methodist Church early in life, and lived a consistent member until death. During the three years that I have been her pastor, when not too feeble, I could always count on Brother and Sister Abney's being in their place on Sunday morning at the hour of worship. She spent her last days in the old home with her daughter, Mrs. M. V. Hickman, who did all in her power to make her mother's last days comfortable. Her trust in Christ seemed complete, she having expressed herself as being ready to go when God should call. She was laid to rest in the Heidelberg cemetery. Services were conducted by the writer. Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints. J. H. JOLLY, Pastor.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas it has pleased the Almighty, in his divine wisdom, to remove from our midst our beloved sister, MRS. L. CARLEY; and whereas we feel that we have lost a lovable, true, faithful friend and co-worker, and feeling that our lives have been made better by coming in touch with hers,

Be it resolved by the members of the Methodist Woman's Missionary Society, That we extend to each of her loved ones our sincerest love and sympathy in this hour of their deep sorrow.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to the family and a copy supplied the Ellisville Progress, the Jones County News, and the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed by: Mrs. D. B. Jordan, Mrs. S. Craig, Mrs. Grover Jordan, Committee.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolutions adopted by the Methodist Sunday school at Ellisville, Miss., on January 15, in memory of MRS. L. CARLEY, who died January 8, 1922.

Whereas, on last Sunday morning Mrs. L. Carley, wife of our much beloved Rev. L. Carley, was taken from earth to the restful habitation of the righteous, be it known that we are filled with a sense of sorrow and grief; nevertheless, be it resolved, That we humbly bow to the dispensation of God's providence in the exercise of his sovereign will, which is always righteous and just.

Be it further resolved, That we feel that, though she is gone, it is well that she lived; that the world is better on account of her life on earth.

Be it further resolved, That we extend to Brother Carley, Miss Grace Carley, and each member of the immediate family of the deceased, our true and heartfelt sympathies, with the assurance that their loss is our loss, their grief our grief, their sorrow our sorrow, with the prayer that the righteous spirit and Christian fortitude which so manifestly characterized her life may be largely shared by each of us, that, as the deceased did, we may live in harmony with God.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolutions of respect passed by the Woman's Missionary Society, Methodist Church, Vaiden, Miss.

Whereas it has pleased God in his unfailing wisdom to call unto himself MINNIE LEE SHEARER, wife of the Rev. William V. Shearer; and whereas we are sorely bereaved in the loss of our friend and associate; therefore be it resolved:

That her life, though cut off before due season, was a joy and pleasure to her family, friends, and society.

Resolved, That the church, the Missionary Society, and her family have lost in her one whose name stood for "service for the Master."

Resolved, That we cherish the memory of her trustful, beautiful life, and strive to emulate her example as a beacon light.

Resolved, That we extend to the family sympathy, rejoicing with them in the example and training of a godly mother.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Missionary Society, a copy be sent to the family, and a copy be furnished to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas it has been the will of our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst our beloved friend and co-worker, Mrs. CHARLOTTE D. VAUGHT, and whereas her death has brought sorrow to our town, our church and especially our Missionary Society, of which she was a charter member; therefore be it resolved:

1. That the members of the Methodist Missionary Society of Magnolia, Mississippi, express our gratitude for a member who was so faithful and zealous at all times.

2. That while we deplore her loss, we are comforted in the thought that it is our privilege to join her in realms where there is no sorrow.

3. That we spread a copy of these resolutions upon the minutes of this society, and that a copy be sent to the members of the family, also a copy to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the Magnolia Gazette.

Signed by: Mrs. J. W. Sandell, Mrs. W. L. Broek, and Mrs. Lucie Vaughn Lampton.

FROM BOLTON, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Just a word to tell you that everything here is moving along all right. Brother J. L. Gaddis has given the Methodist congregation a new brick church building in honor of his late son, Jack. The new building will be known as the Jack T. Gaddis Memorial Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Come to see us, and when the new building is completed we will let you preach in it. We hope to start work on it about the first of March.

Yours sincerely,

H. M. JOHNSON.

Mrs. S. A. MONTGOMERY,
Corresponding Secretary.

Report From Franklinton Auxiliary, Baton Rouge District.

The outlook for our year's work seems promising indeed according to plans presented at our first business meeting by the various superintendents and committees for 1922.

Our work last year reached the high-water mark, having every department working except the Young People's, which work is so well carried out by the Senior League.

Our treasurer collected $3 over the budget of $175.65.

The amount spent on local work was $203.75; value of boxes of supplies, $131.05; district parsonage, $30; amount raised for our church building fund, $204.

We meet every week; thus during the month we have the Voice program, a business meeting, a mission and a Bible study class. Once a quarter we have a purely social meeting and once a year we have an all-day meeting at the parsonage.

MRS. J. L. BROCK, President.

STEADILY APPROACHING SOLID GROUND.

The new charge, Pearl River Avenue Church, McComb, is rapidly and surely approaching solid spiritual ground. We landed here December 14, 1921. The best that could be done for a pastor's home in this fast-growing town was two small rented rooms. These rooms were entirely inadequate, so Brother C. B Ferguson and wife opened their large home to us until a parsonage could be built or bought. We will always remember Ferguson and his wife for their genuine Christian hospitality. I have never seen a crowd of men and women work more enthusiastically and harmoniously than this church has toward getting their pastor settled. And all along the Sunday school and church services are being well attended and the interest is fine. On January 17, we moved into the newly-bought parsonage—one of the best homes in East McComb, and adjoining the church lot. We were indeed fortunate in being able to secure this logical and up-to-date piece of property. The good ladies of the wide-awake Missionary Society soon got busy and furnished it right up-to-now! Faithful and loyal ladies are these! From the deep of our hearts are we thankful for our new home and furnishings and to be associated with such a loyal, progressive, and forward-looking crowd of people as constitute the membership of Pearl River Avenue Methodist Church!

After the parsonage question was settled for the time, at least, we had a church conference and selected committees to get the church register revised up-to-date and to promulgate a financial system for the church. Both committees got right down to business. The financial committee agreed on the budget system, and, with the register revising committee, are working it out according to God's financial plan—Mal. 3:10. While these committees are at work, I am taking Jesus at His word where He said: "If ye ask anything in my name, I will do it." I am asking Him to work through every committee to the perfection of His plans and purposes, and I honestly believe He will "keep us straight," and through His divine wisdom and power work out His will among all who are really concerned. Why not? Everybody pray for us!

Let me say in conclusion, that Rev. W. A. Terry certainly deserves much of the credit for the way this charge is moving off this year. He has prayed and worked faithfully to the end that this church might be able to do just what it is doing. God bless him and repay him a thousand-fold for what he did to make this charge possible! He will always be a welcome visitor back among his former parishioners.

The other Methodists and pastors of McComb have stood by us as we have ascended the hill, all of which we heartily appreciate, and pray God's choicest blessings upon all of them!

Hoping and believing,
J. A. WELLS.

SIBERIA-MANCHURIA NUMBER OF THE VOICE.

Sample Copy on Request.

A short time before his death, Bishop Lambuth requested that a special number of the Missionary Voice be devoted to the new Siberia-Manchuria Mission which he had just set up. He himself prepared an article, "Russia Open to the Gospel," and requested a number of the missionaries to write on other phases of the work in Siberia and Manchuria. These articles all appear in the January Voice and make it a number of unusual interest and value. W. G. Cram tells of "Siberia, The World's Largest Untouched Mission Field," J. O. J. Taylor writes on "The Greatest Missionary Opportunity in This Generation," L. C. Brannan describes Manchuria's "Limitless Natural Resources" and its vast possibilities as a mission field, and J. S. Ryang tells the story of Korean migration to Manchuria. The series concludes with a review of the present status of our work in that field and the large plans enterprised for the future. A large number of splendid pictures add greatly to the interest. A sample copy will be sent free to any one requesting it. Write Missionary Voice, Box 509, Nashville, Tennessee.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Brother Superintendent, if, for any reason, you should fail to hold a session of your Sunday school the fifth Sunday, is it asking too much of you to send your Sunday School Board an offering the first time you do meet? You have it in your heart to help us reach every child in our Conference. If you give nothing, how much do you expect in return?

Rev. J. H. Felts has sent out a strong appeal to every school in his district asking for the fifth Sunday offering that it may be used in his field; in addition, he has suggested that the offering at the eleven o'clock service be given to this fund. Rev. A. T. McIlwain, Rev. J. B. Randolph, Rev. R. A. Tucker, and Rev. R. P. Neblett have done equally effective service for our Sunday school work. We thank God and will go forward.

Dates for four District Standard Training Schools will be announced in a short time. Remember, there is standard training school. An institute is good in its place, but a standard training school does a much higher type of work. The date of the Wesley Bible Class Federation is immediately after Conference Training School. The federation meets June 7-8, at Grenada. Write to Prof. J. R. Brinson, Senatobia, Miss., and tell him you want to organize a class and that you want to help in this great work.

The church is sleeping alongside an infinitely greater power than is locked up in the Muscle Shoals project. A dreamer can see the unused power going to waste in the Tennessee River; but only a consecrated, Spirit-filled man can see something of "the all power that is in Jesus Christ." He has promised to release this power upon those who teach under his guidance. I am thinking of how the stronger, better trained churches might help those churches not so fortunate. The strong school could back up an organized class or some other part of the school and send representative men and women to the circuit school and lend a hand in organizing the Four-Times-a-Year circuit institute. Simply be a Big Brother to the school and tell how you have organized departments and classes, how you observe Sunday School Day, the Monthly Missionary Program, and anything else you have learned how to do. Rev. R. P. Neblett has agreed to help the Sallis and the Ebenezer circuits. He has not only agreed to do the work, but he is doing it now. The Durant school will be a blessing and be blessed. If your school is able to lend a helping hand to your neighboring circuit schools, drop me a card and I'll tell you the rest of the story.

JESUS AS LORD.

As the all-wise, all-powerful, all-loving, all-merciful Savior of men, Jesus Christ has surely the unquestioned right to tell us what we ought to do. And in our prayers, our songs, and our sermons we continually admit it. And yet in our life's activities we continually forget or neglect it; although as thoughtful Christian men and women we recognize that only as we let Him have right of way can we look for either happiness or success.

It means something to install the Lord as Master of the home. It means something to admit His right to a voice in the type of house we shall build, the kind of furniture we shall buy, the way we shall entertain our guests, the amusements we shall take, and the clothes we shall wear. It means something to allow the Lord to control our purse-strings, to decide as to our friends, and to plan the whole home life as pleases Him. And yet this is surely the wisest, safest, and happiest way.

And it means something to have the Lord lay His hand upon the helm of our business and issue directions as to what we shall do. Some will insist at once that this is impracticable, but possibly they mean really it is undesirable; for while the Lord will certainly not promise infallibly to direct our business, yet just as certainly will He give us so much of His spirit, that even our most business-like business associates and competitors will recognize that our business is being run upon absolutely Christian principles, with human good rather than gold as the chief goal.

And when Christ becomes Lord it means that I cease to be master. I may be a preacher, or a politician, a judge, or a legislator, but everywhere I am but a servant amongst other servants with Christ as the common Lord. Christ's exaltation in my life means my dethroning, and henceforth I am no longer lord and master, but the servant of Christ and the servant of man.—Christian Guardian.

CHILDREN AND BOOKS.

One of the very best things that any parent can do for his child is to give him an appetite for the reading of good books. Having done that, he has put him in the way of much happiness and satisfaction and has as well made many things possible in his life that otherwise would have been impossible. Good books are a gateway of opportunity into some of the best things that life has to offer, and happy indeed is that person who has been wisely and early trained to see that gateway and to open it for himself. We owe our children good health, a training for life and its duties, a scope and place in which to make good in the midst of its great activities, but if we have not added to all that by cultivating in them a taste and appreciation for books, we have left a very large and a very important part of our obligation to them unfulfilled. Our failure to do this will shut them out of a world that was intended for them, a world that is gloriously rich in the best things that the human imagination and brain have produced. And this is one of the most serious crimes against them that we can be guilty of.—Christian Guardian.

Stamp Tax Off

And Reduction of 16 2-3 per cent in Price of Hood's Sarsaparilla

Make this standard blood medicine and strength-giver more economical than ever.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is beyond comparison for the good it does, dose for dose. Nothing else will so promptly and thoroughly purify and vitalize your blood. Nothing else equals it in the way it sends strength through your blood tingling with vitality for every organ and tissue. It helps the stomach, kidneys and liver. It enables you to get the full benefit of all the vitamines in your food. It makes you feel well.

It is the medicine your mothers and grandmothers relied upon for help over hard places. Try it.

HEADACHE? BACKACHE?

A Beautiful Woman is Always a Well Woman

Bird Song, Ark.:—"For nearly two years I suffered awfully with feminine trouble, which was caused by lifting heavy things, and seemingly I had five or six other complaints added to it. I suffered with the lower part of my back and had headache nearly all the time. I began to think there was nothing that would do me any good without an operation, but I thought I would try Dr. Pierce's remedies first. I took one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and one of 'Golden Medical Discovery', also used a box of Dr. Pierce's Purifying Lotion Tablets and one of the 'Healing Suppositories' and took the little 'Pleasant Pellets' to regulate my bowels and I felt like a new woman."—Mrs. Maggie D. White, Box 7.

Dr. Pierce's famous remedies can be procured from your druggist, tablets or liquid. Write Dr. Pierce, president Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., for free medical advice.

ASPIRIN

Name "Bayer" on Genuine

Beware! Unless you see the name "Bayer" on package or on tablets you are not getting genuine Aspirin prescribed by physicians for twenty-one years and proved safe by millions. Take Aspirin only as told in the Bayer package for Colds, Headache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Earache, Toothache, Lumbago, and for Pain. Handy tin boxes of twelve Bayer Tablets of Aspirin cost few cents. Druggists also sell larger packages. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.

MOTHER! MOVE CHILD'S BOWELS WITH CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP

Hurry mother! Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup" and it never fails to open the bowels. A teaspoonful today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. If constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has cold, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good cleansing of the little bowels is often all that is necessary.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

How many objects beginning with "P" can you find in this picture?

Open to Everybody

Come on. Join in the big puzzle game. Your chance to win $5,000 or one of the 14 other big cash prizes. Easy and lots of fun. All you have to do is write down the names of the objects beginning with "P" on this picture and send your list in to us. If your list is largest and nearest correct, the judges will award you first prize; if your list is second largest and nearest correct, you will win second prize, etc.

Get a pencil and paper. Start right now. Find all the objects in the picture beginning with the letter "P", such as "pistol", "picture", etc. See how easy it is. Nothing is hidden. You don't have to turn the picture upside down. Every object is in plain sight. You can find them all. Start right away.

THE PRIZES

Winning Answers Will Receive Prizes as Follows:

	If No "More Eggs" is ordered	If $1 worth of "More Eggs" is ordered	If $2 worth of "More Eggs" is ordered	If $5 worth of "More Eggs" is ordered	If $10 worth "More Eggs" is ordered
1st Prize	$40	$300	$600	$2,000	$5,000
2nd Prize	20	150	300	1,000	2,500
3rd Prize	10	75	150	500	1,250
4th Prize	10	50	100	250	625
5th Prize	10	30	60	150	375
6th Prize	6	20	40	100	250
7th Prize	6	15	30	80	200
8th Prize	6	10	20	60	150
9th Prize	4	10	20	40	100
10th to 15th	4	10	20	40	100

Costs Nothing to Try

All you have to do is send in your list of "P" words. If the judges decide that your list is largest and nearest correct, you will win First Prize of $40 even if you don't send in an order for "More Eggs". But if you order $1 worth of "More Eggs" and you also win First Prize, you will get $300. If you order $2 worth of "More Eggs" and if your list of words wins First Prize, you will get $600. And if you order $5 worth of "More Eggs" and your list is awarded First Prize, you will win $2,000—but if you order $10 worth of "More Eggs" and your list is awarded First Prize, you win $5,000.

Win All You Can You don't have to send in an order for "More Eggs" in order to enter this contest. You can win $40 as First Prize even if you have sent in no order. But if you ordered $10.00 worth of "More Eggs", the same list would win $5,000.00 for you. A difference of $4960.00. Which prize do you want?

Observe These Rules:

1. The contest is open to every man, woman, girl or boy living in America, except employees or relatives of employees of E. J. Reefer. There is no entrance fee of any kind.
2. You must use only one side of paper. You must number your list of names in regular order—1, 2, 3, etc. Your full name and address must be written on each page in the upper right hand corner. Use a separate sheet for anything you may wish to write outside of your list of names and your name and address.
3. English words only will be accepted as they appear in the English dictionary. Obsolete words will not be counted. Both the singular and plural of a word will not count; either one of them may be used.
4. Compounds or words which are made up of two or more complete English words cannot be used.
5. The same spelling of a word will be counted only once even though it is used for different articles or objects, or parts of them. Each article or object can be given only under one name.
6. Two or more people may co-operate in answering the puzzle. However, only one prize will be given to any one household. No prize will be awarded to more than one of any combination outside of the family where a number—two or more—have worked together.
7. If a contestant sends more than one list under the same name, an assumed name, or a pre-married name then all lists of such contestant will be disqualified. If more than one list is sent by any group or by any members of the same group who have co-operated in the preparation of such lists, then all lists of such contestants will be disqualified.
8. All answers must be received through the mail by E. J. Reefer, 9th and Spruce Streets, Philadelphia, Pa., and must be post-marked by Post Office closing time, March 11, 1922.
9. The first prize will be awarded for the answer containing the largest and most nearly correct list of the names of visible objects and articles beginning with the letter "P" shown in the picture. No other consideration, such as neatness, style or handwriting, will have any bearing in making the decision.
10. The full amount of any of the prizes will be awarded to each contestant in the event of a tie.
11. The decision will be made by three judges entirely independent of and having no connection with E. J. Reefer. They will judge the answers submitted and award the prizes at the end of the contest. Participation in the contest carries with it the acceptance of the decision of the judges as final and conclusive.
12. All answers will receive due consideration whether or not "More Eggs" is purchased. At the close of the contest, when all lists have been graded, the names of the prize winners will be announced and the list of words will be sent upon request to any participant who sends us a stamped, addressed envelope.

Special Offer on "More Eggs" During This Puzzle Contest

ADDRESS:

New Orleans Christian Advocate, 512 Camp St., New Orleans, La.

FROM DENHAM SPRINGS, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: It is a pleasure to see how nicely everything is moving off on the Denham Spprings charge. Although the weather is cold, we have had splendid congregations, especially in the evening.

Brother R. H. Benton, who is well-known throughout this section, is taking a fine lead in progressive matters. He has been a layman for many years and understands how to take hold for the best interests of all.

Brother W. H. Underwood, of Live Oak church, is going to let the preacher have a horse for a large part of the year. Brother James Graves will soon take the pastor with him on the every-member canvass and start the duplex envelope system in the Live Oak church.

There are other good men on the charge, who are interested in furthering the Kingdom of Heaven here on earth.

Next month, I feel sure, I can give you some very definite statements as to the progress of the charge.

Your brother,
CLAUDE H. MAYO, Pastor.

ASTHMA CURED BY SIMPLE REMEDY

Famous Druggist Discovers Simple Remedy for Asthma and Makes Generous FREE TRIAL Offer to Readers.

Thirty years ago Mr. C. Leavengood, a widely known Kansas druggist, discovered a simple, easy to take prescription for Asthma— he gave it to people who had suffered for years and, to their amazement, they say they were easily cured—these people told their friends, and in this way thousands have found the sure way to cure Asthma. Mr. Leavengood feels so confident that his prescription will cure in all cases that he generously offers to send a big bottle on 10 days' Free Trial to any reader of this paper who will write for it. If it cures pay $1.25, otherwise you owe nothing. Send no money—just write to C. LEAVENGOOD, 1648 S. W. Blvd., Rosedale, Kansas, and the big bottle will be mailed immediately.—Adv.

INCOME TAX FACTS.

In making out his income tax return for 1921, the average taxpayer will find a considerable saving in comparison with the amount of tax paid on the same income for 1920.

The exemptions provided by the revenue act of 1921 are $1,000 for single persons (the term including widows, widowers, divorcees, and persons separated from husband and wife by mutual agreement), $2,500 for married persons whose net income was $5,000 or less, and $2,000 for married persons whose net income was $5,000 or more. Under the revenue act of 1918 the personal exemption allowed a married person was $2,000 regardless of the amount of net income. The personal exemption allowed a married person applies also to the head of a family, man or woman, who supports in one household one or more relatives by blood, marriage, or adoption.

The exemptions for dependents—a person who receives his chief support from the taxpayer and who is under 18 years of age or incapable of self-support because mentally or physically defective—is increased from $200 to $100.

The act requires that a return be filed by every single person whose net income for 1921 was $1,000 or more, every married person whose net income was $2,000 or more, and by every person—single or married—whose gross income was $5,000 or more.

The requirement to file a return of gross income of $5,000 or more regardless of net income is a new provision. Net income is gross income less certain specified deductions for business expenses, losses, bad debts, etc., which are fully explained on the forms.

Returns must be filed by married couples whose combined net income for 1921, including that of dependent minor children, equaled or exceeded $2,000, or if the combined gross income equaled or exceeded $5,000.

The period for filing returns is from January 1 to March 15, 1922. Heavy penalties are provided for failure or "wiliful refusal" to file a return on time.

Forms 1040A for incomes of $5,000 and less and 1040 for incomes in excess of $5,000 may be obtained from the offices of collectors of internal revenue and branch offices. The tax may be paid in full at the time of filing the return, or in four equal installments, due on or before March 15, June 15, September 15, and December 15.—Government Bulletin.

RESOLUTIONS OF COMMENDATION.

Whereas, the people of Learned, Miss., and especially the Christian women of the churches of Learned have enjoyed for a number of years, the influence and benefits of the high ideals of Mrs. J. S. Osborne; and

Whereas, she finds it to her interest to change her residence to her old home, Kentucky, therefore be it resolved:

First—That the members of the missionary societies of Learned express to her our appreciation of the splendid Christian life that she has lived in our community, filling, as she has, the high position of wife, mother, neighbor and friend, exemplifying in her life the spirit of service to every interest that looked to the betterment of her community.

Second—That we recommend her most heartily to the Christian womanhood of the town to which she is moving, and will follow her with our prayers, earnestly desiring that she may not only have health and happiness in her new home, but that larger privileges and opportunities may be afforded for the exercise of her Christian influence.

Signed by: Mrs. G. M. Campbell, Mrs. J. L. Gibbes, Mrs. John Bush.

MOTHERS AND DAUGHTERS

Read This Letter from Mrs. W. S. Hughes

Greenville, Del.—"I was under the impression that my eldest daughter had some internal trouble as ever since the first time her sickness appeared she had to go to bed and even had to quit school once for a week. I always take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound myself so I gave it to her and she has received great benefit from it. You can use this letter for a testimonial if you wish, as I cannot say too much about what your medicine has done for me and for my daughter."—Mrs. WM. S. HUGHES, Greenville, Delaware.

Mothers and oftentimes grandmothers have taken and have learned the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. So they recommend the medicine to others.

The best test of any medicine is what it has done for others. For nearly fifty years we have published letters from mothers, daughters, and women, young and old, recommending the Vegetable Compound. They know what it did for them and are glad to tell others. In your own neighborhood are women who know of its great value.

Mothers—daughters, why not try it?

CONFERENCE PAY-UP WEEK.

In several of the Annual Conferences, Pay-Up Week was observed during January. In other Conferences the dates for this special campaign come during February and March. These dates were fixed either by the Annual Conferences at their 1921 session or by Conference Boards of Missions and presiding elders on authority given by the Annual Conference.

During these special periods a vigorous campaign is to be on in every charge and for every congregation. In this work presiding elders and pastors are to have leadership as in all the enterprises of the church. These men know how their districts and their charges stand in the matter of Centenary payments to date, and this information is to be given by these leaders to their people. The Centenary treasurer of each church, working with the pastor, is expected to make the special effort during this period to reach every Centenary subscriber of his church. A statement is to be given each subscriber and the appeal made for the payment of the amount due to date. If the full amount cannot be paid, the subscriber is expected to make the largest possible payment on amount due.

In many charges conditions will not appear to be favorable, and there will be the suggestion that no special effort be made, but even under the most unfavorable conditions, some money can be collected if the matter is brought to the attention of subscribers. We must not fail to make the effort. Whatever amount is secured during Pay-Up Week will make easier future efforts for payments in full of all Centenary obligations. Let us make Pay-Up Week count for the most possible in every church of Southern Methodism.

GIRLS! LEMONS

WHITEN HANDS

Press the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, which any drug store will supply for a few cents, shake well, and you have a quarter-pint of harmless and delightful lemon-bleach lotion to soften and whiten red, rough or chapped hands. This home-made lemon lotion is far superior to glycerin and rose water to smoothen the skin. Famous stage beauties use it to bleach and bring that soft, clear, rosy-white complexion, because it doesn't irritate.

THE RECORD TO JANUARY 1.

Of the amount pledged to the Centenary fund, there was paid to January 1, 1922, on individual pledges, by Sunday schools, and by Epworth Leagues, $12,547,661.70. Including interest receipts and the income from several other sources, the total is slightly above $13,000,000.

In the plan of the Centenary, certain "credits" were to be counted in the grand total. These were the amounts paid on regular assessments for missions and Church Extension, on regular specials, and the payments by the Woman's Missionary Society. The total of "credits" will be given to the church at an early day. In advance of the official announcement we can say that the grand total—new money and credits—is approximately $20,000,000.

Sixty per cent of the amount pledged to the Centenary—the new money—was due at the close of 1921. We are far short of that amount. Even in the face of present conditions we are going to make a far better record for the early months of 1922. And let's make the beginning now.

FROM THE FIELD.

Whatever may be the opinions of Methodists at home, every missionary in the foreign field believes in the Centenary. They see that without the Centenary the work could not have gone forward. Only a few months ago, Miss Pearl Way, of Nashville, reached her field in China. Miss Way is the daughter of Mr. J. M. Way, of Nashville, prominently connected with the work of the Missionary Centenary and of the Laymen's Missionary Movement. She went from the work of the Centenary at Nashville to China. In a letter of recent date, she says:

"The Centenary is certainly a great power out here. I counted it a privilege to see the Centenary in action at home; the movement toward the Centenary, the actual campaign, and the steadfastness of the people in carrying through in the matter of collections, etc., but it is a revelation to see what it has done out here. The work is doubling, and while there is more money now than ever before, the need is no less. Above it all, however, there is still the cry for workers. I don't believe you could send out too many missionaries. Teachers, evangelists—all are needed."—Bulletin

THE CHURCH-WIDE CONFERENCE ON WORLD PROGRAM AND ADVANCE.

There was held in Memphis, Tenn., January 31-February 2, a church-wide conference on world program and advance that will probably go down in history as one of the most significant meetings ever convened by the leaders of our church.

Purpose.

The conference was called for the purpose of facing the urgent necessity now resting upon the church to carry forward to a successful conclusion the great Centenary Missionary Movement, and of devising plans for the collection of Centenary pledges now due, lest their non-payment bring to a stop, in the very midst of the greatest era of progress the church has ever known, the plans that mean so much for the future progress of the Kingdom of God. The larger significance of this forward movement of Methodism is seen in the influence it has had and is having upon the other Protestant denominations of America. No Protestant denomination in America has failed to follow the example of Methodism in this great forward movement for the evangelization of the world. A distinguished Presbyterian leader said a few months ago to one of the leaders of Methodism: "It would be disastrous to us as a denomination to fail to carry on successfully our Forward Movement, but Methodism in America must not fail in her task, for if American Methodism cannot carry on successfully this forward movement, no other denomination can succeed." In a very real sense, therefore, the Protestantism of the world waits upon American Methodism for leadership in a world-wide program for the establishment and maintenance of the Kingdom of God. And Southern Methodism has its part to perform in this great task of leadership.

Composition.

The conference was composed of practically all those who are officially in positions of leadership in the church. If we recall correctly, all the bishops were there except Bishop Hendrix, Bishop Kilgo, Bishop Ainsworth, and Bishop Cannon, and their absence was unavoidable; all the secretaries of the General Boards were present; all the editors of the connectional and Conference organs, with very few exceptions, were present; of the 289 presiding elders of the church, 262 were present, and the absent ones sent explanations of their inability to attend; all the Conference missionary secretaries were present. Many pastors and prominent laymen of the church were also in attendance. The meeting was especially significant in that it was the first time in the history of the church that practically all the presiding elders of the connection had come together as one body.

Program.

The program of the conference had been thoroughly worked out and carefully prepared in advance, and it was carried out as planned with the single exception that Dr. C. W. Tadlock, who was to discuss the topic, "The Centenary and Equipping the Down-town Church," was unable to be present on account of illness. At the opening session on Tuesday evening, Bishop U. V. W. Darlington presided, the devotional exercises were conducted by Dr. J. W. Johnson, and addresses were delivered by Bishop W. A. Candler and Dr. M. N. Waldrip. At the Wednesday morning session, Bishop James Atkins presided, and the devotional exercises were conducted by Dr. O. E. Goddard. Topics were discussed as follows: "The Centenary and Brazil," Dr. W. J. Young; "The Centenary and Advance in Mexico," Dr. J. B. Cox; "The Centenary and Enlargement in Cuba," Dr. S. A. Nesbett; "China and the Centenary," Dr. J. W. Cline; "Centenary in Korea," Dr. E. W. Anderson; "Our Newest Mission—Siberia and Manchuria and Japan," Dr. F. S. Parker.

At the Wednesday afternoon session, Bishop H. M. DuBose presided, and the devotional exercises were conducted by Dr. M. T. Haw. Topics were discussed as follows: "Work on the Border and in the West," Bishop DuBose; "Foreigners Within Our Borders," Dr. F. S. Onderdonk; "The Centenary in the Indian Work," Dr. Orlando Shay; "The Centenary and the Development of Rural Centers," Dr. W. J. LeRoy; "The Centenary in Arizona," Dr. W. J. Simms; "The Presiding Elders and the Forward Movements," Dr. James Thomas; "The Pastor in the Centenary," Dr. P. C. Fletcher; "The Uplift of the Laymen in the Forward Movements," Dr. J. H. Reynolds; "The Centenary and Revivals in Schools," Dr. O. E. Goddard, Dr. C. G. Hounshell, Mrs. H. R. Steele; "The Sunday School and the Centenary," Dr. E. B. Chappell.

At the Wednesday evening session, Dr. A. J. Weeks presided, and the devotional exercises were conducted by Dr. M. T. Plyler. Addresses were delivered by Dr. Andrew Sledd and Bishop John M. Moore, the former speaking of our European work, and the latter of our work in Brazil.

The Thursday morning session was presided over by Bishop Collins Denny, and the devotional exercises were conducted by Dr. Luther E. Todd. Topics were discussed as follows: "The Centenary to Date," Dr. W. B. Beauchamp; "The Place of the Presiding Elder in 'Carrying On,'" Bishop W. F. McMurry; "Leadership of the Presiding Elder in the District," Dr. C. E. Blankenship; "The World Sunday in the Local Church," Dr. C. C. Selecman.

Thursday afternoon, from 2 o'clock to 3 o'clock was spent by the bishops in conferences with the presiding elders of their episcopal districts. At 3 o'clock, the conference reassembled, with Dr. W. W. Pinson presiding, Dr. Peter Stokes conducting the devotional exercises. The report of the Committee on Findings was read, discussed, and unanimously adopted, after which an address was delivered by Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon on the subject, "The Mission of Methodism to the Twentieth Century," which brought the conference to a close. The high-water mark of the gathering in spiritual interest was reached in the address by Bishop Mouzon. This writer has never seen more manifest evidences of the presence of the Holy Spirit in any service. It was one of those occasions that mark an epoch in the religious life of those who are present.

The Situation.

The situation as developed by the reports made to the conference show that unparalleled progress has been made in all the work of the church, both at home and abroad, as a result of the Centenary Movement. The material progress was shown in the number and character of the buildings that have been made possible through the Centenary collections thus far, and in the enlargement of our spheres of operation in every field where we have work. The spiritual development of the church was shown in the unprecedented interest manifested in all fields in evangelistic work and in the net gain in the membership of the church—nearly 200,000, the largest in our history. At the same time, it was made manifest that there is serious danger that this period of prosperity will inevitably be brought to a close unless our resources are adequate to maintain our work upon the scale already enterprised. And it was clearly shown that our plans will have to be curtailed unless the payment of the Centenary pledges can be brought up to date.

When this situation became evident, there was a manifest determination that the church should not have to acknowledge its inability to carry forward the work it had so gloriously begun, and there was not a dissenting voice to the plans proposed by the Committee on Findings for making immediately available the money now due that was pledged in the Eight-Day Drive. This Committee on Findings was appointed at the Wednesday morning session of the conference, and it gave serious consideration to the situation as it now exists. Its personnel is a guarantee that it labored earnestly and prayerfully. It was constituted as follows: Bishop W. F. McMurry, chairman; F. S. Parker, secretary; W. J. Young, W. J. Johnson, J. D. Blan, R. H. Wynn, James Thomas, Miss Belle H. Bennett, J. C. Wooton, G. B. Winton, W. B. Beauchamp. The report of the committee was as follows:

"GIVE ME AN UNDERSTANDING HEART."

By Nan Ferell Reed.

Our prayers go out for fame and gain,
Or surcease from a world of pain,
But one small prayer I keep apart:
"Give me an understanding heart,"

To look beneath the frown awhile
And learn why lips have failed to smile;
To never, in a life so brief,
Add one more stone to human grief;

To truly, surely, comprehend
All efforts toward a purposed end,
And what it meant, and what it cost
To those who won—and those who lost.

Let something in my voice, or touch,
Although the something be not much,
Smooth out the hurt, prevent the smart;
"Give me an understanding heart."

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

By Hon. C. L. Bates.

Tenth Paper.

I.

The only great substantive power granted unto and vested in the General Conference, by the Annual Conferences in Convention assembled at Louisville in 1845, is in these words:

"5. The General Conference shall have full powers to make rules and regulations for our church, under the following limitations and restrictions, viz.:" Then follow the six Restrictive Rules. (Discipline 1846, p. 28.)

That provision was taken literally from the Discipline of 1840 (p. 21) of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

And concurrently with the grant of that power to the General Conference, the Convention declared:

"We distinctly recognize the jurisdiction of a delegated General Conference, receiving its appointment and authority from the whole constituency of Annual Conferences."

Here is the declaration, made by the Convention, of a great constitutional principle, underlying the whole fabric and superstructure of our church government, namely:

(1) The General Conference was created by and received its authority and power from the sovereign authority of the Annual Conferences; and (2) that federal council could exercise no power or authority not so received.

This principle of constitutional law, so declared and applied by the convention, was, at the time, well established and universally recognized in this country (McCulloch v. Maryland, 4 Wheat. 316; Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 264; Gibbons v. Ogden 9 Wheat. 1-240); the principle had been a subject of public political discussion in the Congress of the United States and on the rostrum for more than a half century; political parties were divided and aligned upon it, and every intelligent, cultured and educated gentleman in the South was familiar with it and regarded it as a vital principle of the government under which he lived, and the statesmen, scholars and divines of 1845 carried the principle into their ecclesiastical system.

Indeed, it was the assertion and application of a contrary principle by the majority in the General Conference of 1844 which caused the disruption of the church; and a determination to escape from the operation of that pernicious principle and its consequent mischiefs was the great moving cause which brought about the establishment of a separate Southern organization.

Our church organization should be examined, construed and applied by the aid and in the light of contemporaneous history, and by a recurrence to the then existing evils and mischiefs, and the remedy intended to be provided for them. (Rhode Island v. Massachusetts, 12 Pet. 657; Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. 416.)

The powers of government which were not granted to the General Conference, and which were distributed at all by the Convention, were vested in the Annual and Quarterly Conferences; and the residum of power not distributed was reserved to the Annual Conferences as the original source and repository of sovereignty. The General Conference received no power except what was ceded or granted to it expressly, or by necessary implication, and which was appropriate to a beneficial execution of the power expressly given for the welfare of "our church."

The Restrictive Rules are not the only limitations upon the power of the General Conference; that power is further and effectually limited by (1) the constitutional principle that it is a body of delegated powers and can exercise only the powers granted to it by the Annual Conferences, and (2) by the vestiture in and reservation of powers to the Annual Conferences. Every power vested in or reserved to the other departments of the church government is, pro tanto, a limitation upon the power of the General Conference. Hamline, in 1844, saw this constitutional principle standing in the way of his ambition, and he sought to and did avoid the difficulty by claiming, in that body, that the church had no constitution but the Restrictive Rules, and that, therefore, unlimited, despotic power was vested in the General Conference, and that it could rightfully, by a mere parliamentary resolution, override, annul and set aside the whole fabric of church government; and the report of the Constitutional Commissions adopts and sets forth the very same constitutional theory and contention.

III.

The report of the Commission on the Constitution seeks to exclude from the protection of that instrument the doctrines and general rules of Methodism, and the whole governmental polity of the church and its institutions and property, and to magnify and apotheosize the power of the General Conference, and to invest that body with absolute ecclesiastical supremacy, omnipotence and inerrancy; and there is a clear intent, by legal implication, apparent in the document, when taken and considered in its relation to the subject matter and the ecclesiastical situation in American Methodism, to break through, override and sacrifice the protective principles of the polity established by the Convention, in order to achieve some special purpose, or to serve some special and immediate interest, not directly and expressly disclosed.

IV.

The second Resolution in the series reported by the Committee on Organization and adopted by the Louisville Convention is as follows:

"Resolved, That while we cannot abandon or compromise the principles of action upon which we proceed to a separate organization in the South; nevertheless, cherishing a sincere desire to maintain Christian union and fraternal intercourse with the church, North, we shall always be ready kindly and respectfully to entertain, and duly and carefully consider, any proposition or plan having for its object the union of the two great bodies in the North and South, whether such proposed union be jurisdictional or connectional."

This brief, concise resolution is an accentuation by that sovereign Convention (1) that the Annual Conferences therein represented cherished a sincere desire to maintain the union of American Methodism; (2) that in proceeding to a separate organization in the South they had acted on the great cardinal "principles" of Methodism, which had been violated, abandoned, rejected and repudiated by the General Conference of 1844, and the Northern Section of Methodism; (3) that they could not and would not, even for the sake of union, "abandon or compromise the principles" upon which they had proceeded to a separate organization, and (4) that they, the Annual Conferences, themselves—not any General Conference they might create—would "entertain" and "consider" any proposition or plan having for its object the union of the two bodies.

It is clear from this resolution, construed in connection with the other proceedings of the Convention, that the Annual Conferences reserved to themselves the jurisdiction over the question of the reunion of the two bodies, and did not confer any such jurisdiction upon the General Conference.

Unification is not a legislative function; it is the uniting of two or more separate, distinct and independent sovereignties, and involves a complete change of government, by the demolition of the present subsisting governments, and the substitution of a new government and a new ecclesiastical State in place and stead of the former ones. Unification must be preceded by destruction—destruction and extinction.

It is common learning that the merger or consolidation of two or more corporations in legal effect extinguishes all the constituent companies, and transfers their property and assets to the new corporation created by the consolidation; and this legal principle is uniformly applied by the courts to the merger, unification or consolidation of churches.

It requires an act of ecclesiastical sovereignty—the underived and supreme power of the church—to effectuate a union of Southern Methodism with the Northern Church; and no such power has ever been conferred upon or vested in the General Conference. That is one of the reserved powers of the Annual Conferences, embracing preachers and private members—the whole Southern Methodist people—and any attempt to accomplish unification without their consent would be a shameless and criminal usurpation of power by the General Conference.

"To press forward to a great principle, by breaking through every other principle that stands in the way of its establishment, is as little consonant to private morality as to public justice."

WHERE HE LEADS—LET US FOLLOW.

By Dr. Stonewall Anderson.

That the quadrennium now drawing to a close has been the most constructive in the history of the church is a matter for profound gratitude to God. In May, 1918, the mind of the nation was in a mood for achievement. Sharing fully in the mighty national task of the hour, Methodism laid out for herself a splendid quadrennial program for the upbuilding of the Kingdom of God. Never in the history of the American people were conditions so favorable to high achievement as in the latter part of 1917 and during the year 1918. From the time the United States entered the war until after the Armistice the life of the nation as a whole was characterized by a oneness of purpose, a nobility of sentiment, and a spirit of self-sacrifice worthy of the highest admiration. Not for a moment do I think with Mr. George Harvey, that America entered and fought the war for the selfish purpose of "saving her own hide." The appeal made to the people, at the time of the great struggle, by their leaders, was the most unselfish, the most Christian, ever made to any people since the world began. The whole-hearted, thorough-going response to the high appeal stands out as a national deed unmatched in the annals of history. We fought that weaker peoples might enjoy the dearly-bought blessing of freedom. We fought that the world might be a safer and a better place in which to live. "We went to war to end war." How invincible were the mighty American people what time they were engaged in the great constructive, unselfish task!

When the Armistice came in 1918 it found the emotional life of the nation vastly increased in volume and dynamic influence and massed to drive through to a successful issue the great task in hand. In the morning of the eleventh of November our task was there, at night it was gone. In a single day it had changed its form. Our vision as a nation was not clear enough to see it in its new form. We were left with mighty tides of feeling flowing through our hearts, and in a state of tremendous emotional excitement. Instantly a wave of hectic, material prosperity swept over the land.

Left without a great constructive task with which to engage their attention and upon which to expend the might of their accumulated energies, men and women everywhere went wild. Avarice and greed and lust became rampant. Men lost their souls in the hot pursuit of wealth and pleasure and prominence. Then came the deflation. Avarice was balked of its purpose and lust of the means of unbounded gratification. The trend of the national mind set toward distrust, unbellef, cynicism. Weak Christians lost their faith. Good men succumbed to the general situation and fell into a harsh and critical mood.

Some have assumed to lecture the church for its over-activity during the perilous period through which we are passing. On the contrary, we should be devoutfully thankful that God led the General Conference of 1918 to lay out a great constructive program for the quadrennium. Especially should we be grateful that during the most perilous period of the quadrennium God laid upon us the responsibility of carrying forward the Christian Education program. The realization of the objectives of the Christian Education Movement is giving our people a great common constructive task with which to engage their attention and upon which to expend their energies and in which to enlist their faith. In devoutly laying themselves out in this task they are in a large measure shielded from the peculiar perils of the hour. Cupidty, and lust, and cynicism, and carping criticism, find no place in the soul of a man who is devotedly expending his energies in a great constructive task for the Kingdom of God.

Each day we pray to our Father, "Deliver us from evil." By giving us this task, and calling us to its accomplishment, our Father is delivering us from the evils of our day. The Christian Education Movement at such a time as this is the very pillar of fire of God's providence to lead His church away from the pitfalls of danger and into wider fields of service and into a fuller and richer life. Unafraid, let us follow the leadings of God's providence in successfully completing the task which He has committed to our hands.

ITINERATING IN BRAZIL—RIO DE JANEIRO.

By Dr. E. H. Rawlings.

Article 1.

At last I am getting a word with the friends at home, and now one scarcely knows what to leave out, there are so many fine things to say. Our voyage down was more in the nature of a cruise than otherwise. The marine strike gave us a raw crew, and these, with the machinery of an antiquated ship, brought us on the way a variety of experiences, some interesting, others not so interesting. We came back to New York after three days out, and on our second venture turned in at Barbados for repairs and supplies, and so instead of making the voyage to Rio in fourteen days as we expected, it took us just twenty-eight days. But we are here and it is worth the waiting.

Sugar Loaf and All.

We have seen the harbor of Rio, Sugar Loaf and all, and were not disappointed. I would not describe this remarkable view if I could. Your readers are familiar with such descriptions and have seen many pictures portraying its beauty. Really it was not the beauty of the harbor that somehow impressed me most. As we steamed into that wonderful harbor, one of the missionaries surprised me in a revery in which, beholding beyond all these scenes of beauty a country marvelously rich in resources and needing by every testimony and token only the leadership of a great manhood and womanhood to develop its resources into a great history, and knowing well that a pure Gospel was the only hope of such a leadership, I found myself anxiously wondering if our church would make the most of the new and enlarged opportunity for advance that had come to us in the Centenary.

In the two weeks in this land to date, although I have had many interesting experiences, I have, of course, touched only the fringe, but I have already seen enough to make me confident for the future of our church in Brazil. It is a new day for us here, of opportunity not only, but of achievement. We are not on the fringe of that achievement simply, but in the midst of it. No full report of it has come to the church at home. Our brethren have been too busy doing things to tell of them, even to the office of the Board of Missions, and when the full story of Brazil is told, if there were nothing more in other lands, the Centenary would be justified.

A Great Missionary Home.

But that is getting ahead of my story. There is time for me to give only a bare outline of the progress I am witnessing even if, Mr. Editor, you had space. We were met at the steamer by all the missionaries in and around Rio and were taken to the home of Dr. H. C. Tucker. So is everybody else well-nigh that comes to this city. I suppose nobody in the port of Rio touches so many foreigners or has had such opportunity for influencing the outside contacts with the life of this land. Young business men, missionaries of our church and others, Y. M. C. A. workers, tourists—all, are welcome in this Christian home. The house is of India rubber, I think, for come as their guests may, if it is full, it never seems crowded. With these added responsibilities of both Doctor and Mrs. Tucker and the duties for Dr. Tucker of a busy official position with the American Bible Society, one wonders how they could find time to do missionary work at all. And yet none is more active in the real missionary work of the city than are these two great missionaries. A story told me of their service in connection with the yellow fever scourge in Rio illustrates their usefulness in the life of this land. They both had had the fever, and Mrs. Tucker, when on furlough in the States, met the sister of Dr. Walter Reid, the distinguished Methodist physician who had isolated the yellow fever germ in Cuba. That interview led to a correspondence between Mrs. Tucker and Dr. Reid and later to correspondence between Dr. Reid and the celebrated Dr. Cruz, President of the Board of Health of Rio. As a result, yellow fever was stamped out of this great port and so effectually as to make any danger from that source now practically negligible. Dr. Tucker has a letter from Dr. Reid's successor in Washington commending the splendid work done by him as a member of the Board of Health in connection with the fight against this dreadful scourge in the city of Rio de Janeiro.

Busy Days in Rio.

We were in Rio only two days, but we made the most of it. We visited the Institutional Church, saw its beautiful new edifice and heard the story of the congregation's liberality, how in the Centenary survey the congregation agreed to raise $2,000 to aid in the building of a church by the Board. When they had prayed and talked it over, in the spirit of the Centenary, they contributed $8,000, and when the story was told me there were only two subscriptions as yet unpaid. We visited Cattete Church, talking over the work with the pastors, Brazilian and American, visited and inspected the Protestant hospital built by the Brazilians, in which we supplied a trained nurse and voted a small subsidy. We inspected the splendid new site for our Church in the Villa Isabel section and talked with the young pastor and the Bishop on the plans for this new church building. By the way, the pastor of this church was a poor boy that had been found by the Institutional Church, brought into the Sunday school and night school and had come now to be one of the most useful and promising of the Brazilian preachers. We looked in on the national conference of the Y. M. C. A. and had two visits with the splendid women missionaries at the new Bennett College, which under Miss Perkins and Miss Hyde, are beginning the work for this institution under such favorable circumstances. In this college began [illegible] and looked at the advantageous placing of our positions everywhere I have gone in Brazil. It is difficult to see how this girls' school could be better located if the Bishop and his advisers had had the whole city of Rio to pick from. And the same thing is equally true of other sites already occupied. The wonder of Bishop Moore's [illegible] work in the discovery of strategic [illegible] for in the Centenary grows on us more and more. If it keeps up as it has started, we shall write him down a genius of good judgment in these matters material. We visited the American Ambassador, Mr. Morgan, who received us most cordially and manifested, not now for the first time, a real interest in our work.

No experience in Rio was more interesting than our visit to the distinguished patriot and publicist, Dr. Jose Carlos Rodrigues. In his most interesting book, "Men, Manners and Morals of South America," J. O. G. Bland says that in his visit to Petropolis two things especially impressed him; one was the kind of cheese for which this place is famed, and the other was to find this great newspaper man, withdrawn from the stress of public life and in retirement here, writing a great book on the Old Testament Scriptures. Dr. Rodrigues has never connected himself with any evangelical church, but his sympathies are entirely Protestant and he is by every token a great Christian. He received us most graciously, talked with us of his work on the Bible, of religious conditions in Brazil, and greatly interested us by his intelligent and sympathetic discussion of the outlook for Protestant Christianity in that land.

DIARY OF A BIBLE.

Jan. 15. Been resting for a week. The first few nights after the first of the year my owner read me regularly, but he has forgotten me, I guess.

Feb. 1. Clean-up. I was dusted with the other things and put in my place.

Feb. 6. Owner used me for a short time after dinner, looking up reference. Went to Sunday school.

March 7. Clean up. Dusted and in my old place again. Have been down in lower hall since my trip to Sunday school.

April 3. Busy day. Owner led League meeting, and had to look up references. He had an awful time finding one, though it was right there all the time in its place.

May 3. In Grandma's lap again this afternoon. She spent most of her time on 1 Cor. 13, and the last four verses of the 15th chapter.

May 7, 8, 9. In Grandma's lap every afternoon now. It's a comfortable spot. Sometimes she reads me and sometimes she talks to me.

May 10. Grandma gone. Back in the old place. She kissed me good-bye.

June 3. Had a couple of four-leafed clovers stuck in me to-day.

July 1. Packed in a trunk with clothes and other things. Off on a vacation, I guess.

July 7. Still in the trunk.

July 10. Still in the trunk, though nearly everything else has been taken out.

July 15. Home again and in my old place. Quite a journey, though I do not see why I went.

August 1. Rather stuffy and hot. Have two magazines, a novel, and an old hat on top of me. Wish they would take them off.

Sept. 5. Clean-up [illegible] and set right again.
Sept. 20. [illegible] by Mary a few minutes to-day. She was writing a letter and wanted an appropriate verse.
Sept. 30. Clean-up again.

ROCKING THE CRADLE OR ROCKING THE BOAT.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

Rev. Fred Winslow Adams, D.D., of Springfield, Mass., has published recently a most striking and wholesome article under the caption, "Will The Family Survive?"

He points out most clearly some of the imminent perils which are besetting the family in our day. His words are not those of wild alarm, but of solemn and timely warning.

His admirable article opens with the following gripping paragraph:

"The fires of civilization will reach no higher and burn with no whiter heat than the fires on the hearth. The home is the real unit of our civilization. If its fires go out, civilization, too, will smolder and die. Therefore, rock the cradle and not the boat. The hand that stops rocking the cradle will finally begin rocking the boat."

He is quite right, and too many hands have stopped rocking the cradle and fallen to rocking the boat. The movements of feminism in all their forms tend to the undervaluation of motherhood and the over-estimation of public work. Being thus out of moral balance they drop easily into all sorts of radicalisms. They gravitate towards socialism and communism inevitably, although often insensibly to their advocates.

These tendencies have been most marked since the close of the world war. That awful upheaval unsettled the mental equilibrium of multitudes, and by it finely strung feminine minds especially seem to have been most seriously and quickly unhinged. Many have become hysterical in the leadership of dangerous agitations, the ultimate end of which they do not foresee. They have found rocking the cradle altogether tame and tedious, and have proceeded to make "thrills" for themselves by rocking the boat, upon the fate of which their own highest interests and the welfare of society depend.

Upon this point Dr. Adams speaks in the following paragraph, which is characterized by both wisdom and moderation:

"To-day's new freedom brings its assault on the very life of the family.

"The most dangerous doctrine of the World War is the doctrine of self-determination, and yet it is fundamental to democracy. The self-determination of woman has opened a door through which the church does not yet appear to see the dawn of a different day, but the day is nevertheless at hand. It is strikingly apparent that more and more modern feminism is withdrawing the best of women from marriage and motherhood. In one sense, we do not need to fear this larger career of woman any more than we need to dread modern machinery. Both bring their problem and in the end may mean lightening the burdens and increasing the efficiency of production and of the home. I welcome woman's place with man in the new order, and the strategic work which she alone can do to untangle the web of exploitation, injustice, and burden in which modern industry and civilization have enmeshed women and children and whole immigrant populations. But if the economic independence of women means their permanent place in the labor market, then I say it is a menace to the home and an outrage on civilization.

"Charlotte Perkins Gilman, whose brain is as brilliant as scintillating ice and about as cold, dreams a wonderful picture of the golden age with no dishes to wash, floors to sweep, clothes to mend, babies to clean, onions to weep over, or peppers to sneeze over. Socialized kitchens and laundries will do the work, with co-operatively employed porters, seamstresses, nurses, and teachers. But any system of co-operative living and efficiency engineering which fails to reckon with woman's instinctive mother love and home brooding is doomed to failure. You can understand David's cry for water from the well, but you can hardly picture a man who was born in Broadway sighing and saying: 'O, that some one would give me to drink of the Croton water in the faucet of the bathroom behind the door, in Apartment K, on the seventh floor!' And what will it be if life finally has no more poetry left than to leave to the memory: 'O, that some one would give me to drink of the co-operative soup made in the co-operative kitchen, and brought me by co-operative nurse, and led me by my co-operative governess on direction of my co-operative mother.'

"Carried to the extreme of some of its votaries, economic independence has a sinister bearing on the very foundation of the family."

Of course, it is to the financial interest of certain classes of employers to engage the services of women rather than those of men. They get labor more cheaply thereby. It is not strange that they declaim, in season and out of season, in favor of what they call "the economic independence of women." But whosoever among men or women is deceived thereby is not wise. These selfish worshipers of mammon are getting gain by pulling down the homes of the country. They draw women away from motherhood and drive men into unemployment and idleness. Their gains are society's losses.

Under such conditions children are not desired and their very birth discouraged, if not absolutely prohibited. Race suicide is rooted in these conditions.

Life in apartments, instead of in the sweet and sacred privacies of real homes, is popularized, if not compelled.

What must be the future of our country if these conditions continue? What type of life will prevail in the next generation, if a next generation is not made nearly, or quite, impossible?

Strong, noble, elevated manhood and womanhood can not arise from such conditions. We might as well expect to grow great forests in hothouses.

While these conditions obtain quite independent of the church and apart from educational institutions, both the churches and the schools are falling into methods that promote the impairment of home life.

The fathers and mothers in the churches are called out of their homes too frequently and the most sacred duties of parenthood are neglected in many cases in order to do what is called mistakenly "church-work." The churches are having too many meetings for the maintenance of family prayers. Some good men and women, who mean well, are forever on the run to some meeting or other. In truth some have become obsessed with a mania for public work.

The work of the church is important, and is to be done with fidelity and zeal, but every father and mother ought to spend most of their evenings at home with their children. The family altar is the most important place of worship.

The schools also fall to making education a matter of entertainment rather than a process of mental development, secured by serious and protracted study. Children get their water from faucets and desire to get their knowledge in the same easy and effortless way. They desire education "visually" rather than to pursue study vigorously. But virile mentality can not be acquired in that way.

Such educational methods stimulate self-indulgence and hinder self-development. They engender habits of evading whatever is difficult and enduring only that which is agreeable.

A thoughtful educator has said recently that "The American people never paid out so much for education as they do now, and never obtained as little for their money." The statement is too strong, perhaps; but it is worthy of consideration as a seasonable warning against the danger of making our schools minister to the appetite for amusement rather than to the promotion of intellectual strength.

When we have produced a prayerless populace, which loves recreation more than it loves worthy endeavor for high objects, which runs to meetings and shows, which discredits and flees life in the home, and seeks piquant publicity instead, we shall see awful agitations which will not only rock the boat, but wreck it.

We need more mothers, more children, more homes, more family altars, and more religion to save our civilization. These are plain things, but they are sacred things which are fundamental and indispensable. To obtain and keep them men may well endure the most consuming toil, women sacrifice their "economic independence," and children get on with fewer shows and less amusement. If we may have these holy things, we can do without most "modern conveniences." If we have them not, what will all else profit us?

WHITWORTH COLLEGE NOTES.

Whitworth College opened after the Christmas holidays with the loss of a few students; which, however, is a happening incident to college life. The loss has been replaced by a greater number of new students in the boarding department, thus creating an auspicious opening for the spring term.

The annual College revival has just closed with very inspiring results. The services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Deceel of Meridian, Miss. His sermons were good beyond the average, scholarly, timely, and appropriate to the conditions. There remains less than half a dozen students who have not professed Christ and connected themselves with some branch of the Christian church; and practically the entire College family committed themselves to the ideal of Christian service wherever they might be needed by God and the church.

The Artist Course, which has been so ably managed for several years by Miss McVoy, the director of music, was represented in January by Florence Macbeth, a singer of such note that she needs no introduction to the lovers of music and art.

Miss Mellon, one of the new piano teachers, gave a highly enjoyable and finished program during the month, thus making her bow for the first time to a Brookhaven audience.

The faculty At Home, on the first Wednesday afternoon of each month, which is an innovation for the sake of strengthening the tie between the faculty and the ladies of the Community, has proved to be a delightful occasion.

Several members of the faculty have had the pleasure of hearing Gipsy Smith in New Orleans, and report that his wonderful influence is due to a thoroughly consecrated life, wonderfully kept and directed by the Holy Spirit.

CENTENARY COLLEGE NOTES.

At the beginning of the new term, after all examinations are over, we feel like writing you, Mr. Editor, and telling you some good news from our College. Friends of Centenary, and parents of boys here, are often writing us and telling us how glad they are to see reports from time to time in our Advocate.

It would please you to see the steady growth of the College. There is expansion in every direction and in every department. The new catalogue is now being written, and it will show something of the vision that Dr. Sexton has for the school. He is planning wisely and working overtime for the institution. Let no man think for a minute that any one interest or activity will receive an unwise emphasis. Centenary College will be found growing symmetrically—every phase of life and culture will be fostered and encouraged.

Actual results of class-room work, as shown by grade matters, reveal some most gratifying features. A large percentage of the students is passing the course very creditably. The teachers are doing very effective and thorough work. If I should give you the actual list of grades and percentages, you all would say I am boasting, when I am only boosting. One of the pleasing aspects of the school is the personal help and personal interest shown by the faculty. Several of the boys were embarrassed and handicapped and could not have made their grades but for the extra assistance and personal interest of the faculty. This is one of the advantages of a small college over a crowded university.

Our basketball team is making a very fine record so far, and bids fair to make a good race for championship honors. The athletic field is being overhauled preparatory to the oncoming baseball season. All of the boys are looking forward to the coming of Bo McMillin, who will have charge of the football for the next three years. In the meantime, Coach Norton, son of a Methodist preacher, and gentleman extraordinary, is doing a very fine piece of work for Centenary. He is an all-round athlete—clean, straight-forward, upstanding, who goes to church every Sunday and sings the old songs of Methodism without a book! Norton will stay with us permanently, we trust.

The Y. M. C. A. is getting under way nicely. Enthusiastic rallies have been held and the prospects are bright for the Y. at Centenary. Our hope is to have a hut right here on the campus

New hymn books for the Chapel assist us greatly in toning up our singing. Mr. Editor, you ought to hear the students sing old Alma Mater also—it would make you feel glad you are living if not quite well! Speaking of music, don't overlook our young brass band, either.

Back in the good old days of Centenary, oratory was to the front. How many speeches were made to attentive stumps, pastures, and what not! During recent years, however, we have neglected the art of public speaking. But Centenary is returing to her first love—the boys are declaiming and orating. Already several gold medal contests are on and practice is beginning. We shall see some more orators come from Centenary.

New students are coming in as steadily as we can find room for them and prospects indicate that next fall will find us swamped if more buildings are not erected soon. The Trustees are now wondering just how they will meet the normal growth of Centenary. There is only one answer—we must rise up and build.

R. E. SMITH, Dean.

LET US UNDERSTAND THE SITUATION.

By Dr. Stonewall Anderson.

In the educational institutions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at this hour are more than 21,000 young men and women. Among them are at least eighty-five per cent of those who will go to make up the educated, trained leaders of the ministry, in missions, and in Christian service generally, of to-morrow for our church; because the leadership of to-morrow is in the schools of to-day. No finer body of young men and women ever matriculated in any schools than are to be found in our institutions. They are strong and vigorous and aspiring. This body of young men and women will determine largely the usefulness and power of the church in the next generation.

The schools of the church face a situation which is nothing less than a crisis. It behooves the church to know and understand this situation. Since the war there has been a great revival of interest in education. The war taught the tremendous power of education, both for good as well as for evil. Prof. Altheam but expresses the thought of multitudes of earnest and thoughtful Christians when he says, "Four thousand two hundred college professors caused the World War. Four thousand two hundred college professors can cause another World War." People are not only interested in education, they are interested in a distinctly Christian Education. It is as agencies of Christian Education that our schools have been established and are maintained.

One of the elements of crisis in the present educational situation is the financial needs of the schools of the church. Their financial resources now, apart from the small amount already received from the Educational Campaign, are about what they were in May, 1918. Since that time the volume of business of the schools has become much larger and expenses have increased from fifty to one hundred per cent, and in some instances even more. In 1919 and 1920 the church was engaged in the Centenary Movement. Consequently the schools made no effort to increase the financial resources. At the beginning of last year, 1921, the Campaign for Education was launched. The church was asked for $33,000,000 with which to strengthen its educational work. So far something over $18,000,000 has been subscribed. The first payment on the subscriptions made was due November 1, 1921. Some subscriptions were paid promptly. Many of them were not. If the funds asked for in this campaign are not subscribed and if the pledges made are not paid promptly, the situation is such that most of the institutions of the Church will be greatly embarrassed. Some of them must have financial assistance at an early date or they cannot continue their work. In the interest of the splendid body of young men and women, children, for the most part, of the fathers and mothers of the church, who in large numbers are crowding into our schools and in the interest of the future leadership of the church, let our people rally to the cause of Christian Education. God in his providence has placed this young life in our care that it may be fashioned after the similitude of Christ Let us in this generation be true to God's providence and true to the young men and women whose education has been placed in our hands, and true to the church of to-morrow by completing this campaign and thus meeting the pressing financial needs of the schools of the church.

CHURCH EXTENSION NOTICE, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Executive Committee for the North Mississippi Conference Board of Church Extension will meet in Water Valley, March 7, 1922. All the brethren who desire to make application to the General Board for loans or donations for churches or parsonages, when you have properly filled out your applications, please send them at once to the Secretary of Board, Rev. J. T. McCafferty, Amory, Miss., so they may be in hand.

W. M. YOUNG,
President of the Board.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Many of our collectors are rendering us very efficient service. We are truly grateful to them, as through their faithful work, our report is constantly growing. The needs of our Christian Colleges today are greater than ever before. So the payment of the pledges on Christian Education is fulfilling a long felt want. It is reviving our Christian institutions and translating our enthusiasm into terms of blessed reality.

In Centenary and Mansfield Colleges, the Methodists of Louisiana have the foundation upon which they can build two great institutions of learning for the youth of this day. The history, the good name and the constituency of these schools are a big asset. These institutions afford a golden opportunity to people of means to immortalize themselves and their wealth by erecting buildings, by endowing departments, and by providing libraries and laboratories. Put these institutions in your will. In them we have an opportunity of typing higher education in the State of Louisiana, of giving the program for higher education in our State a Christian character, and of serving in a larger way the entire South and the nation.

Pay your pledge. It will ease your conscience—give you peace—send you forth with renewed energy to work for the Master. Do it now.

ALBERT S. LUTZ.
Conference Secretary of Education.

OUR MEMORIAL HOME FOR YOUNG WOMEN.

For the Memorial Home we started out with four things in view, namely: INFORMATION, INSPIRATION, ORGANIZATION, and CO-OPERATION. I have tied these up and it now reads INFORMED inspiration, and ORGANIZED co-operation. Give me 500 such churches and 1000 annual memberships, and I will cut the assessment from your Conference appropriations. The matter of time is in the hands of our pastors and members. If you do this in one year, out we go. The annual membership is $10. The church collection is an open, free-will offering. When your people are duly informed, take the collection—and follow with a canvass for memberships. Let any one so inclined buy as many memberships as they may like—some are taking a membership each month. Don't worry: my book will be audited at the end of the year by a good certified accountant. The work is progressing, and will succeed.

E. N. EVANS,
Financial Secretary.

COURAGE TO BE A FOOL.

By George Clare [illegible]

"God be thanked," said Saint Robert of Samoa, "for any young man who has the courage to be a fool." Blessed be he for giving the words of my betters. Doubtless, anybody except a fool would know what Stevenson meant: "God be thanked" for a man young or old who is brave enough to submit to being called a fool by the real fools of earth. The pathfinder is always lampooned by the crisp-follower. It would be difficult to name any real benefactor who has escaped epithet and calumny. Let a son of God step out of the beaten path, for the sake of his soul or the souls of his comrades, and the fools must be first to meet us with blame. For his great ideas of life, soft contemporaries will call him "fool." It is the handy nickname to those who differ from us to the world's advantage. Paul, Luther, Whittier, Wilberforce, Cavour, Wesley, Savonarola, Huss—all "fools," according to cheap contemporary standards. Let God be thanked—and earth be glad—for all the spirits that have declared their heroism by accepting the name of fool, for their cause's sake. Did not Paul claim his place in that royal line? Perhaps Stevenson was thinking of the Tarsus tentmaker who once said: "I am become a fool for Christ's sake."—Selected.

HOW TO BE GREAT.

The president of a big company who spent much time in conference at Washington during the war has figured out the elements of greatness from observation of the men he met.

He cites intellectual courage as the leading factor. He noticed four common attributes in the great men around him.

"All are active men with energy. Greatness is not achieved by inertia.

"All are able to deal with other men. This is not 'glad-hand' stuff.

"All are willing to take a chance.

"All are able to transmit their thoughts to others and to use words effectively."

Almost everybody would like to be great in his quiet way. It is comforting to know that no secret process is required. The ambitious are recommended to study the rules. Greatness is not guaranteed as the result, but the person who acts upon them will amount to more than the person who does not.—Visalia Delta.

A PROFITEERING PROBLEM.

A writer in The Outlook says: "The English have more common sense than we have in America when they are dealing with the profiteering problem. This year, for instance, straw hats have been boycotted. Not from a sudden scorn of good straw hats, but just because a brash attempt to charge high prices for them was made by the hatters. Two years ago, again, the cost of men's and women's shoes rose so outrageously that a reaction came. An anti-profiteering scheme was started. And now a sad shirt can be bought in countless stores for four or five and—say, eighteen to twenty dollars. The Middle Classes Union may have failed. It has done little that it once hoped to accomplish. Yet an unorganized rebellion against organized and ruthless profiteers has somehow brought about a heavy slump in prices.—Exchange.

I am glad to think
I am not bound to make this earth go right,
But only to discover and to do
With cheerful heart the work that God appoints.

A SUPERANNUATE TAKES STOCK.

By Rev. T. W. Adams.

I went shopping this morning. I went to Kayes's store and bought 25 cents worth of coffee and 10 cents worth of Irish potatoes. Wasn't that extravagant for an old worn-out preacher? Wife wants me to go down town this afternoon and get her 10 cents worth of envelopes. Then a loaf of bread is to be paid for. My! how am I going to hold up under such heavy pulls on my purse? I could keep going pretty well, Henry, if what I put in my purse would stay there. What hurts is that it goes out about as fast as I put it in. If somebody would get up a patent that would prevent purse-leakage, I would call for a standing vote of thanks for him. I would try to get one for every poor old superannuate in the Conference. It would be a providential blessing to them. Without it I am afraid that the drain will be too great on their limited resources.

I found them at the Kayes's store busy taking an inventory of their stock. This is a very necessary procedure for merchants. They must do that at least once a year to see what condition the business is in. To neglect to do so they could not intelligently protect and promote their business. They asked me if I didn't want a job. They offered me employment as an assistant in taking stock. I declined on the ground that I was too busy. It happened to be my day to take an inventory of my physical assets and liabilities. This is an important procedure for any one or all of us. We can never be sure of things unless we take stock closely and frequently. Many failures come because we are ignorant of our resources. Because we do not know the measure of our assets, we carelessly allow our liabilities to grow until the assets are unequal to the strain on them. We ought to be mighty careful at this point. It is just here that I made my biggest mistake. If I could go over the past, knowing what I do now, I would be careful to take frequent inventories of my physical assets and liabilities.

I have been busy a good part of the afternoon taking stock. After having looked carefully into the matter I find no grounds for real joy over the outcome. My assets are really limited and my liabilities are heavy. Unless I can increase my assets, and by some means liquidate my liabilities, I can not indefinitely postpone bankruptcy.

In taking stock I knew that I would need to be perfectly honest with myself if I were to get any good from it. It would serve no good purpose to evade the truth. To do that would mislead and deceive myself, and leave me in as bad fix, if not worse, as at the beginning. So I made up my mind to look carefully into every item of my belongings and pass on everything with perfect candor, no matter how much I might be distressed by my discoveries. To see the things that are weak would but enable me to know and use the means to correct and to strengthen them. To see the things that are strong and virile would encourage and cheer me, and would show me where I needed to put extra efforts to develop reserve force to relieve the weak parts.

So in taking stock I examined first my best assets. I found that my back, legs and tongue were in good condition I am sure that no man of my age has any better. My back and legs are 100 per cent efficient. They are sound and well—equal to any demands that I may make on them. In fact, if the other members of my body were in as fine condition as they, I would be able to say to Bishop McMurry, "Here am I, send me." I could serve the largest district or circuit in the Conference I could not serve a station, for I am not going to deliver sermonettes. If I do anything, I am going to do something. I am willing to preach sermons, but deliver me from sermonettes.

And my tongue—why I find it to be in "apple pie" order. I don't think anybody has any better. It just goes a-wiggling and a-wiggling; it never breaks down, doesn't even get tired. My, what an industrious tongue I have! It has been on a double-quick run for more than 70 years. Still it performs well. I would not object to a talk-fest with any man in the Conference, barring Jim Williams, Jim Ferguson and George Yeager. I haven't the temerity to encounter them. No! no! I would throw up my hands and quit before the tournament began.

The other members of my body are in bad fix. My feet are about worn out. I look at them sometimes with the greatest sympathy and say: "Poor old feet! You have had a hard time of it—no wonder you throb and ache as you do. Your master has been mighty hard on you. He has made you go through mud, over sand and gravel, and through ice and snow. He has shown you no mercy. Now you are old and worn-out, you are not worth a copper cent; but as bad fix as you are in, I wouldn't take a million dollars a piece for you." If I had some alcohol, I would bathe them in it, but I am not going to have a doctor to prescribe it. I am just going to hold on to my old feet as long as I can, no matter how worthless they are.

And I have a bad face, too. Once upon a time it was one of my best assets. I have heard my mother say that when I was a little fellow they called me, "pretty boy." I can prove by the "old" men of the Conference, like I. W. Cooper and Aleck Watkins, that forty years ago I was one of the handsomest young preachers of the Conference. But now—what a change! It is all gone, Henry. I wish the doctors could discover a preventive of ephthelioma—that is in plain English, "skin cancer." It has played havoc with my facial beauty. Too bad—isn't it? But it is so, nevertheless.

By knife, and paste, and radium I have had six removed, and a few more remain. I don't know when I'll get through with the business. It looks as if not a great deal of my facial epidermis will be left. I might try plastic surgery, but that would be too painful and cost too much money to suit my feelings, and pocket-book. I rather think I'll just wait and do the best I can.

I find my heart in a bad fix. Doctors have told me many times that I had nothing to be concerned about; that it was simply a case of palpitation of the heart that was sympathetic. But they told my father the same, and he dropped dead from it. Now the doctors tell me that my heart is enlarged. It appears that it is not only enlarged, but enlarging. What am I to do about it? I don't know. I am just waiting on it to see if it won't stop its process of enlargement. It distresses me awfully. It is better to have it as it is than to have no heart at all. I thank God that it keeps on functioning even if it is poorly done.

My arterial system is in fearfully bad fix. The entire system seems to be hard. The doctors call it arterio-sclerosis. That name looks bad to me, but the name doesn't look half as bad as my feelings feel. I can't eat anything but "slops." They are about to diet me to death. H. V. Waits, of Sumrall, sent me an invitation a few days ago to come and spend a week with him. As an inducement he said he had an abundance of backbones, spare ribs, souse, sausages, chitlins, etc. I sent him word that he would never tempt me with such a bill of fare for I couldn't eat if I were there. My, how it hurts me to diet. I can hardly stand it. I sometimes feel like cutting loose and clean up things. Don't you feel sorry for me, Henry?

I am glad my job of taking stock is finished. I find mighty little to cheer me. I don't know what I am going to do when Hicks Ellis asks me to take another trip with him in his fine Buick car.

GREATEST YEAR IN OUR HISTORY.

Below we give the 1921 reports from the Conferences in the United States. No foreign Conferences are counted. It will be seen that we had more than one hundred and sixty thousand additions on profession of faith. This is by far the largest in the history of our church. Last year, 1920, we had more than one hundred and thirty thousand, and that was a record-breaking year. This year we went more than twenty-five thousand beyond that. For the quadrennium the figures run as follows:

1918, received on profession of faith.. 94,214
1919, received on profession of faith.. 98,192
1920, received on profession of faith..133,694
1921, received on profession of faith..161,973

The Centenary Revival plan did not get in operation until 1920.

Our net gain in the United States is 82,216. This is not only our largest net gain, but it is by far the largest net gain of any Methodist Church in America. Let us thank God and take courage and resolve by the help of God to make 1922 outstrip 1921 as far as 1921 outstripped any other year.

Let no one suspect that this is a member-getting campaign. Every convert has been taught the doctrine of stewardship of money and advised to give recognition of that stewardship by contributing at least one-tenth of his or her income to the Lord's work. Every family has been taught to hold family prayer. All the young people have had lessons on life service and have been taught to say to the Lord, "Here am I, send me." That is, all this has been done where the Centenary plan for revivals has been followed. Thousands of our pastors are now following the plan. Every pastor who has followed it finds it workable and never thinks of giving up the plan. The figures offer an interesting study of the evangelistic work being done in the several Conferences. If any brother calls in question these figures, let him not write to me. They have been compiled by the official statisticians of the church, not by my office. I understand that they found errors in the footing in Conference Minutes. If any one wants a correction made in his Conference, let him write the Book Editor's office, not mine.

SOME CORRECTIONS FOR THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE MINUTES.

Dear Brother Carley: I do not write for the purpose of criticizing any one, but to call attention to what seems to me is an inaccuracy in the Journal of the Mississippi Annual Conference, session, 1921.

On page 122 of said Journal our Conference is credited with having an increase in membership of 1995 during the year. That may be correct. I do not know. But the reports of the preachers as shown in the recapitulation of the statistical table No. 1 shows the following:

District—	Additions on Pro. of Faith	Additions by Cert..&c.	Removals by Death,&c.
Brookhaven	353	387	616
Hattiesburg	537	439	613
Jackson	551	645	544
Meridian	562	402	425
Newton	682	466	715
Seashore	614	879	919
Vicksburg	263	310	396
	3562	3528	4228

Total number received 7090
Total number dismissed 4228

Increase.....2862

There is an incorrect addition shown in the fourth column of figures in the recapitulation, page 122 of the Journal. That may be a typographical error.

Certainly, the difference between 62,474 total membership as shown in column five, and 60,479, total membership last year, shows an increase in membership of only 1995, but I fail to see why the difference between the total number received and the total number removed should not show the increase in membership, and I believe, if we will all be careful with our figures, it will.

If our increase in membership last year was only 1995, some of us must have handled our arithmetic rather carelessly. If we had an increase of 2862, we should be credited with that number.

The Home Circle

THE WAY OF IT.

A little boy made him a wee snowball
And rolled it about in the snow;
And it gathered the crystals and clung to them all,
And oh! how that snowball did grow!
Oh! my!
You've made one, of course, so you know.

A little boy whispered a word one day
Unkind of some one he knew,
And each one who heard it reported his way
The story till, oh, how it grew!
Oh! my!
And a heartache was caused by it, too!

Two little red mittens the small ball relled,
That grew in such magical way,
And a little red tongue was the one that told
The tale that grew big in a day.
Oh! my!
Be careful, wee tongues, what you say!

HOW BILLY HELPED.

By Mrs. Alla M. Forster.

A big bump raised up slowly and then went down again with a flop. You would have thought it was that, but if you had gone closer to the little white bed in that hospital and peeked under the cover, you would have found a curly-headed little boy. His face was pretty red, and his eyes looked like they wanted to cry.

Billy Johnson had the scarlet fever and thought himself the most abused little chap out—or in, rather. The quiet nurse came to the bed.

"All right, Billy?" she asked. But the bump never moved. "Oh, I wonder where Billy has gone! I shall be so lonesome without him," went on the nurse. Billy didn't feel very good-natured, but the covers moved a little bit.

"Oh, there you are! I'm so glad. I need you, Billy," and the nurse smiled at him.

"Aw, what can I do? I can't do nothing," came from under the covers.

The nurse laughed. "Why, Billy, you can help me lots," she said. "You are so much better you can be wheeled to the sun porch to-morrow. Then I'll tell you how you can help me."

Billy almost forgot his trouble, wondering what the nurse meant. How could he, a sick, peeling-off fellow shut up in an old hospital, help anybody? But it was rather exciting thinking about it. He'd be most willing to do anything. He was so tired of rolling around and scratching and looking at the ceiling. It was no fun to be sick.

The day finally came. Billy was all excitement. He never knew it was so much fun to just be out on the porch. The nurse fixed him all comfortably, then put a big box down beside him. Oh, bright pictures and everything!

"Now Billy, the better you do this, the more you will help me." Billy thought he would like to help the nurse who had been so kind to him. "Now, see! Cut out these pictures. Here's some paste and cardboard. And here are the names for the pictures when you have them pasted on."

Well, it looked easy, and before the nurse was out of sight Billy had the scissors flying. It was so much fun it wasn't work at all. There! he had eight pictures pasted on. Now for the names! That didn't prove quite so easy. But he did his best, and when the nurse came he held up his work proudly.

"Fine! I'll look them over while you eat," said the nurse as she gave him his supper. She did look. And she did try to keep from laughing too, but she couldn't. Robinson Crusoe was crossing the Delaware, and George Washington looked quite foreign in a three-cornered hat, as he stood on the deck of the ship with folded arms. Then Lincoln was marching to Georgia, and U. S. Grant was carrying the flag in a battle. Napoleon was freeing the slaves, and Teddy Roosevelt was on a deserted island with his man Friday. General Pershing marched with the Blue and the Gray, and the highest mountain in the world was the Black Hills.

Now the nurse didn't want to laugh at Billy. He had worked so hard and she was proud of him. But—well, could you have kept your face straight? Billy burst out crying and wouldn't finish his supper. The nurse patted him comfortingly, but—"

"I told you I couldn't do nothin'," came from the crying boy.

The nurse put the tray on the table. Then she held Billy's hand tight.

"Why, Billy, you had a good time, didn't you? That's something," she said.

But Billy would not be comforted. "You said I could help you, and I can't," he wailed. "What did you want them for anyway?"

The nurse thought a minute. "Say, Billy! I do believe you have helped more than I ever thought. Listen! I wanted the pictures for a ward full of sick little children."

But Billy commenced to cry again. "And I went and spoiled them—oh dear, oh dear!"

The nurse wiped Billy's eyes.

"Not at all, Billy. Do you know, I think you have helped more this way. I'll tell you why. Those children are older than you and have read about these men more. Now, don't you see? You and I can have a good laugh, and that helps us, you know. Then they can put on the right names—that will give them something to do. Why, Billy boy! you have helped like everything. Don't you see?"

Billy's sobs quieted down as he watched the merry face of the nurse. Before he knew it, the corners of his mouth were turning in the right way. Now, maybe the nurse was right. Anyway, the children would have something to laugh about. And Billy knew that helped just fine, when you are sick and lonesome in a hospital. So he turned a smiling face to the nurse.

"Guess it's a joke," he said. "Anyway I'm glad if I can help some other sick boys. They'll know I tried, anyway."—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

TURNING THE TABLES.

In a London Club, when the Chinese minister happened to be present, a rather tactless speaker referred to the position of women in China and how they were debarred from so many of the privileges of men. He meant no ill, but what he said was indiscreet and led to a moment's embarrassing silence, after which the conversation was resumed on other subjects. The minister did not speak for a while, but presently during a pause he turned to the man who had made the critical remark: "This is a very beautiful club you have here, sir." "Yes, I believe it is the finest." "Much finer than your ordinary private houses?" "Certainly. None of our private houses is so large and beautiful as this," was the response. "I suppose you have your women here—your mothers and sisters and wives and daughters. Of course, you must have them here to enjoy your beautiful house with you." "Why, no. It is against the rules. They are not allowed here at all." "Why not?" said the minister. And the clubman saw the point.—Argonaut.

"TIME OUT."

Perhaps He Was Counting the Bones.

Two old salts, says Everybody's, who had spent most of their lives on fishing smacks, were arguing about mathematics. Finally, the captain of the ship proposed a problem. "If you sold 126 pounds of codfish at six cents a pound," he said, "how much would you make?"

Both men worked a while with pencils and paper, but neither seemed to get very far. At last old Bill turned to the captain. "Is it codfish they caught?" he demanded

"Yep," replied the captain.

"Hang it all!" exclaimed Bill in disgust. "No wonder I couldn't get an answer. I've been figuring on shad all the time."—Exchange.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

THE CHURCH-WIDE CONFERENCE ON WORLD PROGRAM AND ADVANCE.

church-wide Conference on World Program and Advance asks your attention to the following considerations.

The scant three years that have passed since the Centenary subscriptions were made have not yet given time for a full account of the effects of the movement on our various foreign fields. Yet advance reports brought to this Conference disclose at least two stirring facts as to those effects.

1. The work has already been profoundly quickened, and the workers have been heartened as by nothing else in our missionary history. The missionaries, equipped with buildings and reenforced by recruits and resources beyond anything they had before dared dream of, have thrown themselves into their work with a zeal and hopefulness that are already yielding a rich harvest. The native churches have not only been stirred to new efforts in their work, but have themselves entered with fervor into the Centenary Movement. They have formed Leagues of Intercession; they have taken up astonishingly large subscriptions and willingly accepted the principles of stewardship; their young people are offering themselves in throngs for life service; evangellstie activities are just now getting into full swing among them, and already there is a great ingathering of souls.

2. The second fact impressed upon us is that for the Centenary to fail now would be an unspeakable disaster. These peoples who have been looking to us for religious help have confidence in us. For them ours is the ideal Christianity. They know that these three years of the Centenary are but a beginning, that we are pledged to go on in the same way for not less than five years. For us to stop, to fail, would be a mortal blow to their confidence. A broken promise would wreck their estimate of our Christianity. Our future standing as honorable Christians is absolutely staked on our going forward with these pledges which we have made.

Shall we not believe that our Lord Himself will look upon us through the eyes of these spiritual wards of ours? Our Centenary promises are pledges to Him. Can we think of playing false? Wholly apart from the rich returns which the Centenary is showing, and which alone should make us delight to complete the good work which we have begun, the church must honestly face the solemn question of whether or not she will repudiate an obligation.

Our home mission work has also been greatly forwarded by the Centenary funds. Out of them additions have been made to the meager salaries of thousands of pastors upon our poorer charges. Our work among foreigners and in cities and rural districts has taken on new life. Shall all this advance be now nullified?

Even delay in keeping the pledges paid up is already bringing shame and trouble upon our workers. In China a great city has donated land for a hospital. To fail now to build it would shame us in the eyes of that people. In the Siberia-Manchuria mission, latest and most apostolic achievement of the sainted Lambuth, there are missionaries, native preachers, congregations, schools, Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues, but no churches, no school buildings, no residences for ministers. In Japan our educational enterprises, now the peer of any, must have additional endowments to meet new requirements laid down by the government. The Kwansei Gakuin will cease to rank as a university and the Hiroshima Girls' School as a college, if Centenary funds are not available to endow them.

In the home field 3,000 pastors on hard charges will have their meager salaries cut, in this time of high prices, reduced collections and difficult finances, and that almost immediately, if the payment of our Centenary pledges is longer delayed. Already the building program of the Board of Church Extension, dependent on Centenary money, is stopped. Throughout the church the erection of churches and parsonages has come to a dead stand.

We recognize the fact that the times are hard, the tide of enthusiasm is not running now as in 1919. It is not so easy to go on with the payment of our pledges as it promised to be when we made them. BUT WE MUST PAY THEM NEVERTHELESS. In the face of the situation which confronts us as a church, we cannot, we dare not even seem to retrench.

In order that the mind of the church may be refreshed in reference to this great cause, we believe that a definite plan should be inaugurated to promote the payment of our pledges, embodying the following general outline:

1. An educational campaign for the training of leaders and speakers.

2. A World Sunday, in which an effort shall be made to reach every congregation of the church with the world message. Sunday, March 26, is designated for this purpose.

3. A follow-up week for which the local Centenary Committees shall be reorganized and all subscribers who are in arrears shall be personally interview and urged to bring their payments up to date.

The officers and members of the Centenary Commission are requested to supply literature and other data for the use of speakers and leaders, and when it is desired, specific plans for carrying out the above campaign.

The Call.

It will be seen from the above report, which was unanimously and enthusiastically adopted, that the plan for collecting the over-due pledges involves three features, as follows:

1. An educational campaign for the training of leaders and speakers.

2. A World Sunday, in which an effort shall be made to reach every congregation of the church with the world message, Sunday, March 26, being designated for this purpose.

3. A follow-up week, for which the local Centenary committees shall be reorganized, and during which all subscribers who are in arrears shall be personally interviewed and urged to bring their payments up to date.

In addition to these specific plans, the officers and members of the Centenary Commission are requested to supply literature and other data for the use of speakers and leaders and, when it is desired, to assist in every other possible way in carrying out the campaign.

The church is now called to the completion of a task to which it has already pledged itself. What we have promised, we must perform. Our faithfulness and loyalty to our professions will be measured by the degree of consecration we put into this movement to "carry on" in the great work we have undertaken. No local or temporary circumstances must be allowed to prevent our doing our utmost to reach the goal set forth in our program for advance. That the task is not easy is all the more reason why we should be earnest and faithful. The call is to go forward—and go forward we will!

No Conflict.

No conflict with any other interest of the church is implied or involved in this plan to complete the payment of our Centenary pledges. The Christian Education Movement is still upon the hearts of our people, and its success is essentially a part of the success of our great forward movement as a whole. The Memphis conference recognized fully the claims of the Christian Education Movement upon the church, and unanimously passed resolutions pledging the heartiest sympathy and co-operation in carrying out the purposes of that Movement. Great as both these movements are, they are not too great for a great church to carry forward to a triumphant conclusion. And there is no task that ought to be performed too great for a great church.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. G. D. Purcell writes that everything is moving along well at South Mansfield, La., and that indications point to a fruitful year.

Rev. R. A. Bozeman, Pleasant Hill, La., requests us to say that he will be glad to communicate with any of the brethren who desire his assistance in revival meetings.

The Blue Ridge Conference of the Missionary Education Movement will be held at Blue Ridge, N. C., June 23-July 3. Many notable speakers will have part in the program.

Dr. J. R. Countiss, president of Grenada College, by request of the pastor, preached his sermon on the needs of the American home at Oakland, Miss., on Sunday, January 29.

According to press reports, Rev. Carroll Varner, our pastor at West Point, Miss., is being assisted in a meeting this week by Rev. W. A. Wilson, North Mississippi Conference evangelist.

Rev. B. F. Bullard writes from Calhoun City, Miss., that all goes well on his charge, and he is looking forward to one of the best years in his ministry.

According to a statement made at the recent Memphis conference, the Indians of Oklahoma subscribed 300 per cent more in the Christian Education Movement than the average of the rest of the church.

We regret to learn that sickness in the family of Rev. C. A. Northington, Lambert, Miss., has made it impossible for him to prosecute vigorously some lines of his work. We sincerely trust that good health will soon be their portion.

Every one of the presiding elders of our three patronizing Conferences was present during the meeting of the recent church-wide conference in Memphis, Tenn. All three of the Centenary secretaries were also in attendance.

A series of Bible studies will be conducted in the First Methodist Church, Laurel, Miss., by Mrs. Margaret Russell, beginning February 3 and continuing through February 10. The services will be conducted for the members of all denominations.

The editors of the church papers took advantage of being together in Memphis last week to enjoy a luncheon together. All the papers were represented except the Advocate-Herald, of West Virginia, and the Richmond Christian Advocate. It was a very delightful occasion.

Mr. Stephen S. Thomas, Centenary secretary-treasurer of the Louisiana Conference, is back at his office in Alexandria, La., after the absence necessitated by the recent death of his father and mother. He is planning to carry forward vigorously the work committed to his hands.

The Board of Managers of the American Bible Society has decided to close a part of its manufacturing plant at the Bible House, Astor Place, New York, and have its printing and binding done by contract. This change of policy has been adopted in the interest of economy.

The following significant statement was made by Dr. J. H. Reynolds in his address at the Memphis conference last week: "The laymen are not willing to listen to the kind of preaching they have been listening to. * * * The pew has outgrown the pulpit."

Dr. S. H. C. Burgin, Secretary of the General Board of Church Extension, announces that the Annual Meeting of the Board will be held in the chapel of the Church Extension Building, Louisville, Ky., beginning Wednesday morning, April 26, at 9:30 o'clock.

According to Dr. F. S. Parker, the educational standards of the ministry in Japan are higher than they are in the United States.

The Big Brother Class of Greenville, Miss., is in the midst of a "Get 'Em and Hold 'Em" campaign. There is a suggestion in this for a good many ot our organized Sunday school classes.

Rev. W. M. Young, president of the North Mississippi Conference Board of Church Extension, calls attention to the fact that the Executive Committee of the Board will meet at Water Valley, Miss., March 7. Let all those who have business with this Board take due notice.

Dr. Theodore Copeland reports that he has just closed, at Mount Hope, West Virginia, the greatest meeting he has ever been in. There were 300 applications for church membership, in addltion to hundreds of reclamations. Dr. Copeland is now in a meeting at Prestonsburg, Ky.

The amount of space given the proceedings of the Church-wide Conference on World Program and Advance by the secular newspapers of Memphis, Tenn., last week was an indication that secular editors are beginning to realize the news value of church affairs. Nothing was left to be desired in the way of publicity in the local papers.

Rev. R. H. Clegg has had a good beginning of the year's work at Raleigh, Miss. He has already planned his meetings for the year and secured his ministerial help. The official board has increased the salary, and the people are showing in a substantial way their appreciation of their pastor's work.

Rev. Chas. E. Downer, of Terry, Miss., writes as follows: "The people here and on this charge have been very kind and thoughtful of us and our needs. A spirit of co-operation prevails, and indications are that a good year's work will result. I expect to secure all the subscriptions possible for the good paper you are giving us." We thank him.

Octavus Roy Cohen, famous Southern writer, contributor to the Saturday Evening Post and other national magazines, has accepted an invitation to teach contemporary literature in Birmingham-Southern College. Mr. Cohen was the winner of the $5000 prize in a recent short story contest conducted by the Photoplay Magazine. He occupies a place of foremost prominence in the literary world.

The Ministers' Association of Laurel, Miss., was reorganized on Monday morning, January 30, with the following officers: Rev. Grayson L. Tucker, president; Rev. J. Lundy Sykes, vice president; Rev. O. S. Lewis, secretary. The editor of the Laurel Daily Leader has offered to publish a sermon by one of the pastors every Monday morning, and the Association accepted the offer and made arrangements to furnish the sermon regularly.

Sister T. S. Randle, of Yoakum, Texas, asks us to express through the Advocate her thanks to the friends who have made it possible for her to place a beautiful granite marker at her husband's grave —the late Rev. T. S. Randle, of the Louisiana Conference. She has placed the inscription, "From Louisiana Friends," on the stone. Sister Randle states that it is her intention soon to move to Louisiana to reside permanently.

Mr. W. E. Hogan, Treasurer of the Board of Education, recently announced that the pledges in the Christian Education Movement now total $20,830,222, this sum being within less than $2,225,000 of the total quota fixed by the General Conference. Mr. Hogan further announced that $707,729.77 has already been dishursed to the various schools and colleges of the church out of the funds collected.

The Texas Avenue Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., voted recently to lay plans looking to the erection of a new church building. A building committee has been elected, and a committee is now looking for a new site. The lot will be bought and paid for before building operations are begun. The average Sunday school attendance of this church last year was 198, and a larger building has become a necessity for proper growth. Rev. R. S. Walton is the pastor.

A note from Rev. A. T. McIlwain, presiding elder of the Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference, informs us that Rev. T. E. Gregory, our pastor at Central Church, Columbus, underwent a major operation at the Methodist Hospital, Memphis, Tenn., on February 3, and that first reports were that he stood the operation well and was getting along nicely. We pray that he may soon be entirely restored to health.

The many friends in this section of Rev. Roy H. Kleiser, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, will be glad to know that he is still meeting with great success in his pastorate of Scott Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Covington, Ky. Every department of the church is functioning splendidly, and the greatest congregations in the history of the church are attending the services. Preparations are now under way for a revival campaign, to be conducted by the pastor during the week of April 9-16.

The following figures, just issued by the General Sunday School Board, will be of interest to all our faithful Sunday school workers: Total Sunday school enrollment, 1,975,001—an increase of 239,822 over the enrollment of 1920; Sunday school pupils joining the church, 100,589; Centenary payments in the Sunday school, $331,081; total raised for Missions in the Sunday school, $473,769; raised for all purposes, $2,715,376; number of training students enrolled, 15,279; leadership-training credits awarded, 16,005.

The Advocate learns with great sorrow of the sudden death of Mr. M. H. Turner, of Vossburg, Miss., on Sunday, January 29. He was a loyal Methodist, a devout Christian, and a great friend of the preachers. This editor, when a boy, knew him and loved him, and he feels a sense of personal loss in his going away. To his sorrowing family the Advocate extends sincere sympathy and prays that divine grace may sustain them in this dark hour.

CHURCH ATTENDANCE CONTEST.

We have received the following reports concerning the Sunday evening attendance upon the services of the churches in the Louisiana Conference engaged in an attendance contest, the figures boing for Sunday evening, February 5:

Lake Charles, 227; Minden, 125; Noel Memorial, Shreveport, 160; Ruston, 244.

We commend this contest as being a fine means of encouraging attendance at the Sunday evening services, and we trust many other churches will enter it. Reports should be in the Advocate office on Monday in order to be included in the Advocate of that week.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. J. B. Cain, Oak Ridge, Miss., 2; Rev. J. C. Chambers, Jackson, Miss., 3; Rev. R. H. Clegg, Raleigh, Miss., 2; Rev. C. A. Northington, Lambert, Miss., 3; Rev. A. A. Simms, Florence, Miss., 3; Rev. L. W. Cain, Franklinton, La., 5; W. A. Turner, Baton Rouge, La., 13; Rev. A. J. AN APPEAL.

To the Methodist of the Mississippi Conference.

Dear Friends: Rev. W. W. Moore, the pastor of [illegible] and Back Bay churches at Biloxi, Miss., is doing purely a missionary work. He has purchased and furnished his home with his own funds. The small salary he receives, and all he can get from the mission fund is really not sufficient for the support of his family. He needs a Ford car. How many of the friends of this worthy cause are willing to help buy it for the work? If the people will pay for this car, we will keep it for the pastors, who from time to time serve that mission. Moore is doing a great work, walks a great deal more than his physical strength permits. This is the first request for help that I have ever made through the Advocate, and my reason for so doing is because of the needs and worthiness of the cause. If some one has a used car that is in good condition they can donate, let us know. Send contributions to Rev. W. W. Moore, box 700, Biloxi, Miss. Receipts for all amounts will be acknowledged.

Yours for the cause,
W. M. SULLIVAN, P. E.,
Seashore District.

THE VITALITY OF RELIGION.

The liberty, the freedom, the democracy we spoke so much about are big ideas and require more of those enjoying their benefits than we are apt to realize. I see no vehicle but the church, with its message to the secret spirit of men, by which to fashion an essential character. This institution, imperfect as it is, divided as it is, partial, [illegible], pew-rented, full of dry-bone doctrine and deadly traditionalism, is, in spite of all its defects, the one institution dedicated to making character and basing its message upon the Sermon on the Mount. This badly battered, upheaved world needs nothing so much as a high type of integrity and lofty character, the making of which is the real work of religion.—Dr. Karl Reiland.

SMALL AND GREAT.

You have trusted Him in a few things, and He has not failed you. Trust Him now for everything, and see if He does not do for you exceeding abundantly above all that you could ever have asked or thought, not according to your power or capacity, but according to His own most blessed will. You find no difficulty in trusting the Lord with the management of the universe and all the outward creation, and can your case be any more complex or difficult than these, that you need to be anxious or troubled about His management of it?—Hannah Whitall Smith.

THE REGIMENT OF GOD.

Every mason in the quarry, every builder on the shore,
Every woodman in the forest, every boatman at the oar,
Hewing wood and drawing water, splitting stones and clearing sod,
All the dusty roads of labor in the regiment of God,
March to go[illegible] toward his temple, do the task his hands prepare;
Honest toil is holy service, faithful work is praise and prayer. —Technical World Magazine.

The precepts of Jesus are the essential element of his religion. Regard these as your rule of life, and you build your house upon a rock. Live them out indeed, and you have entered the kingdom of heaven—you even now enter it.—Channing.

Obituaries

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

The subject of this sketch, AUBRY EUGENE YOUNGBLOOD, was born September 20, 1905, and died November 29, 1921. Aubry was one of the best little boys in the community and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at the age of six. The funeral was conducted at the family graveyard at Nebo church by Dr. Grafton, the Presbyterian minister, of Union Church, Miss., his pastor being away at Conference. One touching incident connected with the burial of the young man was, his school friends, by whom he was greatly beloved, acting as pall bearers. Aubry was the first one of the family to die, so the family is sorely grieved. But dear ones, let us bow to the will of our Heavenly Father who doeth all things well. May it not be that our Heavenly Father has taken Aubry home to be with Jesus just to draw our minds away from the things of this world, and to get us to place our affections on Him? So dear friends, let us not grieve as those who have not hope, but may the words of Jesus comfort your hearts when. He says: "I am the resurrection and the life. Whosoever believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live. And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die." His pastor,

C. H. HERRING.

Perth, Miss.

Hon. O. L. KENNEDY, of Lee County, Miss., whose residence has been Saltillo for some years, recently died in the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. J. Allen, of Clayton, Tunica County, where he and his good wife had gone to spend the winter. He passed to the spirit world January 16, 1922. He died in his 76th year, being born October 15, 1846, near Baldwyn, Miss. He was married to Miss Mattie Virginia Thompson, near Guntown, Miss. Brother Kennedy was a devout Christian. He joined the Methodist Church early in life, at 17. He represented his County in the Legislature, and had held office in his County much of his time. He was a great lover of his church. He fully believed the Methodist church holds the true doctrine of the Bible. He would become greatly inspired under a real gospel sermon, and yet he was not a sectarian, but knew the doctrines of his church and loved them. His devotion to his friends was beautiful and always deep and sincere. His home was always open to the itinerant Methodist preacher. Of the many great qualities of this noble man, was his conversational superiority. He was a real instructor and entertained at the same time. As his presiding elder for four years, I was often in his home. What an inspiration were those visits to the often tired and worn preacher! Those visits will linger with this writer forever. To Brother and Sister Kennedy were born seven children. Five are still living: Mrs. H. J. Allen, Clayton, Miss.; Mrs. J. S. Wester, Ferris, Tex.; Hon. L. T. Kennedy, Natchez, Miss.; Mrs. J. A. Pratt, Dallas, Tex., and Mrs. A. C. Caldwell, Shreveport, La. The good wife and companion and these children, with a number of grandchildren, also a host of kindred, are left to mourn his going, but not as those who have no hope.

W. M. YOUNG.

Leland, Miss.

Beneath a wealth of flowers JOHN L. DAVIS sleeps in a new-made grave. Just at twelve o'clock, Friday, December 30, 1921, surrounded by his wife and six children, he quietly left his earthly house and went to live with God. He was born August 9, 1847, joined the Methodist Church in early life, and lived a consistent member of Concord until his death. He loved his pastor and was a faithful attendant upon all the ordinances of the church. He was best known as a churchman and a Christian. Yes, he has gone; but his works will live on and on. Oh, how we miss him in our Sunday school! He was ever ready to lend a helping hand. He has set an example of true citizenship, and long may it exist. We weep not as those that have no hope, for our loss is Heaven's gain. God needed him for some great, noble work in the world beyond. "In my Father's house are many mansions," and in those mansions he now dwells. He leaves a wife, four sons, two daughters, and several grandchildren, besides a host of relatives and friends, to mourn his death. His remains were laid to rest at Concord cemetery. Rev. J. H. Holladay, assisted by Rev. E. E. McKeithen, conducted the service, after which the Masons took charge. He had for many years been a patient sufferer—had almost lost his hearing entirely—but no murmur or complaint crossed his lips, no frown of dissatisfaction shadowed his noble Christian face. It is hard to give him up, but let us bow in humble submission to the will of God. He has gone to join our precious mother and other dear ones; and may each one of us live so that we may be an unbroken family in Heaven.

We call not back the dear departed,
Anchored safe where storms are o'er;
On the border-line we left them,
Soon to meet and part no more.

Though cast down, we're not forsaken,
Though afflicted, not alone.
Thou didst give and thou has taken—
Blessed Lord, thy will be done.

ONE WHO LOVED HIM.

MEETING TO BE HELD AT DURANT, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Arrangements have just been made to have Rev. George Tucker, the railroad evangelist, of Jackson, Tenn., come to us. here in Durant, Sunday, February 19, and spend two weeks or more in an evangelistic campaign.

It is desired by our people that the near-by pastors, and the people of their charges, come into the services, and help us, as well as get inspiration. Services will be held morning and evening, the exact hours to be announced later, from Sunday, February 19, to Sunday, March 5.

Earnest prayer is asked of every one who may read this for success.

R. P. NEBLETT, Pastor.

Durant, Miss.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE ASSEMBLY, JUNE 5-11.

Dear Mississippi Epworthians:

Plans are now being made for the very first assembly of the Mississippi Conference Epworth League. The time has been set as June 5-11, inclusive. Keep these dates in mind so that you will not make any conflicting engagements.

In recent years we have made wonderful progress in Epworth League work. The growth in numbers, interest and enthusiasm has been phenomenal. In fact, we have now outgrown the accommodations afforded by the very splendid League Conferences which have been held each summer. It is now deemed wise for us to hold our annual sessions on the assembly plan. By this method those in attendance will be given the opportunity for a longer time for study, and the instruction will be of a more definite and intensive nature. Already, some splendid instructors have been secured for our 1922 session, and others will soon be added to the list.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, of Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss., has proposed to care for the assembly at the very small cost of $1 per day per person. Every Epworth League chapter should send at least one delegate for each ten members of the chapter. Begin now to make provision for sending your delegates to the Twentieth Annual Conference and First Annual Assembly of the Mississippi Conference Epworth League.

Very sincerely,
ERMA M. KILE,
Conference Secretary.

Home-made Remedy Stops Coughs Quickly

The best cough medicine you ever used. A family supply easily and quickly made. Saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for healing the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

AN INTERESTING AND HELPFUL MEETING.

On Monday, January 30, the Woman's Missionary Society of Pearl River Avenue, McComb, Miss., had a special service, it being Monday after the fifth Sunday. Thirty members were present, including honorary members. It met at the home of Mrs. Finn, on Pearl River Avenue. Among the visitors present were: Rev. W. A. Terry, their former pastor, who deserves special credit for this wide-awake society, and Rev. G. H. Thompson, pastor at Centenary, McComb. Both of these pastors made appropriate talks. It was just an informal meeting, and was enjoyed by all present. The spiritual tide was manifest. The refreshments were elegant and appetizing. The meeting closed with a general good feeling, with all the ladies hopeful for a good, solid, progressive year. Everybody, pray for us.

HALF YOUR LIVING WITHOUT MONEY COST.

Cash Crop Production Costs Con Be Cut in Half By Food and Grain Making and Saving at Home.

Atlanta, Ga.—"No one is wise enough to know or foresee the outcome of the world wide financial and palitical mix-up that has followed the world war and the inflated price, joy riding spree that we have all engaged in," said H. G. Hastings, President of the Georgia Association, Georgia's organization for state-wide development.

"The wise farmer in the South will forget the 30 to 40 cent cotton price that led him to disaster in 1920 and figure on a selling price of around 15 cents under conditions of normal yield and acreage which we are very liable to have in 1922. This necessitates reduced cost of cotton making or else being wiped out.

"The cost of cotton or other cash crop making in the South or anywhere else is largely food cost, food for the farmer and his family, food in the shape of grain and forage for his working live stock. With low prices for cotton or other cash crop the farmer cannot afford to pay any outsider profit or expense on the food he, his family and working live stock consume. This means to quit living off supply merchants' shelves and to live off the products of home acres.

"The situation requires chickens, hogs, milk cows and acres of corn, oats, wheat, forage and miscellaneous crops from which to feed them. Last but not least, in importance, is the home vegetable garden which is the quickest and cheapest source of food in the world.

"Most folks here in the South don't taken the home garden serious ly and thereby make a great mistake. There are too many of the lick and a promise sort of gardens and mighty few of the real sure enough kind.

"We have been told repeatedly by those who plan and prepare for a real garden, plant it, tend it and keep it replanted through the seasn, that it furnishes half the family living at no money cost exept the small amount spent for the seeds needed.

"The garden is, or rather should be, the earliest planted. It brings food the quickest. It starts cutting store bills for food the first week anything is ready to use. A little later, half or more needed for the table comes out of the garden.

"If rightly tended and replanted it supplies food all summer and fall, the surplus above daily needs goes into cash or is dried for winter uses. Yes, the right kind of garden is a life-saver, and we all need a life-saver of this kind in 1922."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Cheering news is coming in from all around. Everywhere there are signs of hope. It looks like the biggest year yet.

I have been assisting in making a survey of the Jackson District for the Mission Board. This has revealed some very startling things. It has been hard work and I trust will be helpful to all concerned.

Miss Emma Taylor Hoskins, who is teaching an Indian school out from Heidelberg, has organized a Sunday school for them. Any who have good Bible pictures might pass them on to her. This is a noble work.

The Hawkins Memorial Sunday school reports perhaps one of the best increases thus far. Especially was it gratifying to learn of the great regularity of the officers and teachers.

A letter from Rev. J. Q. Schisler gives a glowing account of the meeting at Meridian in the interest of the Standard Training School for Meridian. I trust that the success will be even greater than it promises.

It is a long look from a cold, rainy afternoon to bright June days, but there is where I am looking. Looking and wondering how many are wishing to be with us at the Training School here in Jackson! It is going to be a great opportunity for us all and I trust that many will take advantage of this privilege. A strong faculty will be ours and we will be well paid for our time and energies put into it.

Pray for the work and workers.

Yours in Him.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NEWS-LETTER TO DISTRICT OFFICERS.

Did you know that the largest contribution given by any church to the China Relief Fund was given by Southern Methodism? $25,000.

Last year the gain of the Southern Methodist Sunday school membership was a little over 93,000. This looks mighty well after the years of loss.

The Mississippi Annual Conference showed a gain of 2,166 in the Sunday school enrollment last year. The indications are that we will show a much larger gain this year.

The Scotland charge has adopted the following as their goal in their Sunday school for the year:

1. Enrollment equal to church membership.
2. Average attendance equal to 100 per cent of enrollment.
3. Every person in reach of Sunday school a member of the Sunday school.
4. A job in the Sunday school for every member.
5. Each class doing some Social Service work.
6. Something definite toward the development of at least two new members.
7. Every teacher bringing at least five to Christ.
8. One young person a volunteer for special service.

A City-wide Wesley Bible Class Federation was launched in Meridian. If carried out, with public meetings occasionally, it will mean much for the quickening of the Sunday school ideal.

Central (Meridian), Capitol Street (Jackson), and First Church, Brookhaven, are the three churches in the Conference with all their classes organized that should be organized. There are other churches perhaps that have organized all classes and have not reported them.

We are making a drive for Standard Elementary Departments. So far we have the following:

Fernwood, Beginners' Department, Rank 3; East McComb, Beginners' Department, Rank 3; Galloway Memorial, Beginners' Department, Rank 1; Galloway Memorial, Primary Department, Rank 3; Galloway Memorial, Junior Department, Rank 3; Capitol Street, Beginners' Department, Rank 1; Capitol Street, Primary Department, Rank 1; Capitol Street, Junior Department, Rank 1.

I feel sure there should be others. Will you help us to get them reported, so that both the Sunday school, the Conference, and the district will get credit?

Pray for the work and the workers. God bless and keep you.

Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS,

Sunday School Field Secretary.

FROM EBENEZER, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We have been returned the second year to the Ebenezer circuit, and well received. Good things have been finding their way to the parsonage. Especially was Christmas a good time to the pastor; the men in the vicinity of Ebenezer made the pastor a present of a brand new army overcoat, which came at a good time—it is very serviceable on a cold Sunday morning. Our first quarterly conference has just been held—it was over double of that a year ago.

NEW STEREOPTICON LECTURE ON AFRICA.

There has recently been prepared a new set of slides on Africa, comprising some of the most interesting pictures that have been taken of our work there. Some of the critics have said this is the best set of pictures made by the Lantern and Slide Department. Six sets have been made in order to supply the demand, as Africa has been a very popular field. The Conference leaders should place their orders well in advance.

WHITEN ROUGH

CHAPPED HANDS

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, which any drug store will supply for a few cents, shake well, and you have a quarter-pint of harmless and delightful lemon-bleach lotion to soften and whiten red, rough or chapped hands. This home-made lemon lotion is far superior to glycerin and rose water to smoothen the skin. Famous stage beauties use it to bleach and bring that soft, clear, rosy-white complexion, because it doesn't irritate. —Adv.

WARM YOUR BLOOD.

A poet has said that "the owl for all his feathers was a-cold." Some people for all their wraps are a-cold whenever they are out-of-doors even in normal winter weather.

It is plain that they need the warmth there is in pure, rich, red blood, which reaches through artery and vein, from head to foot, all over the body. They could be told by many people, from experience, that to have this good blood they should take Hood's Sarsaparilla. This great medicine has really made it possible for men and women, boys and girls, to enjoy cold weather and resist the attacks of disease. It gives the right kind of warmth, stimulates and strengthens at the same time, and its benefits are as lasting as those of any tonic possibly can be. If there is biliousness or constipation, which often occurs as a result of the torpifying effect of cold, Hood's Pills may be taken. They are perfectly compatible with Hood's Sarsaparilla, and are gentle and thorough.

How many objects beginning with "P" can you find in this picture?

Open to Everybody

Come on. Join in the big puzzle game. Your chance to win $5,000 or one of the 14 other big cash prizes. Easy and lots of fun. All you have to do is write down the names of the objects beginning with "P" on this picture and send your list in to us. If your list is largest and nearest correct, the judges will award you first prize; if your list is second largest and nearest correct, you will win second prize, etc.

Get a pencil and paper. Start right now. Find all the objects in the picture beginning with the letter "P", such as "pistol", "picture", etc. See how easy it is. Nothing is hidden. You don't have to turn the picture upside down. Every object is in plain sight. You can find them all. Start right away.

Costs Nothing to Try

All you have to do is send in your list of "P" words. If the judges decide that your list is largest and nearest correct, you will win First Prize of $40 even if you don't send in an order for "More Eggs". But if you order $1 worth of "More Eggs" and you also win First Prize, you will get $300. If you order $2 worth of "More Eggs" and if your list of words wins First Prize, you will get $600. And if you order $5 worth of "More Eggs" and your list is awarded First Prize, you will win $2,000—but if you order $10 worth of "More Eggs" and your list is awarded First Prize, you win $5,000.

Win All You Can You don't have to send in an order for "More Eggs" in order to enter this contest. You can win $40 as First Prize even if you have sent in no order. But if you ordered $10.00 worth of "More Eggs", the same list would win $5,000.00 for you. A difference of $4960.00. Which prize do you want?

Special Offer on "More Eggs" During This Puzzle Contest

2nd Prize	20	150	300	1,000	2,500
3rd Prize	10	75	150	500	1,250
4th Prize	10	50	100	250	625
5th Prize	10	30	60	150	375
6th Prize	6	20	40	100	250
7th Prize	6	15	30	80	200
8th Prize	6	10	20	60	150
9th Prize	4	10	20	40	100
10th to 15th	4	10	20	40	100

Observe These Rules:

1. The contest is open to every man, woman, girl or boy living in America, except employees or relatives of employees of E. J. Reefer. There is no entrance fee of any kind.

2. You must use only one side of paper. You must number your list of names in regular order—1, 2, 3, etc. Your full name and address must be written on each page in the upper right hand corner. Use a separate sheet for anything you may wish to write outside of your list of names and your name and address.

3. English words only will be accepted as they appear in the English dictionary. Obsolete words will not be counted. Both the singular and plural of a word will not count; either one of them may be used.

4. Compounds or words which are made up of two or more complete English words cannot be used.

5. The same spelling of a word will be counted only once even though it is used for different articles or objects, or parts of them. Each article or object can be given only under one name.

6. Two or more people may co-operate in answering the puzzle. However, only one prize will be given to any one household. No prize will be awarded to more than one of any combination outside of the family where a number—two or more—have worked together.

7. If a contestant sends more than one list under the same name, an assumed name, or a pre-married name then all lists of such contestant will be disqualified. If more than one list is sent by any group or by any members of the same group who have co-operated in the preparation of such lists, then all lists of such contestants will be disqualified.

8. All answers must be received through the mail by E. J. Reefer, 9th and Spruce Streets, Philadelphia, Pa., and must be post-marked by Post Office closing time, March 11, 1922.

9. The first prize will be awarded for the answer containing the largest and most nearly correct list of the names of visible objects and articles beginning with the letter "P" shown in the picture. No other consideration, such as neatness, style or handwriting, will have any bearing in making the decision.

10. The full amount of any of the prizes will be awarded each contestant in the event of a tie.

11. The decision will be made by three judges entirely independent of and having no connection with E. J. Reefer. They will judge the answers submitted and award the prizes at the end of the contest. Participation in the contest carries with it the acceptance of the decision of the judges as final and conclusive.

12. All answers will receive full consideration whether or not "More Eggs" is purchased. At the end of the contest, when all have been graded, the names of the prize winners will be announced and the list of words will be sent upon request to any participant who sends us a stamped, addressed envelope.

Young People's Honor Roll.

The following Young People's societies have reached the Standard of Excellence and thereby have been placed on the Roll of Honor for 1921: Union, Newton, Forest, Philadelphia, Decatur, Gibson Memorial, Centerville, Pelahatchie, Waynesboro, Crawford Street, Bay St. Louis.

The young people in these societies are to be congratulated on the splendid work they have done under the consecrated leadership of their respective superintendents. I want to urge these societies to be represented at the Annual Conference in McComb, to receive the banners they have won, and take part in a special presentation of the young people's work.

Let every Y. P. M. S. send a delegate to attend this conference. Take the matter up at once in your business meetings and elect your delegate.

With all good wishes and prayers for every Y. P. M. S. in our Conference.

MRS. J. M. SMITH,
Conference Superintendent of Young People's Work.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Annual Meeting.

Dear Auxiliary Presidents: The Annual Meeting will be held in Water Valley, March 7-10 and you are urged to elect your delegate and send her name, as soon as possible, together with date of arrival in that city, etc., to Mrs. W. B. Barry, Water Valley, Miss.

Please send me the list of those members from your auxiliary whose names should appear on the memorial list right away, and I will turn same over to the person selected to hold the memorial service. Give name, of what auxiliary a member, and date of member having passed away.

It is very important that the District Secretaries and Mrs. T. M. Clark, Tupelo, have a correct list of all officers of your auxiliary. They make duplicate lists and send to Conference officer requiring same. I have now all lists of Presidents and Superintendents of Mission Study for 1922, that have been sent these officers, showing only 135 of the 176 Adult Auxiliary officers. Now the remaining 41 will not receive the literature; maybe they have not yet had a Year Book. I have on hand about 25, also a number of February Bulletins, with "Information for Leaders," which I will mail to proper officers when I have their names.

MRS. C. A. NEAL,
Superintendent Mission Study and Publicity, Carrollton, Miss.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Texas Avenue Young People, Shreveport, La.

The Young People's Mission Society of Texas Avenue Church, Shreveport, had a special meeting Wednesday evening, as it was the last meeting that their Superintendent, Mrs. Barron, could be with them before leaving the city.

The church was beautifully decorated and each member wore a cap carrying out the color scheme. A splendid program was rendered, consisting of vocal and instumental music, and a missionary address by Mr. Colquitt. The installation of officers for the coming year was appropriately conducted by the pastor, Rev. R. S. Walton. Our State Organizer, Mrs. B. F. Key, made a very helpful and inspiring address, specially emphasizing the fact that Christ wants the young life given to Him in service before the beauty has faded and the strength has been spent. An exceptionally pleasing feature was a round chorus rendered by the society.

Mrs. Barron was given a rising vote of thanks for her past service, with regrets at her departure.

MRS. R. S. WALTON.

From Social Service Superintendent.

My Dear Friends: As you begin your work as Social Service Superintendent in the Woman's Missionary Society for the year 1922, I am wondering if you are considering it a burden or are you thinking of it as a shining path of service which you may walk in company with the Master. With all my heart I trust the latter is true, for then you will not only succeed, but the work will be a constant source of joy to you.

To those of you who are new in the work we extend a hearty welcome to our ranks, assuring you that we will be glad for any suggestions you may offer for making this department of our Woman's Missionary Society more efficient and far-reaching. Whenever you have an out-of-the-ordinary program, tell us about it.

We would particularly call your attention to the suggestions for Interracial work. If this committee was not appointed at your January meeting, see to it that it is appointed at the next meeting WITHOUT FAIL. Every auxiliary reporting the organization of a Friendship Community Club will be placed on the Social Service Honor Roll, with the name of the superintendent: this Honor Roll to be displayed at our Annual Meeting in De Ridder in February or March.

Assuring you of my desire to be helpful to you in whatever way I can and with an earnest prayer for your success, I am

Sincerely,
MRS. W. W. HOLMES.

Names For Memorial Roll.

Every auxiliary is asked to send in names of all members who have died during the year that a fitting memorial may be prepared and a tribute paid to those who have gone to their Heavenly Home. Send names to Mrs. W. T. Cunningham, Natchitoches.

It is with great pleasure we announce that our own Mrs. Lipscomb will be our guest of honor at the De Ridder Conference.

MOTHER, QUICK! GIVE CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP FOR CHILD'S BOWELS

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, a teaspoonful will never fail to open the bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation poison, sour bile and waste from the tender, little bowels and gives you a well, playful child again.

Millions of Mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

IS WEST MONROE THE BANNER CHURCH IN AVERAGE ACHIEVEMENT THE LAST TWO YEARS?

In the beginning of the Conference year 1920, West Monroe had 147 members. With that as a base for a ratio calculation, is West Monroe the banner church in average achievement, counting the last two years? Let us see: By the minutes she doubled her membership, with 21 over. That means clean roll. Received 263 members and 112 on profession. No evangelist was used and the majority were received at regular appointment or service.

Recipe For Gray Hair

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.—Adv.

MONTHS OF SUFFERING

How a Baltimore Girl Recovered Her Health

Baltimore, Maryland.—"For several months I suffered with severe backache and general weakness. I could not sleep comfortably at night for pains in my back. I found your book at home one day and after reading it began at once to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have had very good results and some of my girl friends are taking it now. You may use this letter to help other girls, as the letters in your book helped me."—ROSE WAIDNER, 3018 Roseland Place, Baltimore, Md.

That is the thought so often expressed in letters recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. These women know what they have suffered, they describe their symptoms and state how they were finally made well. Just plain statements, but they want other women to be helped.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a medicine made from medicinal roots and herbs, and without drugs, to relieve the sickness women so often have, which is indicated by backache, weak feelings, nervousness, and no ambition to get anything done or to go anywhere. It has helped many women. Why not try it?

Two years ago there was no League. Now they have 120 Leaguers. That surpasses every League in the State except First Church in Shreveport. The Leagues were only a year and half old at Conference time. Many of these young Leaguers pray in public.

Money raised for all purposes during the two years, $28,228. Only eight churches in the Conference report property of more value than does this church.

You are invited to examine the records of the Sunday school and the Woman's Missionary Society for comparison. By error, the Sunday school was reported in Minutes $336 short of what they raised.

The high standard of work done by the Sunday school can not be put on paper, neither the work of the Woman's Missionary Society. But as figures go, is West Monroe the "Banner Church in the Conference" in point of average achievement, calculated upon the ratio of 147 members to begin with two years ago?

Let any preacher who thought he made the banner report examine well the Minutes and then calculate as directed above and call attention to the church, putting forth the figures from the Minutes. I feel this attention is due this heroic little band.

NOTE FROM A LONG-TIME SUBSCRIBER.

I want to say that I am glad that so many of the pastors pledged their co-operation to the editor in the circulation of the paper. Our pastor, Rev. J. F. Owen, is wide-awake on the sub-[illegible] soliciting subscribers. I have been a subscriber for 25 or 30 years, and can truthfully say that the editorials through these years have been worth to me many times the cost of the paper.

I had the pleasure of spending two days at the session of the North Mississippi Annual Conference. I heard the Bishop's sermon, and met several of my former pastors, but failed to meet others, which was a sad disappointment to me. A look into their faces and a hand-clasp stirred the pages of memory and brought up many gospel messages I had heard them deliver, which have been an inspiration to me through the years that have intervened.

As I looked over that large body of preachers and workers on the firing line, awaiting their appointments to some field, ready for the fight, like Paul, I thanked God and took courage. I wish for each three hundred and sixty-five days of good health, a good measure of spiritual strength, and a great ingathering of souls.

MARTHA RYE.

FROM RIPLEY, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: We are glad to be able to send you a good report from Ripley station. Our association and work with the people here is pleasant, and every indication is that the work of the Lord is prospering. This is a loyal church; many are truly spiritual. We received thirteen into the church on profession of faith yesterday; have a net increase this year of twenty-two. Last Wednesday night we had one hundred at prayer meeting. The average attendance at Sunday school the present quarter has been one hundred and twenty. The Missionary society, with the Young People's and Juniors, is doing a splendid work. Our first quarterly conference will be held next Monday.

The local treasurer reports to me that all pledges due to date for the Christian Education Movement have been sent to the Conference Treasurer.

We are planning to organize a Junior congregation at an early date and expect great things from the Juniors of the church this year. We are seriously hindered in our Sunday school work because of crowded condition of church building. We are laying plans for enlarging and remodeling the church this year. God has had, in days past, men and women in the church here who laid deep and well the foundations of Methodism, and we are reaping to-day where they have sown.

S. A. BROWN, P. C.

FROM ACONA, MISS.

Dear Brother Editor: If you will give space for a brief report from the rural station of Acona, we will thank you. This is our second year with this good people. We received a hearty welcome on being returned here for another year. At once the friends began showing their appreciation by many substantial tokens. Almost every day there is some little expression of thoughtfulness and kindness. For all this we are heartily grateful.

We have been very unusually smitten with afflictions and suffering during the recent months. Four of our members have had to undergo very serious operations. But we have all just about recovered, except Miss Rosa McRae, who is suffering very intensely, and I now take this opportunity to ask the readers of our Advocate to join us in prayer for this good woman's recovery.

Our League is doing a very fine grade of work in all the departments. It is difficult to get the various sections to functioning properly, but once at work it is hard to estimate the good that may be done.

Our elder, Dr. Pope, was with us the fifteenth, and delivered an interesting sermon on the subject of Optimism. He seems to feel the need of a more hopeful view of life, and is it not true that things are very much as we look at them? The glass through which we look gives color to the landscape of life.

Our watch-night service was an occasion long to be remembered. The League and friends met at the parsonage on the evening of the last day of the dying year, spent a few hours of pleasant conversation and innocent games, then all marched to the church singing, "Where He leads me, I will follow." At the church the watch-night program gotten out by our League department was beautifully carried out by the many Leaguers, led by our gifted first superintendent, Miss Fannie Bailey. Many resolutions and pledges were made, and as the year passed we were bowed in prayer to Him who is without beginning of days or end of time, and with whom "One day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day."

Very truly,

J. A. POE.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

NOTHING TO WORRY ABOUT.

We would not for a moment suggest that it would be wise for any man to blind himself to the evils that are rampant in the world to-day. To deny that evils exist is to confess our inability to read the simplest signs of the times; and to be unconcerned about them is evidence of an indifference that is positively wicked. But there is no occasion for a pessimism that overlooks the good altogether and that spends its time weeping and wailing over the sad state into which we have fallen. The times call for men and women who have courage enough to face any desperate situation, who have faith enough to believe that the right must ultimately prevail, and who have determination and energy enough to throw themselves whole-heartedly into the fight for better things. It is inspiring to know that the fight for better things is going on and that we may have a place beside those who are holding up and carrying forward the banner of righteousness. Only the fearful of heart will hang back and predict disaster to those who have enrolled themselves in a good cause and are already raising the song of triumph as their enemies flee before them. The hand of the Lord is not shortened, that it cannot save, neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear, and all the resources of Omnipotence are pledged to those who put their trust in God and follow his leadership against the hosts of wickedness. It is a hard fight—but it is a fight for the right, and there is nothing to worry about. The Lord is still saying to us: "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace, that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation, that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth! The voice of thy watchmen! they lift up the voice, together do they sing; for they shall see eye to eye, when Jehovah returneth to Zion. Break forth into joy, sing together, ye waste places of Jerusalem; for Jehovah hath comforted his people, he hath redeemed Jerusalem. Jehovah hath made bare his holy arm in the eyes of all the nations; and all the ends of the earth have seen the salvation of our God."

THE PROGRAM OF THE CHURCH.

The program of the church for the present quadrennium will reach its culmination with the meeting of the General Conference at Hot Springs next May. It is a great program, and it is being carried forward with all the energy of those to whom its execution was committed—but it is not finished. The outstanding features of this program are the Centenary Missionary Movement and the Christian Education Movement, both of which are inseparably bound up with the evangelistic campaign, which is the all-time program of the church. What shall be the report of the leaders of these great Movements when they are called upon to give an account of their stewardship a few months hence? We must never forget that the liberality, faithfulness, and loyalty of the church at large will be reflected in these reports, and that every member of the church has a part in making these reports good or bad. No matter how far short we have fallen at the present time, it is possible for us between now and the assembling of the General Conference to go forward to an extent that will enable us as a church to report the glorious accomplishment of all that we have undertaken to do. Without in any way lessening our evangelistic efforts, the great work before us now is to pay our Centenary and educational pledges. We are not called upon to undertake new responsibilities and obligations, but to discharge those we have already assumed. This responsibility is not general and indefinite, but personal and definite. Each member of the church knows exactly what he promised to do in behalf of these great causes at stated times, and it is the redemption of these promises that now rests upon us. When the appeal is made to the individual subscriber—as it will be made soon—the response should be prompt, hearty, and as full as possible. Great things in the Kingdom of God wait upon the performance of our vows to the Lord.

"THE CURE FOR SICK CHURCHES."

In a recent number of the Country Gentleman appeared an article under the caption, "Big Country Churches," in which the writer described a Mennonite church at Berne, Indiana, a town with a population of about 1500, which has a normal congregation of about one thousand people each Sunday, and a Sunday school with an average attendance during the fifty-two Sundays of 1920 of 928. In answer to the statement of the author of the article that church leaders everywhere are trying to find out why the rural church is losing its hold on the people, one of the teachers of the Sunday school said: "I know that, but it's not only the rural church, it's the town church and the city church, too; and I can give you a prescription for the cure of all the sick churches in the world; it will raise any church from the dead. Here's the formula: One chapter of the Bible, and one fervent prayer; mix, and take each morning after rising, and each night before retiring, in the home, with the family gathered round. Let that remedy spread throughout a neighborhood and it will cure that tired feeling in the worst rundown church and make it sing and shout so loud you can hear it for miles. We Mennonites have family worship. We live our religion in our homes and lives six days in the week, and bring it to church with us on the seventh day so we can all unite in worship and singing and Bible study, and present it to the world. Too many communities keep their religion for show only one day in the week, in the church, and they have none in their homes. That's why their churches are weak." We should like to see this remedy tried in a good many churches we know of. It is worthy of note, also, that this church at Berne has a daily vacation Bible school for young people.

THE POWER OF THE PULPIT.

We believe it is still true that the pulpit is the throne of greatest power in modern life; perhaps we should say that it may easily become again the throne of greatest power. We are minded to say this because we have been noticing with what eagerness people generally go to hear a man who has a real message, and have been hearing them say how much such preaching has helped them. We fear that one reason for the failure of the pulpit to command the respect it deserves is to be found in the fact that too many of us preachers fail to take the ministry of the pulpit seriously enough. No great sermon can ever be preached without preparation. Sometimes that preparation has been of a general kind, and the sermon itself may have seemed to be composed extemporaneously—but it grew out of a great heart and a great mind constantly busying themselves with the great themes of the gospel and the great issues of life. More often, however, the great sermon—the real message that touches the inner lives of those who hear it—is prepared through hours and days and weeks of meditation, prayer, reading of the Bible, searching in difficult places for the theme and thought and form of expression that will make truth both attractive and powerful. In preaching, the real test of greatness is helpfulness. If "hungry sheep look up and are not fed," it must be that the shepherd has not taken the trouble to provide the nourishment they need—and no true shepherd will think any trouble too great for him to take to provide for the flock committed to his care. For the preacher who thinks the sermon is only incidental to his ministry, these words will have no meaning.

MAKE THE MOST OF THEM.

We may have a great many cloudy days, when the sun seems to have disappeared from the heavens; but gloriously beautiful days do come sometimes. We may not forget the bad days—but we can make the most of the good ones we do have.

WALKING WITH GOD.

It is better to walk in the dark with God
  Than to run in the light alone.
Yea, better the thorniest path ever trod,
Where the briers are thick and our feet unshod,
If only we follow His voice and rod,
  Than without Him to march to a throne.

It is better with Him when the billows dash high
  On the breast of the mad Galilee—
Tho' the Master may sleep, he will wake at our cry,
Or he will come on the waves saying: "Peace,
  it is I."
Better this than a calm with no helper thus nigh,
  Or without him to sail a smooth sea.

—Alexander Blackburn, D.D., in the Outlook.

A JOURNEY TO THE ORIENT—PEKING TO HARBIN.

By Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker.

VIII.

In Peking there are more interesting and remarkable monuments of Chinese history and genius than in any other place. On the present site there was a city twelve hundred years before Christ. In the tenth century the Tartars established themselves here and nearly four hundred years later the Mongol Kublai Khan rebuilt the city, which became known to Europe as Cambaluc. Two huge masses of brick survive this period, presenting some intimations of progress toward the architectural types that have been brought to perfection by the Chinese and, like their idiographic writing, imposed by these wonderful intellectual conquerors of all their military conquerors upon the other peoples of the Far East. But these towers lack the airy grace and exquisite adornment that the Chinese have succeeded in imparting to structures the mass of which is disguised by conscious art. In Gothic architecture a similar result is achieved by an entirely different method; the effects of long, dim vistas and ever-uplifting influences of the pointed arch, clustered column, groined ceiling, flying buttress and spires and finials are substituted in Chinese architecture without great height and over relatively large areas by an ingenious system of repetitions and the curled roofs that refuse to point downward.

It has become quite a vogue with foreigners to build in Chinese style, usually with indifferent success, partly because foreign architects fail to catch the spirit of Chinese art, and therefore become mere imitators instead of creators, partly because those for whom they build are not willing to pay the price. In the case of the hospital and medical school of the Rockefeller China Medical Board, they seem to have succeeded, despite the exactions of a modern scientific institution; but that was at the staggering cost of ten millions of dollars (Mexican) for the whole plant! What a pity ten great hospitals instead had not been built in ten great cities, thus diffusing the benefits of this magnificent gift where the greatest amount of relief could have been afforded the largest number and where correspondingly increased means of educating practicing physicians for China could have been multiplied! Perhaps it is too soon to assess the value of the Rockefeller Institution. It is avowedly for research on lines the same as those developed and followed in Berlin or New York, and limits the number of students by high entrance tests. The hospital contains only about one hundred and fifty beds—no more than our own hospital in Soochow. Perhaps the scientist advisers of Mr. Rockefeller are right; but it is to be feared that the munificent donor will be disappointed of the hope he expressed at the opening that the missionary and evangelistic motives of the Union Hospital and Medical School that it had supplanted might suffer no diminution. The warfare between science and religion is not, as was at one time supposed, between spiritual religion and ascertained facts and the ascertained processes of nature, but is in the self-sufficiency of scientists, who are given to pressing the claim of science as sufficient for life, thereby denying that "there is a spirit in man, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth him understanding." The Union Hospital and Medical School have passed from the churches to the scientists. Whither shall we look for the missionary motive? Certainly to the church, "the body of Christ," "the pillar and ground of truth." But the church no longer determines the policy of this institution. Whence its gospel motive?

The city of Peking is, in fact, four cities. From the Chisu Men station, when one leaves the Pukow-Tientsin Railroad, one goes through a gateway penetrating the wall into the Chinese city; northward he is in the Tartar City. Surrounding the Tartar City is a wall sixty feet thick at the base, forty feet on the top and fifty feet high, not only guarding the city from without, but effectually concealing it. The walls of the Chinese city, which forms the top of a Gothic T, the Tartar City being the perpendicular, are thirty feet high, twenty-five feet at the base and fifteen feet at the top. Together their outside length is thirty miles and the enclosure covers an area of twenty square miles. In the center of the Tartar City is the Imperial City, surrounded by walls twenty feet high and covering two square miles. Within the Imperial City is the Forbidden City, which until the defeat of the Boxers was inaccessible to all foreigners. I was content to view from an eminence in the enclosure of the Winter Palace the lakes and grounds of this defended precinct, although through the legations visitors may now obtain access to the outer enclosure, not to the inner, when in the midst of his court and myrmidons of eunuchs the potential emperor resides. Just under the wall on the south side of the Tartar City is the Legation Quarter, in which only foreigners are supposed to reside, and which in itself is a distinct city, thus making the four. A very great part of the Chinese City is occupied by the Temple of Heaven and the Altar of Agriculture, which together cover an area about equal to that of the Imperial City.

At Shanghai I had met the Rev. Dr. Frank B. Gamewell of the Methodist Episcopal Mission, and then remembered his remarkable work as engineer in charge of the defences of the Legation Quarter during the Boxer uprising. As I walked through the handsome streets of the Legations, with the exception of the British, which is an old Chinese palace, comprising some of the finest of European architecture, I thought of that awful siege and of the heroic resistance of the small military guards assisted by missionaries and other foreign residents, while daily, sometimes hourly, attacks were being made and from the high wall a constant bombardment was maintained. There was no wireless telegraph twenty-one years ago when these things were happening and only through the heroism of a Christian Chinese youth was the world acquainted with the desperate situation of the foreigners. The memory of Chinese treachery is kept fresh by the patrols of foreign troops that guard this portion of the city wall as a precaution against its use for another attack.

Of course I visited the Temple of Heaven, the Winter Palace, and such other buildings as my scant leisure permitted. The Methodist Episcopal Church has a hospital, college and other missionary developments in Peking; so have the other churches; and the Roman Catholics are in evidence with a great cathedral building and other churches. As I am devoting my time to our missions, I miss many interesting things that the traveler for pleasure or culture finds of paramount interest. Incidentally I went to the American Legation to attend Armistice Day service, and was completely disgusted that no place whatever for prayer had been made on the program. The singing of "America" was the full length of recognition given to God, whom the nation in its travail of 1917 and 1918 implored for aid in the hour of trial. The service at the British Legation was essentially and consistently a Christian service. It is evidently the misunderstanding of certain public servants that the American principle of the separation of Church and State is a repudiation of the Christian religion. If this be a right interpretation, we may as well quit singing, "Land of the Pilgrims' pride," and fall a remediless descent into atheistic immorality and sordid materialism.

Leaving Peking by the Peking-Mukden Railroad, alone in a corridor sleeping car compartment, one enjoys comforts of railroad travel equal to those in America and the appointments of the Wagons-Lits cars are convenient and luxurious. In this part of the world Wagons-Lits are among the traveler's greatest aids. They not only own sleepers after the manner of the Pullman Company, but conduct hotels and are excellent tourist bureau. The extent of the tourist business is further indicated by the presence also of branch offices of Thomas Cook & Son, whose banking arrangements, interpreters and guides relieve the globe-trotter of all anxiety and attend to every detail of travel, and the American Express Company, furnishing similar facilities. In addition, one finds in Japan the offices of the Japan Tourist Bureau. I awakened early in order to obtain from the car window a view of the Great Wall, through a gap in which the railroad passes at Chin-wang-tao. I could have seen it by making a half-day's journey from Peking, but leisure was lacking. There it was, visible in its undulating course over hill and vale, truly as pictured in the long-remembered school geography of boyhood. It is fifteen hundred miles long and at intervals of two hundred yards is re-enforced by towers. It is faced with masonry, is 15 to 25 feet thick at the base, 12 feet at the top, and 20 to 50 feet high. The wall and the railroad are antinomies, both built by Chineso at periods more than two thousand years apart; and yet how little has the spirit of China changed during all those centuries; it is still a land of contradictions and baffles the analysis of the West by strangely irreconcilable manifestations of childishness mixed with profound wisdom. Would not the expenditure of some of the billions that went into the construction of the wall, the application of the genius of some of the engineers that planned and supervised it, and the employment of a part of the myriads of masons and coolies who wrought in it, in military expeditions have better controlled the Tartar invaders against whom this Titan barrier was ineffectively raised? A like question might be raised concerning that other peerless feat of engineering and construction of ancient China, the Grand Canal, the reason for which was as follows: The seacoast had been so harried by pirates, as the story goes, that the entire population was ordered by Imperial decree to move back from the coast; and to compensate for the loss of sea communications the canal was constructed. The work was completed in the sixth century and has since been justified as one of the most important of China's avenues of trade and travel; and its political importance as a means of binding together the North and the South has been an important factor in unifying the Empire. It is 650 miles long and is capable of carrying a large commerce. But why did they not resort to the quick and effective means of overcoming the pirates by naval and military activities? However, ultimately the peace-loving Chinese prevailed over both Tartar and pirate; so will they also over the armed powers of European exploiters and their aggressive Asiatic neighbor across the Yellow Sea. If we wait long enough, we shall have a fresh demonstration of the truth that "the meek inherit the earth."

At Chin-wang-tao, where the railroad crosses the line of the Great Wall where it used to abut upon the sea, there the traveler leaves China proper and enters Manchuria, a vast country of plains, mountains and rivers, of 370,000 square miles area, sustaining a population of 20,000,000, about one-fourth average density of the population of China proper. In the north are vast forests, but, like China, the greater part of Manchuria is treeless, and therefore subject to drought and flood. There are mines but recently reopened that were worked in the twelfth century, but closed by the Manchu conquerors of China, as they were supposed to inflict bad luck. Emigration from Shantung has implanted a Chinese population as the Manchu conquest has brought a Tartar population to China. It is said that under the vigorous administration of the present governor of the three provinces into which Manchuria is divided, this part of the republic enjoys the best government in China, although also under the rule of an ambitious dictator. Some important officer of the provincial army was on our train, and at every station a detachment of soldiers was drawn up with arms presented to do honor to the great man. But this is Manchuria, not China proper, and the Tartar predilection for arms, not the renunciation of China's pacific ideals, is sufficient to account for this and other militant manifestations. These soldiers appear to be better fed and clothed than the miserable specimens of the provincial armies that one sees in other parts of China. Truly the Chinese soldier excites one's compassion; he is unpaid, ill-fed and insufficiently clothed. It is not to be wondered at that in the civil war that is always going on in some part of the realm, he occasionally betakes him to loot in order to even up.

All day long from the train window one looks out upon vast, fertile plains that are a constant reminder of our American northwest. The weather is cold, but the train is steam-heated, and runs so smoothly that when weary of the scenery one can read with comfort. The dining car service is excellent and the price moderate. An acquaintance of Karnizawa days is recognized and furnishes pleasant company, and a group of Young Men's Christian Association secretaries act as a living guide book, also they reinterpret Manchurian and Siberian politics and economics for one who has just been absorbing prejudices from Mr. J. O. P. Bland's writings. Blessings on the Y. M. C. A. and these sturdy "fellows" who carry on its great work in foreign parts. I have my own criticisms to make, but the emotion of admiration is not favorable to the critical spirit. This great institution in which Protestant Christianity can unite has made its mistakes, but will probably check up as well as most other missionary enterprises, and it is unquestionably filling a distinct place among the agencies of the Kingdom of God. For years I have made my small contributions to its foreign work, sometimes with misgivings; henceforth I shall give with enthusiasm, a cheerful, if not a large, contribution.

Thus the Saturday came to a close and at about half-past eight our train entered the station at Moukden; my friends went on their several ways, and, as I had a day's margin in which to keep my appointment with Dr. Cram in Harbin, still about twenty-four hours' journey ahead, I determined to remain at Moukden and keep Sabbath. It is here that the South Manchurian Railroad connects for Dalren, the beautiful Russian city that was a part of the vast plan for the development of Port Arthur and the realization of Russian ambitions in the Far East. Since 1904 it has all become Japanese. Located in the station is the Yarnato Hotel, operated by the Japanese railroad management, in which one finds excellent entertainment at a moderate price and Japanese courtesy at its best. Passing through the station, I came upon a man of European race, and made an inquiry of him in English, to which he replied Frenchly that he did not understand. This encounter marked for me the passing from the zone of English: but I was over-confident in supposing that French would hereafter avail for intercourse with Europeans as had English in so much of China. At Harbin I had occasion to make a purchase in a drug store, and confidently asked in French for the article wanted. As the intelligent Russian apothecary seemed puzzled, I explained. Still without understanding, he said: "Excuse me, sir, but can you speak English?" But most frequently the demand is, "Spreken sie Deutch?"

Sunday morning in Moukden, the focus of the great battle that did for Japan on the land what the battle of the Strait of Korea did on the sea, is a contradiction in associations. It was that three hundred thousand Japanese equipped and officered to the maximum efficiency attacked twice that number of Russians, and for many days the battle raged until the Russian right began to yield, while their left began to push the Japanese from their positions. Without telephones and with imperfect knowledge of what was going on over the whole extent of the long lines, and fearing an enveloping movement, the Russian general ordered a retreat, and the issue of the Manchurian campaign was no longer in doubt. On each side of the three-mile road that connects the station with the city is a monument, the one to commemorate the Russian, the other the Japanese slain in the battle of Moukden.

Of some such contrast I was thinking at an early waking hour when a knock upon my door lifted me out of bed. It was Cram and Ryang, who had just got in on an early train. My spirit was refreshed as was Paul's when Timothy and Silas came to him in the midst of the loneliness and discouragements of Corinth. Cram is always refreshing. No matter what the labor or responsibility that came to his lot as Assistant Director General of the Centenary, he never lost his resilience, and I never knew the smile quite to disappear, whatever the provocation. Out here it is the same. It would weary my readers were I to catalog all the things Cram does, but he seems not to weary in the doing. As for Ryang, he is as amiable as Cram is joyful. Difficulties have never discouraged him, and he thrives on hard work. As my interpreter in Korea, he became very dear to me, and I then got some knowledge of his versatility. When a boy of 16, the son of heathen Korean parents, he found some tracts in Chinese by Dr. Young J. Allen. As his Korean education had made him familiar with the ideographic writing, he could read them, and through the reading he was converted. Convinced that Young J. Allen was the greatest man in the world, though without money and knowing not a word of Chinese, he made his way to Shanghai and sought Dr. Allen at the Anglo-Chinese College, in Quinsan Road. That was in 1906, and Dr. Allen was in America; but Dr. A. P. Parker took the boy in and instructed him, using the Chinese characters, as they did not possess a common medium of speech. In due time he graduated, and went to America, where he worked on the Pacific coast in our mission to Koreans. He afterwards made his way through the theological department of Vanderbilt University, also studied theology at Yale. Ryang has an Oriental's facility in picking up language, and I am never concerned about making my wants known when he is along. He seems to have no more difficulty among the Chinese of Manchuria, where Mandarin is spoken, than in Shanghai, where they speak the Soochow dialect. Having provided himself with a pocket English-Russian dictionary, in a few days he seems to have acquired the Russian necessary for a traveler; and once, when he had been dickering with a Japanese official, and I asked him what lingo he was talking, he replied: "I try my Japanese on him."

As a mission field, Manchuria has been little cultivated. In Moukden, a Chinese city of 200,000, with a considerable Russian and Japanese population, the only mission of any importance is that of the Scotch and Irish Presbyterians, which has extensive buildings well located upon the bank of the Small River, including a general hospital, a woman's hospital, a medical college, and a girl's normal school. There is also a small English church belonging to the Church Missionary Society. There we attended service, and at the evening hour heard a missionary of the Protestant Episcopal Church (out here self-styled the American Church) describe a great benevolence in which he is engaged—a mission to lepers in Japan. These unhappy victims of an incurable malady were objects of Jesus's healing ministry, and the followers of Jesus can find no work more Christlike; nor have they been indifferent to the call and the opportunity. If they cannot "cleanse" lepers of the fatal virus, they can lead them to the fountain opened for sin and separation from uncleanness.

THE OBLIGATION OF TO-DAY.

By T. S. Southgate.

And this is the beginning of a new year again. How good God has been to us! A reality borne home to all who think straight. Usually a time for new resolutions, which, too often, are not always successful; but would that each loyal Methodist might make at least one resolution and keep it, too, and that is: "Let come what will, God's cause shall not suffer at my hands during these trying days that seem to still linger with us."

Yes, I know times are hard with many of us, and God grant that there may soon come the relief that is so much to be desired.

It has been so from the beginning of time that the innocent have to suffer for the guilty. It may be that many of us may feel that we should be numbered in the class of the innocent; but let's be fair and look at this matter of business depression from the standpoint of the nation as a whole.

During the years 1917-18 it has been estimated that profits accruing to American business and production amounted to the unthinkable sum of sixty billion dollars, and practically all of it the result of the awful war. Yes, the reason our wheat was worth $2.50, our cotton 30 cents and our corn $1.50 was due to the insatiable demand for all we could produce from the ever-ravaged, devastated people of Europe, who were unable to produce anything and were forced to pay whatever we might ask, or die. We took their money, and the profiteer of high prices cried for more.

During this time the record shows that our gifts to God and humanity were only slightly above that which we had been accustomed to do annually before—not one hundredth part what they should have been, consistent with our excess profits. God had no way of compelling us to do our duty to his cause, but the government had, and so instituted a very burdensome tax asking that a large share of these excess earnings be turned in to pay the cost of the war. Many of us writhed and squirmed under it, and some thought the tax actually unfair. But did it occur to you that this same law said to you and me, "Now, if you have made excess profits, you can give to God and his cause a liberal share of it and use the amount so given as an offset against the government tax?"

In other words, the government practically invited us to give liberally to the church consistent with its growing responsibility almost approaching a crisis, and also to humanity in its state of suffering and death, and yet not cost us an extra dollar. Just simply give it to those causes instead of the government.

Well, did we do it? Alas! alas! No, the record is against us. We simply could not part with it. We became so intoxicated with this new state of ownership that we clung to it tenaciously and gave it up only when compelled by the annual tax to do so.

Is not this, for the most part, a true recital of conditions with many? What is the signicance? What is the lesson? Why, we simply failed in our stewardship. God gave the increase suddenly to us as a nation, and we didn't know how to use it. Instead of honoring him with a just share of our increase, we spent it in luxury and self-indulgence. We ran wild with profiteering and a form of riotous living; and so, with even a greater suddenness, he simply sought to save us from ourselves and caused the pendulum to swing in 1919 and 1920. So we find our cotton back to twelve cents, our wheat back to a dollar, corn at forty cents, and other things in relative proportion—all probably because we failed to prove ourselves worthy stewards.

Brethren, let's right about face and be square with God. Let's quit starting our economies with God and his church; rather let's do without something else and resolve for the new year that, "Come what may, we will pay as promised our Centenary and our Educational pledges."

We simply cannot afford to do otherwise; for it's a fact that, had the church been equipped with men and means, accompanied by a world-vision of her limitless power in 1918, with the world at the feet of Christian America, the evangelical church could have taken the world for Christ.

But no, we didn't do it; and we never will do it until we loyally render our tithe, and more, to his service, until we equip our great educational institutions and make them man factories to turn out thousands of trained workers every year, and until we raise the standard of our estimate and appreciation of the greatness and dignity of the church of our Lord.

Let's make a start by paying our pledges already made.

TRAVEL LETTER FROM DR. AND MRS. I. W. COOPER.

On the way from Naples to Rome, we had the first rain we had seen for two months. At first, the sight was very pleasant to us, but soon we discovered that it was not to be altogether an occasion of rejoicing, for the roof of the train began to leak at such a vigorus rate that we felt as if we were almost out-of-doors. However, we were provided with umbrellas, so we put them up, much to the amusement of the conductor and the few natives who were on our coach. They would come to the door of our compartment and look in at the eight Americans sitting under umbrellas, singing, and then they would laugh heartily and talk to each other in Italian. I suppose they thought we were ready for the lunatic asylum.

After a ride of about seven hours, we began to approach Rome, and we became much interested in remains of the old Roman aqueducts which we were passing. They were a series of vast arches of masonry, built up much higher from the ground than we had expected to find them. They are badly broken by time and by those who have wanted materials for other building purposes, but they still give us an impression of their massive solidity and make us rather ashamed of the boasted skill of modern engineering.

Rome is, to-day, as it was in the days of the use of these old aqueducts, the best watered city of Italy. Everywhere you find water—clear as crystal and cold as the mountain snows from whence it comes. It fills more beautiful fountains than are to be found in all the rest of the Italian cities put together. One of these, the Pauline Fountain, we passed on the drive to our hotel.

Our rooms were not so comfortable as those we had left in Naples, but we were not inclined to be critical, for our pension was very centrally located and we were delighted with the appearance of Rome. It is beautiful, clean and modern, more up-to-date than other Italian cities; and yet everywhere one encounters the past and feels that the very stones of the pavements speak and proclaim this the sacred museum of all the ages of history. It seemed just too wonderful that we should be living—even for a few days—in the Eternal City!

Our first visit was to the Church of the Capuchin Fathers. The most interesting object in the upper part of this church was Guido Reni's great painting of St. Michael—truly an angel of light, of strength, and of vengeance, as he crushed Evil with the weight of his body and the sharpness of his spear—a picture long to be remembered for its glorious power. The other sight of interest in this church was just as memorable, though from an entirely different standpoint—the basement where we found the Burial Vaults of the Capuchin monks. These gruesome rooms—or cells—four or five in number, are decorated, walls and ceiling, with the bones of these fathers. These bones are very artistically (?) interwoven, so as to make some sort of design or picture. Each room uses a different type of human bones. One shows a wonderful assortment of skulls. Most of the ceilings, however, are of shoulder-blades. We are afraid that we failed to catch any spiritual significance in this weird exhibition.

We were glad, indeed, to turn from these burial vaults to the Rospigliosi Gallery, where our attention was again centered on the work of Guido Reni—his Aurora. This is one of the largest, most brilliant, and most graceful pictures we saw in any of the art galleries. Its place in the ceiling of the room assures it a wonderful lighting, but makes it uncomfortable for the observer to study it long at a time, unless he is willing to satisfy himself with the reflections of it in mirrors skillfully placed about the room.

The Pantheon was our next objective. It is said to be the pride of Rome, the most perfect among existing classical buildings. Here lie buried some of Italy's most distinguished kings, and here is the tomb of Raphael, who requested to be buried under this glorious dome, which has been the model for St. Peter's dome and for all other buildings of similar structure.

Nearby, we visited the Minerva Church—the only Gothic church in Rome. Fra Angelico's tomb and numerous works of art and history are here; but our attention was centered on Michael Angelo's great statue of Christ—with the cross. This is the original of the study—one of the three of his greatest masterpieces. (It was our good fortune to see the other two, his Moses, and David, at other times.) It was interesting to note that this statue has been so venerated by devout Catholics that a portion of one foot was worn away by frequent kisses. Now a metal cap covers the toes, and there is a prohibition against touching the statue.

As we drove from the Minerva Church to the Capitol, we passed near the wonderful new monument to Victor Emanuel II. Its grand proportions, crescent shape and the shining white of its new marble made it dominate the street and impress even the careless observer.

The two Capitoline Museums are so rich in wonderful statuary that they are well worth the climb of many steps up which one must go to visit them. Three great statues which we saw there stand out in our minds—the Dying Gaul, the Marble Faun and the Thorn Extractor. These pieces of sculpture need no names to help them tell their stories for they speak to us as plainly as any great canvas.

The church of St. Mary's the Major (Santa Maria Maggiore) interested us for its splendor. It is said to be one of the finest and best basilicas of Rome. Its paneled roof is gilded with the first gold brought to Spain from South America and presented to the Pope by Ferdinand and Isabella. It contains two of the most beautiful chapels in the world—the Sistine Chapel of St. Mary's (not of the Vatican) and the Borghese Chapel. Both altars glitter with all manner of precious marbles, lapis lazuli, agate, porphyry and the like—arranged in perfect harmony.

The same afternoon that we saw St. Mary's the Major we visited quite a number of other churches, among them: The Lateran, where popes were formerly crowned; the Basilica of St. John, said to be the mother of all Christian churches; the Basilica of St. Pietro in Vincoli (St. Peter in Chains.) Here we were fortunate enough to be present at a time when St. Peter's chains were on exhibition, as it was St. Peter's Day, and to hear a marvelous story of how an angel united the parts of this chain. Here, too, we saw Angelo's Moses, of which we have spoken.

Near the Lateran, mentioned a moment ago, is a small building containing the Scala Santa, a flight of 28 marble steps said to have come from the house of Pilate and to have been trodden by the feet of Jesus. No one is allowed to ascend them now except on his knees. The Catholic who ascends them in proper spirit, praying devoutly at each step, is promised by the Pope nine years' release from Purgatory. Naturally, Catholics like to visit it, but Protestants do, too, for here Martin Luther, when he got half-way to the top of the stairs, praying as he went, became convinced of the error of many Catholic teachings and resolved, by the grace of God, to defy the Pope. He then rose from his knees and walked down the steps.

St. Peter's with its wonderful dome, many chapels—each a work of art—and its almost innumerable statues, is, perhaps, the largest and most expensive church in the world. By many, it is thought to be the most beautiful. To us, its exterior was more imposing than the interior.

For dignity and classic beauty the Cathedral of St. Paul's, outside the walls, exceeded anything that we saw in Rome. It is built over the spot where St. Paul is believed to be buried. Its wonderful mosaics and the eighty massive granite columns of the interior are its outstanding features. To our minds, it was much more impressive than St. Peter's.

Returning from St. Paul's, we stopped at the Protestant cemetery, to visit the graves of Keats and Shelley. It is a beautiful spot, situated on a hillside and shaded by high brick walls and tall cypress trees. We thought it a fitting resting place for two poets who were as ardent lovers of beauty as these.

One Roman morning stands out most pleasantly in our minds for it was filled by a drive in the Borghese Park and a visit to the Borghese Museum and Art Gallery, which occupy a stately mansion once the home of the Borghese family. Here we found some of the early works of Bernini—so beautiful that it was hard to believe that he had not left his teens when he carved marble in this masterly manner. Here, too, is the wonderfully beautiful recumbent statue of Pauline (Borghese) Bonaparte; while the picture gallery shows two wonderful originals of Titian and Raphael.

One afternoon we spent in visiting the Forum—the Coliseum, the arches of Constantine and Titus, the Temple of Vesta—home of the vestal virgins—the Temple of Fortune and the House of Rienzi. These ruins are too well known through pictures and descriptions for us to speak of them at length—though they spoke through their mute stones more strongly to us of Rome's glorious past than did anything else that we saw. It seemed to us a great pity that modern Rome is gradually encroaching on these historic precincts so that it may not be a great many more years before they will be entirely obliterated.

Next to the Coliseum, the largest and most imposing ruins in Rome are the Baths of Caracalla. This vast pleasure ground could accommodate sixteen hundred bathers at one time. Here, too, were halls for all manner of sports, races—and physical culture; parlors, libraries, dancing-halls and theaters. It is perhaps the world's greatest monument to the God of Pleasure. We marveled, as we looked upon it, not only at the immensity of the place, the millions of Roman coins which must have gone into its construction—but most of all at the progressive ideas some sections of it expressed. Indeed, many times on our journey, and particularly while we were in Rome we found ourselves wondering if the twentieth century is really so great an age after all.

To reach the Baths of Caracalla, we went by a portion of the famous Appian Way—the queen of all roads, in its day. It is still flanked by "avenues of mausoleums" in ruins and by a line of fortifications called the Aurelian Walls. Some miles out on the Appian Way is the chapel of Quo Vadis. It is a sweet, simple little church built over the spot where a pious tradition tells us that the Master met Peter as the latter started to leave Rome, because of persecution. Jesus stopped Peter with the salutation "Whither goest thou?" And Peter returned to duty and to subsequent crucifixion. The footprint of the Savior is shown

The Church has spoken

"The right of way shall be given to the Educational Campaign during the second two years of the quadrennium and during this period the full power of the Church shall be delivered in the Campaign."

This is the voice of the General Conference of 1918. It is the supreme governing body. Its mandate is the final word of authority.

Its action has been twice reaffirmed by every annual conference—yours among them.

The time is short. The need is desperate. By March 15th all first payments must be paid in full.

Until May, 1922, let the Christian Education Movement have "the right of way." To its consummation let "the full power of the Church be delivered."

ITINERATING IN BRAZIL—SAO PAULO, "THE HUB OF METHODISM."

By Dr. E. H. Rawlings.

ARTICLE II.

And now we are in Sao Paulo, called by one of the missionaries, and he not a resident of this city, "The Hub of Methodism in Brazil." If there are as many as two hubs, the bretbren in Rio and Porto Alegre would either, I suppose, allow the designation, otherwise they would not. And if hub means lost motion, it is not appropriate, because there is something doing among the Methodists of this great city. I looked out of the window of the parsonage early Sunday morning—we had arrived in the city—and saw what seemed the skeleton of a cathedral wall nigh, and wondered how the Catholics had gotten so close to our property. Imagine my delight when it suddenly broke upon me that this was our new Central Church in process of erection. I was greatly gratified to see this church. It had cost me some work and no little concern even in tbe days before the Centenary. In Soutb Carolina and in the Memphis Conference I had met many congregations, telling them, as best I could visualize it, of this growing opportunity in the metropolis of Central Brazil and how important it was that we put a good church right in the heart of it. We never were able to collect enough money to build the kind of church we wanted here until tbe Centenary came.

A Great Church.

But the postponement was a Providence, for without the Centenary we should never have had the courage to build here a church adequate to tbe needs of tbis enlarging and altogether strategic center. Later Bishop Moore and Dr. Clay, the arcbitect, took me over the building, through its multitude of rooms—and Brother Clay said there were fifty in all, with three stories—at great risk to limb and life, and I saw an up-to-date plant wortby the enterprise and courage of the great centers of the church at bome. They say this is to be the best Protestant church in South America. Bishop Moore has seen the most of them and says there is none other as good. Later we went to the service held in the auditorium, all the visitors speaking before a good congregation, and were told they did practically nothing to get the people out because at night tbe house was always crowded, and if any more came there would be nowhere to put them. The missionary, Brother Dickie, whose pastoral care for four years has contributed so largely to the prosperity of this church, told me as we walked past the new church one day, that when built they would have no difficulty in filling even this great auditorium.

We went still later to the Italian Sunday school, finding a hundred of as happy-faced children and young people as one ever sees, and they must have been happy if their singing was any fair test. It was worth a long journey to hear them singing, "The God of Abraham praise," and other great hymns of the church, singing some of the songs in Portuguese and some in Italian. We have promised to aid them in the building of a church, the Bishop is now searching with characteristic energy and insight for a lot on which to build their house, and if present negotiations succeed we shall bave a lot for tbis congregations that is not excelled by the situation of the Central Church itself.

Sunday Schools and Revival.

At night we went to the church in tbe Braz section of the city, saw a beautiful building erected already with Centenary money, and found a splendid congregation awaiting us. The pastor of the church, formerly a lawyer, was found doing a remarkable piece of organized propaganda in this part of the city. This congregation is carrying on five Sunday scbools in the Braz section, its workers going out and conducting these schools on Sunday afternoon. I thought of the main line already laid and what blasting for all this part of a mighty city could be done if once a great fire started, and as best I could, with Brother Lee telling it in the Portuguese, I poured out my heart to the people on the power of the Pentecost. At the conclusion of the service the pastor had earnest members of the congregation come forward and stand with him in token of their purpose to pray and work until a great baptism and inducement of the congregation for service in this community should come upon pastor and people. Later a report comes saying that, since Conference, a great meeting has been held in the Braz church, conducted by one of our ex-priests, in which one hundred and fifty people were brought to Christ.

A Vision and Its Splendid Fulfillment.

But the unique feature of our work in Sao Paulo is our new Publising House. Nothing in Brazil has gratified me more than the inspection of this great enterprise. And really great enterprise it is. I had had some personal and official connection with this institution also. Long before the Centenary, Brother Clay, the Manager of the House, had gone far beyond even bis brother and sister missionaries in the vision of a great printing plant and a body of evangelical literature for Brazil, and he was doing his best to make the Secretary see it. To reinforce his plea, letters poured into my office from practically all the missionaries urging the wisdom and necessity of his great scheme. I am wondering now where we ever put the letters that came—hardly in one file, there was not room. In desperation the Secretary threw up his hands and agreed that if Brother Clay would call off the letters we would build his house. It was a rather reckless agreement, and I am wondering how we would ever have kept it if the Centenary had not come and intervened to help us out. Indeed, I felt while at Sao Paulo and thought of the history of these two enterprises, our Central Church and the Publishing House, that the Providence of the Centenary lay in its relationship to these two great institutions. How could we ever have built them if the Centenary had not come? How unspeakably grateful we are when we think how true this is of almost innumerable other good things done in the Centenary! Before the Centenary came, and now even better, we all understand the strategy of this institution in its relation to our whole plan of advance for Brazil. It is one of the surprising things of my visit that we had so few Christian books in Portuguese and that with so little of equipment in other respects we could have built up anything like a solid body of character in the church, to say nothing of the literature needed for our immediate propaganda. Our Publishing House is plainly built, the money going not into a building, but tbe very best machinery and equipment that could be gotten in the States. The Publishing House cost us something over a hundred thousand dollars, but on this same compound we have, in addition, the church, two missionary residences, an episcopal residence easily worth $30,000, costing us, however, on the present rate of exchange, only about $11,000, the entire plant being worth probably $30,000. The Board bas not put that much into it, but our Brazilian members themselves have contributed much, so that the fine management that has characterized all these enterprises through the natural increment of values makes it worth at least that much. Brother Clay has already an agreement with practically all the missionary organizations, and while putting emphasis, of course, upon our own literature, we shall be in position to do great service for the other churches operating in Brazil. The problem of the preparation of a great Christian literature for Brazil is one of our most acute responsibilities, and it is a problem largely of translation. Already, we have provided for the immediate translation and publication of a dozen Christian books, many tracts and booklets, and we mean to work at it until this great lack in our propaganda is adequately met.

Sao Paulo is the capital of the State of Sao Paulo, probably the richest and best developed of all the States of Brazil. It has a people homogenous, progressive and advanced. The city itself is in every way a modern city, and with a population of half a million people compares favorably in many of its physical and industrial aspects with the great cities of North America. In the midst of this city the Centenary bas enabled us to place ourselves with a strategy that leaves us almost nothing to be desired.

CARING FOR MEN.

To us one of the most comforting assurances of Scripture is that which reads, "He caretb for you." There is a tremendous uplift to a distressed heart when there dawns upon bim the gracious truth that he is not alone, but that the Eternal God himself is interested in his welfare. The Syrians may be round about him, but he will not even look to see if he can discover the horsemen and chariots of fire, for if God be with him, he needs no other defense. This blessed fact that God never loses sight of the individual in the multitude is one that humanity loves to recall.

And when men become God-like and Christ-like, they also become interested in men. "He careth for you" applies to every God-inspired soul that is aiming to help humanity. This does not mean merely enthusiasm for "humanity," but loving interest in individual men. It is possible for a man to give half his salary to convert men in China, while he has never stopped to ask if his own deskmate or his next-door neighbor is a Christian. The probability is, of course, that usually the man who is interested in China will also he interested in his own neighbors, and yet there is a possibility that this may not be.

One of the complaints of many against the church is that when they are in trouble the church doesn't care. Now this is not true, and cannot be true unless the church has wholly backslidden; but it is unfortunate that at times it seems to be true simply because the church and the individual have not yet fully adapted themselves to the new and strange conditions in which they find themselves.

With six hundred or one thousand families connected with a church, it is not surprising if neither preacher nor church officials are able to keep track of them all; and it may easily happen that a person may be sick for days and die before any responsible individual knows that there is anything wrong. It may be argued that the church ought to know about such things, but the one who finds fault has never tackled a problem of such dimensions or he would be slower to find fault and quicker to realize the real magnitude of the task. The church may be to blame, but the individual also must share the responsibility, as a postal card or a 'phone message would probably have insured prompt attention.

The true Christian is interested in his fellows, and he is interested in them individually so far as he can get into touch with them. And in effective work for the winning of men, this personal touch is of supreme importance. The boy may not recall much of what his teacher tried to teach him, but he never forgets the man who visited him when he was sick, or played ball with him when he was well. The man may forget the preacher's prayers and sermons, but he never forgets the man who got him a job when he was out of work, and cheered him by his company when he was sadly in need of cheer. There is no denying that the "net" method of getting men into the kingdom and into the church is effective in its way and at the same time is very spectacular, but the "hook and line" method will never be superseded. If a Christian really cares for men, and he must if he is a Christian, then he should prove it by his personal interest in them, and that personal interest will prove a mighty factor in winning the esteem of those men, and also winning them for Christ and the church.

And the man who isn't interested in men in a very close and personal way need not expect that his profession of interest in the church or the progress of the Kingdom of God in the earth will be accepted at face value or even taken very seriously by any one.—Christian Guardian.

Christ is the amen of the universe to the righteousness in God and the deathless in man. It is this that lends an infinitely sweet and profoundly significant authority to his words for the race: "I am come that they may have life, and may have it abundantly."—Selected.

WHEN MY DAD WAS A BOY.

Wonder why I don't have fun
Like my pa sez he had
W'en he wuz some one else's son
An' got spanked by his dad?
Pa sez it use to snow so deep
The house wuz all hid
Jest in the night when he's asleep—
When my dad wuz a kid.

An' nex' day he'd climb out the roof
Wif snow so high about,
They made big fires—an' that's the troof—
To melt my grandma out;
An' nen, he sez, he tuk his sleigh
Up top a hill, an' slid,
An' slid, an' never stopped all day—
When my dad wuz a kid.

An' nen pa made a big snow man,
More'n seventy feet high,
Wif reg'lar stairs inside wot ran
Most clean up to the sky.
O, golly! wouldn't I jes' shout
To have fun like pa did!
I guess it snowed the snow all out
When my dad wuz a kid. —Selected.

CHRIS'S TEMPTATION.

By Willie C. Page.

It was a dark, dreary afternoon; all day long great crowds of people had thronged the city, passing by the corner where 10-year-old Christopher sold pencils and papers.

Men hurried by without stopping to buy a paper, for the wind was blowing a gale—the first storm of the season. Soon the snow began to drift; then thicker and faster it fell, until the strongest and bravest wished to seek shelter.

Chris was discouraged, cold and hungry. His dinner had not been a bountiful feast, to say the least of it. Oh, how much he wanted to sell enough of his wares to buy a good supper for his mother, who had been sick and was now convalescing!

It was cold in their poor bed at best, and their small room, three flights up, was never warm during the winter months with only an oil cookstove to heat it. To-night, with no hot tea, or supper at all, Chris shivered and pulled the worn sweater tight about his shoulders, stamped his broken shoes, pushed his father's old cap closer about his ears.

"I guess I'll have to give up, supper or no supper," he whispered to himself. Then he thought of his father, who had died on his engine that the passengers on the crowded train might be saved.

He straightened up and lifted his head high.

"I'll stay a little longer," he said aloud.

The snow was still falling and gusts of wind almost swept Chris from his feet. He began slowly to wrap the pencils and tie the papers together.

Suddenly around the corner there came a prosperous-looking man, who stepped to the curb and called a taxicab driver. While waiting for it to come nearer, he took his watch from his pocket, and, as he did so, a new, crisp bill fell to the walk, almost at Chris's feet.

As in a daze, the little boy picked up the money and held it in his hand for a moment.

"Oh, my," he gasped, "it is a ten-dollar bill!" Then visions of what it would buy flashed through his childish mind—fuel, shoes, new clothing, steak and eggs for supper. He could tell mother ho had found the money. The man did not know he had lost it, and perhaps would not miss it at all. He trembled and shivered; then quickly ran after the man and thrust the folded bill into his hand just as the driver of the automobile dashed off down the crowded street.

Poor Chris! He realized that he was still penniless. He ran back to his stand to find his precious package of pencils was gone, and the wind had blown his papers in many directions.

The little lad brushed the tears from his lashes. No, he would not cry—mother had always told him that crying and fretting were a waste of time. How good and sweet his mother was, and how his heart ached to think how few comforts of life they had! Of course she would pretend she did not wish anything and give him the largest portion of what little they had—mothers were made like that. "Bless her," he said softly.

Down the street laughing and talking gaily came a crowd of men who were attending a convention in the city. Chris was instantly on the alert: "Papers, buy a paper, all the latest news. Papers!"

One man with kindly smiling eyes gave him a keen look, bought a paper, handed him a bill, and said: "Keep the change, Sonny, and run home out of the cold."

Chris peered at the money. It was ten dollars! He took off his cap, raised his eyes, and said softly: "God, I thank you for sending this, for I know you were the cause of the man's giving it to me."

He ran to a little shop he knew, got all the things needed, and dashed for home at the top of his speed. Mother had lighted a little candle on the table beside the bed.

"How is the little man of the house?" she said gaily.

"O, mother, see what a fine supper I have, and money enough to last till you are well again!"

Then while preparing the supper Chris told his mother all the happenings of the day.

"You did right, son, to give the man his money. Keep your heart pure. Do right and God will take care of you; this is a day of rejoicing, because my little boy had the courage to resist a great temptation."

PROVED A FOOL IN THREE MINUTES.

It is told of one of our early American evangelists that in the course of an address he made the broad statement that all infidels are fools, and that he could prove it in any given case in ten minutes. A man in the audience asked if he might interrupt, and remarked that he must take exception to the statement, since he was himself an infidel and thought he was no fool. The preacher looked him over rather curiously and said, "So you are an infidel? Will you tell me just how much of an infidel?" "Certainly, sir; I deny that there is anything at all in religion."

"Nothing at all in religion? Are you willing to go on record as saying that?" "Go on record?" the infidel replied. "Why, I have been writing and lecturing against religion for these twenty years." The evangelist glanced at his watch and said, "Well, I said I could prove an infidel in ten minutes, and I have seven minutes left. I'll leave it to the audience if a man isn't a fool to write and lecture for twenty years against a thing that has nothing whatever in it!"—Selected.

Not Handsome, At Least.

A shortsighted old lady went into a large curio shop. After pottering about for some time she asked the assistant, "How much is that Japanese idol worth—the one near the door?" "It is worth a great deal," replied the assistant. "It's the proprietor."—Christian Register.

Too True!

Jack and Mary had just been to the grown-ups' church for the first time. A day or two afterward they were found in the nursery whispering audibly to each other.

"What are you children doing?" their nurse asked.

"We're playing church," replied Jack.

"But you shouldn't whisper in church," admonished nurse.

"O," spoke up Mary, "we're the choir."—Exchange.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:

Louisiana Conference—Rev. J. F. Foster, Rev. S. J. Davies, Rev. C. C. Miller.

Mississippi Conference—Rev. J. T. Leggett, Rev J. R. Jones, Rev. W. H. Saunders.

North Mississippi Conference—Rev. J. H. Felts, Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, Rev. J. W. Dorman.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

APPRECIATION AND EXHORTATION.

We cannot express in cold type our grateful appreciation to those members of our three patronizing Conferences who have already entered vigorously upon the work of redeeming their pledges, made at the recent sessions of these Conferences, to add a definite number of names to the subscription files of the Advocate. Almost every day we receive one or more letters containing lists of names to be added to our files, with the statement that the work will be continued until at least the number pledged has been secured. It is extremely gratifying, too, that many of the brethren state that they have had comparatively little trouble in securing the subscriptions they are enclosing.

The thought has never entered our mind that even one of those who made a pledge would fail to do his best to carry it out. We know too well the mettle of Methodist preachers to believe that they ever make solemn pledges and then lightly forget them. While circumstances sometimes arise that make impracticable the carrying out in full of an expressed determination, we know that in most cases a pledge is to be valued at one hundred per cent, and we are confidently awaiting the lists of subscribers promised.

We do feel at liberty, however, to exhort those brethren who have not yet turned their attention to this matter, to take hold of it as soon as possible. We do not know of a more opportune time for soliciting subscriptions than in the beginning of the year—and it is certain that the sooner the church paper begins going into the homes of the people, the sooner will its influence for good be felt in all departments of the church work. The Advocate cannot fail to be a helpful assistant to every pastor whose people read it regularly, and the work of the whole year ought to be made easier and more fruitful by its weekly visits.

The secret of success in securing these subscriptions is in making a personal and definite appeal to the membership of the church. One pastor sent us not long ago a list of twenty-five subscriptions from a charge where only a very few copies had gone before and where we had been told it was almost impossible to secure subscriptions; his comment was, "These are all personal—the result of going after 'em." Another pastor sent us a good list from a charge where, he said, not a single copy was taken before he made his appeal. We have ample evidence to prove that the subscriptions can be secured when the proper kind of effort is made, and our exhortation is to the end that the effort be made as soon as possible.

In the near future we expect to give a full statement of the results of these subscription pledges from the three Conferences. We are hoping that we shall be able to report at that time that all of them have been met. In some cases we expect to find that the pledge has been largely exceeded.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. W. W. Nelson, pastor of the Adams charge, Mississippi Conference, reports that things are moving well on his charge this year.

Cardinal Ratti, archbishop of Milan, has been elected pope of the Roman Catholic Church, to succeed the Pope Benedict XV. The new pope has taken the name Pius XI.

A Standard Training School will be held for the Sunday school workers of the New Orleans District early in April. This will be the first school of its kind in the Louisiana Conference.

We regreat to learn that Mrs. A. S. Oliver, wife of our pastor at LaBranch Street Church, McComb, Miss., is seriously ill. We earnestly pray that she may soon be restored to health.

The work at Mooringsport, La., Rev. R. T. Ware, pastor, is making splendid progress. Sixteen members have been received into the church since Conference.

We are glad to learn that Rev. T. E. Gregory, Columbus, Miss., who underwent a serious operation at the Methodist Hospital recently, is making fine progress toward recovery.

Mrs. C. A. Parks, wife of our pastor at Tunica, Miss., underwent an operation at the Methodist Hospital, Memphis, Tenn., on February 7. We are glad to learn that she is doing well.

Rev. J. S. Maxey calls our attention to the fact that his post office address is now Oxford, Miss., instead of Ethel, Miss. He states that his work on the Tie-Plant charge is moving along nicely.

Mrs. E. Nash Broyles, wife of Rev. E. Nash Broyles, our pastor at Clarksdale, Miss., is well on the road to recovery after a serious operation at the Methodist Hospital, Memphis, Tenn., recently.

Mrs. W. S. Marye, a prominent member of our church at Grecnwood, Miss., recently underwent a serious operation at the Methodist Hospital, Memphis, Tenn. We are glad to learn that she is well on the road toward recovery.

A note from Rev. Osmond S. Lewis, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Laurel, Miss., informs us that the Bible lectures given by Mrs. Margaret Russell in Laurel last week were largely attended, and that all the churches of the city were greatly benefited by them.

The Sunday school at Summit, Miss., has reached high-water mark in attendance and efficiency under the leadership of the superintendent, Prof. J. E. Carruth. A more commodious building has become necessary for future development and growth.

We learn from the weekly bulletin of the Coahoma and Lyons charge, North Mississippi Conference, that the Sunday school at Lyon, with an enrollment of 36, had an average attendance last year of 33. Rev. Del Longgrear is the pastor of this charge.

Dr. John A. Rice, of Okmulgee, Okla., recently delivered an address on "The Message of Lee to the Modern Business Man" before the City Club of St. Louis, Mo. He also addressed the United Southern Societies of St. Louis on "The Spirit of Lee."

The good people of Lafayette, La., have provided their pastor, Rev. Leon I. McCain, with a new automobile, which, of course, will largely increase his efficiency in pastoral work. This is an example that many other congregations might follow with great benefit to the Kingdom.

The editor has received, with the compliments of the author, Rev. E. N. Evans, a copy of "Analytical Notes on John 8:1-11." It is a most suggestive treatment of a difficult theme. The author, who is financial commissioner of the Memorial Home, is intensely interested in the work of giving new hope to those who have fallen into sin.

Rev. E. C. Driskell, of Buena Vista, Miss., reports that his first quarterly conference was held on February 4. In spite of an all-day rain, more than two-thirds of the official members were present, and good reports were made. Brother Driskell serves a fine people, and he is expecting great things this year.

Rev. H. B. Hines, Donaldsonville, La., Rev. A. S. Lutz, Shreveport, La., and Rev. Jno. F. Foster, Covington, La., were among the visitors attending the meetings of the Masonic Grand Lodge in New Orleans last week. They honored the Advocate office with calls. Brother Foster was re-elected grand chaplain of the Grand Chapter, Royal Arch Masons.

The presiding elders of the Louisiana Conference had a meeting at Alexandria on February 7. They request our people throughout the Conference to observe Friday, March 24, as a day of fasting and prayer in the interest of the Missionary Centenary and other forward movements of the church, suggesting that they assemble in their various places of worship on that day for prayer.

Under the leadership of Rev. O. W. Bradley, the pastor, the congregation of First Church, Alexandria, La., has purchased an automobile for the use of the pastor of the Pineville charge, thus enabling him to do needed work in two rural churches that are under his care. Since Conference, the Pineville congregation has rented and furnished a parsonage for the pastor, Rev. W. F. Chase.

Bishop W. F. McMurry requests us to say that he has knowledge of a young man who has had some training in an A-grade college and more than two years' work in one of our universities, a man of undoubted character and fair intellectual qualifications, who is available for work. Any presiding elder needing such a brother is requested to communicate with Bishop McMurry at 1119 Fourth Avenue, Louisville, Ky.

Rev. J. Loyd Decell, pastor of the Central Methodist Church, Meridian, Miss., writes the Advocate as follows: "To any of the brethren or churches who might need an experienced evangelistic singer for their meetings, I wish to recommend Mr. Paul Templeton, Y. M. C. A., Meridian, Miss. He is a member of Central Church and will render splendid service to those needing him. Use Paul Templeton."

Rev. G. A. LaGrange, of Houma, La., writes us that he is actively engaged in ministerial work in the French Mission District. He already has seven preaching places, and calls to many other points, but is unable to reach these additional places for lack of means of transportation. He states that if some one would give him a car—new or second-hand—it would greatly facilitate his work.

The work at Central Methodist Church, Meridian, Miss., is moving along most encouragingly. There are frequent accessions to the membership by certificate and on profession of faith. The stewards have fixed the pastor's salary at $4200, and have provided an assistant, Miss Madge Stuart, who looks after the secretarial work of the church. The Sunday school is growing, and every department of the church is operating successfully. Rev. J. Loyd Decell is the pastor.

A great get-together meeting of the laymen of the Broad Street Methodist Church, of Lake Charles, La., was held during the early part of February, attended by approximately three-score men. Rev. R. P. Howell presided as toastmaster, and addresses were delivered by M. L. Hurlburt, A. M. Mayo, Rev. W. W. Holmes, and Rev. J. B. Williams. Impromptu speeches were made by S. A. Mayo, J. M. Gilbert, S. W. Plauche, and Moss Watkins. An elegant luncheon was served by the ladies of the church.

The first quarterly conference of the Summit and Topisaw charge, Mississippi Conference, held on a week-day, was unusually fine. More than twenty-five business men and farmers were present, and the women of the charge had large representation. Almost every man present came from a family reared under the influence of a family altar. The reports were encouraging. From a mission this charge has developed into a strong appointment. The pastor, Rev. W. A. Terry, is in great favor with his people.

The work of the Alexandria District, Louisiana Conference, moves along well under the leadership of the presiding elder, Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr. At a recent preachers' institute, the work of the district was discussed and plans were laid for increased activity this year. Revival meetings have been arranged for the needy places within the district, following the plan carried out last year. Most of the preachers of the district were present at the institute, and all of them are looking after their work with great care.

The Methodist Quarterly Review for January has reached our desk. We have not yet had time to read it all, but it presents a most appealing bill of fare. One of the articles, "John Chrysostom: The Greatest Preacher of a Thousand Years," is by Dr. U. G. Foote, formerly pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, this city. Another interesting article, "The Infernal Triangle," is by Rev. A. M. Shaw, of the Louisiana Conference. Judging by the titles, we should say that all the articles in this number are well worth the reading of even the busiest man, preacher or layman.

CHURCH ATTENDANCE CONTEST.

We have received the following reports of the attendance last Sunday evening of the churches engaged in the Sunday evening attendance contest in the Louisiana Conference:

Bogalusa (a new entry)	196
Lake Charles	228
Minden	175
Monroe	125
Ruston	204

We regret that some of the reports reach us too late for record. As previously stated, they must be in the Advocate office on Monday of each week to appear in the current issue of the Advocate.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: F. A. Howell, Durant, Miss., 2; Mrs. G. R. Wafer and Mrs. J. W. Prince, Haughton, La., 9; Mrs. B. S. Woollard, Crenshaw, Miss., 2; Rev. C. F. Emery, Fayette, Miss., 2; Rev. F. B. Ormond, Tylertown, Miss., 5; Rev. J. L. Evans, West Monroe, La., 5; Rev. E. C. Driskell, Buena Vista, Miss., 4; Mrs. Kemp Williams, West Point, Miss., 3; Rev. W. H. Lewis, Brookhaven, Miss., 11; Rev. H. T. Young, Natchitochos, La., 4; Rev. L. W. Cain, Franklinton, La., 2; Rev. W. A. Hays, Meridian Miss., 3; Rev. R. T. Ware, Mooringsport, La., 16; Mrs. F. B. Catching, Georgetown, Miss., 5; Rev. O. S. Lewis, Laurel, Miss., 3; Rev. Wm. I. White, Rienzi, Miss., 2; Rev. R. W. Tucker, Homer, La., 31.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES.

The first payment of a subscription that runs for a number of years is the all-important one. We desire to press with increased vigor the first payment of these pledges. Let us not get behind in so important a matter, but keep up to the minute.

The Christian colleges in their platform ask of the church at large its confidence, its support, its intelligent recognition of the contributions these institutions have made and are making to the church, and of the difficulties that at this time confront us in the performance of our task, and a clear and definite understanding that the institutions which we represent cannot render the service that is required of them unless the church furnishes promptly and fully the material resources to which it has pledged itself. If the institutions of our Methodism shall keep faith in their purpose to make Christian Education a reality, the church itself must also keep faith by supplying the necessary means in terms of equipment, buildings and endowments. And this demands of all of us prayer, consecration, unfailing co-operation and sacrifices inspired by a generous Christian stewardship—more generous than it has ever been.

If any one has been overlooked, let them send direct to me at Shreveport, La. Those who have not pledged ought to send in a cash contribution.

ALBERT S. LUTZ,
Conference Secretary of Education.

THE EDITOR RECEIVES CONGRATULATIONS.

Dear Brother Carley: A great editor ye are! Congratulations come right along! Last week you were congratulated upon not being responsible for the opinions of your correspondents. I think you are to be congratulated that you are not responsible for the vagaries of your readers! So I do!

Things are going fairly well with us here. This is the first Sunday the sun has shined in some time, and it did not show up here this morning until after 11 o'clock.

For the past three weeks we have had a very severe spell of weather. While it was raining with you, it was mixed with sleet and ice here. From the side of the ground-hog or the weather bureau, we in this section are booked for an early spring, though from what I saw in the New Orleans papers, Mr. G. Hog and Mr. Weatherman seem to have taken opposite sides there.

Yours truly,
BRISCOE CARTER.

TRAVEL LETTER FROM DR. AND MRS. I. W. COOPER.

in this little chapel. However much or little one believes of this legend, one does not fail to catch the feeling of sanctity which lingers here.

Driving further out of the city, we came to the catacombs of St. Callxtus, the entrance to which is kept by monks of the Trappist order. These monks, by the way, have some very peculiar customs, we were told. For instance, they are never allowed to speak save when they are on public duty; and each day every one of these men is required to dig a shovel full of dirt from his future grave, to keep him reminded of his mortality. Since they are so serious minded, it is appropriate that they are in charge of the catacombs. They are not only custodians but guides through these vast and dismal subterranean passages. They furnish each visitor with a tiny wax taper and leading the way into the darkness and cautioning whenever there is a "step down," they explain every turn of the way. There is comparatively little to be seen in the catacombs. Occasionally there is a crude inscription or some unearthed bone or portion of a casket. Here and there are larger rooms or vaults which are said to be chapels where the early Christians worshiped. One can not doubt the nature of the place and yet there is no display of "remains"—such as we saw in the Burial Vaults of the Capuchin Fathers.

We devoted the entire forenoon of our last day in Rome to a visit to the Vatican Museum. The beautiful situation of the Vatican Palace, its lovely gardens and the extensiveness of the building are quite remarkable. The palace is said to contain eleven thousand rooms, large and small. Of these, a great many are open to the public. The Museum is divided into three important sections—the Gallery of Sculpture, the Picture Gallery and the Library. Each of these is many times subdivided and named. The number of masterpieces and originals of the world's greatest artists to be found here is too great for detailed mention. All are well ordered and skillfully placed so that even amateurs in art, such as we, may enjoy and understand with little assistance. Most of the Museum was a pure delight to us, but we met with one disappointment. All our lives we had read and heard of the glorious beauties of the Sistine Chapel with its frescoes of Michael Angelo. Perhaps our hopes or expectations were too lofty—perhaps we were too critical—or, most probably—perhaps we were not good judges, for though it was wonderful, it was not beautiful—to us. The figures were too numerous and too small to tell their story or make their impression without long study. The pictures seemed somewhat faded. The guide agreed to this and said it was caused by dampness and by the smoke of candles and of incense, for the Sistine Chapel is used on some state occasions and used for many days at a time during the election of a new Pope.

As we left the Vatican grounds, just at noon, we met a delegation of tourists who, by previous appointment, were going to the Pope's quarters to pay their respects to this great dignitary. We were somewhat amused at the fantastic livery of the Pope's guards who were ushering the visitors within.

We were glad to learn that the Northern Methodists have quite a strong following in Rome and that they have recently bought a very beautiful and very extensive lot overlooking the grounds of the Vatican. Here they intend to build a great church and a great university. Hurrah for the Northern Methodists!

Obituaries

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

MRS. JOAN BENTON JETT passed from this life to her eternal rest at 9:30 Monday night, January 23, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. H. Carpenter, in this city. She was a good woman who lived her Christian faith. Joining the Methodist Church in childhood, she was an active worker in it throughout her life. Conscious to the very last, she read her Bible, and sang the old songs, then as life ebbed she asked her family to meet her in heaven. The funeral service was held at the home of W. H. Carpenter, and was conducted by Rev. J. W. Rogers, and interment was in the city cemetery of this city. Mrs. Jett's maiden name was Benton, and she was born at Utica, Miss. On November 12, 1848, she married J. W. Jett, and is survived by four daughters and two sons. She also leaves three sisters. She came here about six years ago with her husband from Port Gibson, Miss., to make their home with their daughter, Mrs. W. H. Carpenter. Mr. Jett died about four years ago, and Mrs. Jett was buried by his side. Her life has been a joy and inspiration to her loved ones and friends.—Chicot (Ark.) Spectator.

MATTHEW H. TURNER was born July 26, 1853, in Choctaw County, Alabama. He moved to Vossburg, Miss., in 1890, where he has lived for the last thirty-one years. He was married in 1878 to Miss Helen Denny. To this union were born nine children. Of those surviving to mourn their sad loss, are Mrs. Turner and eight children: H. G. and F. C. Turner, of Laurel; Mrs. Bufkin, of Hattiesburg; A. D. Turner, of Sherman, Tex.; M. H., C. B., Miss Helen, and Miss Ruth Turner, of Vossburg. Death came and took this good man Sunday, January 29, 1922. Brother Turner united with the Methodist Church when a boy and was true to those sacred vows till the end came. Only those who knew him can know of the influence of his splendid life, and all he did for the church of Christ, which he loved so devoutly. Brother Turner was a business man far above the ordinary. This made him able to do things in a large way, and it has been through his liberality that the Vossburg church has largely been supported. But above all, he had the experience of Christ in his great heart. Funeral services were conducted by the writer, being assisted by J. T. Leggett, L. Carley, and O. S. Lewis. He was laid to rest in the Vossburg cemetery. "Know ye not that there is a Prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel?"

J. H. JOLLY, Pastor.

Rev. P. S. PETTY was born March 26, 1828, in Hopkinsville, Ky., and died November 23, 1921, aged 93 years and eight months. There were eleven children in the family—six boys and five girls. These are: I. W. Petty, St. Francisville; P. H. Petty, Baton Rouge; M. F. Petty, Shreveport; Mrs. E. J. Graham, Tunica, La.; Mrs. R. S. Smith, Wilson, La.; Mrs. Ada Neyland, Jackson, La., and W. D. Petty, Stuttgart, Ark. The deceased are: H. R. Petty, P. S. Petty, Jr., and Mrs. Dora McGraw. Brother Petty was licensed to preach at 30, and was faithful to the end. His greatest delight was to talk religion. He was filled to overflowing with the love of God and was burdened for the lost. During the two years I was associated with him in St. Francisville, I spent as much time as I could with him at his son's hotel. It was inspiration to be with him to hear him tell how God had blessed his ministry and led him all the way. I am so glad I met him before God took him. J. L. CADY.

RESOLUTIONS.

The members of the Truth-Seekers class of the Vaiden, Miss., Methodist Sunday school have heard with deep regret of the passing away of a dear friend and brother, J. P. NABORS, who for many years was an active member of our church and teacher of our class. While our hearts are sad, we "sorrow not as those without hope," looking for a reunion in the "Land of the Blest."

Resolved, therefore, That we, as a class, are thankful for having known and had in our midst this Christian gentleman, whose example we shall strive to emulate.

That we grieve with those left behind, and offer to them our loving sympathy and earnest prayers.

Resolved further, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and to the New Orleans Advocate.

Signed by: Mrs. Frank Myers, Mrs. J. P. T. Stephens, Mrs. M. O. Huffman, Committee.

RESOLUTIONS.

Since God, in His all-wise providence, has seen fit to remove from our midst our dear classmate and co-worker, MRS. MINNIE LEE SHEARER; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we, the Truth-Seekers' Bible Class of Vaiden (Miss.) Methodist Sunday school, do hereby express our deep sorrow, and deplore our loss, pledging ourselves anew to the work she so much loved, and to try to follow more closely in the footsteps of Him who was her guide. Her faith shall be our inspiration to greater efforts in our Christian living.

2. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Advocate, and to the members of our beloved sister's family, with assurance of our intense sorrow, sincere sympathy, and heartfelt prayers for each of them.

Signed by: Mrs. Frank Myers, Mrs. J. P. T. Stephens, Mrs. M. O. Huffman, Committee.

THE TOTAL, INCLUDING "CREDITS."

At the beginning of the Centenary Campaign it was provided in the plan that each Conference and each congregation should count as "credits" certain amounts paid for missions and Church Extension. It was at first thought that these credits would total approximately $10,000,000. Later it was seen that the credits would reach a total of $15,000,000 or more.

Before the "drive," we put aside the thought of counting credits, and the faith of the church reached the point where we purposed to go over without such helps. We did reach the goal and beyond without credits—the total of new money, $36,911,166. With credits, the total was above $52,000,000.

There has been no published statement of amount actually paid on credits until now. The figures, given out Jan. 23, show that during the three years of the Centenary period—1919-1921—our church paid in "credits" $9,955,465. These figures include amount paid on regular assessments and regular specials for missions (foreign, home and Conference), amount paid by the Woman's Missionary Society, and amount paid on regular assessments for Church Extension. The grand total—new money and credits—is $22,603,511.78.

The showing made to date is far better than for any three years back of the Centenary period. It is not all that we promised to do, not all that we could have done, but comparing ourselves with ourselves it shows progress. We must pay on pledges approximately $4,000,000 by May 1, 1922, to come to the half-way mark by the date named. Let's make this record.

FROM PASS CHRISTIAN, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: I am here serving a light charge—two churches, Pass Christian and Wayeland—hoping that residing on the coast will benefit my health, especially that dreadful insomnia that I have been bothered with for several years.

I am pleased with my charge and with the outlook. My congregation at the Pass has more than doubled since Conference. I hereby challenge any place in the State in Sunday school attendance, the contest being based on church membership—the goal advocated by the Sunday school leaders is as many in Sunday school as there are members of the church.

Cordially,

H. G. ROBERTS.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Recently I endeavored to teach a class composed of many of the teachers of the Horn Lake circuit. Sickness, rain, muddy roads were too much for us. Twelve attended the first meeting, six the second, and three the third. One young woman walked a mile and a half every day through the mud—it was too bad for a Ford to make it. This class is made up of the best kind of material. It is joy to work with such people. Dr. Minor will give the examination when the roads are better and all the sick are well. At Poplar Corner, the people have added three rooms to their church and have bought a new piano. The three rooms cost about six hundred dollars. Brother L. H. Floyd is in high favor with his people.

Numbers are enrolling for the training school to be held at Grenada, June 1-7. Many are asking about the faculty and other matters pertaining to the school. If you desire to make the school a greater success, enroll at once and state the course you wish to take. Write to Rev. J. E. Stephens, Grenada, Miss., and tell him the course you wish to take. The following subjects are to be taught:

Beginner Organization and Administration, Primary Lesson Materials and Teaching, Junior Lesson Materials and Teaching, Lesson Materials and Methods of Teaching for Intermediates, Christian Service for Adults, Principles of Teaching, The Pupil, The Psychology of Young People, Missionary Education, Educational Task of the Local Church, Organization and Administration of Circuit Schools.

If ever we needed trained teachers to stem the tide and turn the feet of our children in the right direction, it is today. It is already too late to do anything for some of the fathers and mothers—we may do a little to help the children.

So far as I have learned, the offering for our work on the fifth Sunday in January has been generous and very general. We promise to make every dollar do douhle work as far as possible. May God bless all the schools that came to our help in this hour of need. Pray more, work harder, and think deeper than ever, that the good, patient God may save our young people and children from the blighting sins of the day.

Our Wesley Bible classes are doing a notable work in different parts of the Conference. Oh men, get busy and organize to help save the children! We should organize and put to work at least 500 classes in the next three months. Get ready to attend the federation of Bible classes this year, that you may learn how to help save the people.

A Mother's Story

Young Mothers Should Heed This Advice

Rienzi, Miss.—"When I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's medicines I was all wrecked and run-down until I was not able to do anything, bnt now I am getting along well and have a big, fine, healthy baby boy. Tongue could not tell how much better I felt after taking these medicines. I took both the Favorite Prescription and the Golden Medical Discovery, also two vials of the Pleasant Pellets and had practically no suffering. I will always praise these wonderful medicines. I would never try to go throngh expectancy again without Favorite Prescription."—Mrs. Mary Owen.

Get Doctor Pierce's remedies at any drug store and you will soon feel their beneficial effect.

ASPIRIN

Name "Bayer" on Genuine

Beware! Unless you see the name "Bayer" on package or on tablets you are not getting genuine Aspirin prescribed by physicians for twenty-one years and proved safe by millions. Take Aspirin only as told in the Bayer package for Colds, Headache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Earache, Toothache, Lumbago, and for Pain. Handy tin boxes of twelve Bayer Tablets of Aspirin cost few cents. Druggists also sell larger packages. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL GOAL.

"A Round Million by March 31" is the Sunday school goal in Centenary giving. We believe it can be reached. The Sunday schools of Southern Methodism paid more on Centenary pledges during 1921 than during 1920—this in face of the large decrease for 1921 in payments on individual pledges. To reach the One Million goal there must be some special effort and some real work during February and March. Make that special effort in your Sunday school; bring your Centenary payments to date, and send to the Centenary Treasurer not later than February 27 whatever amount is on hand. Send to John E. Edgerton, Treasurer, Nashville, Tennessee.

Let me say to the pastors and members that the report of the Conference Treasurer shows that the Seashore District paid more money for Conference work and General work last year than any other district in the Conference except the Jackson District. Let's make it in full this year. Prayer, faith and work will bring it to pass. I will mail, before you read this, to every pastor the standing of every church in his charge on the Centenary.

GROWING IMPORTANCE OF ADVERTISING RECOGNIZED.

The value of advertising and the importance of providing practically trained men and women to handle all classes of advertising is being recognized by the schools and colleges. This fact is instanced by the Wheeler Business College, of Birmingham, Ala., which has recently initiated a Department of Practical Advertising. This department is under the direction of expert advertising men who are intrusted with the advertising and publicity of some of the most important corporations and business houses in the South.

To take care of its advertising department and other growing demands, the Wheeler College has recently doubled its floor space and has become a real business university, ranking as one of the largest business schools of the South. Students were quick to grasp the possibilities of the advertising course and there is a large and growing class.

GET READY FOR "FLU"

Keep Your Liver Active, Your System Purified and Free From Colds by Taking Calotabs, the Nausealess Calomel Tablets, That are Delightful, Safe and Sure.

Prysicians and Druggists are advising their friends to keep their systems purified and their organs in perfect working order as a protection against the return of influenza. They know that a clogged up system and a lazy liver favor colds, influenza and serious complications.

To cut short a cold overnight and to prevent serious complications take one Calotah at bedtime with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea, no griping, no sickening after effects. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified and refreshed and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you please—no danger.

Calotahs are sold only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents. Every druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not perfectly delighted with Calotabs.—(Adv.)

MAN'S OUTLOOK.

By Rev. G. W. Robertson.

During years of depression and days of adversity, when men everywhere are feeling the keen pain of want in a material sense concerning the home comforts and household necessities, it behooves us to think about and reflect upon the things in life which are highest, noblest, and best

It seems to me that if we would give more time to spiritual things, right living, clean thinking, and higher aspirations, the meal barrel would be filled and the kitchen pantry would overflow.

These days of depression and times of trouble concerning our material gains are sent upon us to give us a more favorable outlook upon life in a spiritual way. These things are sent upon us to keep us humble and to make us to know our place in God's world. These lessons are of practical value, and they teach us that God lives and that all power, both of Heaven and in earth, is vested in Him.

Even though we have our troubles and must carry our burdens, we have the promise that if we are faithful, he will reward us. Should we expect more?

He that is faithful in the things that are least is faithful also in much.

When the sorrows are more numerous, and the clouds are darkest, we must remember that we are depending on our own strength and serving for selfish aims. "God moves in mysterious ways his wonders to perform. He plants his feet upon the sea and rides upon the storm."

Laugh, and the world laughs with you; weep, and you are by yourself. Sunshine is what we need. The world is all right, but the people are at fault.

REV. A. W. O'BRYANT IMPROVING.

Dear Brother Carley: I am writing to say that Mr. O'Bryant is improving slowly after a very painful operation at the South Mississippi Infirmary at Hattlesburg, on January 26. We are being looked after in a very fine manner. Brother W. W. Graves was with us and held our first quarterly conference on the 8th inst. We ask the prayers of all who read these lines for the early recovery of Mr. O'Bryant.

Sincerely,
MRS. A. W. O'BRYANT.

REV. S. L. RIGGS RECOVERING FROM OPERATION.

Dear Brother Carley: Just a few words in answer to the many inquiries concerning my illness: the operation while very serious was a success in every way. Chronic appendicitis, which had caused many adhesions, together with removal of gall bladder, which had attached itself to stomach in such a way as to alter proper position of same. I am gaining rapidly but it will be some weeks before I can assume my duties. If any of the brethren can supply my pulpit at any time, I would be glad to have a line from them. With best wishes and regards.

Your brother,
S. L. RIGGS.

GIRLS! LEMONS WHITEN HANDS

Press the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, which any drug store will supply for a few cents, shake well, and you have a quarter-pint of harmless and delightful lemon-bleach lotion to soften and whiten red, rough or chapped hands. This home-made lemon lotion is far superior to glycerin and rose water to smoothen the skin. Famous stage beauties use it to bleach and bring that soft, clear, rosy-white complexion, because it doesn't irritate.

SEX PROBLEMS

Every married couple and all who contemplate marriage should own a complete Book of Life, of 1,000 pages, handsomely bound, such as the "Medical Adviser." It unfolds the secrets of married happiness, often revealed too late. Sold formerly for $1.50. We can mention only a few of the chapters here: Mechanism of Life, History of Marriage, Sex Problems, Advice for Mother and Babe, Nervous Troubles, Anatomy, Physiology, Medicine, First Aid to the Injured.

Special Offer: For a limited time we will send one copy for $1.00 (or stamps), to readers of this paper. Guaranteed, money back if not satisfied. Address Medical Press, 640½ Washington Street, Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

R. H. WYNN, P. E.

WE WILL NOT HALT.

Southern Methodists carry tremendous responsibilities in this day when great issues are to be fought out. We took leadership among the Protestant Churches of the nation—and this means, also, among the Churches of the world—in big enterprises for the Kingdom. The Centenary movement had its initiative in our Church. Following this enterprise other Churches launched great movements. This might have been done had we not taken the initiative, but the fact stands that our own Church led off in this movement for bigger things.

This is said, not in any spirit of boasting, but rather to call attention to some things that give no occasion for boasting. If our Church fails to carry through its Centenary program it will be a repudiation of its obligation of leadership. More than Centenary interests are at stake in the special effort to be made during the next six weeks for the payment of Centenary pledges. Our Church is on trial before the world.

We are facing this situation to-day: The Methodist Episcopal Church has paid a far larger percentage of its Centenary pledge to date than has our own Church. The Southern Baptist Church, occupying the same territory with us and having started later in the "good times" period than did Southern Methodism, has made a better showing in payments on its campaign pledges. It is true that Southern Baptists included in this special campaign many interests, but, taking account of all these things, their showing is better than ours; of the extra money pledged they have paid a larger percentage to date than have our people on their Centenary pledges.

In addition to these things mentioned, our missionary work both at home and in foreign lands is threatened with serious injury because of delayed payments. Pastors in the home Conferences who serve charges aided by missionary funds are needing the help that the Centenary funds would give. If we were paid to date there would be available for these men for 1922 nearly one million dollars additional—each Conference receiving ten per cent of amount paid by that Conference. Appropriations already made for 1922, both at home and in the foreign fields, must be discounted unless we secure within the next two months $4,000,000 or more. To discount our appropriations, to fail to make good our pledges to various enterprises, will be a real calamity. We will not do this. Whatever secrifices are demanded, WE WILL GO FORWARD.

MOTHER! CLEAN CHILD'S BOWELS WITH CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, give a teaspoonful to cleanse the liver and bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation poison, sour bile and waste out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful to-day saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions, for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

FRECKLES

Now Is The Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and a very little of it, used morning and evening, should show you how even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Notice.

Mrs. Conger, president of the North Mississippi Conference, writes asking that we make a correction in the announcement for the annual meeting of their Conference, correctly it is as follows:

The tenth annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference will convene in Water Valley, March 7-10. The Executive Committee will meet on March 7, at 3 p.m.

Societies will please elect delegates as soon as possible and send names to Mrs. W. B. Barry, Chairman Reception Committee. An interesting program has been prepared. Some of the chief attractions are the instructive and inspirational addresses of our Council officers and returned missionaries who are expected to be present at this meeting. The names of all deceased members should be sent to Mrs. C. A. Neal, Carrollton, that she may compile the list for a memorial service.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

A Letter From Africa.

Wembo Nyama, Congo Belge, Africa,
November 26, 1921.

My Dear Home Paper: Some one is thoughtful enough to send you to me regularly, and I'm so grateful. Will you not thank them for me, as I do not know their name?

I read a letter of mine in your pages recently and there was a slight error, which may have been mine instead of yours; that was where I mentioned some of my caravan men as having eaten human flesh only a few days before. I certainly meant to write "years" instead of "days," so please tell our friends of the mistake. I do not want to overdraw the conditions out here. They are bad enough at best. The Belgian government has practically abolished cannibalism. It is a very serious crime if detected, and the natives who are guilty are punished severly, if not with their lives.

Our association with the state people is very pleasant, and they are of great help to us.

We are in the full swing of the work these days, and the time is passing so quickly. I am so glad to be here. The natives are lovable and responsive—and though they often tax our strength and patience to the limit, we just realize with a start that in like manner we often tax our heavenly Father; and His patience and long-suffering make us ashamed.

We were threatened recently with an epidemic of dysentery, but it subsided before it became a scourge. A number of babies died. It looked very ominous for awhile with our only physician months away, and the next nearest one two weeks away. But our nurse worked early and late. We had very little emetine on hand. Sometimes whole villages are wiped out by this dreadful disease, hence the natives have a horror of it. But many of them are so superstitious that they will not take our medicine. It grieved the nurse so when they would not let her give their babies medicine, and soon the little ones would die. The wailing of these natives over the death of one of their family is something awful. Sometimes we are awakened in the night by their cries, and we know that death has claimed some one. One can only associate their wails with that of lost souls, and they, if they are not Christians, think the spirits of their departed ones are wandering around in the forests, among animals and are lost! lost! The more one knows of the native—gets into his life and customs—the more interesting he becomes.

Two of our missionaries are across the Lomami River, looking for a new site for a mission. They have been gone many weeks, and write back very graphically of their experiences. One of them, Mr. Kinman, of Missouri, killed a buffalo. Buffaloes are considered the most dangerous animals to be found out here—that is to hunt and kill. Mr. Kinman hid in the tall grass, and shot him eight times before he killed him—the buffalo all the while wildly searching for his foe. If he had found him, he would have mutilated him. Mr. Kinman wrote that he wasn't feeling very heroic over it, after realizing the danger. His shoulder was in a pulp from the gun kicking him, and I think he was all but unconscious when the bull fell. My, the hide and horns are monsters! They are finding elephants, too, but are not trying to shoot them. But they have killed several antelopes.

The lions are still visiting us occasionally, though always at night. Sometimes we can hear them in the forest in the late afternoon and early morning. The leopards visit us occasionally, taking ducks or goats.

School starts again Monday. We teach six weeks and have a vacation of two, teaching the year round. The long terms are too hard on us. We find that the intermission of two weeks helps.

I am thinking of our Conference—Louisiana—as being in session, and am just as keenly interested as when I was there.

The news of our own Bishop Lambuth's death was such a shock to us. We miss him so. Africa was so much on his heart. His letters to us were as a father's to his children. But as Mrs. Bush, one of our number, said, "we have a heritage and heaven a hero." And God will raise up another, we know.

I do not know that this will be interesting enough to be published. I only know I want you to ask our friends to pray for me, for the need out here is so great. God is more real to me than He was when I came. One is so dependent upon Him and He manifests himself so plainly to one in answered prayers and daily comforts. I only fear we do not suffer enough for Him. You are prone to think of us as martyrs, but we are not. We have many blessings, and best of all is the joy of being where He wants us to be, and of the priceless privilege of service that is denied many, and, on the other hand, spurned by many.

Yours in service,

ELIZA ILES.

That Is, Impure, Impoverished, Devitalized Blood.

Probably 75 per cent. of the ailments of the human race are due to an abnormal condition of the blood,—thin, poor, anemic.

This fact and the further fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies, enriches and revitalizes the blood, by creating a healthy appetite, aiding digestion, promoting assimilation and thereby securing in full all the benefits of complete nutrition, must impress the thoughtful with the wisdom of giving this great medicine a good fair trial.

A FRIEND IN NEED A FRIEND INDEED

Writes Mrs. Hardee Regarding Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Los Angeles, Calif.—"I must tell you that I am a true friend to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have taken it off and on for twenty years and it has helped me change from a delicate girl to a stout, healthy woman. When I was married I was sick all the time until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was in bed much of my time with pains and had to have the doctor every month. One day I found a little book in my yard in Guthrie, Oklahoma, and I read it through and got the medicine—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and took eight bottles and used the Sanative Wash. I at once began to get stronger. I have got many women to take it just by telling them what it has done for me. I have a young sister whom it has helped in the same way it helped me. I want you to know that I am a 'friend indeed,' for you were a friend in need.'" —Mrs. GEORGE HARDEE, 1043 Byram St., Los Angeles, California.

Let Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound be a "friend indeed" to you.

A HAPPY OCCASION AT NOXAPATER, MISS.

Dear Advocate: These people here at Noxapater know how to do things and to bring joy and sunshine in one's life. Some three weeks ago they all got together and celebrated Mrs. C. C. Gunn's birthday. Mrs. Gunn is a dear sister in Israel here and has indeed given her life towards the upbuilding of the Kingdom of Jesus in these parts. She mothered the church for years and was and is still the mainstay of the Missionary Society and the general church work. If the parsonage is to be repaired or anything whatever done in any line of church work, Mother Gunn has to be advised with and opinion and advice gotten as to what and how to do. She is indeed a great character. I wish we had more such great characters in our different churches over Methodsm.

So in the habit of doing the big and fine and great things, these dear people wended their way to the preacher's quarters a few nights ago and remembered him with a very fine shower of silk and linen shirts, silk and linen handkerchiefs, hose and ties, etc., really enough such nice things to last for years. In addition to such things as above mentioned, were checks of money, writing paper by the box, and a fine Parker's fountain pen and some other things that go to make gladness in one's soul. Such kindnesses are very much appreciated, but we appreciate the thought of being remembered more than we do the intrinsic value of these things. The handsome banker of the city, Mr. Cooper, accompanied by some forty or more good people, presented me with the things above referred to in the well-chosen words you will find attached.

W. V. SHEARER.

Presentation Remarks By Mr. Cooper.

Friends, there is at least one in our midst to-night who is wondering what it is all about, why so many are gathered here. There are many others of you, perhaps, who are wondering why on earth our hostess selected Cooper from among the many others who could have done so much better than he. I shall answer the last question first by saying that some one told our good hostess that I was a great speech-maker, and she believed him; but want to say here that he did not agree to comply with her request without first pleading not guilty to the charges which were laid at his door.

The reason for our being here is occasioned by the fact that forty-six years ago a journey was begun which begins with the cradle and ends with the grave, so far as the material side of life is concerned. Near the fireside on a little farm near Macon, Miss., a little babe was born and the journey started. For a period of a few months, five, six or seven, perhaps not so long, the travel was in the direction of an arc just a few inches to and fro with the rock of the cradle. A few months more and our traveler has crawled and toddled past the first milestone. Four, five or six more are passed before our little hero takes much note of the objects he passes on the way. Soon, however, we find him in school, and here on the playground and everywhere he goes he meets other little travelers along the way. A few more mile boards are passed, and we find him in that most trying trip, up the "teen age" mountain. Bye and bye he reaches the summit, where at the 21st mile board he finds the way is lonely. From here, we see him traveling with a companion—and fair, how fair is she! As they travel down life's pathway together, we see other little travelers join them on the way. Many mile boards are passed with this happy group together until God in his divine providence saw fit to take the fair companion, and we see our traveler just as he has passed the 46th mile board traveling alone—and sad, how sad is he! Brother Shearer, as we greet you to-night, it is with a mixed feeling of sorrow and gladness; sorrow that this fair companion is not with us, too, but happy that you are here. We bring these small tokens to you on your 46th birthday in appreciation of you as our friend, brother, and pastor.

MENTAL HOUSE CLEANING.

The majority of people need a mental house cleaning. Mental filth and scum never contribute to clean living. Learn to tackle big problems and contribute your mite to the world's progress. When the mind sees things in the right perspective, you can build noble structures on the concept; and as you build the ideals will expand in scope, taking breadth and altitude as the mind dwells on "the worth while." There has never been a greater challenge for men of giant mind than now. Yet so often what glows in promise is little more than the effervescence of fetid ideals. Men need the clean life. It offers nothing it cannot fulfill. The progress of it may be slow, but it rises to heights never reached by men of degraded mentality. You can reform the past if you think and do right. Step into the forefront and lead men out of the present unrest into clean, noble living that will exalt the nation. —Selected.

ADVENTURE IN AFRICA.

Bishop Lambuth had the conception of what the Church could do in Africa. With confidence in God he planted the mission at the place to which he felt Divinely led. The story of the founding of the mission together with the remarkable achievements wrought in these seven years is strikingly told in the book "IN WEMBO-NYAMA'S LAND."

It reads with the pulse of one fired for the redemption of the world. The unique characteristics of the natives together with their weird superstitions keep the reader enthused from the beginning to the end of the book.

Written by one of our own missionaries the information is accurate and reliable. Already in the third edition your order should be placed at once. Order from the nearest branch of the Methodist Publishing House.

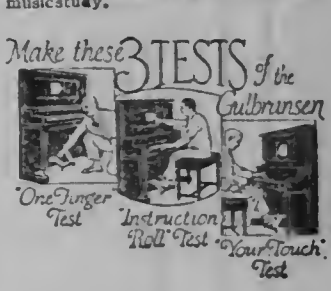
$700 $600 $495

Go into your dealer's store. Play a Gulbransen. Make the three tests shown below. You'll realize the pleasure a Gulbransen will bring you and—further than that—you'll understand why the Gulbransen encourages the interest of children in good music, and music study.



"They're still talking about the Gulbransen and me"

"Some friends came over the other night—all music critics. They were expectant—they had heard about our new Gulbransen.

"I played Grieg's 'To Spring'. It's rather difficult, you'll admit.

"Everyone listened attentively until I finished—and then what applause!

"I—who, until a week before, had been denied the pleasure of playing—holding the interest of my musical friends! The same friends who were prejudiced against player-pianos. I was proud of my accomplishment—I was a real musician.

"And here's a little secret: I could never have done it without Gulbransen Instruction Rolls. Four simple rolls—and the right player-piano—that's all. Just like making a wish and having it come true!"

REPORT TO FIRST QUARTERLY CONFERENCE, SIDON AND CRUGER CHARGE, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: This early in the year, being a new man in this field, I am not in a position to tell whether or not we are making any real progress in a spiritual way. However, if congregations and general interest are marks of spirituallty, then we may safely say that we are doing well, for I have had good attendance at all of the services that I have held. In addition, I am pleased to report that congregations are growing.

There does not seem to be any marked advancement in the Sunday schools over last year. We seem to be holding our own in this department of the church. However, we are planning some work which we hope will be the means of developing great things in the near future. Our plan is to have a get-together meeting, the purpose of which is to bring as many as possible into the school. We hope by this and other methods to bring our schools up to the 100 per cent mark.

Our Epworth League is well organized, and doing a splendid work, both for the young people and the church in general. I do not see how we could do without this organization in our church. It not only helps the individual, but it also develops for the church timber of the finest sort.

I am glad to report two fine prayer meetings, one at each church, and both doing a fine work.

Our Woman's Department is doing real well. They are doing considerable local work at present, and have in mind to do still more. They are at work on the parsonage now. They plan to repaint the house, and to do some extensive repair work around the place.

In a financial way, the report will speak for itself. For all purposes this quarter we have raised $1268.05.

We have receive one by letter during the quarter, and have dismissed two.

We are planning and praying for one of the best revivals the charge has ever seen. and hope to drive the devil from the Sidon and Cruger charge, and thus let the Holy Spirit have His way. Pray for us, brethren.

Respectfully submitted,

C. L. OAKES.

NORTH TEXAS CONFERENCE TO THE FRONT IN EPWORTH LEAGUE WORK.

At the present time the North Texas Conference leads the connection in the largest amount paid to missions during the past three years. Their contributions amount to $16,335.25. The Virginia Conference is a close competitor, with a contribution of $13,562.94.

There is evidence of the necessity of the young people making their contribution as a separate and distinct voluntary offering for missions. The North Texas Leaguers have consistently maintained the plan of separate missionary pledges. Through a special committee known as the Ruby Kendrick Council they have made their missionary giving the basis of thorough missionary education, and at the same time have memorialized the spirit of their own missionary, Ruby Kendrick, who so heroically laid down her life after a brief service in Korea.

GARFIELD EVANS.

FROM YAZOO CITY, MISS.

My Dear Brother Carley: We are moving along here very nicely in every way. Mrs. Ferguson entertained the Board some few days ago and every one gave out an optimistic note for the year. Many good talks were made along every line of cheer and activity. I herein hand you a short paper prepared and read by J. B. Ellis on a greater Methodist church in Yazoo City. If you think it worthwhile, you might give it space in the Advocate.

We have a great church and a fine people, and we are planning and praying for a gracious revival during the year. Our wide-awake and efficient presiding elder, M. L. Burton, was with us Sunday evening and we had a most delightful quarterly conference. Brother Burton has his hand on the affairs of the district and eyes open to every forward movement of our great church, and the Jackson District is going onward and upward. Pray for us, and come to see us and we will entertain you in the best parsonage in the Conference and let you preach to a fine congregation. Cordially,

W. J. FERGUSON.

The Methodist Church in Yazoo City.

When Brother Ferguson asked me to make a few remarks this evening, on the Methodist church in Yazoo City, my first impulse was to ask to be excused, fearing my inability to say anything that might be helpful to us. However, a sense of duty impels me to make the effort, though it may be a poor one.

There are many things that might concern us relating to the history of our church. It has had her share in the moral and spiritual development of our city; we are proud of her past achievements and we cherish the memory of her sainted dead.

Yet we cannot rest here. To glory in our past might tend to a spirit of self-satisfaction and contentment that would hinder us in the performance of our present duties and obligations.

So let us consider our church in its potential and present relations to our city. If all the power and talent that we possess were developed and put into full action as it should be, we would do a marvelous work for our Master. Our organization as a church is so democratic and her policy so adapted to every stage and condition of human society, as to make it possible for us to reach every one with her message of salvation.

Her people are gathered from among the poor and the rich, the learned and the unlearned. So our problem is just how we may meet the requirements. How, at a time when sordid interests are so powerful, when sin is so often rampant, when doubt and even unbelief is clamoring to be heard, how under such circumstances can Christians co-operate for reverence toward God and humanity toward man? We must recognize that the criminal has a soul as precious as our own, and that our association with him is to uplift him and point him to Christ, and not to learn from him the ways of sin.

Our symbol is not hate, but love and sympathy. So it would seem that if we as members of the church were interested and in earnest about the salvation of those with whom we are associated, we would wake to the mighty possibilities in our power.

I dare say that there is not a man among us who at times has not felt that he would like to do something helpful for those about him. These are but the natural impulses from God inspiring us to duty and if we would heed them instead of putting them off, we would not only bless others, but would add so much to our own happiness. Our failure to meet these duties and obligations often disappoints a sin-sick soul.

Our own lives must be so saturated with the spirit of Christ that sin can find no abiding place in us. We must so radiate the gospel of love and brotherhood that others will be inspired to a higher and holier living. The world is looking to the church to guide them in that path that leads to eternal life and happiness.

We, the official board of this church, are in a manner set apart as examples of this Christian life. This question will be answered in our individual lives. God has given us a rule to govern us in the story of the talents. If we would win his applaudit, we must return whatever measure committed unto us with its increase. We may be weak, but He is our strength and has promised to be our help in every time of need. So let us practice the Christian virtues that we may not fail of the purpose for which we exist.

NINE MILLION DUE.

Of the $22,000,000 due on Centenary pledges to January 1, we are delinquent more than $9,000,000. This does not take into account the fourth payment on the five-year pledge. The special effort throughout Southern Methodism between this date and April 1 is to redeem the pledges due—to come to the 60 per cent standard. This can be done if we will work together in the carrying through of the plan adopted by the Memphis meeting of bishops, presiding elders, editors, pastors and laymen.

The responsibility of the Church to carry through this big enterprise must be recognized as an individual responsibility. The individuals who made these Centenary pledges will decree victory or defeat in this movement. Bring your Centenary pledge to date. If this cannot be done, make the largest possible payment now and make your other payments later. But the needs are so urgent that the situation demands real sacrifices that the work go forward. Let us make this supreme effort; it is demanded in an hour such as this.

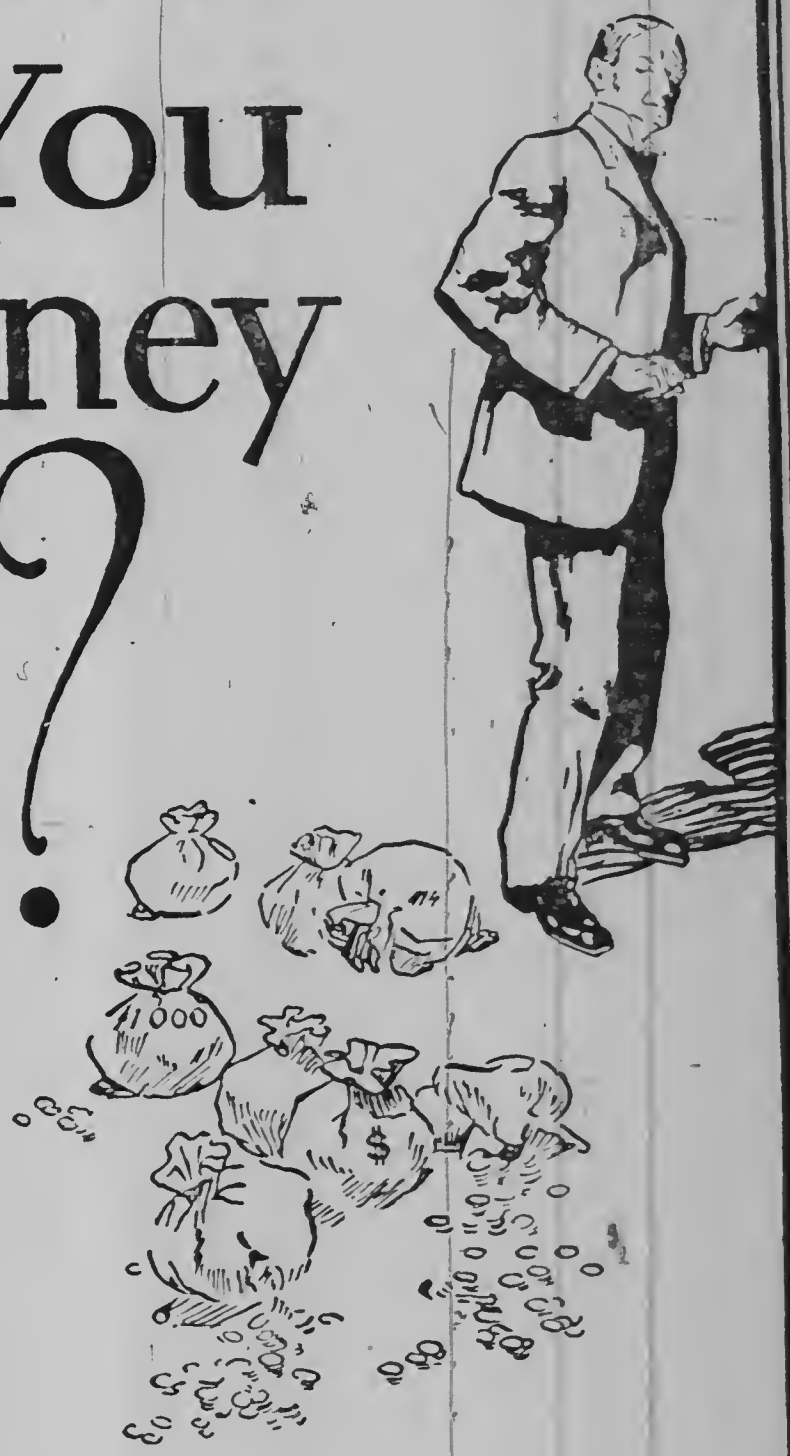
Would You Throw Money Away?



If money came to you legitimately from an outside source, would you spurn it? Would you let it be lost through negligence?

Schools and Colleges of our Church are offered about $1,250,000 by the General Education Board. This vast sum comes from without. It in no wise affects any other interest of our Church.

But this sum is conditioned on the raising of other amounts. These amounts have been pledged, but not yet collected.

Prompt payment of the Christian Education pledge means that our Church will receive this great sum. Delay and negligence will lose it.

Before the 15th of March all first payments must be collected in full. Have you paid yours?

Pay it today. Let no delay of yours help to involve the institutions of Methodism in calamity.

AN ADDRESS BY THE BISHOPS.

To the Ministers and Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Beloved Brethren: Having "confidence in the Lord touching you, that ye both do, and will do, the things that are pleasing in His sight," we, your General Superintendents, are moved to address to you a message of encouragement and a word of exhortation concerning the Centenary Movement in which your faith and zeal have been so notably manifested.

As you know, this great movement was conceived as an appropriate celebration of the centenary of the birth of "The Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church in America," which was organized in 1819, and with a view to providing the means for a great advance in our missionary work in connection with the commemoration of that historic event. The matter was brought to the attention of the Board of Missions by its Senior Secretary, with the suggestion that a suitable plan for the Centenary Celebration be framed, in co-operation with our brethren of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Board took action accordingly. A Centenary Commission was created, who later invited one hundred carefully chosen laymen to a meeting at Memphis, Tenn., for the purpose of prayerfully considering the proposed celebration and laying out a programme in keeping with the solemn obligations and extraordinary opportunities confronting the church in the crisis in the history of the world which the war in Europe had brought to pass.

In response to that invitation a large number of the wisest and best ministers and laymen of our church assembled in Memphis at the time appointed, coming from every part of our widely extended connection for prayer and conference concerning our sacred duties and the world's sore needs. Their deliberations were blessed with signal manifestations of the presence of the Holy Spirit, and, notwithstanding the world war, with all its appalling conditions, was then at its most gloomy stage, they agreed with unprecedented unanimity and Christian courage upon a comprehensive plan for meeting the requirements of God upon us for the relief of the dire distress of a sin-sick and heart-broken world.

The plan provided for a great advance in all the work of our church in both the home and foreign fields, and when laid before the General Conference of 1918 it was received with enthusiasm and approved without a dissenting voice.

Following the approval of the plan by the General Conference, it was accepted by the Annual Conferences and through them carried to the membership of the church.

Our people "had a mind to the work," and responded promptly with generous pledges, which in the aggregate exceeded by many millions of dollars the amount originally proposed, but no more than the needs of our missionary enterprises.

Their zeal and liberality became contagious, and the Methodist Centenary Movement, North and South, inspired similar movements in other churches, thus provoking them to "love and good works."

The combined contributions, to the cause of missions by all the churches who undertook such movements was a vast sum, which went far beyond anything recorded in the history of Christianity in modern times. Unprecedented outpourings thus met an unparalleled condition of need in a weary and war-worn world.

It is difficult to conceive what might have been the disastrous consequences to both home and foreign missions, if these great movements had not come to pass in the crucial period following the war.

While the foes of the Kingdom of God were proclaiming that "Christianity had failed" because it had not forestalled the terrible war, which sprang from unchristian ambitions and antagonisms, the great churches of our country made a demonstration of holy zeal and amazing liberality which proved that the religion of Christ had not failed, but remained the only hope of a ruined world wrecked by anti-Christian forces. While statemanship in confusion faltered, and commerce in perplexity staggered, undismayed Christianity, with increased resources, unwonted vigor, buoyant hopefulness and triumphant faith went to the task of redeeming mankind and restoring civilization.

Confining our attention to the effect of the Centenary Movement upon the life and work of our own church, we may say it has drawn after it the most blessed consequences.

Extensive revivals of religion at home and abroad have brought an increase to our membership larger than was ever known before.

New missions have been opened and our older missions have been enlarged, quickened with renewed hope, and stirred with more abundant life. Many buildings for churches and schools and hospitals, which have been needed long in all our fields, have been erected, and others are in process of construction.

Our missionary forces, which had been depleted by lack of means, and overworked by the very success of their faithful labors, have been increased.

Everywhere the work is advancing with confident steps and rapid strides.

Relying upon the Centenary pledges of our people and with faith in God, the executive authorities of our church have increased and enlarged our missionary enterprises commensurate with the responsibilities and resources brought to us by our Lord in this time of tragic need and deep distress among all nations. They would have been most censurable if they had done otherwise. Their wisdom and fidelity have been vindicated by the favor of God as revealed in the blessed results which have followed their endeavors. With our praises to our heavenly Father for His abundant mercies we may well mingle approving words for His servants who have dared to trust His people and do His will.

But while we rejoice in all these notable achievements, and call upon our people to rejoice with us, we can not withhold from you the information that the Centenary Movement is in danger of being marred, and our victories of faith dimmed, by the failure of many to redeem their pledges. To avert this peril, now imminent, not less than $4,500,000, which is no more than half of the unpaid pledges past due, must be in the Centenary Treasury before May 1.

We can not contemplate the possibility of failure without the most painful anxiety.

Such failure would mean arrest of our work among needy people in the mountain districts, the industrial centers, and growing cities of our own country.

It would mean great injury to our home missions, with embarrassment and suffering to the faithful men who serve those missionary pastorates.

It would mean the retarding of the urgently required building enterprises of our Board of Church Extension and, thereby, disappoint the hopes of devoted laborers in both the home and foreign fields, who have looked to the Centenary offerings to establish the work of their hands.

It would mean failure to meet the expectations which our efforts have sprung in the hearts of broken and sorrowful peoples in Europe, whom we have led to look to us for aid, in the midst of their confusion and grief.

It would fill with dismay and discouragement the hearts of our missionaries, native preachers and the members of our churches in Cuba, Mexico, Brazil, Africa, China, Japan, Korea, and Siberia.

Gladness has come to all these burdened souls as the pledges of the Centenary Movement have caused them to trust in our assurance of help. Any failure upon our part would not only dishearten them, but, impair, if not destroy, that confidence in us which is absolutely essential to all successful labor among them in the future.

Far worse than all other results of such failure to redeem our Centenary pledges would be the effect of such repudiation of sacred obligations upon the piety of individuals and the life of the church at large. Self-respect would be impaired and faith enfeebled. "Better is it that thou shouldest not vow than that thou shouldest vow and not pay" (Ecclesiastes 5:5).

Such failure to pay our vows would diminish the esteem of us by our brethren of other evangelical churches and incur the displeasure of our God.

Moreover, any falling short of the payment of our pledges would most likely communicate a damaging influence to similar movements which other denominations undertook, following the Methodist Centenary. Thereby holy fires which we helped to kindle might burn with less fervent flames, or be extinguished.

As Methodism led in these great movements, it must not lag, nor lead others to lag, in carrying them to a glorious consummation.

We must not, we will not, by unfaithfulness to our Centenary pledges discourage our sister churches in the prosecution of the great missionary movements of like character which by our example they have been led to undertake. Nor will we wither the hopes, or alienate the confidence, of needy peoples who rely upon the fulfilment of the promises we made to God and His church, when our hearts were moved by His Spirit.

Your General Superintendents refuse to believe that our people will not redeem their holy pledges to this great cause.

We do not shut our eyes to the fact that considerable financial depression rests upon our own and other lands. But in this our nation is suffering less than any other people; for God has enriched us above all other nations in the earth.

And we should not fail to remember also that much greater distress must have befallen us, if the war had continued longer. Military men advised us that it would be protracted several years, but our people cried to God, and, contrary to all the fears and forecastings of the chief captains, He made the war to cease. In His answer to our supplications He saved to us more of earthly goods, by many billions, than all our people have pledged or paid for the promotion of His Kingdom.

Moreover, above all material good saved by the earlier ending of the war, we can not forget that many thousands of our precious sons were returned to us unhurt who would have been wounded or slain in battle if the dreadful conflict had continued longer. Our hearts are filled with tenderest sympathy for those who mourn their dead, and with thanksgiving to God that the far greater number were blessed by the return of their loved ones alive out of the veritable furnace of fire. For these immeasurable mercies we should bring abundant thank-offerings with joy. Our losses since the war, however large, are as nothing when compared with the blessings which remain, and the resources which by God's favor are left in our possession greatly exceed all that He asks at our hands.

The voice of God calls upon us to pay our vows to Him in the presence of all the people whom we have caused to hope in our word; for He has said in the Holy Scriptures, which can not be broken, "When thou shalt vow a vow unto the Lord thy God, thou shalt not slack to pay it: for the Lord thy God will surely require it of thee; and it would be sin in thee. That which has gone out of thy lips shalt thou keep and perform; even a free-will offering according as thou hast vowed unto the Lord thy God, which thou hast promised with thy mouth" (Deuteronomy 23:21-23). And again, "When thou vowest a vow unto the Lord defer not to pay it" (Deuteronomy 5:4).

The favor of God has rested upon our Centenary Movement, and now when its perfect success is in our reach and a hungry world is crying for its fruits, we call upon our preachers and people to renew their efforts to carry it to completion. The offerings which we have laid upon God's altar have been accepted, and followed by the holy flame of the Spirit's saving power. In the strength of His grace let us make our sacrifice complete.

In the confident anticipation of greater blessings from heaven and in renewed consecration to the service of our Lord, let us raise the glad note of triumphant faith, "Praise waiteth for thee, O God, in Sion: and unto thee shall the vow be performed" (Psalms 65:1).

And now, beloved rbethren, be assured that "we pray for you, that our God would count you worthy of this calling, and fulfill all the good pleasures of His goodness, and the work of faith with power, that the name of our Lord Jesus may be glorified in you, and ye in Him, according to the grace of our God and the Lord Jesus Christ."

THE CHURCHES OF AMERICA.

Every day during the last five years an average of 2,173 persons joined the various churches of America. During the same time an average of three congregations have been organized daily and the average number joining the ministry has been four and one-half persons per day.

These facts are brought to light by religious statistics for the United States compiled by Dr. E. O. Watson, Washington secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. These figures show that the churches are steadily overcoming their war losses.

The total church membership of the country, according to the latest available figures, is 45,997,199. This is an increase of 4,070,345 over the 1916 census figures and indicates a clear gain of more than a million members for the preceding 12 months.

The various religious bodies report 233,104 congregations, manned by 200,090 ministers. This is a gain of 5,617 congregations and 8,294 clergy over the government figures for 1916. While there has been much talk of a shortage of ministers, the increase in clergy has been approximately 50 per cent more than the increase in the congregations. The 33,014 difference between ministers and congregations does not indicate a corresponding shortage of pastors, as many ministers, especially in the rural districts, have charge of two or more churches.

Of the 45,997,199 persons listed officially as church members, the Roman Catholics have 17,885,646. Roman Catholic figures estimated population including all baptized persons. Protestant bodies count only communicants.

The thirty bodies related to the Federal Council of Churches have 19,933,115 members. They have a total of 142,472 congregations, manned by 113,761 clergy. Their gain in membership over the preceding five years is 1,245,935. Their total constituency is 55,812,722, a gain of 3,448,618 over the 1916 census figures.

The total religious constituency of the country (including all members and adherents) is placed at 95,858,096 persons. Owing to different statistical methods of the various churches, these figures are estimated in accordance with studies made by statisticians. On this comparable basis the constituency of the various great bodies is as follows:

Protestants, 74,795,226; Roman Catholics, 17,885,646; Jews, 1,120,000; Eastern Orthodox (Greek and Russian), 411,054; Latter Day Saints (Mormons), 1,646,170.

The Jewish figures—400,000—are estimated. The Jewish bodies have different methods of reporting, some counting only heads of families and others only heads of families who are also pew holders. Vol. 122 of the American Jewish Year Book estimates the Jewish population of the United States at 3,300,000.

As the churches report their statistics as a whole, it is practically impossible to tell in what part of the country the greatest gains have been made. Indications are that the advance is all along the line. A specially significant growth has been reported by the Southern Baptists and the Southern Methodists.

For the first time the Baptists have passed the Methodists in total membership, now having 7,835,250 members, against a Methodist membership of 7,797,991. The Lutheran bodies stand third with a membership of 2,466,645 persons and the Presbyterians are fourth with 2,384,683 members.

Practically all of the major religious faiths have made a gain except the Unitarians, who show a loss of 30,880 members as compared with 1916 figures, their total membership for last year being 51,635; and the Methodist Protestant Church, which shows apparently a loss of 8,623 members for the five-year period. The Churches of God in North America, General Eldership, with a membership of 25,920, also show a decrease of 2,456 members. The Roman Catholics show a membership and adherents gain of 2,163,831 during the last five years. They have 16,580 churches manned by 21,643 priests.

The Methodist Episcopal Church (North) reports an increase in membership of 220,870 over the 1916 figures and 62,595 members over last year, its present membership being 3,938,655. It is the largest single Protestant Communion. Tho Methodist Episcopal Church, South, shows a great gain of 91,315 members for the preceding year with an addition of 231,588 over the 1916 figures, its total now being 2,346,067. The Protestant Episcopal Church has recovered its war loss and now shows a gain of 11,208 over the 1916 figures, of which 7,134 were reported last year. Its total membership is 1,104,029 persons. An interesting fact is that the Salvation Army with a reported membership of 35,969 shows an increase of only 65 persons over five years ago.

The combined Baptist bodies show a gain of 681,937 persons over the figures of 1916. Each of the major Baptist denominations shows an increase for that period. The Northern Baptist Convention with a membership of 1,253,878 apparently shows a gain of only 2,173, but the explanation must be made that during this period 196,867 Missouri Baptists, formerly affiliated with the Northern Baptist Convention, transferred their alignment to the Southern Baptist Convention, which now has 3,199,005 members. The latter body, not including this transfer, made a gain of 293,068 members. This was the largest gain made by any single communion. The National Baptists (Colored) show an increase of 177,746. Fourteen other Baptist bodies show a loss of 7,687. The Latter Day Saints, or Mormons, as they are generally known, report a membership of 587,918, an increase of 113,000 over the 1916 census figures.

The last available figures regarding membership of the various denominations and their gains during the last five years are as follows:

Congregational Churches, 819,225, gain 27,951; Presbyterians U. S. A. (North) 1,722,361, gain 111,110; Presbyterians U. S. (South) 397,058, gain 39,289; United Presbyterian Church of N. A., 160,528, gain 198; Reformed Presbyterian Church of N. A., General Synod 2,400, gain 14; Society of Friends (Orthodox) 96,135, gain 3,756; Disciples of Christ 1,210,023, gain 16,005; Evangelical Synod of North America 274,860, gain 64,993; Evangelical Association 160,000, gain 39,244; Seventh Day Baptists 8,044, gain 64; Christian Church (American Christian Convention) 97,084, gain 21,653; United Lutheran Church (organized within the five-year period from a group of Lutheran Churches) 791,400; Primitive Methodists 19,986, gain 1,633; Moravians (Unitas Fratrum) 31,767, gain 5,394; Reformed Episcopal Church 13,622, gain 1,972; Reformed Church in America 135,634, gain 9,295; Reformed Church in the United States 331,369, gain 13,005; Christian Reformed Church 43,902, gain 5,234; Church of the United Brethren in Christ 364,229, gain 15,401; United Evangelical Church 90,096, gain 322; National Baptist Convention (Colored) 3,116,325, gain 177,746; African Methodist Episcopal Church (Colored) 551,766, gain 3,411; African Methodist Episcopal Zion 412,328, gain 155,159; Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America 245,719.

The membership of some of the better known smaller bodies is as follows: Social Brethren, 950; Society of Ethical Culture 3,210; Spiritualists, 105,837; Theosophical Society, 62,180; Universalists, 58,566; Bahais, 2,884; Adventists (five bodies), 136,233; Armenian Church 27,450; Church of the New Jerusalem (Swedenborgian, two bodies), 8,087; Friends (four bodies), 117,239; Volunteers of America, 10,200.—Bulletin, Federal Council of Churches.

HAS THE PEW OUTGROWN THE PULPIT?

By Rev. John W. Boswell, D.D.

The following statement, said to be "significant," was made by Dr. J. H. Reynolds at the great meeting recently held in Memphis: "The laymen are not willing to listen to the kind of preaching they have been listening to * * * the pen has outgrown the pulpit." Dr. Reynolds is a layman, Director of the Educational Movement, and President of Hendrix College. I heard that statement fifty years ago. It does not frighten me at all.

It is doubtless true that a certain class of laymen, some in the church, and some out, "are not willing to listen to the kind of preaching they have been listening to." Nor are they willing to listen to any other kind. The chances are they will all be dead before the kind they are willing to hear is ready for the public. If I know what their standard is, I feel justified in saying that unless we quicken our pace it will require about three generations, may be more, to evolve the kind of preachers demanded by a few of the present day pew-holders. It would be well for them to embrace the opportunities they now have.

I take it for granted that Brother Reynolds gauges all present day preaching by what he has heard during the two past years, mostly, if not altogether, in towns and cities. If what he has heard—a layman—doesn't satisfy the "pew" the case must be hopeless indeed.

But, as a matter of fact "the laymen" are listening" to the preaching of to-day, and heeding in increasing numbers. Nearly one hundred thousand souls were brought into our church last year—the largest number in the church's history. They were all brought in through the instrumentality of the poor preachers that so-called scientists, critics, cold-blooded Christians and fashionable sinners are "not willing to listen to." "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Has the pew outgrown the pulpit? Not yet.

ANNUAL MEETING—BOARD OF MISSIONS.

The Board of Missions will meet in annual session in Nashville, Tennessee, at 9:30 a.m., Tuesday, April 18. This meeting is to be held early in view of the General Conference. The importance of a full meeting, taking full time to transact properly the unusual amount of business that will necessarily be before us, need not be urged. The Board will be called on to consider a larger field of work, a greater extent and variety of achievement, and to face a call and providential task such as it never faced before. It is worthy of the best we can give it in thought and time and patience.

Let those who read this pray that we may be given wisdom and power for the task.

THE CALL TO THE MINISTRY.

By Rev. W. R. Lott.

The Methodist Church expects its ministers to have a definite call to that service. This is proved when we find in the Discipline a requirement for examining candidates "who profess to be moved by the Holy Ghost to preach." It is well that we have this in our system, calling for a ministry set apart by God himself for the "defense of the Gospel." The church will be spiritually rich as long as it requires this wonderful, mysterious, binding call.

It is a question of vital importance now under the spur of what influence one enters the ministry. Often when the real call is felt, the one called will flee, feeling unworthy, unequipped, and with a confused conception that such cannot be one's life work. He feels that anything else God has for him to do he will do it gladly, but not this. Some have been known to become secretive, avoiding all occasion to receive impressions. He may say, as Moses, "I am slow of speech," or as Jeremiah, "Ah, Lord God, Behold! I cannot speak: for I am a child." He feels too weak to be entrusted with the weighty messages of God.

Not all who hear the call take it as seriously as the expressions above indicate. Observation will furnish us with abundant illustrations of men who have spurned the call for the embrace of the world. Sometimes this embrace is broken and torn by a great calamity which opens their eyes to God's will. Others die a miserable death with the world and its proffered ease held to their bosom. When God sets his seal on a man, he must answer here or hereafter. I fear many will be wishing for an opportunity to preach the riches of grace in that awful day. They have set their judgment of what was best for themselves and the Kingdom of God against the plans of our Father.

There is one thing noticeable in the lives of men who have been called and failed to answer, that is striking; they never are happy in their life or successful in what they do. It is impossible for the riches of grace to benefit a rebellious person. "Thy will be done in my life," must be said. I have seen God's called merchandising, farming, practicing law, medicine, teaching school, barbering; and all were miserable, unhappy, and practically useless.

But there is such joy in the life which finds God's will and with an open heart embraces his work and goes to the task day by day with the consciousness that God desired him to do that one thing. The life of the minister is the fullest life of all. He is given a competency to do that which is the joy of his life; the yoke is easy and the burden light. Should it be counted unworthy of one's life to be counted a special laborer in God's vineyard? I think not.

Holly Springs, Miss.

AN OPPORTUNITY IN SOUTH LOUISIANA.

Dear Dr. Carley: Just a few days ago I mailed a map of my district to Dr. Russell, one of our Home Mission Secretaries. He requested that two items be indicated on the map, a cross to indicate where we have churches, and a circle to denote where we ought to have them. This map might not mean a great deal to him, as his knowledge of the conditions in South Louisiana is rather limited, but as I drew circle after circle on the map, I got a new vision, and I saw as I had never seen before, the magnitude of the task that is still before us.

We ought not to be satisfied until we have done our very best to see that this part of South Louisiana is thoroughly evangelized. Just think of six men trying to cover and evangelize such a vast section! Of course, we are only occupying the strategic points here and there, and yet with our still very inadequate force we are making some progress. Brother Geo. La Grange, my new man on the Bayou Blue charge, has already opened up two or three new points and is about ready to begin the construction of a very much needed church building at a point where we have a congregation of some seventy-five, and no place to house them except a small private dwelling.

At Houma, Brother McCoy is about ready for the opening service in his new brick church.

At Port Barre, our heroic little band, under the leadership of Brother A. J. Martin, is getting ready to build.

At Melville, just a few Sundays ago, I preached the first sermon in the new pulpit of the church which Brother Lahey has completely remodeled and modernized to meet the needs of that growing congregation and Sunday school.

Brother Duplantis is proving himself a real missionary at Ville Platte, and is opening up new fields; and the Lydia Circuit is taking on new life under the leadership of Brother A. D. Martin.

If we had more men and more money, there are places and Macedonian calls enough to put several more to work.

Fortunately, with the advent of good roads, we find it possible, if the missionary has a car, for one man to do about as much work as two did formerly. Men have cars and make good use of them, preaching to several congregations on the same Sunday, but Brothers Duplantis and La Grange are still afoot.

Now, Dr., I have been wondering if it might not be possible to discover some individual somewhere, whose heart is in this mission work, and while deprived of the privilege of doing the real work, would be glad to contribute the amount necessary for a Ford and thus make it possible for one of these boys to double his efficiency.

If we cannot find that individual, I was thinking we might find some organized Bible Class that would undertake the job. If you know of any such person or class, please let me know, that I may correspond with them. I am sure there would be no trouble in getting the cars if only our people knew about the opportunities and the needs.

Yours in His service,
MARTIN HEBERT, P. E.

A SUPERANNUATE'S ANNIVERSARY.

By Rev. T. W. Adams.

A friend and Conference comrade for many years said to me a few days ago, "Brother Adams, we want you to write your autoblography." I said, "No, my opinion of T. W. Adams and his work does not justify me in spending time in writing an autoblography." My friend said, "Your brethren don't think about you that way at all. We want you to prepare the statement of facts, and turn it over to some one of us, for future use."

I took his request under advisement, and I still hold it that way. I haven't decided what to do about it. The request hasn't gripped me by any means. Some day when it rains and is bad weather, I'll pass on it, and settle the matter.

Meanwhile, up creeps my birthday. The day comes in quick succession, these last several years. "Tempus fugit" is a very sensitive reality to me lately. The coming of every birthday almost unconsciously provokes me to a long train of retrospective and introspective thoughts. It is a very serious thing to get old and to wear out. To say the least of it, it is very inconvenient to get too old to be of any use in the world. It takes a whole lot of grace to be sweetly submissive and cheerful. I am doing the best I can in that way.

Anticipating my birthday, wife said, "Do you want me to prepare a turkey dinner in celebration of it?" I replied, "No, I thank you, for you wouldn't let me eat any of the turkey." They, my wife and daughter, are terribly strict and hard on me on the eating business. They won't let me eat anything I like. They just make me eat things I never did like. That's mighty hard on the "old man," Henry. I ate for dinner on this my birthday a little spinach, a few mouthfuls of potato, a piece of corn bread and some peach-pudding. Isn't that dieting with a vengeance? My wife and daughter are experts in dietetics. They are too painfully expert to suit my feelings.

I get so hungry sometimes that I go a-visiting where nobody will say "that won't do at all. You musn't touch it." Just so soon as the weather will admit I mean to take a round with my friends, and then I am going to widen the scope of my menu. May the time soon come! If I can't do any better, I'll cut all the meat off the spareribs and suck the bones. I just don't want to forget how hog meat tastes. It has always been my favorite diet. I can't imagine how anything could taste better than fresh pork.

I get restless and want to do something that a live man would do. But every time I try it, I drop back and go to grunting. I have been thinking of late a great deal about the Ku Klux and reading a great deal about them. I get weekly the Searchlight. It is a fine Protestant paper. It is devoted to the propagation of Ku Kluxism. I have given much time last year, four or five months, to a close study of this order. To every statement of their principles I have seen in their literature I have said down deep in my heart, "Them's my sentiments!" I can't see how any Protestant who is 100 per cent American can object to the order.

I have been thinking that if I would join the Ku Klux it might liven me up and give me a new lease on life. What do you think about that, Henry? I told a friend a few weeks ago that I was thinking of joining the K. K. He said, "They wouldn't have you; you talk too much." I couldn't understand how one could talk too much about a good thing. If a man's heart is in anything, he just has to talk about it. Doesn't the Bible say, "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."

I belong to the Methodist Church and I talk Methodism everywhere I go—why? Because I love it, and my heart is in it. Out of the abundance of my Methodist heart my Methodist mouth speaks. I couldn't stop it from doing so, even if I should try. I wouldn't join the Ku Klux, unless I could feel absolutely sure that it is a good thing, and that I could render my country good, patriotic and religious service by joining. That settled, I would talk if it should kill me. Why not? We talk a great deal about things that are not good—why not talk some about good things?

But my birthday is my theme. This, the 8th day of February, A. D. 1922, is the end of my seventy-two years of life. Some would say it is my seventy-second birthday. I differ; it is my seventy-third birthday. I was born seventy-two years ago. Wasn't that a birthday? I have had seventy-two since; so I am seventy-two years old. I used to say "of age." I say now, "old." I am no longer minded to mitigate the fact that I am old. I am distressingly conscious of the fact that I am old. My wife thinks that I am growing in sense, as I now confess what she has known for several years to be a fact. It is a mighty good thing to have your wife to commend your course, once in a while. It would be better if it were a constant occurrence.

I have been reading the Bible some to-day. I read the Ninetieth and Ninety-first Psalms, and meditated on them. The Psalmist wrote about the length of life. He fixed three-score years and ten as the normal limit. I have gone two years beyond the limit. The possible limit is eight years ahead. I'll not make that, I am confident. Then I read in the 47th chapter of Genesis what Jacob said to Pharaoh about his age, 130 years. He said, "Few and evil have been the days of the years of my life." He lived 47,450 days. Yet he called that great number of days "few." I have lived 26,298 days. I guess it would be right for me to call my days "few."

If I had learned a little every day of my long life and had retained it in my memory, what a "whopper" I would be now! My, just to think of it! But I haven't done that. I just couldn't do it. Why? Just because I was forced to work the life almost out of me to support myself and family while I was preaching to stingy Methodists. I made my sermons as I was running around from house to house in my pastoral work. I had to read of nights. I had no time to write. My memory couldn't retain what I read. I was always tired. I never had a restful sensation. How could

I preserve and retain the fruits of my study? My memory leakage ruined me.

If I had gotten salaries like the preachers are getting now, and had used a car to save time, there is no telling what a prodigy I would have become. Lamentations can't do me any good now. I am resigned—there are no thoughts of complaining. Everything considered, I can join the Psalmist in saying, "The lines have (are) fallen to me in pleasant places." I haven't deserved half of the good that has come to me.

What I have thought and written has to do with the past. What about resolutions for the future? The future on earth has had but little thought with me to-day. I feel sure that there is very little of it for me. I am living day by day, not counting on another when the present day closes. My prayer daily is, "Give my this day my daily bread." I am going to do the best I can, and trust God to the end. While my dear son was living, I had visions for the future of a projected personal influence through him. That is all over now. Those vanished visions have left an aching void.

I love February. It is not only my natal month, but that of two of our daughters. Washington, Abe Lincoln, Thomas A. Edison, W. T. Griffin and I H. Anding were born in February. I am sure that nobody who was born in this good month has any inclination to regret it.

I am at the end of my birthday. I shall stop and have family worship. Then I'll commit my weary body to the "embrace of tired nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep," hoping to have a good day to-morrow, the first day of my 73d year.

SUMMER SCHOOLS FOR CITY WORKERS.

Some inquiries have been coming in as to whether there would be any schools for our city pastors and workers during the next summer season. I am happy to say that we are planning for five schools for our city forces at the following places: Russellville, Kentucky, May 28 to June 8; Birmingham, Alabama, May 31 to June 14; Conway, Arkansas, June 9 to the 20th; Randolph-Macon College, June 15 to the 23d; Dallas, Texas, July 4 to the 14th.

Announcement as to curriculum and other features will be made later. This announcement is made now that our city pastors, city missionaries, deaconesses, and others may know in advance that they will have access to one of these schools during the summer. O. E. GODDARD.

February 9, 1922.

MID-YEAR MEETING OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS.

A mid-year meeting of the Board of Missions of the Mississippi Conference will be held at Main Street Church, Hattiesburg, Tuesday, March 7, beginning at 11 a.m. Dr. R. L. Russell, Secretary of the Department of Home Missions, is expected to be present, and deliver one or more addresses. The presiding elders are cordially invited to meet with us. The presence of every member of the Board is earnestly desired. We expect to adjourn Tuesday night.

M. M. BLACK,
President Board of Missions, Mississippi Conf.

CHURCH EXTENSION NOTICE, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The North Mississippi Conference Board of Church Extension will have a meeting of the Executive Committee to pass on applications to the General Board on March 7, 1922, in Water Valley. Those interested, get your blanks from Rev. J. T. McCafferty, Amory, Miss., and have properly filled out and on hand.

W. M. YOUNG,
President.

A Sixty Cents Dollar.

To February 1 the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, had paid on Centenary pledges, $12,879,027. On the first three payments on Centenary subscriptions there was due, $22,146,699—and the third payment was due in advance of January 1, 1922. The deficit, not taking into account the fourth payment, is $9,267,672. Sixty cents on the dollar doesn't look good.

A DISCOUNT THAT HURTS.

Your Board of Missions, backed by the pledges of more than one million Methodists, has given the faith of the Church to certain missionary enterprises in the homeland and in foreign fields. In this third year of the Centenary period there is threatened repudiation of some of these pledges—because appropriations made in dollars of the 100 Cents kind cannot be paid in dollars of the 60 Cents kind. These unpaid pledges include $927,000 that would go to pastors in the home Conferences, to men who need now this help that their own Church promised to them.

In these unpaid pledges are the funds for many home mission enterprises—mission schools, work among foreigners in our own land, rural work, city missions, special evangelistic work—all the home mission program of the Church.

Advance in every mission field—advance to which our obligations and our glorious opportunities call us—waits on payments of the $9,000,000, and more, past due.

WE WILL NOT FAIL.

When bishops, presiding elders, editors, pastors and laymen faced this situation in the World Conference at Memphis they declared that the Church, when all the facts are given to Methodist people, will not fail of its duty. They spoke for the Church—they know and love the Church for which they spoke. That Church will keep the faith of 1919—the faith that dared to answer the call of God to larger tasks. Whatever of sacrifices are demanded, IT MUST KEEP FAITH.

YOUR PART IN THIS.

To pay whatever is now due on your Centenary pledge. With faith in ourselves, faith in our Church, faith in God—let's make a record worthy of Southern Methodists.

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

By Hon. C. L. Bates.

(Eleventh Paper)

I.

"Bloody instructions, which being given, return to plague the inventor."

When the inviolability of constitutional principles, guaranties and rights is treated lightly, and the absence of respect for the fundamental law becomes prevalent, whether in State or church, no one from the least to the greatest is safe; the great and the powerful may not presume that they can disregard the rights of the humble and escape the probability of wrong and injustice to themselves; "the lofty and the lowly"—the bishop and the circuit-rider, the presiding elder and the station preacher—are all bound up in constitutional solidarity; they stand or fall together.

The episcopacy of our church is itself now in peril, because of a disregard of great constitutional principles shown by very high officials, and their insistence upon theories of ecclesiastical power and government which are radically and fundamentally at variance with the traditions, spirit and genius of Southern Methodism. From this cause has arisen the demand that bishops shall be deprived of the life tenure and restricted to a term of four years, and that presiding elders shall be elected, and not appointed by the presiding bishop.

II.

On May 19, 1845, the Committee on Organization, in a supplemental report, submitted, and the Convention unanimously adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, That Bishops Soule and Andrew be, and they are hereby, respectfully and cordially requested by this Convention to unite with, and become regular and constitutional Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, upon the basis of the Plan of Separation adopted by the late General Conference."

This resolution is a solemn declaration by that Convention, representing the sixteen Sovereign Annual Conferences, that:

(1) A bishop is a constitutional officer of the church, holding his office under the Constitution and by constitutional tenure; (2) under the Plan of Separation Bishops Soule and Andrew had the right to unite with and become regular and constituttonal bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, without being elected and consecrated anew by its General Conference; and (3), by necessary implication, that the action of the General Conference deposing Bishop Andrew was illegal, unconstitutional, null and void, and had in no manner affected his status as a bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Bishops Soule and Andrew complied with the request of the Convention, to take effect immediately as to the latter, and, as to the former, at the meeting of the General Conference of 1846.

The phrase, "constitutional bishops," employed in the above Resolution by the Convention, is, to all intents and purposes, a declaration by that body that the episcopacy of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is a co-ordinate branch of the church government, created by the sovereign power of the Annual Conferences and imbedded in and protected by the Constitution, and the General Conference cannot change its character, powers, functions or tenure of office, nor in any manner destroy its dignity and efficiency.

The dignity and integrity of the episcopacy is the great principle of unity in Southern Methodism and every loyal son and daughter of the church is bound to respect and uphold the dignity and lawful authority of all our bishops, and accord to them that veneration and love which their official position, high Christian character, and eminent abilities entitle them to receive.

III.

As before indicated in these papers, the report of the Commission on the Constitution, recently made public, adopts the fallacious constitutional theory upon which the majority in the General Conference of 1844 based its determined and successful assault upon the episcopacy of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and which is still a menace to American Methodism.

That theory was, and is, that the Methodist Episcopal Church had no Constitution except the six Restrictive Rules; and thence was advanced Mr. Hamline's "logical formula," as he himself called it, that the General Conference was endowed with universal supremacy, and vested with supreme power, legislative, executive, and judicial; and "if it err, which is not a legal presumption, its unwholesone error is incurable, except by the vis medicatrix—the medical virtue—of its own judicial energies."

Based upon that "logical formula," Mr. Hamline set up the contention, and submitted a great argument in support of it, that a bishop is not an officer of the church, but a mere officer at will and sufferance of the General Conference, and may accordingly be deposed at any time, with or without cause, accusation, proof, or formal trial, as a dominant majority may elect; and that while the General Conference could not "do away with episcopacy," one of the Restrictive Rules forbidding that, yet it could "do as it pleased with an episcopos;" and, extending the principle, that a pastor, presiding elder, steward or other officer of the church may be removed from a higher to a lower office, or summarily removed from office altogether, by a superior, without notice, trial, or cause assigned, and that no statutory law was needed for such removal, and if one stood in the way it could be disregarded and set aside.

Such was the postulate upon which Mr. Hamline made his assault upon the episcopacy; and it is said of his speech in support of it:

"It was such a speech as for originality, analytical power, and literary finish the General Conference had not heard for many a day. It made its author a bishop, for the majority had at last found a man who had laid a platform broad enough for them to stand upon. We have said the theory was novel; the Senior Bishop declared to the General Conference he had never before heard its doctrines so much as hinted. It would be difficult to find a trace of them in the literature of the church before 1844. But the Conference not only adopted them, but proceeded at once to act upon them, and Mr. Hamline's views have since become canonical in the Methodist Episcopal Church." Tigert, 2d Ed., 374-376; McTyeire 631.

IV.

The fundamental vices of Mr. Hamline's constitutional theory were:

He claimed (1) that the church had no constitution at all except the six Restrictive Rules; (2) that there had never been any distribution of the powers of government, but that the whole of said powers were vested in the General Conference; (3) there was no presumption the General Conference in the exercise of its power would ever commit an error, and if it should, the error was incurable except by its own inherent judicial virtues and energies, and that the party or parties aggrieved by such error were remediless, and (3) that neither the episcopacy, nor the preachers, including bishops, presiding elders and pastors, nor the Annual Conferences, nor the stewards, nor the trustees, nor any other officers of the church, had any rights which were the subjects of constitutional protection, but that all of them were under the control and dominion of irresponsible and arbitrary power, and that any rules or regulations which have been at any time provided for their protection and benefit may, in administration, be wholly disregarded by those in superior authority. McTyeire 631; Tigert 2d Ed., 375.

In the present movement to resuscitate that constitutional theory and fasten it upon the Southern Church, an effort has been made, arguendo, to prostitute the great name, character and learning of Bishop Joshua Soule to its support; but at the time the theory was first propounded in the General Conference of 1844, that distinguished prelate promptly repudiated it, saying:

"But, strange as it may seem, although I have had the privilege to be a member of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church ever since its present organization; though I was honored with a seat in the Convention of Ministers who organized it, I have heard for the first time, either on the floor of this Conference, in an Annual Conference, or through the whole of the private membership of the church, this doctrine advanced; this is the first time I ever heard it." McTyeire 631-634; Tigert, 2d Ed., 75 and note.

V.

There can be no liberty worthy of the name, particularly with the great body of the preachers who do the work and are the burden-bearers of the church, without a just, stable government, whose powers are so distributed as to form a complete "system of checks and balances," and as to prevent one man or one set of men from oppressing, afflicting, or distressing another.

"The political liberty of the subject is tranquility of mind arising from the opinion each person has of his safety. In order to have this liberty, it is requisite the government be so constituted as one man need not be afraid of another." Montesquien, 1 Spirit of Laws (Rev. Ed.) 151, 152.

This principle is axiomatic in government, and has been so recognized for many centuries; and although the great jurist and philosopher applied it only to civil institutions, it is equally applicable to ecclesiastical establishments. Indeed, one of the saddest things in all history is the frequency and facility with which ecclesiastical power has wielded the weapons of fear, intimidation, and oppression. In church governments, the personal element is, from necessity, far more extensive than in civil administration; and oftentimes, the great body of plain priests and preachers have been compelled to submit their lives and their fortunes to a government of men, and not to a government of laws. To escape such a fate, Southern Methodism separated from the Northern Church. The assault upon the rights of Mr. Harding and Bishop Andrew was for the purpose of engendering fear in the hearts of Southern Methodist preachers.

VI.

The government of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, established by the Convention at Louisville in 1845, is the best, most stable, just, liberal ecclesiastical system in America; but it requires a broad-minded, humble, brave, consecrated, spiritual executive to administer it, and make it "walk." It is said that Chief Justice Marshall "made the federal Constitution walk;" he did it by his judicial decisions, putting into it the spirit and mind of the people who ordained and established it. If the Louisville Constitution be now failing, effete and obsolete, it is because the spirit that once animated it is dead.

Bishop Soule, in his great address in Bishop Andrew's case, reviewing his episcopal life, said:

"I say it affords me some gratification to have stood acquitted for twenty years in the discharge of the high trust committed to my hands; and I have desired to offer my grateful acknowledgments to the Episcopal Committee for the report they have brought to this body, and to the Conference for their cordial acceptance of the report. I say I do it with sentiments of sincerity; and it is the more cordial to me in view of what may yet be to come. In this regard, although I have trembled beneath the weight of responsibility, and shrunk before the consciousness of my inability, and especially as I have felt my physical infirmities coming upon me, and knowing that I must be in the neighborhood of mental infirmity, I stand this day acquitted in my own conscience—(O that I may be acquitted at the bar of my eternal Judge!)—that I have to the best of my ability, with sincerity of heart, and with the ardent desire to promote the great interests of the church, and the cause of God, in the discharge of the duties which you have intrusted to me—I have never, in the discharge of this trust—God is my witness—I have never given an appointment to any preacher with a desire or design to afflict him. Indeed, if I could do it, I should abhor myself."

The Home Circle

THE RESCUE.

Detta was bustling round, helping her mother wash dishes and dust, for Aunt Hilda from the city was coming the next day to pay a visit. Detta and her mother even went out to straighten up the garden.

It was chilly for early October. "Dear me!" said mother. "I'm afraid there will be a frost to-night. If there is, it will be the end of the asters, and I did so much want them to be pretty when Hilda came!"

Detta went to the fence and looked over into the Bowens' vegetable garden.

"Is a frost coming to-night?" she asked Mr. Bowen, who was digging late potatoes.

"Not if it stays cloudy," he said. "But if it clears, we shall have a frost."

"If the flowers were kept warm, would the frost hurt them?" asked Detta.

"No," Mr. Bowen replied, "but it is hard to keep things warm out of doors without our old friend, the sun, to help with the job."

Detta went to bed early, but she did not go to sleep; instead she lay and watched the sky through her window. The clouds drifted away slowly, and the stars began to shine one by one. It was clearing off; now for the frost!

Detta cuddled down under her quilt. "The poor asters!" she said, "They will not be fit for Aunt Hilda to look at."

She lay still for a long while and pondered over the plight of the asters. "Now, if I myself were out in the garden this chilly night, I shouldn't be cold," she thought, "because I'd have on plenty of clothes."

Then another thought came to her. "Why shouldn't flowers wear clothes when they need them?"

She got softly out of bed and put on her flannel dressing-gown and her slippers and stockings. Stealing over to the closet where her clothes hung, she piled her arms high with dresses, coats, and sweaters. Then she tiptoed downstairs and out into the garden.

The moon was shining bright, and the asters were still holding their brave heads high. But they would soon begin to feel the cold.

Detta stood still and looked at them; she began to feel doubtful. What if the clothes should be too heavy and weigh them down?

Beside the fence there was a pile of sharpened stakes; the sight of them gave Detta a new idea: the stakes could be used to hold up the garments. Laying the clothes on the ground, she set to work.

At last, when she straightened up, every clump of asters had a tall, slim stick to guard it.

"Now I can go ahead and dress the flowers," she said.

Five minutes later one corner of the garden was a queer-looking place. Two coats and three dresses with two sweaters seemed to be standing there alone, and the asters had disappeared from view. Inside the house a tired little girl was tiptoeing upstairs, to snuggle down under the blankets with a sigh of relief.

Detta waked a little after sunrise. "Dear me," she thought, "I didn't leave myself a single thing to wear to-day."

Slipping her wrapper on, she ran out into the garden, hurriedly gathered up her clothes and ran back to her room.

When she went down to breakfast her father and mother were busy talking.

"I can't understand it," her mother was saying. "The frost was so heavy that the other flowers were badly hurt, but the asters look just as they looked yesterday."

Detta smiled to herself over her oatmeal and cream. "I won't tell on the asters," she thought.

But that afternoon when she and her mother were showing their guest about the garden and Aunt Hilda was admiring the asters Mr. Bowen put his head over the fence.

"Where are your scarecrows, Mrs. Perry?" he asked.

"What do you mean?" said Detta's mother.

"Why, I looked out of my window a little after dawn," said Mr. Bowen, "and there were five fine scarecrows over there in the corner where the asters are. Handsomely dressed, too."

Detta stamped her foot, but she was laughing. "They didn't have on a thing but my old clothes," she cried.

Then the secret was out, of course.

Aunt Hilda carried home a big bunch of asters. "I should never have had them but for Detta's coats and dresses," she said.—Nellie Ballou, in The Youth's Companion.

THE LITTLE LADY IN GRAY.

Rodney got out of bed on the wrong side one morning, and everything went cross-ways after that. He could find only one stocking, and his bed had to be turned topsy-turvy before he found its mate. Then the soap got in his eyes, and oh, how they did smart! But tears are the best known for that trouble, so they soon felt better, but dear me, our "Jolly Rodney Rover" seemed far away.

Baby Nan caught the bad spirit, too.

"Don't wan't 'n' oatmeal. Don't like it this mornin'," and she pushed her dish away.

"Mine's cold. Seems so it's always cold now'-days," grumbled Rodney.

Mamma tried to smooth ruffled feelings, and papa very quietly said, to no one in particular, "Such a funny little lady as I met yesterday morning, as I went to the office. I saw her the day before, too," and (suddenly looking around at mamma), "I expect to see her to-day."

Mamma smiled, and Rodney and Nan almost pricked up their little ears.

"Funny?" queried Rod. "What did she do?"

"Nice funny lady?" asked Baby Nan.

"Very nice, and as neat as a rose, Dressed all in gray, from bonnet to toes," laughed papa.

"Was it my Sunday school teacher? She wears a gray dress," ventured Rod.

"Oh, no. A much smaller lady, with eyes like glass beads, and she would whisk her train over the fence"—

"Over the fence!" shrieked Rodney. "Why Papa Bent! How could she?"

"Why, just as easy. Her dress seemed like gray satin, with a long train to the skirt. I was eating grapes, and she popped up over the top of the fence, and held out her hands for one so prettily that I passed it over."

"Over the fence," breathed Rodney, again awe-struck.

"Yes, she was hungry, I suppose. She sat on the top rail and spread her train gratefully behind her, and ate her grape as any lady would."

"My goodness!" said Rodney.

That was the first time I met her," continued Papa Bent. "Yesterday she was waiting for me, and scampered toward me along the fence, and took the grape I had ready for her. She seemed especially fond of them."

"One grape! My, she wasn't very hungry. Just one grape! Did you find out where she lived?"

"No, son, I don't know just where she hangs out, but Mr. Freeman, just below here, says she's been getting nuts and leaves together for quite a while, and hiding them near his horse-chestnut tree. She's a prudent little lady, and"—

"A gray satin lady hiding nuts," broke in Rod. "What a funny thing—oh, oh, I know, Papa Bent! I know! It's a little gray squirrel papa, isn't it? And she's going to meet you to-day? Can't I go with you?"

"Me go too," and Baby Nan began to get down from her high chair.

"Breakfast first," warned papa, and peace being restored, the oatmeal melted away like a snow-man in the sun.—Clara Heron Weeks, in The Sunday School Times.

"TIME OUT."

A Good Parrot.

She had inspected every parrot in the store, and the dealer was getting tired. She declared one bird was too green to go with the dining room and another too red for the drawing room, and so on.

At last she almost settled on a purchase. Then suddenly she asked:

"But is he a good bird? I mean, I hope he doesn't use dreadful language."

"'E's a saint, lady," breathed the dealer fervently. "Sings 'ymns beautiful. I 'ad some parrots wot used to swear crool, but, if you'll believe me, this 'ere bird converted the lot of 'em."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

WE MUST DO OUR BEST.

We trust that the appeals of the Centenary Commission and of the Christian Education Commission for the immediate payment of the pledges already made will meet with a prompt and hearty response on the part of all our people. These appeals are based upon the urgency of the situation as it has developed through a failure to collect these pledges promptly as they became due, and the redemption of these pledges is the only thing that can save the church from great embarrassment in the prosecution of its work.

We trust that no member of the church will, for a moment, feel that any undue pressure is being brought to bear upon the subscribers to these great causes to get them to pay their subscriptions. Just as these pledges were made in good faith, so the payment of them on time becomes a duty, and those who are charged with the responsibility of administering these funds would be negligent of their duty if they should fail to call our attention to the fact that many of them are overdue. We have a right to expect them to be faithful in the performance of their duty—just as they have a right to expect us to give them hearty co-operation in completing these great tasks.

The call now is for us to do our best—and we cannot afford to do less. Before we say that we cannot meet these obligations now resting upon us, we ought at least to sit down and carefully take stock of our resources. If we will do this, it is more than likely that we shall find that we CAN meet these obligations without making any real sacrifice at all; and we ought not to be afraid of real sacrifices for the sake of the Kingdom of God. It is only when we have done our best that we can have the testimony of a good conscience in this as in other matters. We must do our best.

WHAT WE WANT.

The Advocate wants articles for publication from preachers and laymen throughout its territory on timely subjects. It especially wants reports from pastors concerning the work of their charges. We should like to be able to publish during the year at least one report from every pastoral charge in our three patronizing Conferences. Some of the brethren hesitate to send these reports, feeling that somebody might think they are trying to "blow their own horns." We assure them that this construction is never placed upon these reports; and we assure them, also, that we have reason to believe that these reports constitute one of the most widely-read and interesting features of the Advocate. Make them brief—but send them in.

We shall be glad, too, to have articles dealing with proposed legislation of the General Conference. There are many things the General Conference will be called upon to do, and its action will be guided largely by general sentiment for or against proposed measures. The church has a right to be heard on these matters, and we shall be glad to give space to such suggestions and expression of opinion as our readers care to give, the only requirement being that they be as brief as may be and within the bounds of friendly discussion.

Brethren, "take your pens in hand!"

WHAT OF YOUR CONFERENCE?

In percentage of Centenary pledge to February 1, the first ten Conferences are, in the order named: Pacific, Missouri, Kentucky, Baltimore, Virginia, Northwest Texas, Mississippi, Denver, Tennessee, Illinois. In per cent of quota paid the following Conferences hold the first ten places: Pacific, South Carolina, Western Virginia, Kentucky, Baltimore, Virginia, Illinois, Holston, Tennessee, North Carolina.

The average Methodist is more interested in the standing of his own Conference than of the church generally. We present here the figures, showing amount paid and amount due by each Conference in the territory of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. And "Amount due" does not represent amount to be paid on total pledge, but amount due on the 60 per cent of total, or amount past due.

Louisiana Conference, paid $276,699; due, $210,248.

Mississippi Conference, paid $296,371; due, $122,746.

North Mississippi Conference, paid $279,471; due, $227,992.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The six Methodist Sunday schools of Shreveport, La., had a total attendance on February 12 of 2263.

After a slight operation at Rochester, Minn., Bishop W. N. Ainsworth is reported as improving rapidly in health.

"We are getting along nicely at Crawford—planning and praying for a great year," writes Rev. R. G. A. Carlisle, of Crawford, Miss.

Rev. W. S. Henry is encouraged with the outlook in Arcadia, La., for a successful year. He has received a cordial response from the congregation.

Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, of Grand Cane, La., serves a most excellent people, and the work of the church is moving forward nicely under his leadership.

Dr. John S. Chadwick, of the Centenary Commission, attended the Annual Meeting of the Louisiana Woman's Missionary Society at De Ridder last week.

There are forty-three churches in the Florida Conference in which the Florida Christian Advocate, the Conference organ, goes into every home represented in the membership.

At both the Noel Memorial and the Cedar Grove churches, in Shreveport, La., a Father and Son Banquet was given on Friday evening, Feb. 10, that were very profitable occasions.

Press dispatches last week announced the death, at Sarasota, Fla., of Dr. Ebenezer Thompson, at one time pastor of the Church of the Redeemer, Biloxi, Miss., and pastor of Jefferson Davis.

Rev. R. A. Clark, pastor of Union Avenue Methodist Church, Memphis, Tenn., recently underwent an operation at the Methodist Hospital. His many friends in Mississippi will be glad to know that he is improving rapidly.

We were pleased to receive recently, through her pastor, Rev. J. R. Roy, the renewal subscription of Miss Bell Higginbotham, of Mer Rouge, La. Miss Higginbotham is one of the long-time readers of the Advocate.

Dr. C. W. Gordon, better known as "Ralph Connor," author of "The Sky Pilot," has been elected moderator of the Canadian Presbyterian Church.

The plant which prints the Richmond Christian Advocate was destroyed by the fire which wrought such havoc in Richmond on February 7. We sympathize with the Richmond in the heavy loss it Revival services began in First Church, Shreveport, Sunday, Feb. 12. Dr. Henry F. Brooks, the pastor, is doing the preaching, and the well-known Wisdom Sisters are giving invaluable assistance by their gospel singing.

At the recent Annual Meeting of the Council of Women for Home Missions, Mrs. J. W. Downs, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was elected one of the vice presidents. Mrs. Luke G. Johnston was elected as one of the members-at-large.

Another of our old-time readers is Mrs. C. L. Dickerson, of Goodman, Miss., who writes: "The Advocate has been in our home weekly since I can remember, at least fifty-five years ago. I suppose it came long before I was born. We can't well do without it."

The Oak Ridge charge, Mississippi Conference, of which Rev. J. B. Cain is pastor, reported 20 subscribers to the Advocate in 1920. Last year it reported 40, and this year 60 are already assured and it is probable that the number will go to 80. That is a record hard to beat.

Press dispatches announce that Dr. J. H. Jowett has resigned the pastorate of Westminster Congregational Church, London, because of poor health. He was formerly pastor of Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York. He hopes to continue his work in a less strenuous parish.

In spite of bad weather, the Sunday school attendance of the Jonesboro charge, Louisiana Conference, has increased thirty or forty per cent since Conference, and the congregations have also been growing. The outlook on this charge, under the leadership of Rev. J. C. Price, is encouraging.

The official board of our church at Oakdale, La., has increased the pastor's salary $300 this year. The work is making splendid progress there under the leadership of Rev. A. M. Shaw. A union meeting, led by Ham and Ramsey, is now in progress at Oakdale, a tabernacle seating about 4000 people having been erected.

Mrs. T. B. Alexander, of Gilmer, Texas, in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, gives this touching testimony to the blessedness of the Christian life: "I am nearing the eightieth mile post in the journey of life. I am greatly blessed in my old age—calmly and joyously awaiting my summons home." Blessings upon her!

Mrs. N. E. Cunningham, of Wilson, La., writes as follows: "Enclosed you will find money order for $12, for which you will enter renewal for my Advocate, also renewal for each of my children"—whose names follow. We commend the example of this mother to other parents who are concerned for the religious welfare of their children.

suffered.

The National Board of Fire Underwriters has announced that church property to the amount of $6,183,338 was destroyed by fire during 1919 and 1920. There were 3,500 fires involved, which indicates that on the average there are approximately five church fires a day throughout the year. The chief fire hazard of churches is in the heating plants.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, president of Whitworth College, has announced that President A. F. Watkins, of Millsaps College, will preach the commencement sermon at Whitworth on May 21, and that Prof. J. Reese Lin will deliver the address to the graduating class on May 22. This has been a splendid session of Whitworth, the enrollment reaching 298.

Captain Richmond Pearson Hobson, the "hero of the Merrimac," will deliver an address on "The Challenge of the Red Flag and the Black Flag" at the First Methodist Church, this city, at 8 o'clock on Friday evening of this week. He is one of the most distinguished leaders of the prohibition cause in the world, and his messages attract great attention wherever delivered.

The Megaphone is the name of a paper published under the auspices of the Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference. It is edited and managed by Rev. T. W. Adams, whose articles in the New Orleans Christian Advocate are always read with interest. Brother Adams possesses literary ability of a high order, and the first number of the Megaphone set a high mark for succeeding issues to reach. It is a monthly.

The Children's Home, of Winston-Salem, N. C., has reproduced in leaflet form the editorial, "An Appeal to Mothers," which appeared in the January number of "Our Home," the official organ of the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage. Brother Lewis spoke out of his heart in that editorial, and it is no wonder that his words appeal to those who are engaged in similar work.

The following figures are taken from the Big Brother concerning the work of the first Methodist Church of Greenville, Miss., since Conference: Members received, 19; raised by the Wesley Workers, $220; raised by the Missionary Society—connectional work $231, local work $374.84; raised by Sunday school, $330; raised for Educational Fund, $200; raised for the Centenary, $110; paid presiding elder, $105; paid preacher in charge, $500.

Evangelist Earl B. Moll, of Conway, S. C., formerly of Shreveport, La., is now in a meeting at Lumberton, N. C., which will run till the 19th of the month. He will go from there to Fair Bluff, N. C., where he will be from February 20 to March 3. He has one or two open dates for meetings late in the spring, and any brother who may wish to communicate with him can address him at either of these places during the dates mentioned.

A recent religious census of the student body of the Mississippi A. & M. College for the current session shows that 98.2 per cent of the students are members of some church. Only 26 students from the list of 1400 indicate no church preference. The church affiliations are as follows: Baptist, 692; Methodist, 504; Presbyterian, 136; Christian, 40; Roman Catholic, 39; Episcopal, 32; Universalist, 4; Jewish, 3; Lutheran, 3; Church of God, 2; Christian Science, 2; Unitarian, 2; Latter Day Saints, 2; Quaker, 1; Church of Christ, 1; Mohammedan, 1.

Rayne and Indian Bayou, of the Louisiana Conference, are in an attendance contest for the first thres months of the year, Rayne, being favored by ths bad weather, having beaten five out of the seven Sundays to date. But with the coming of good weather, Indian Bayou expects to more than regain the lost ground. The score on February 12 was: Indian Bayou, 137; Rayne, 134. Three volunteer school vans are beginning to bring scholars and church attendants to the Indian Bayou church, and still others are expected to rendsr such service for the Kingdom.

Under date of Feb. 16, we received the following note from Rev. F. B. Ormond, our pastor at Tylertown, Miss.: "Mrs. W. W. Morse, widow of the late Rev. W. W. Morse, of the Mississippi Conference, died at the home of her son here this morning at 7:30. Tylertown is in great sorrow because of the passing away of this good woman. Funeral services will he held in the Methodist church tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. She died in the triumphs of a living faith." We extend sincere sympathy to those who are in sorrow because of the death of this noble servant of the Lord. We shall expect a suitable memoir for publication in due time.

An investigation of the church affiliation of the members of Congress shows the following results: Senate—Methodists, 17; Protestant Episcopalians, 13; Presbyterians, 11; Congregationalists, 7; Baptists, 6; Roman Catholics, 6; Lutherans, 2; Dutch Reformed, 2; Unitarians, 2; Mormons, 2; Christian Disciples, 1; non-members, 4; unknown, 23. House—Methodists, 99; Presbyterians, 55; Episcopalians, 35; Baptists, 29; Congregationalists, 23; Roman Catholics, 18; Christians, 11; Lutherans, 11; Disciples, 10; Unitarians, 5; Jewish, 3; Quakers, 3; Universalists, 2; United Brethren, 1; Mennonite, 1; Dutch Reformed, 1; Evangelical, 1; non-members, 23; unknown, 98.

The following sad news was received from Dr R. H. Wynn just as the Advocate went to press: "Hortense, 16-year-old daughter of Rev. C. B. Powell, formerly of Louisiana Conference (now stationed in Huttig, Ark.), died in a Shreveport sanitarium, Friday, February 17." We extend deep sympathy to the bereaved loved ones.

Mrs. Emma Foster, of Opelousas, La., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, writes as follows: "It is a very old and dear friend to me, as my mother took it at its very beginning. Dr. J. W. Lambuth and his wife were her friends in Mississippi. She used to read his letters in the Advocate to us when we were little children. That's why all my life I have loved and prayed for missions and the missionaries who went out to tell the glad tidings of this wonderful salvation. Now these forty years Dr. and I have been reading it together in our own home. I cannot understand how stewards and other members of the church can do without it." This is certainly a worth-while testimony to the value of the church paper.

CHURCH ATTENDANCE CONTEST.

We have received the following reports for last Sunday from the churches engaged in the Sunday evening attendance contest in the Louisiana Conference:

CENTENARY GROUP MEETINGS, VICKSBURG DISTRICT.

To the Pastors, Charge Lay Leaders and Local Centenary Treasurers of the Vicksburg District, Mississippi Conference.

Dear Brethren: The time has come when we must take a vital and personal interest in the collection of the Centenary pledges, or else many of them will he lost, and our cause will suffer. Let us do our best to rally the Centenary forces, and set them going. Many of our people can and will pay their pledges now, if the matter is brought to their attention and put upon their hearts.

In order to get the matter intelligently before our people, two group meetings have been called for our district—one at the Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg, on February 27, at 11 o'clock a.m., and the other one at Fayette, on February 28, at 10 o'clock a.m.

Pastors, Charge Lay Leaders, and the local Centenary Treasurers are asked to attend one of these meetings.

I know you pastors have your hands full, and your hearts burdened with the many duties that come to you; and yet, the Centenary needs your help, counsel and leadership. Please select one of the above meetings and urge your Centenary helpers and leaders to attend with you.

I am sincerely,

J. R. JONES, P. E.

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

What a glorious climax! Never "a desire or design to afflict" any preacher. Never sought to engender fear. That is the spirit of liberty; that is the spirit of 1845. What means the discussion in the church papers about the election of presiding elders, the limitation of the tenure of the bishops, and an occasional sarcastic fling at that high and sacred office? it means discontent—widespread discontent, to remove which is more important than to make a new constitution.

If the leaders of the church—the executives of the church—will remove dicsontent, fear and apprehension, and restore confidence in the security and stability of our government and institutions, Southern Methodism will march on to still higher and nobler achievements, the ranks of her ministry will he filled with competent young men of high and noble resolve, who will carry the banner of the "South," with its prestige and power, and plant it in all lands.

THE PRE-EASTER REVIVAL CAMPAIGN.

Perhaps a larger number than ever before of our pastors will hold pre-Easter evangelistic services. The custom is fast becoming a fixed one in our stations. Rural pastors have found it well to hold one meeting, preferably in the church where the pastor lives, during the Easter season. The plan which has been so signally blest during the past three years will he used this year. A survey will be made to find out whom the church should reach. The fact that the survey was made last year does not obviate the necessity of making it this year. New people have moved in. Find out before beginning the meeting (1) How many unidentified Methodists there are in your territory, (2) How many unconverted people prefer your church. (3) How many unconverted people have no church choice. He is an unwise pastor who begins a revival campaign without these facts. These facts can he obtained by a survey of the community. Then set up your organization to reach personally every one of these persons.

In the campaign, preach family religion, emphasize the family altar, and preach tithing and life service. Heads of families who come into the church now ought to come in with the understanding that it is the duty of the head of every family to hold family prayer, ought to come in with the understanding that all who have any income ought to begin by tithing; and all the young people ought to come in with the understanding that they belong to God, and should place themselves at His disposal.

We have many signs of a real spiritual awakening. More people attend prayer meeting than ever before. More people attend church on Sunday than ever before. More money is being contributed than ever before. More people are joining the church on profession of faith than ever before. Is there any one in the church whose heart is so obtuse that he is not thrilled by what he sees and hears in the church to-day?

During the first year of the pre-Easter campaign the Centenary furnished the survey cards free. We have not done so recently. We find, however, a supply of house-to-house cards on hand. These are not worth anything to us and we shall he glad to furnish them free of cost to pastors as long as they last. First come, first served. Yours,

O. E. GODDARD.

PETER McKENZIE, of Forrest County, Mississippi, died at the home of M. L. McKenzie, November 3, 1921. He was born April 28, 1851, the son of William D. and Katy McSwain McKenzie. His health had been failing for some time, but his friends were not greatly alarmed over his condition, for he was not bed-ridden. Oh! what a shock it was to his relatives and friends when the news went out that Peter McKenzie was dead! He was feeling worse the day he died, but was up most of the day. Late in the afternoon, when his mail came, he read his letters and lay down at five o'clock and died in a few minutes after going to bed. He was a kind and benevolent man, a member of the Presbyterian Church, but there was nothing sectarian about him. He contributed freely to all denominations. He was kind to every one and loved children and did all he could to entertain and amuse them. He took a father's interest in the children of his deceased brothers, doing everything he could for their guidance, protection, and interest. He leaves two brothers and three sisters to mourn his departure: M. L. McKenzie, W. D. McKenzie, Mrs. D. McGilvray, Mrs. E. C. Travis, and Miss Kate McKenzie. He was buried in the family cemetery. The funeral was conducted by his pastor, Rev. David McIntosh, assisted by Rev. W. H. McIntosh.

MRS. GEORGE ANN CARLEY.

When the writer of this sketch was a boy, in school at Mount Olive, a country place in Smith County, Mississippi, there entered one day the same school an intelligent, quiet, modest, sweet-faced and refined young girl, whose features and expression one could not easily forget. Her name was GEORGE ANN THOMPSON, but she was familiarly call Georgia. Unobstrusively she moved among us, gave diligent attention to her books, and was loved by teacher and students. In a brief time, I left the school and, soon after, the community, and when I again met Georgia, after forty years' absence, she was the wife of Rev. Lyman Carley, the mother of a grown-up family, and had fully matured into the noble woman and worthy matron of which she had given such fair promise in her girlhood days.

A cousin of hers and a fellow-student in the same school, Rosa Thompson, now Mrs. McNair, who remained her fast friend throughout her life, writes thus of her during her school-days: "I gladly bear witness of her genuineness, her want of affectation, her gentleness, and general lovableness of disposition." It is no wonder that when she blossomed into womanhood, into which she was then just budding, that she won the admiration and love of Rev. Lyman Carley, to whom she was married Aug. 9, 1871. And no wonder that with the increasing excellencies which marked her career, she held his love and devotion with constantly increasing measure.

She was the daughter of Ransom and Lucinda Thompson, and was born in Calhoun County, Ala., March 1, 1855, but came with her parents in early childhood to Smith County, where she was reared. She received her education at Mount Olive and Sylvarena, both in Smith County. At both of these places were excellent schools. The school at Mount Olive was then taught by Mrs. Dawkins, a most capable and excellent teacher; that at Sylvarena, practically a high school, had a succession of great teachers, one of whom at or near this time was Dr. Fitzhugh, afterwards the president of Whitworth and Belhaven Colleges.

In the early part of the year 1871, some months before her marriage to Brother Carley, Sister Carley joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and to the day of her death lived a devoted and beautiful Christian life. While not demonstrative in her Christian experience, yet such was her life that she constantly exemplified those qualities which make real Christians the light of the world and the salt of the earth. She was always gentle and amiable in disposition and made friends wherever she went, and was thus always helpful to her husband in his work.

The Bible was her constant companion, and she was familiar with the records and teachings of both the Old and New Testaments. She was also a great reader of books other than the Bible, and such was her native and well-trained memory that few were better versed in general literature, and in her quiet and unassuming manner she was an interesting talker about such things as she had read. Her memory concerning incidents connected with the itinerancy of herself and husband was remarkable; and her children and others were delighted to hear her relate them.

She was gifted with fine practical sense, which, with her other gifts and attainments, made her a judicious counselor, as well as an interesting companion of her husband and children.

She is survived by three sons and two daughters, all of whom "rise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her."

Her sons are George L. Carley, of Culfport, Miss.; Charles R. Carley, of Foxworth, Miss., and Rev. Henry T. Carley, D. D., a member of the Louisiana Annual Conference of the M. E. Church, South, and the Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The daughters are Mrs. Stephen S. Thomas, of Alexandria, La., and Miss Grace Carley, of Ellisville, Miss. It is not surprising that such a mother should give at least one son to the Christian ministry. All of her children are professed Christians and consistent members of the church in which they were reared.

Sister Carley lived to share all of the fortunes of the Methodist itinerancy. She traveled with her husband in his varied career until some years ago, when, because of his own ill-health and that of his family, he thought it best to take a superannuate relation. Since then they have made their home at Ellisville, Miss. It was there, on Sunday morning at 5 o'clock, Jan. 8, 1922, that she went quietly to sleep to awake in heaven. She had reached the age of 66 years, 10 months, and 11 days. Just a few months before her departure, it was her privilege, with her husband, to celebrate their golden wedding, and to have all of their children with them. May it also be their privilege to meet them all in heaven.

For several years before her death, Sister Carley was practically an invalid, and knew that her days on earth could not be many. And though she was a great sufferer during these years, she was never known to murmur or complain. She regretted to leave her loved ones, and especially her aged mother, who for years has shared the home of Brother and Sister Carley, and been most affectionately cared for through their kindly ministry. This good woman, now 89 years old, has been almost helpless during the past four years, as the result of a stroke of paralysis, from which, in the nature of the case, one of her age hardly recovers. It was sad, indeed, under such circumstances, for Sister Carley to leave her, but as for herself she was ready to go. There was no cloud in her sky when her sun on earth was setting; and she was confident of a fair morning beyond, whose glories shall be eternal.

The funeral service was largely attended, and was conducted by her pastor, Rev. H. J. Moore, assisted by Rev. W. W. Graves, the presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District; Rev. W. M. Williams, Rev. L. F. Alford, Rev. O. S. Lewis, Rev. J. T. Leggett, and Rev. G. C. Vandevender, a minister of the Congregational Methodist Church and a friend of the family. The floral offerings were numerous and beautiful. Her mortal remains quietly rest in the Ellisville cemetery, awaiting the resurrection morn, while her spirit is with her Savior in the paradise of God.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

We have the machinery to reach ten thousand more people than we are reaching. The machinery is lying idle, rusting. The Wesley Bible Class is the machine I have in mind. Organize, enroll, get ready for the federation. You want to attend the federation to hear other classes tell how they are reaching the people.

We must have a thousand teachers do some definite study in our training schools, and out of the thousand we ought to secure not less than one hundred who will teach a class in the local church; that would be another thousand.

A program is being prepared to hold a Four-Times-a-Year institute at Emory on the Byhalia circuit, March 12. The preacher on the Noxapater circuit is planning to hold a similar institute at an early date. Fall into line, brother, and bring in your part of the thousands of neglected children and grown people.

Brother Superintendent, have you made up your mind to observe Sunday School Day the last Sunday in April? Now is the time to settle the matter and begin to get ready for this occasion. If you have obstacles you cannot overcome, it may be we can help you over your difficulties. In the past we have tried to get every charge to do this work for the children. We failed; now we shall work to get every church to fall into line this year.

You have read the list of the schools that sent the fifth Sunday offering to Rev. J. E. Stephens, Grenada, Miss. This list does not represent the interest our people feel in the work of the Sunday school in the North Mississippi Conference. Other schools are going to report. We shall need at least $200 from the districts where we are expected to hold the District Standard Training Schools. It is a noble spirit that prompts the leaders in our schools to have the schools respond to worthy causes, but it is time the leaders let the schools help at home, until the home base is made stronger. Send in that offering and we shall give it back to you in the form of better workers.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

By Miss Lynda Ramly, Conference Elementary Superintendent.

Children's Week.

Some of our Sunday schools are planning already to observe this Children's Week. Some are not quite sure just what it is, and we want you to find out so that you may give to your church what is being prepared for it. The date is April 23-30. The week is to be given over to work of your school that will meet its need most with the thought of reaching the parents; then, after reaching, giving some constructive thought material with opportunity for practical application. The slogan this year is, "'The race moves forward on the feet of little children"—Hoover. The slogan last year, "Give more thought to children," may be one of our underlying principles this year.

This is a concerted movement for parents, and not a gala day for children. It is for the advance of the entire Sunday school and strengthening the home ties.

There is a syndicate with the following denominations co-operating: Methodist Episcopal; Methodist Episcopal, South; Methodist Protestant; Presbyterian, U. S. A., and Southern; Christian Church; Church of the Disciples; Northern Baptist; Reformed; United Brethren.

Back of all of it is the child, the first and foremost consideration. How will the race move forward? For the parents to stop and consider, there is to be as a feature of every Children's Week observed a Parents' Meeting. The following are leaflets to be used in discussion at Parents' Meeting, along with whatever else you should need for your forward step:

"Sunday in the Home"—Miss Elizabeth Shields, Southern Presbyterian Church.

"The Child's Community Play Life"—Miss Minnie E. Kennedy, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

"The Child's Physical Condition in Sunday School Life"—Rev. Roger Albright, Methodist Episcopal Church.

Other leaflets for other purposes will be on hand, such as arrangements, etc.

Another feature is the Home Visitation, that every teacher in the Elementary Department go into the home of every pupil during the week, explain the meeting, purpose, etc., and that they keep record. Not that this visit is to be a mechanical thing to be done and through with, but a link in the joining of home and Sunday school.

This is not too early to consider this thing, to decide whether or not you want to give benefit to parents of your community. There are several things in connection to be thought through and planned. As Miss Lewis says, "You cannot share with another what you really do not possess."

This is to be a practical thing, a thing that will give you results, not a mushroom growth of impulses to die out over night. You can do it. A

Yeast Vitamon Greatest Beauty Secret Of All

Banishes Skin Eruptions. Puts on Firm Flesh, Strengthens the Nerves and Increases Energy

Concentrated Tablets, Easy and Economical to Take—Results Quick

If you want to quickly clear your skin and complexion, put some firm, healthy flesh on your bones, increase your nerve force and power and look and feel 100 per cent. better, simply try taking two of Mastin's tiny VITAMON tablets with each meal and watch results. Mastin's VITAMON Tablets contain highly concentrated yeast-vitamines as well as the two other still more important vitamines (Fat Soluble A and Water Soluble C) and are now being used by thousands. They positively will not upset the stomach or cause gas; but, on the contrary, are a great aid to digestion, to overcome constipation and as a general conditioner of the whole system. Pimples, boils and skin eruptions seem to vanish like magic under their purifying influence, the complexion becomes fresh and beautiful, the cheeks rosy instead of pale, the lips red instead of colorless, the eyes bright instead of dull. So rapid and amazing are the results that success is absolutely guaranteed or the trial costs you nothing. Be sure to remember the name — Mastin's VI-TA-MON — the original and genuine yeast-vitamine tablet—there is nothing else like it, so do not accept imitations or substitutes. You can get Mastin's VITAMON Tablets at all good druggists.

MOTHER! OPEN CHILD'S BOWELS WITH CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP

Your little one will love the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup" even if constipated, bilious, irritable, feverish, or full of cold. A teaspoonful never fails to cleanse the liver and bowels. In a few hours you can se for yourself how thoroughly it works all the sour bile and undigested food out of the bowels and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful to-day saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

GET READY FOR "FLU"

Keep Your Liver Active, Your System Purified and Free From Colds by Taking Calotabs, the Nauseless Calomel Tablets, That are Delightful, Safe and Sure.

Physicians and Druggists are advising their friends to keep their systems purified and their organs in perfect working order as a protection against the return of influenza. They know that a clogged up system and a lazy liver favor colds, influenza and serious complications.

To cut short a cold overnight and to prevent serious complications take one Calotab at bedtime with a swallow of water—that's all. No salts, no nausea, no griping, no sickening after effects. Next morning your cold has vanished, your liver is active, your system is purified and refreshed and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you please—no danger.

Calotabs are sold only in original sealed packages, price thirty-five cents. Every druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not perfectly delighted with Calotabs.—(Adv.)

INCOME TAX FACTS.

Changes in the revenue law are of material benefit to the average family man. Under the revenue act of 1921 a married person, living with wife or husband, whose net income for 1921 was $5,000 or less, is allowed a personal exemption of $2500. Under the revenue act of 1918 the exemption allowed a married person was $2000, regardless of the amount of net income.

The normal tax rate is the same, 4 per cent on the first $4000 of net income above the exemptions, and 8 per cent on the remaining net income. Given his personal exemption of $2500, plus $400 for each dependent, a married man with three children—the average American family—will pay this year on a net income of $4000 a tax of $12. On the same income for 1921 he would have paid a tax of $56.

Every citizen and resident of the United States must determine for himself whether his income for 1921 was sufficient to require that a return be filed. Full instructions for making out a return are contained on the forms, a copy of which will be sent to taxpayers who filed a return last year. Failure to receive a return, however, does not relieve a taxpayer of his obligation to file a return on time, on or before March 15, 1922. Forms may be obtained from collectors of internal revenue and branch offices.—Government Bulletin.

GIRLS! LEMONS WHITEN ROUGH CHAPPED HANDS

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, which any drug store will supply for a few cents, shake well, and you have a quarter-pint of harmless and delightful lemon-bleach lotion to soften and whiten red, rough or chapped hands. This home-made lemon lotion is far superior to glycerin and rose water to smoothen the skin. Famous stage beauties use it to bleach and bring that soft, clear, rosy-white complexion, because it doesn't irritate. —Adv.

A UNION OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

Healthy Housewife---Happy Home

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has Helped Form Many

For the ailing, half-sick housewife such a union is impossible. Often times even the slightest form of housework cannot be accomplished. Yet the work must be done.

Many women struggle along for years suffering from some form of female trouble that make their lives miserable and their homes far from happy.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped thousands of just such women regain their health and strength. Just give your thought to the following letters and remember that the women who wrote these letters knew how they felt before taking the Vegetable Compound and again afterwards. It helped them—let it help you.

Had Nervous Spells

Horatio, Ark.—"I had nervous spells and awful bad feelings. My right side and my back hurt me all the time and I had been going down in health for six or seven years. For three years I had not been able to do my work without help. I weighed only 95 pounds when my husband's mother persuaded me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Now I heartily recommend it to all suffering women, as I have gained weight and health. I can do all my work, anything I want to do."—Mrs. JIM REARICK, Horatio, Arkansas.

Reading, Pa.—"I was a nervous wreck and could hardly do my housework. I always had to have help or I would never have got it done. Through the advice of friends I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for my nerves and Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine for my blood and I am feeling fine and doing my work all alone. I can recommend these medicines to any one, for they certainly helped me. I suffered for five years and Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines pulled me through." — Mrs. WALTER U. STOYER, 1218 Mulberry St., Reading, Pa.

Recommends the Vegetable Compound

New Orleans, La.—"I have found relief from my troubles by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I praise it wherever I go. I could not do my work as it should be done for I would sometimes have to lie down because of the pains I had. A friend induced me to take your Vegetable Compound and I have got great results from it. I keep house and am able to do all my own work. I recommend your Vegetable Compound to my friends who have troubles similar to mine."—Mrs. T. FOECKLER, 1915 N. Derbigny St., New Orleans, La.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Circle No. 5, Greenwood.

Circle No. 5 of the Greenwood Missionary Society had a very unusual meeting last Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. E. Lawrence, the first meeting of the new year with the new officers; a majority of the members were present. The devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. S. L. Pope, who read the Bible lesson and gave a talk on systematic giving, and regular Bible reading and prayer. Prayer was made for special objects, and much emphasis was given to the establishing of family altars. An open discussion was actively engaged in as to how best to finance Circle No. 5 this year, and it was unanimously agreed that it would be done by systematic giving. The women entered into the spirit of giving so heartily and cheerfully that it was good to be there. Committees were appointed for visiting the sick and strangers, looking after the poor, and rendering assistance to the pastor in his work when needed. The Bible will be studied regularly. We are praying that circle No. 5 will put first things first this year. Most sincerely,

MRS. S. L. POPE.

A LETTER FROM CHINA.

Sooehow, Ku., Nov. 7, 1921.

Dear Mrs. Snelling: You see I have not forgotten the letter I promised you, but I am just a little bit at loss as to what to write, as so many missionaries have already sent home accounts of happenings out here.

Saturday afternoon, after I had finished the day's work in the Language School, I walked through part of the busiuess distriet of Soochow. There were all sorts of shops, but I suspect that your folks will be most interested in one of the paper shops where articles are made and sold for burning at funerals. Here you can purchase paper imitations of every sort of article used in daily life, whether it be a house, or toothbrush, trunk of elothes, or pocket-book of money. I saw paper trunks filled with paper clothes, smoking sets, and in one plaee a paper horse. These paper articles are burned at funerals. The unenlightened Chinese think that by doing this they ean provide their dead loved ones with the spiritual equivalent of the burned thing.

I enclose two pieces of the paper money, which is stamped to resemble the Mexiean dollar, which is current out here. These artifieial dollars have two uses: besides burning them at the funeral, they are also scattered behind the funeral procession. The Chinese believe that there are always evil spirits following funerals and that unless they take care, these evil spirits will harm the dead. So they throw these paper dollars behind the procession so that when the spirits eome along they will stop to get the spiritual essence of the money (whieh is all they want), and in the meantime the funeral will have moved on and lost the evil spirits.

Love to all of my friends.

CALVIN JOYNER.

Soochow, Ku., China.

FROM FRANKLIN, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: Last night we closed what many call the best revival this ehureh has ever experienced. We began under very unfavorable conditions. Some of the regular attendants and best members said they never heard of a revival! Others said it was impossible at this season of the year, etc. But we felt led of the Lord to go forth, which we did in His name and strength. At the day services mueh stress was laid on personal work and prayer. Many faithful ones found a new and great joy in leading others to Christ. I have never, during the eighteen years of my ministry, labored with a ehureh that responded any more loyally to the call for special labor in His vineyard. The visable results were sixty conversions (four of them from the Roman Church, which has a magnificent building just aeross the street from our ehurch) and sixty-four additions to the ehurch, also twenty or more reconsecrations. Never in all my ministry have I seen greater evidence of the presence and power of the Holy Spirit.

Our new presiding elder was with us over Sunday and preached two strong sermons. He impressed me as being one of the good, old-school Methodist preachers who depend on none of the so-called modern "helps," but preaches "in demonstration of the Spirit of power."

Rev. A. J. Martin, our pastor at St. Martinville, rendered exeellent help as soloist and song leader. Brother Martin is a fine, eonsecrated young man, and is doing good work on his eharge. Our people were delighted and edified with his singing.

Carley, if you knew all the conditions under which we labor here, you could appreelate all the more the really great victory this revival was for our ehureh. The pastor did all the preaching exeept as above noted. Praise God, from whom all blessings flow. I hope to send in more subscribers soon. Sincerely,

LEE R. SPARKS.

In charaeter, in style, in all things, the supreme exeellence is simplicity.

Aches and Pains Of Rheumatism

Sometimes They Are Unbearable.

There are weather conditions that make rheumatism worse. They are not the same in the cases of all persons. Some rheumatics suffer more in dry, warm weather than in moist, cold weather, but all suffer more or less all the time.

The cause of rheumatism is an excess of uric acid in the blood, affecting the muscles and joints, causing aches and pains. Hence the blood must have attention for permanent results in the treatment of this disease.

Hood's Sarsaparilla has given entire satisfaction in thousands of cases. Do not fail to try it.

HEADACHE—? GRIPPY FEELING—? For Quick Relief Take CAPUDINE

Famous Old Recipe for Cough Syrup

Easily and cheaply made at home, but it beats them all for quick results.

Thousands of housewives have found that they can save two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, by using this well-known old recipe for making cough syrup. It is simple and cheap but it has no equal for prompt results. It takes right hold of a cough and gives immediate relief, usually stopping an ordinary cough in 24 hours or less.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist, pour it into a pint bottle, and add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. If you prefer, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, keeps perfectly, and lasts a family a long time.

It's truly astonishing how quickly it acts, penetrating through every air passage of the throat and lungs—loosens and raises the phlegm, soothes and heals the membranes, and gradually but surely the annoying throat tickle and dreaded cough disappear entirely. Nothing better for bronchitis, spasmodic croup, hoarseness or bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract known the world over for its healing effect on membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Dear Mr. Editor: Just a line or two from Mer Rouge, La. We are three and a half months in the third year at Mer Rouge, and the outlook is fine for a good, substantial gain if the good Lord will give the farmers a good crop. This section of Louisiana has been hard hit with two crop failures, and high priced goods. It will take years for some of our best people to recover financially. Last year's crop was fairly good, but money matters are close.

Our congregations are good. Sunday schools are fine. We have three live Leagues—Senior, Intermediate, and Junior. We are preparing now for our revivals, preaching and praying to that end.

Recipe For Gray Hair

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.—Adv.

THE RURAL CHURCH AND THE CIRCUIT RIDER

By Rev. E. N. Evans.

An annual inventory of the rank and file of our preachers at Conference, and of the city and larger town membership of our churches would open the eyes of some people as to the reservoir from which we draw. Another careful counting on our circuits and small country villages would show the annual drain of their best material to the larger towns and city churches.

The many cheap jokes of the country meeting house and the circuit rider may account for the loss that comes in the exchange of residence. The basis of it all is that our city churches are not well informed in this matter, and are not, therefore, as liberal in mind or purse toward this, their source of supply, as they might be. The ultimate loss is greater than some of our top men have dared to think. The strain on our few liberal and able men in the rural districts is an overlooked inequity that needs attention. The need of abler and better paid preachers for our rural churches is vital.

The State superintendent of public schools has not only drawn from the State large sums for the building of rural school houses, but provides also for an able corps of supervisors of rural schools. The results have justified the use of means, both in the country, and in the university. There is here a large need and an open field for our church, and our partial neglect is not wise. We need men and money for this field. Can we afford to neglect? The Methodist and Baptist churches have almost alone occupied this field. Their churches in the towns and cities have drawn from this source much more than they have given. There has not been an equitable exchange. The rural districts have become impoverished by this inequity, and our city churches are the greater sufferers.

The remedy is not that of fussing over the matter and thus increasing the hurtful prejudices between city and country, but to give the church true INFORMATION as to the facts; this will produce the INSPIRATION we need; ORGANIZATION will follow and give us CO-OPERATION. In our great Centenary and Educational Movements let's get on this job and stay with it. The Baptists are already in the field and are leading the way. They need our help and we need them. There is plenty room for both. The Protestant churches that take care of the rural districts will need to build more room in their city churches. Give us a few strong men for rural evangelization, and organization, and it will prove the best investment the church ever made. Develop the resources of the lands and they will build your cities. Get these bright boys and girls in your churches before they come to the city, and they will build your churches. New wells in the oil fields build and fill the tanks at the point of export. The hinterlands make the port. We have the men specially qualified for this vital work, and we have all the money we really need. Let's put them together and "go out into highways and hedges" and fetch them in. This matter is more vital and urgent than I have been able to present it. It simply must be done. And we are going to do it. The call is good and strong to our church and we are going to answer. We are doing much, but need to do much more. And we will.

Now do you want Children's Week in your church? If so, let us know at Grenada headquarters. We must know to whom to send leaflets, information, and posters. There are 100 posters here, yours for the asking. They give date and slogan; you put on picture or whatever you want.

The Southern Methodist Church endorses this movement; the North Mississippi Conference endorsed it; what will you do?

FROM SILVER CITY, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: I always try not to annoy you and the readers of the Advocate with my writings unless I have something real good to say that will be of interest to the people. But I want to tell you that this year is beginning in real good shape. Our people seem to be concerned about the church as much as you usually find in these times. They have remembered the pastor with two nice substantial poundings from the charge. The first one was given from Midnight church, which was much to be appreciated; then Silver City gave us time to make away with that one and they followed the good work up with an extra nice remembrance which supplied the pantry for several days. This was wonderfully appreciated by the pastor and his family. It reminded me of the wonderful supply that I received from Sarepta church while I was on the Hermanville charge in 1920.

We are making some good progress up here on the Silver City charge, and have a mighty fine people to preach to. Come up and spend a while with me and I will let you preach some. Best wishes to you and the Advocate.

FRECKLES

Now Is The Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from your druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than one ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

FRIENDSHIP.

Old clothes grow threadbare,
Old hearts never do;
Often through the busy days
I think of you.

Even dearest faces change,
Deep loves never do;
Often through the passing weeks
I miss you.

Changed are many things about us,
Tried are loving hearts and true,
Often through the busy months
I pray for you.

I can't think of you as changed,
Your heart, I mean, and spirit too;
And through all the coming years
I'll be loving you.

I am moving to and fro,
Meeting old friends, making new;
But when eternity is here,
I'll look for you.

RESOLUTIONS.

(Resolutions of sympathy and respect passed by the Woman's Missionary Society of Lula, Miss.)

Whereas it has pleased the Lord who graciously gave her to us, to remove from our midst His faithful handmalden, our beloved co-worker and friend, Mrs. C. B. Clark; and whereas we are deeply grieved because of the sudden departure of this noble Christian woman; therefore be it resolved:

First—That the memory of her good works and her unwavering devotion to the church and to this Society will linger in our hearts to strengthen and inspire us to truer interest and finer service to the cause she loved.

Second—That her going away is an irremediable affliction to her stricken family; a severe blow to the local Methodist Church, and a distinct loss to this Society.

Third—That we extend to her bereaved husband, the two precious children, and other relatives our sincere sympathy; commending them to the comforting grace of Him who said, "Let not your hearts be troubled. In my Father's house are many mansions. I go to prepare a place for you."

Fourth—That a copy of these resolutions be preserved in the permanent records of our Society; that a copy be sent to her family, and that the New Orleans Christian Advocate be requested to publish the same.

Signed by: Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, Mrs. Lester Wilson, Mrs. H. E. Riley.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION—A FUNDAMENTAL THING.

It would seem that the time had passed for emphasizing the necessity of Christian education for the proper development and utilization of life; but, sad to say, such is not the case. In spite of our vehement protestations to the contrary, it remains a fact that we have not yet realized the value of providing for our boys and girls the means of securing a real education under the auspices of the only institution—the church—that professes to take into consideration the moral and spiritual as well as the material resources of life. We say it is a fact that we have not yet realized the necessity of providing such education—wo make that statement on the grounds that we have failed thus far to make anything like adequate provision for supplying such education.

What Christian Education Is.

Without attempting to give a technical definition of Christian education, we may say that it is the process of training our young people for tho responsibilities of life in institutions that are founded to propagate and maintain Christian ideals, under instructors who exemplify by both precept and example the Christian virtues and graces, amid surroundings that are actively influential in promoting the religious life.

It is idle to suppose that institutions of learning that owe their origin only to the impulse to train the intellect, and that depend for their support upon those who are concerned only for the material welfare of society, will devote any special attention to the definitely spiritual interests of those who are committed to their care. We have only to look about us to realize the truth of this statement. In spite of the fact that good men and women compose the faculties of our great colleges and universities that are not professedly Christian, we find that they are practically helpless when it comes to putting into the courses of study those subjects that deal specifically with the religious life; and such institutions themselves dare not attempt officially to inculcate the tenets of the Christian faith. They certainly cannot impart what they do not claim to possess.

Christian Education the Need of the World.

it ought not to require any argument to prove that Christian education is the great need of the world to-day. It is an accepted conclusion that educated men and women will continue to direct the affairs of the world and that they will determine the course of civilization in the future as they have in the past. The world situation to-day is too complex for any but the best trained intellects to cope with its problems and solve its difficulties. But something more than a trained intellect is needed if the world's problems are to bo solved aright. If recent history has not proved that materialistic education is not adequate for the world's needs, it has not proved anything; and we might as well accept the philosophy that might makes right, and go on with our wars if we are not convinced that Christianity points a better way for the progress of the race. We are not now dealing with some incidental advantage to be gained by this nation or that—we are dealing with the destiny of mankind; and nothing but the teachings of Jesus holds any promise of bringing in a better day. If the educated men and women who are to shape the destiny of the race in the difficult times ahead of us are not inspired by Christian ideals and actuated by Christian motives, we have little to look forward to and not much to hope for. The world needs Christian education more than it needs anything else.

Christian Education Precedes Evangelization.

We are more likely to understand fully how fundamental a thing Christian education is when we realize that it logically and necessarily precedes all the organized activities by which we are attempting to evangelize the world. We may assume that those who are giving their lives to various forms of service in behalf of their fellowmen are doing so from the Christian motive; but we cannot believe that they are fully equipped for their tasks without the training involved in securing a Christian education. We must have our evangelistic organizations, our evangelistic workers, our evangelistic programs—but the highest efficiency of all these is dependent upon an education that furnishes an equipment that is equal to the demands made upon all evangelistic agencies in all fields, both at home and abroad. If we should close our schools and colleges, we should have to cease commissioning our most effective type of evangelistic workers—there could be no great number of them to commission. These Christian institutions of learning are the training camps from which come the men and women who are best qualified to carry forward our evangelistic activities.

Of course the claims of these two causes—Christian education and evangelization—are not exclusive. As a matter of fact, they go along side by side and no greater mistake could be made than to set the two up in opposition to each other. We have simply tried to show that the work of Christian education underlies all the other work of the church and that it is useless to hope that we can carry on our other work without preparing for it by the process of Christian education.

The Logic of the Christian Education Movement.

It was inevitable, sooner or later, that the church should undertake to make adequate provisions for the Christian education of its youth. More and more those who are charged with the weighty responsibility of directing the various activities of the church have come to feel that our meagerly endowed and equipped educational institutions were not in position to do the work that is so urgently needed; and this feeling eventuated in the action of the General Conference of 1913, which provided for a campaign to raise sufficient funds to put these institutions upon a stable basis. The representatives of the church faced a situation that was compelling in both need and urgency, and there was no way of meeting that situation without undertaking something worth while to provide for a need that was so manifest. We dare affirm that the church would have been negligent of one of its most solemn and pressing obligations if it had not initiated some great movement in behalf of Christian education.

A Generous Response.

It is one of the glories of our church that its membership responded so generously to its appeals in behalf of its institutions of learning. At a time when the whole world was in an unsettled state financially and industrially, when a period of phenomenal prosperity had been succeeded by a financial depression that threatened ruin to many of our people, it is nothing less than remarkable that more than $30,000,000 should have been pledged to our colleges and universities; and that, too, in addition to the millions that had just been pledged enthusiastically to the Centenary cause. The difficulties that confronted the leaders of the Christian Education Movement were interpreted as a challange to the church to do its best; and that challenge was bravely accepted and valiantly met. No brighter page has been written in our history than that upon which appears the record of the Christian education campaign.

Maintaining Our Stand.

Now that our pledges have been made, it remains for us to prove the constancy of our faith by meeting those pledges as they become due. It is no part of courage or of loyalty to falter in the performance of what we have solemnly promised to do. The needs of our schools are, if possible, more urgent to-day than they were when the Christian Education Movement was initiated, for they are now relying upon the materialization of our pledges to finance the improvements and enlargements they undertook upon the strength of our promises. In effect, we authorized them to go ahead with their program of development, assuring them we would stand by them with the material resources which are absolutely necessary for the proper carrying on of their work. These institutions took us at our word—who would have had them doubt that word?—and now they are looking to us to perform what we said we would do. They have no other plans, no other resources, to meet their heavily increased obligations. The responsibility of taking proper care of our schools, colleges, and universities now rests fairly and squarely upon us—those of us who have promised and who ought to promise even yet to help them do what we have commissioned them to do.

We Are Able.

In times that are less strenuous than those during which we made our pledges, we cannot afford to plead that we are not to keep our promises. Even in those extreme cases where real sacrifices will have to be made to meet these obligations, we should remember that it is one of the marks of the man that shall dwell in the Lord's holy hill that he "sweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not." It is infinitely better that we should suffer than that the Kingdom of God should be impeded in its progress. The words of the sacred writer come to us with tremendous significance at a time like this—"When thou vowest a vow unto God, defer not to pay it; for he hath no pleasure in fools: pay that which thou hast vowed."

ONE OF MANY.

"No letter since the first. No fuel and have had no money for a month. We are freezing in this cottage and I am desperate"—this is the telegram which, according to the police of this city, was found, torn to bits, on the floor of the room occupied by a man who had left his family in Canada months ago. Investigation developed tho fact that he had been regularly employed here—but money was all gone. The case is sad enough—but it is only one of the many tragedies brought about by horse racing in this city.

A JOURNEY TO THE ORIENT—PEKING TO HARBIN.

By Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker.

IX.

We left Moukden Sunday night, and on Monday morning were still speeding over the broad plains of Manchuria, here and all the rest of the way covered with snow and threaded with frozen streams. Late in the afternoon, in the distance, we recognized Harbin by means of the flamboyant domes and gilded crosses of the Russian Orthodox churches, which are everywhere true to type with their four corner domes and one larger in the center. Later we found that one of these churches was constructed of logs, but that statement must not be so construed as to make the impression that there is anything crude about it. This primitive mode of building had been forced into service for the production of the usual church type. As we alighted at the depot the runner of the Grand Hotel accosted us and said that Mr. Jenkins, our resident missionary, had engaged rooms and instructed him to meet us. Later it appeared that there was some misunderstanding; for Mr. Jenkins had prepared for our entertainment in his own hired house. However, to the Grand Hotel we went, everything thoroughly Russian, and as late luncheon had rendered us indifferent to the formal, full-dress dinner, we were soon sipping tea and eating bread and jam about the simmering samovar in our room. As in China, so in Russia, they drink no water, but consume quantities of weak tea. The samovar is an urn tapped by a faucet, and has a small charcoal stove in the form of a tube running through it. The water boils and the tea is steeped as required. The genial warmth of the room was as welcome as the samovar. In the central coast region of China, in winter, one never gets warm. There the season is not taken seriously, and yet there is a real winter, no matter what the thermometer may register; but in Russia the comfort of the houses is perfect. Huge stoves made of masonry, three feet in diameter, and as high as the ceiling, radiate warmth and thick walls and double windows retain it. Manchuria is not Russia, but before the war of 1904 Russian influence and Russian people had thoroughly penetrated the country, and since that time the growing influence of Japan has not displaced the Russian nor neutralized his influence. Northern Manchurian cities still show Russian influence and Harbin is a Russian city.

Unlike Moukden, which is an old city, the source of the Manchu conquest of China, Harbin is a new European city of about 50,000 population. It shows some of the signs of a deflated boom, but still has substantial business, and its importance as a railway center can never be diminished. In addition, it is accessible by the Sungari River, which, by the way, we crossed on the ice on the 16th day of November. The practically unlimited productivity of the surrounding country and the healthfulness of the climate are certain to attract immigration, and our own generation may coincide with a movement in northeastern Asia like that which made a wheat field and great cities out of the Dakotas and Manitoba. At present there are $5,000,000 invested in flouring mills in Harbin, and the city has a department store that equals many in our own great cities. As soon as political conditions become stable, both by Dairen, on the Gulf of Pechili, and Vladivostock, Harbin will conduct a vast overseas commerce. In establishing a mission in Manchuria, Bishop Lambuth considered all these things. He was not only a saint who enjoyed mystical experiences of God; he was a man of intellectual grasp that took in the many factors by which political and commercial developments are determined, and he used his conclusions for the advancement of the Kingdom of God.

In Harbin there are Roman Catholic and Danish Lutheran missions. There is also a flourishing Young Men's Christian Association. Our own is the first American church to undertake missionary operations in Harbin. A congregation of Koreans was organized, but has since been ceded to the Methodist Episcopal Church, as they desired to enter the field. Had it not been with Bishop Lambuth's consent, I should say we had better have stood by our guns than yield to our pushing sister; but many considerations influenced the decision. Henceforth our work in Harbin will be among the Chinese and Russian populations, who afford a field of great promise and great need. Throughout Manchuria the Mandarin language is spoken, and this is already the language of 75 per cent of China's population. It is also spoken by educated Chinese throughout the realm and is gradually displacing many of the dialects that sometimes baffle the missionary of the Cross or of commerce when he goes from one province to another. Our new mission opens a more promising field among the Chinese and Manchus, and may easily become a radiating center of influence and aggression for this vast and growing country, the possibilities of which are like those that our own Northwest opened to the emigrants fifty years ago; with this advantage, however: in Manchuria there are already railroads and cities and farms, as well as undeveloped wealth.

Harbin affords its spectacle of want as well as of plenty. Here the disastrous consequences of Bolshevism are seen in the form of hungry and cold refugees, who have been driven from their own land, stripped of all means of life, and have come to a land of unrealized possibilities without the capital or the tools with which to commence economic life again. Mrs. Douglas Jenkins, the wife of the American Consul, and several other ladies have instituted and are carrying on a most beautiful relief work for the children of Russian emigres. In barracks provided by the railroad authorities, these waifs are fed, clothed and taught. Except for the heating of the buildings provided by the railroad, there is no regular source of income, and the ladies collect from such contributors as they can reach the one thousand yen monthly that are necessary to keep up this worthy work. During his visit last summer, Bishop Lambuth was so impressed by the importance of this work that he subscribed the thousand yen needed to sustain the work for a month. Should any one who may read these lines be moved to do something for these little ones in the name of Jesus, he can safely remit to Mrs. Douglas Jenkins, care of the American Consulate, Harbin, Manchuria.

In Harbin there is a large Young Men's Christian Association operated for the European population. It is a costly affair, as the buildings are rented at the prevailing high prices. I wish Mr. Rockefeller would do for them what he has done for Seoul, Korea. The secretaries are fine specimens of their class and give an evangelistic flavor to their work. But if I had an adverse criticism to make, I would say that they are a little too conservative: too cautious lest they offend the Russian Orthodox Church sensibilities. They assured me that this attitude was necessary to enable the Association to obtain a hold on the men. Perhaps so. I gladly accepted an invitation to address the English Club, which is not composed of Englishmen, but Russians who are enthusiastically devoting their leisure hours to learning the speech of America. I do not know how well they understood my American; I had difficulty in understanding theirs. Our resident missionary, Mr. Jenkins, is devoting himself with diligent and rare linguistic ability to learning Russian and at the same time he is teaching night classes in English. My sympathies were aroused for these young men in peasant's and mechanic's garb, and anything else than the regalia of fashion, whose earnest faces looked up to me. They have a hard task before them in forcing their minds untrained to study into new channels of thought and speech; but they will succeed. There is a new Russia that will one day bring back the fallen greatness of the greatest of the Slav nations.

In Harbin the mid-year meeting of the Siberia-Manchuria Mission was held, Dr. Cram, the superintendent, presiding. Mr. J. O. J. Taylor, the missionary in charge, whose residence is to be Vladivostock, was not able to be present on account of sickness in his family. Indeed, his situation is otherwise difficult; for our consular representatives will not issue permits for women to go to Vladivostock while political conditions remain unstable. The most important decision of the meeting was that Mr. Taylor is to give his time primarily to the Korean work, and Mr. Jenkins to the Russian. I was accepted and enrolled as a member of the mission, a thing I had long entertained an ambition for. In Japan, China and Korea I had been invited to sit with the missions and to take part in the proceedings, but here I was a member—a missionary, if you will. Of course, the Committee on Candidates had not accepted me, but as I am Chairman of that Committee, I may be accorded a little personal partiality: I am reminded of Captain Cuttle in Dombey & Son, who, when his name was painted in the sign at the old instrument maker's, stood on the street and soliloquised: "You are really a man of science. What would your old mother give if she could see you a man of science?" Yes, I had by the inscription of a name become a missionary. Would that my chronology were such that I might indeed become a missionary in the Far East.

From Harbin Dr. Cram returned to his duties in Korea and Mr. Ryang and I proceeded by the East China Railroad to Nikolsk, Siberia. I had permission of the American consul to go to Vladivostock, but he had declined to grant permission for Nikolsk; nevertheless Ryang and I were determined to visit the little flock at Nikolsk, a city about four hundred miles southeast of Harbin.

At Nikolsk we were received by a deputation from the Korean congregation that left no doubt of the importance these brethren attached to our coming. The Koreans resemble the Chinese in many ways, and I might here be tempted into an ethnological discussion; but I will mention only the much discussion that attends their teamwork, and this reminds one of the Chinese way of doing things. However, Ryang and I were in time placed in a doosky with our luggage and driven to a lodging house, in which we had the honor and the sad memory of occupying the same room that Bishop Lambuth used last summer. How wonderfully that distinguished and lamented name is associated with the work of God in the Orient! For lack of business, the hotels in Nikolsk are closed, but the lodging houses and restaurants afford living accommodations for travelers. But in Russia, even in the hotels, only beds are furnished and the guest is expected to have his linen, pillows and covering. I had nothing of the kind; but my demand enabled me to rent sheets, which on examination proved to be tablecloths, and a blanket that seemed to have done service as drapery of some kind. The Korean brethren came in and sat with us an hour or two while Ryang carefully inquired into the details of the work and gave timely counsel. To be shut out by ignorance of language is my lot, but I never weary of studying the faces of these fellow-Christians of the Orient. The brethren then conducted us to a restaurant and gave us a dining in true Russian style. The soup is never absent from a Russian dinner, and is sufficiently savory to tempt any Esau to sell his birthright. As the importation of powder and firearms is prohibited, game has become very abundant, and pheasant seems to have become a staple; I saw hundreds of these brilliant-plumed birds hanging frozen in the market-place. I suppose they are snared, as guns, shot and powder are scarce. But desserts have small place on a Russian menu; when the dinner has been eaten we are done.

In the evening I addressed the Nikolsk Epworth League, numbering about forty, and such others as cared to attend on the motto, "All for Christ." Brother Taylor had warned me against the indiscretion of repeating this address at Nikolsk, as having heard it in Korea he had availed himself of what of it seemed useful for Nikolsk; but I had forgot his caution and thus have reason to fear that my address may have seemed to lack originality. But is it not too much to require of a Connectional man that he make a new address? I was deeply touched by the ceremony following the address, a feature of which was the presentation of a medal wrought by a Korean silversmith in the device of a six-point star, having engraved on each point a Korean letter that, together, spelled Nikolsk, and in the center a gold cross. On the reverse is the date, also in Korean. The speeches indicated the hunger of these young people for our Christian society and their deep gratitude for the little that we have done for them. If any one thinks he has given in vain to missions he would become fully satisfied if he could know these Korean Christians. The membership of the Korean Epworth Leagues is mainly of young men, but a few young women participating suffice to indicate that the middle wall of partition that has disparaged and limited womanhood is being broken down, and they are becoming one in Christ.

On Sunday morning I preached to one of our Nikolsk congregations, and in the evening Ryang preached to the other. They are really one church, but distance and the insecurity of the streets at night made it necessary that we have two meeting places. The schools also require the additional place of meeting; for in Siberia, as in Korea, the school is always associated with the church, the ideal arrangement anywhere; on this mission field it is essential to the life of the church.

Preceding our own service, Ryang and I looked in upon the worship that was going on in one of the Russian Orthodox churches. The icy air was heavy with incense and the brilliantly robed priests and acolytes were chanting wonderful melodies with voices as rich as those of American Negroes. Organs and other musical instruments are forbidden in the Orthodox Church, hence the priests and choirs are trained to have very true voices. But genuflution, crossing and multiplied forms remind one of Roman Catholic worship, so do the ikons everywhere in evidence. Evangelical religion will have to make its way not only without help from the Orthodox Church, but against its superstitions and antagonisms. By comparison, our own simple service seemed very bare, but more certainly than in the shrine of the high altar, the Lord dwells in the heart of these lovely Korean Christians, and the promise of Jesus is kept when they meet in his name. I wish that some one whose eye may fall upon this letter may be moved to give our Nikolsk congregations a cabinet organ. Their singing is incapable of reform without the aid of an instrument, and it must be improved if they are "to worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness."

When by an early train on Monday we left for Vladivostock the deputation of Korean brethren sped the party, as they had welcomed the coming guests, two of the brethren who had come up from Vladivostock returning with us. I must not fail to mention a young Korean named Shay, whom we found in Harbin. He is not a minister, nor yet a prominent layman, but makes himself useful in a manner so cheerful and in ways so many that Bishop Lambuth nicknamed him Friday, and Ryang consents to call him Friday-Shay. On a number of occasions Ryang has relieved my anxieties by saying: "Never mind, Friday-Shay will attend to that." There is neither record nor tradition to the effect that Friday has ever failed to measure up to what was expected of him. We sought the comforts of the Wagons-Lits compartment car with confidence born of ignorance only to find our comfort disturbed when it became known that one pays as much for any fraction of the 500-mile run from Harbin to Vladivostock as for the whole distance. That is not like Pullman's graduated seat fares, high enough, but at most proportionate to distance traveled.

At Vladivostock the Korean brethren were out to meet us in force and conducted us to the Golden Horn Hotel, a portentious place, showing many evidences of decaying elegance. Here also sheets and covering had to be rented, but the comfortable warmth of the rooms, heated by great stoves, is a luxury in this severe climate. Late hours at both the beginning and end of the day go hard with our American industry. Breakfast is not to be had before ten or eleven, and business usually begins late, never before nine. Ryang had determined to break through these lazy ways; so we had tea and toast in our rooms early. To meet the Korean brethren, drive over the city and give attention to the vexatious business of which I shall speak later, was our program. The city is wonderful for situation and possesses many fine buildings, a large department store and many lesser establishments of wholesale and retail business, but there is a paralysis upon everything, as confidence in the stability of the government is lacking. We visited the Young Men's Christian Association, quartered in a warehouse on the water-front, where the Army and Navy branch were housed during the occupancy by Allied troops. A very effective plant have they made and are carrying on their manifold work with success. When a stable government becomes assured business will certainly revive and Vladivostock will again become a great point of export, the gateway to Siberia and interior Russia on the east. The Korean population is large and quite open to our mission work. The Presbyterians have a church here, but there seems to be no other Protestantism but our own. A piece of land has been ceded by the government and before long a building will be erected by means of Centenary money already appropriated, and our congregation will then move out of this rented and adapted house into a new, commodious building, in which the work of the Lord may be carried on and expanded in proportion to the opportunity. The Korean population are separated from their old associations and have taken root in this alien soil. They are learning to speak the Russian language and are plying their crafts with success. Their condition even amidst the depressing state of business to-day is in advance of that of their class in Korea, and now is the time to enlist them as a great force for Christ. They are artisans, small storekeepers and some follow teaching and other professions.

A reception by the Epworth League on Tuesday evening acquainted me with a vigorous body of young Christians. As elsewhere, here also they remembered the General Secretary with a souvenir of Korean workmanship. It is a gold heart, upon which is a raised cross with the Epworth League motto in Korean characters. Speeches and responses were made, and we then spent some time in informal conversation concerning the work of the League. We must do more for these young people. At home our young people possess a wealth of help and an organization that functions throughout the church in many helpful ways; here our young people have nothing except the Constitution, which Mr. Ryang has translated. A field director must be enlisted; they must be instructed in Epworth League work, provided with book and pamphlet, literature, and organized for co-operative work. Next summer an Epworth League conference will be held in the Siberia Mission and then will begin the development of that church-wide organization of the young people in the East that in America has meant so much to the church and its mission fields. In China the Methodist Episcopal Church has a central office and field secretary; in Japan everything has been left to the Japan Methodist Church and they are doing their utmost under the direction of Prof. Tanaka, the Secretary of the Board; but the Japan church needs the help of the American churches in their Wesley Endeavor Society work. In Korea and Siberia there is need only of entering into the field with some provision for its systematic cultivation in order that a rich harvest may be reaped.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

The problem of the superannuate is a tender one. He is the most pathetic figure in our contemporary life, and the worthier he is by reason of unselfish service, the sadder is his fate. The pathos of the case is enhanced when the retired minister is an old man, worn out, too old either to learn a new occupation or to follow it, and who has been too busy all his life serving the church to provide for himself and his family in his old age. Though as long as I can snort I don't intend to be "forgotten," there is sad truth in Dr. Todd's title for the superannuate, "The Forgotten Man." There is a sense in which we will all soon be forgotten, for it is given to few men to live long in the memory of men when the clod falls on the coffin lid; but to be forgotten while still in the flesh is a painful trial. It is hard enough to bear the trial of not being in the ranks, of not receiving an appointment, of knowing that one is laid aside, and his work, in the judgment of his brethren, is done. It has been hard for me to realize the truth in my own case; but I have come at last to see it is a fact. I am out after fifty-five years of unselfish service in the Methodist ministry. And the only oil stock I have is the kind the poor widow had with whom Dr. Elisha spent the day. Pretty good stock!

But she had to hustle and do her part. She was in trouble. Her husband was a good man, and, like many a preacher's wife since, she had helped him to do his work, and he had left her nothing but the heritage of faith! She was unable to pay the hill for the funeral expense. She did not murmur or whine—when did you ever hear that from a preacher's wife! But she did open her heart to Dr. Elisha, and he knew God could and would provide for the widow of a faithful preacher. So she got busy, and the oil flowed, and the debt was paid, and there was peace and happiness in the home. Amen. Such miracles happen now. I believe that when the people found out the purchase of her oil would help her, they gladly let her have the vessels she needed, and bought her oil. The worthy superannuate is not an object of charity. The church owes him a debt, and no money contributed to any cause is more cheerfully given than that to provide for the worn-out preachers and their families. But it is a very meager provision.

Some of us have to hustle to supplement it. You know I believe in keeping up the lick, like the optimistic frog that fell into a milk pail. His companion was a pessimist, and gave up, and was drowned; but he was an optimist, and kept kicking till he churned a chunk of butter, on which he hopped out, and landed in the spring branch! I want to provide for myself as long as I am able. Frequently urged by my friends, I have at length yielded to their request, and written the story of my life, or at least the story that ended with the melody of the wedding bells. It tells how a boy climbed out of the wreck of the war; paddled his own canoe through rough water, and fought his way upward. Every reader of this paper knows Mr. John R. Pepper, of Memphis, Tenn. Mr. Pepper has kindly written an "Introduction" for my book, from which I quote:

"The Spirit of the Saxon" (the title of the book) is a story of genuine human interest. It describes life and social conditions that unfortunately have well-nigh passed away, even in our conservative Southland. Many of the scenes are laid amid a very unusual period of American history—the time of the Civil War. It would put iron in the blood of any normal American boy to read the recital of the process for making a robust man through which the hero of this story came to strong fiber of muscle and strength of brain, that finally in mature manhood carried him to many positions of eminence and honor. The teachings of this story are manifest and many, without even seeming to point a moral in words. * * * You see the conquering of the soil and forest through actual contact and by strenuous labor, typing the future, and victories unforeseen then, that were to be achieved in other and very different fields through the unfolding years; and you see many chaste virtues inculcated by living so near to nature's big, beating heart. * * * I have read 'The Spirit of the Saxon' in manuscript with great and growing interest to the very last line. I really covet that every Southern boy may read this story of the struggles and triumphs of one other Southern boy of real flesh, blood and bones, and thereby discover how, amid most adverse environment, there was wrought noble character and success in the best sense, and how in so many ways actual victory was snatched out of the very jaws of defeat.'

Now, if you really want to help a superannuate, and, at the same time, get the worth of your money, send me $2.50 for this book. I must get 500 subscribers before I let the printer's contract. If, after getting the book, and reading it, you think you did not get the worth of your money, I'll pay the bill to have the doctor examine you and find out what is the matter. If you would pay me a dollar for every laugh there is in it, I'll have enough to stick my superannuated heels up on Sister Steel's fender and sing, "Roll, Jordan, roll!" It is an epic of Providence, and there are tears enough, but a whole gospel of love shining in each tear. I cry myself sometimes while I read it; but it is not a graveyard sadness. There are etchings of famous men, like Munsey, and Keener, and Kavanaugh, among churchmen; and glimpses of Grant, and Howard, and Agnew, and others among public men of two generations ago. There is the story of my first speech on civic affairs, when, under the shadow of the Capitol at Washington, ten years before Grady was heard of, and almost within hearing of the White House, I blew my bugle loud and clear. There is the story of my first declaration of independence, when I kicked the dashboard out, broke the shafts, and taking the bit in my mouth, went down the road at a two-forty clip!

And Pepper says it is good stuff. He ought to know, for he traveled the same road of self-help. He had two calves to give him a start, and ought to adopt a calf's picture for his coat of arms. Our routes lay parallel, and sometimes intersected, and I know no man whose good opinion of my story I would rather have. He has frequently had touches of indigestion, but never suffered from "hyper-nutrition"! That is an aristocratic malady from which men who paddled their own canoe, like Pepper and I had to do, are happily exempt. So send on your $2.50, and as soon as the book is ready it will find you.

OUR SUPREMACY SURRENDERED.

By Rev. S. Curtis Yates.

Statistics given out by the Washington secretary of the Council of the Churches of Christ in America show that the Baptists, with a membership of 7,835,250, are leading the Methodists, with 7,797,991 members. The report accompanying these figures says that this is the first time in the history of the two denominations in America that the Baptists have led in church membership. Up to the present the Methodists have represented the largest religious denomination in Protestantism. That our church has taken second place should gravely concern every loyal son of Wesley. It impels the writer to make the following observations:

I.

There should be a return to definite doctrinal preaching. Because in the past we had a decided lead over other denominations, we thought it not necessary to strive to maintain our superiority, and so discounted doctrine. Our tenets came into disuse and it was heard that we had no doctrine. We have preached on Optimism, The Synoptic Problem, The Sociological Aspect of the Gospel, but it has been long since our pulpits exalted the fundamentals of Methodism. Conscious of their superior numbers, anyway, and wishing visitors from other churches to be spared the pain and shock that might come of hearing a discourse that smacks of doctrine, our people have muzzled their preachers to such an extent that in many churches a sermon dealing with our doctrines has not been preached in years. And when the preacher has been venturesome enough to preach such a sermon, he has done so most apologetically and pusillanimously indeed, and with a thousand pardons addressed to those of other denominations who, and whose own ministers, are sticklers for doctrinal preaching. Such a policy is "sissy," disgusting, and unworthy of the descendants of Wesley. It is time to "tighten up" and take up the slack, as well as for an abandonment of our pussy-foot policy. We have awakened, like Aesop's hare, to find that the tortoise has run better than we ever imagined, attaining such a lead that we may never be able to overcome it.

II.

It is time to be done with "union" churches, "union" Sunday schools, etc. The Methodist Church is able to write a new proverb, viz: In union there is weakness. A paradox, it is sound with truth to the core. By sad experience we have learned that in "union" there is weakness, stagnation, decay. In almost every case which the writer has observed, our people, when a party to a union church, union Sunday school, or union young people's organization, have come away in the final separation weakened, impoverished, the sufferer, and withal "the goat." Some denominations seem to thrive and grow to a commanding stature in a union church or union service. Under the guise and show of brotherhood, they cunningly and otherwise turn the "union" to account, making it contribute to their own growth and well-being. Let one of them come into a community where our own people are already on the scene, and he will ask no greater boon than to be allowed to enter into a "union" Sunday school or share the churchhouse with them. And how often an over-indulgent Methodist congregation has so shared its house of worship, witnessed the organization of a rival denomination within its own walls, helped it to have a revival, cast its dearest pearls before it, only to be turned upon, rent, and put into hell the closing night of the meeting!

Let us preach the faith and be forever done with "union" affairs. The safety and supremacy of Methodism demands it.

SCHOOLS FOR RURAL PASTORS AND OTHER CHURCH WORKERS, 1922.

Last year two schools were conducted, one at Conway, Arkansas (Hendrix College) and one at Lake Junaluska, N. C. This year the plan is to have five, as follows: Hendrix College, Conway, Arkansas; Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas; Birmingham Southern College, Birmingham, Alabama; Randolph Macon College, Ashland, Virginia; Logan Female College, Russellville, Kentucky. We will also have a course of two hours a day in connection with the Summer School at Trinity College, Durham, North Carolina.

There has been a ready response to these schools from the rural men, and the most hearty co-operation from colleges, bishops, presiding elders and laymen.

The program last year consisted of the following courses: "Rural Evangelism;" "The Rural Church Serving the Community"; "The Social Message of the Rural Church;" Woman's Work in the Rural Church;" "Rural Church Methods and Program;" "Organization and Administration of the Rural Sunday School;" "The Rural Church and Economic Welfare;" "Recreation and the Epworth League in the Rural Church;" "Rural Life and the Bible," and "Allied Rural Agencies."

Somewhat the same program will be followed next summer, with changes to meet some new conditions. It would be difficult to improve on the faculty of last year and we do not propose to lower the standard one whit in the schools next summer. Correspondence has already begun and, this far in advance, we can promise the best that can be had.

Last year we reached three hundred of our choice rural men. In the Annual Conference visitation it has been a delight to meet them "in every place." With the increased number of schools for another year we should reach one thousand of our rural pastors. Think what it will mean within the next five or ten years if we can train even a thousand of our rural pastors to love their task and put it over! We have no other aim in view. We feel no better service could be rendered our church just at this time. If the leadership will help these men get to these schools, they will be delighted with the results.

Rural Work Defined.

The Government has given us the line between rural and urban population. All towns of 2500 or above are urban—cities; while all towns below 2500 in population, and the open country, are considered rural. Size up your town and locate yourself. Some of the best work is being done by pastors in towns which have populations ranging between 100 and 2500. A circle of four or five miles is thrown around the town, the town being made the center, and a program is launched to reach every man, woman and child within that circle. The people come to the town to trade, to get their mail and consult the doctor. Why not come there to church? They will do it when the churches are as anxious to see them as are the merchants, the bank and the doctor. There are hundreds of towns where this program could be used to make rural Methodism as an "Army with Banners." It will require pastors of vision, passion, faith, energy and grit. There seems to be very little room left now for any other sort.

The Rural Program.

We have been asked many times recently: "What do you mean by a new program for the rural church?" We mean that we want a real, live church at every community center, taking an active interest in everything that concerns the people living in that community. First of all, and above all, we want the people to be religious—to put God first in all things, in the home, on the farm, in the shop, bank, office and mill; to put God first in their social life as well as in their church life; to feel that God is in the song of the growing grain, the lowing cattle, the blooming flowers, as well as in the songs of the saints in the Sabbath's worship.

Our program insists that every man, woman and child be asked to connect himself with every movement in the church, school or grange, or whatever else that has for its purpose the uplift of the community. We insist upon an evangelistic program intelligently planned and carried forward, resulting in a series of meetings running at least ten days in every church, with an earnest effort to reach every man, woman and child in the entire community.

In these schools we go into all matters which bear on rural life and seek to give these pastors a vision of the larger task before them. It is delightful to see the splendid response from them. They are ready to go forward. Many of them are giving real study to know the conditions and needs of their people, and they are seeking the way for a larger service to their churches. How much better it will be when men are trained for this service in the colleges and seminaries! We are hoping the whole church will realize the real need of our rural folk and seize upon this opportunity to restore the church of the town and open country to its rightful place in the onward march of the Kingdom of God.

TRAVEL LETTER FROM DR. AND MRS. I. W. COOPER.

Rome is magnificent, Florence is pretty and attractive. Our first visit there was to the Cathedral, St. Maria del Fiore, with the construction of which are connected the names of Giotto, Cambio, and other great architects. The interior is large and impressive, but seems rather bare, after the wonderful decorations of Roman churches. Its exterior is quite remarkable for the two-toned—black and white—marble which almost shocks the eye. The baptistry, near by, is of similar material and design. We found, upon inquiry and observation, that this intermingling of black and white marble was peculiarly characteristic of Florentine architecture. It is certainly striking and bizarre, to say tbe least. Tbe baptistry is remarkable for four wonderful bronze doors, carved by Ghiberti and extravagantly praised by Michael Angelo. These carvings attempt to portray all the history of the Bible on the door panels.

We had not been in Florenco an hour ere we were reminded that this city had been the birthplace, the home, the romantic lodestar and the political storm center for the great poet, Dante. At one time repudiating and exiling her great son, Florence is now anxious enough to claim him. Street vendors sell bronze placques of Dante and Beatrice; every set of post cards of the city has his portrait and a view of his home; and nearly every sbop-window has some reminder of him. We found his home in a very narrow, old-timey street. Tbe house itself was quaint and rather bare and plain. It is quite fitting that a portion of it is now used for school purposes.

Florence was the home of quite a number of great Italian statesmen, artists and writers. As one drives through the streets, many homes are pointed out wbich bear tablets engraved with inscriptions to show that here lived or died some great maker of world records. Among them are the homes of Michael Angelo, Amerigo Vespucci, Macchiavelli, and Galileo.

Of all these marked mansions, the most interesting to us was Casa Guidi. This was long the residence of the Brownings. It is a corner houso near the Pitti Palace and is marked on both its fronts. One tablet has a very complimentary inscription to the memory of Mrs. Browning, erected by these Florence people, whom she loved. The other is inscribed with a stanza from one of her poems. We saw also, later on, Mrs. Browning's simple but beautiful tomb in the Protestant cemetery—a finely situated and perfectly kept burying ground.

In the pavement of the chief business square, a simple tablet marks the spot where Savonarola was hanged and burned—for his faith. We wished for flowers to place on this sacred spot that seems so little noticed and so often passed over by careless vehicles—but we had none. Later, we visited tbe Museum of St. Marco which was formerly presided over by Savonarola as a Dominican monastery. Here we visited the cell of Savonarola and saw the famous—and wonderfully beautiful—frescoes with which Ira Angelico adorned nearly every cell in this monastery.

Florence is very rich in art treasures—particularly in great paintings. We spent much time in the Uffizi Gallery—which is said to contain the largest and cboicest collection in the world—and in the Pitti Palace and the Academy of Fine Arts.

Another place of great interest to us was the large mosaic factory, where we saw the workmen making wonderfully beautiful stone and glass mosaics. Of course this work classes only as an art-craft and is not on the same plane as the work of the great artists and sculptors, but the beauty and skill of these artisans entitles their work to attention and appreciation.

The work of the gold and silversmiths of Florence is quite famous. To see their wares, one must go to the quaint shops which double-line the bridges over the Arno. Thc most interesting of these is the Ponte Vecchio. To us, and I believe to most strangers, these bridges were as fascinating as anything in Florencc. We do not know of any other city which has "the like" of these business causeways.

One of the most delightful experiences we had in Florence was a drive through the Boboli Gardens to some wonderful heights above the city. Here we had a glorious view of the city and its suburbs, as it lay stretched below us in the evening sunshine. We were glad to carry such a picture away in our minds and to hold it as a type of this lovely, cleanly little city.

One scarcely realizes how very mountainous certain sections of Italy are until the journey from Florence to Bologna has been taken. In the course of it, we passed through forty-nine tunnels—in four hours. Some of these tunnels were quite lengthy, so we had to sing, laugb and joke to counteract the unpleasant effects of the coal smoke we had to swallow. We wished that some philanthropic soul would present tbe railroad with an electric engine.

Our train carried no diner, so about half of our party got off at Bologna and "got out a search warrant for some dinner." While they were out, the train pulled off carrying their hats and baggage and leaving them to come on about five hours later. In the meantime, the rest of us reached Venice about four o'clock.

In a previous letter we have told you something of Venice, so we shall not go much into detail about the witchery of this unique little city. Moreover, much has been written by others of the thoroughfares of Venice, where there is much traffic, hut there are no street cars, subways, busses, automobiles, horses—or even pedestrians. By the way, we were sorry to see the graceful and romantic gondolas being rapidly replaced by the more efficient but more prosaic motor boat.

In other ways, too, one is tempted to believe that Venice has seen its best and most romantic days. Its unpainted walls and other signs of dilapidation bear testimony to the fact that Venice was very "hard hit" by the recent war—perhaps more so than any other Italian city. But its people seem very gay and industrious and may work wonders of restoration in the next few years, in spite of the fact tbat they impressed us as being most too unprogressive and too pleasure-secking to accomplish much.

If we were somewhat disappointed in the general appearance of Venice, our expectations were even more blighted when we came to St. Mark's. Ruskin's enthusiastic description of it, in Stones of Venice, had lingered so in our minds that we had looked forward to seeing it as eagerly as if it were one of the Seven Wonders of the World. But it seemed to us crowded, dingy and bizarre in its over-ornamentation. It is quite unique as a Christian temple, but in some ways it reminded us, with its domes and minarets, of the Byzantine (or Mohammedan) type of architecture. After several of Rome's great cathedrals, St. Mark's—did not please us. Just here, however, we must pausc to comment on the fact that there seems to us a wonderful variety of types in the great cathedrals of Europe.

The Ducal Palacc, or Palace of the Doges, was very interesting and in no way a disappointment, save that some of the great paintings which usually adorn it and which had been removed to other Italian cities for safe-keeping, during the war, had not been replaced.

We found as much pleasure as most tourists do in watching the pigeons of St. Mark's being fed—thousands of them; in seeing the great bell-tower (Campanile) and the Clock Tower; but, after all, it was in the witchery of moonlight gondola rides and fascination of shopping on St. Mark's square (La Piazza) that we felt closest to the life of Venice. The tiny stores on this square are filled with wonderful Venetian shawls, laces, embroideries, cameos, gold and silver filagree, beads and Venetian glassware. One has not seen Venice until he has spent hours gazing into the shop windows of La Piazza and visiting the bead and glass factory a little beyond St. Mark's.

Just a half-block from La Piazza, and within a stone's throw of that great monument to Catholicism, St. Mark's, the M. E. Church has established a church. Here every Sunday aro two services, one at ten, in Italian, for the native Methodists, and one at eleven for English-speaking Protestants. Here, by invitation of the pastor, Dr. Cooper preached and bere our whole party was most cordially welcomed. The pastor told us of an orphanage which his church has established in Venice, to care for the war orphans of the vicinity.

For four days we had lovely rooms at the Grand Hotel—on the Grand Canal. Here the "languor and the witchery" of Venice so entered our systems that we were loath to leave for Milan.

We made a very brief stay at Milan, the shortest of our trip—were there only one day. It is a beautiful and progressive little city and we are sure that we could have found much there to interest us, but since we had so little time, we concentrated the whole of it upon the catbedral.

The "lace cathedral," as it is often called, is the largest in Europe, with the exception of St. Peter's and the Cathedral of Seville, in Spain. Its situation commands a view of one of the most important open squares of the city; therefore it stands out with a dignity which can not be obtained by some of the crowded-in cathedrals of the continent. The interior of the Milan Cathedral is qute impressive. Its many handsome columns of marble and granite are said to simulate a primeval forest. It is very rich in costly ornamentation of silver, gold and precious stones. Here we were shown some very elaborate "treasure vaults." But the real interest of the cathedral, to us, was in the exterior—the roof. This is, perhaps, the most remarkable roof in the world. We paid the slight fee of money and the greater toll of physical strength which were required to ascend the many steps to the roof, and from the roof to the top of the spire. And we felt repaid for both expenditures, for the view of Milan and the surrounding country is marvelous! But even more intercsting than this view is the experience of passing from one height, or stage, of the roof to another. Each one of these sections of the roof has its own particular type of pinnacies, most of them surmounted by the statue of some saint or hero. We do not know how numerous the pinnacles were, but we were told that there were two thousand statues, in all. We could not help being amused to find the statue of Napoleon I, and a fair likeness at that, placed amid the saints—in this unique Hall of Fame. We were told that when Napoleon conquered Milan, he did much toward the completion of the cathedral and had one of these saintly statures removed, to be replaced by his own. Another example of his colossal egotism!

Milan was tho last Italian city which we visited. We had enjoyed our stay in Italy immensely, so we were sorry to leave its sunny skies—particularly so as we felt tbat though we had seen much of its city life, had visited many places of interest, we had not come to know tbe real heart of the people. But we left hoping that these unknown hearts were as worth while as the beautiful country.

Where Men Come From

"The Churches have given one per cent of their sons and daughters to their colleges, and the colleges have given back 90 per cent of the Church's ministers and missionaries."

—President Bates of Hiram College.

Out of 288 missionaries in the M. E. Church, South, 236 came from our own colleges and only 16 from state schools. Keep up the supply by paying the Christian Education pledge.

The Home Circle

WHEN MOTHER PLAYS WITH ME.

Sometimes, when it is raining hard,
My mother plays with me;
She makes believe she's keeping house
And I'm her company.

And when I knock upon the door,
She says: "Come in, sit down;
I'm very glad that you have come;
When did you get to town?"

And then we talk about our 'fairs;
How fast the children grow:
"What! had the measles, did you say?
You did not let me know."

Then, when we've had a cup of tea,
It's time for me to go.
I say: "Good-bye, dear Mrs. Brown;
I have enjoyed it so."

And so I like a rainy day,
When mother plays with me,
And makes believe she's keeping house,
And I'm her company.

THE GARDEN PICNIC.

By Willie C. Page.

"Nurse, please tell me a story," pleaded little Gwen, who had been ill. The nurse was rolling her wheel-chair along the shady walks of the big garden.

"Once upon a time," began the pretty nurse, smiling.

"Go on," said Gwen anxiously.

"In the bright days of early autumn, the flowers of the hothouse and those of the garden decided to give a picnic down in the old summer-house beside the brook. The picnic was to be held at early dawn. There is an old legend that at this hour the flowers can walk and talk."

"Oh, Nurse, tell me, is it time?"

"A make-believe story, like a fairy story, dear," replied the nurse.

"Queen Blush-Rose and Lady White-Lily were the leaders. They arranged with the birds of the garden to give a concert.

"'We don't want any mixed crowd,' said the Rose.

"'Only people of culture,' exclaimed the Lily.

"'We shall invite our kinspeople, the Tuberoses, all of the Jessamine family, the Hibiscus girls, the Misses Hydrangea and Coreopsis, and Madam Fuchsia. After the breakfast we will row on the lake until the sun rises,' explained the Rose.

"'As it is to be a very select crowd, we will serve honey-wafers and dew-drop sherbert,' said White-Lily.

"The concert was over. The table was spread; all were ready to be seated to partake of the delicate viands, when the Larkspur cried out, 'Oh, look at the curious crowd crossing the brook!'

"Behold, wading the brook barefoot, were the field flowers, all dressed in quaint calico dresses, with white sunbonnets tied under their chins, but smiling and looking very happy.

"'A linnet told us you were having a picnic, so we ran as fast as we could. We have never attended a picnic. We hope we are not late.'

"'You were not invited,' said the Rose haughtily, smoothing her pink silk ruffles.

"'We wanted no common people here,' cried the Lily, shaking out her white satin skirts.

"The field flowers hung their heads. They were very much embarrassed. Little black-eyed Susan and the Violets began to weep and wipe their eyes on their aprons.

"'Come in, you are very welcome; take my place at the table,' said the tall Hollyhock.

"Why should people be haughty and think themselves better than others, when they are fashioned by the same Divine Hand? God looks upon the heart and never judges anything by just the outer part. If the heart is good and pure, He will not mind the rest or question what the garment were in which the form is dressed?

"'The sunbeams! The sunbeams!' cried the Spirea.

"In a flash the flowers of the garden were all back in their places. But the field flowers were too far away from home to get there quickly, so they took root; and that is why the field flowers are growing in this garden to-day."

"Carry me to the brook, quickly," cried Gwen in a tremor of excitement.

Sure enough, beside the brook, with their feet in the water, grew the lady slippers, sweet Williams, golden-rod, violets, and daisies.

"Oh, they are so dear and beautiful, I love them best of all the flowers in the garden. When I get well I will come here every day and play with them," said the little girl happily.

"Nurse, tell me another story about flowers."

"Some other time—not to-day, dear; we must go in now."

"To-morrow, please, Nursie?"

"If you will be quiet and go to sleep."

"I can hardly wait; I know I will dream of them," sighed Gwen.

CANCELLATION.

Most of the boys who read this article have studied cancellation and found it a quick and easy method of solving problems. There is another kind of cancellation, not so commonly used, a kind that should be taught to all boys and girls, and that becomes a valuable habit in time.

Two boys were one day speaking of an absent classmate.

"He is so slow in the games," said the first.

"Yes," replied the other, "but he always plays fair."

"Isn't he dull in school, though?"

"But look at the way he studies. He never wastes a minute."

"He scarcely ever recites in history," went on the first boy.

"But I never knew him to cheat in a single recitation or examination," answered the second. "And you know as I do that many of those who get the highest marks don't always get them honestly."

"He has so little to say."

"But no one ever heard him tell a lie. He is the most truthful boy in the class."

Every unkind word you notice, which the first boy spoke was canceled by a kind word from the second boy. It is a plan worth trying. The next time you hear an unkind remark, try to cancel it with a kind one.—The Youth's Companion.

"TIME OUT."

But Some Are.

"Come, Dorothy," said her father impatiently, "throw your doll on the bed and hurry or we shall be late."

"Why, how can you?" reproved the child. "It isn't that kind of a doll."—Boston Transcript.

A New Song.

Scene—A cozy parlor, with dim-burning lamp. Two persons sitting close together on a couch—a man and a maid, of course.

Suddenly the youth's ardor took a painful form. He burst into verse, sighing:

"You are gladness, you are sunshine,
You are happiness, I trow;
You are all to me, my darling,
That is lovely here below."

Not to be outdone, the fair damsel whispered:

"You are splendor, you are glory,
You are handsome, you are true;
All there is this side of heaven
I behold, my love, in you!"

Rapture! But suddenly a gruff voice broke in on their bliss, as father said sternly from the doorway:

"I am lightning, I am thunder,
I'm a roaring cataract;
I am earthquakes and volcanoes,
And I'll demonstrate the fact!

And he proceeded to do so. —Exchange.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

THE EDITOR ON A SPEAKING TOUR FOR THE CENTENARY.

The editor of the Advocate spent the week of February 23-March 1 attending the district group meetings in the Mississippi Conference held in the interest of the Centenary cause. In company with Mr. W. D. Hawkins, the wide-awake and efficient Centenary secretary-treasurer of the Conference, he attended the meeting at Scooba on the morning of February 27, the meeting at Central Church, Meridian, on the evening of the same day, and the meeting at Shuhuta on February 24, all these being within the bounds of the Meridian District. Rev. Paul D. Hardin, the presiding elder, and Mr. S. M. Graham, the district lay leader, took active parts in the meetings. It was interesting to note that every charge in the Meridian District except one was represented in these meetings, and the one exception was because of the impassable condition of the roads, due to a heavy rain the night before. There was fine interest in all these meetings, and there was the expressed determination at all of them to bring the Centenary collections as nearly up to date as possible. The northern group, meeting at Scooba, issued a challenge to the central and the southern groups for a contest to see which group would raise the largest per cent of the sixty per cent now due. The challenge was promptly accepted by the other groups. Group captains were appointed as follows: Northern group, Rev. W. H. Lane; central group, Rev. J. Loyd Decell; southern group, Rev. H. A. Wood. An interesting contest is in prospect. The other meetings the editor attended had not been reported at the time this was written.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. N. Broadway, of the Porterville charge, Mississippi Conference, is greatly interested in his work, being especially concerned about developing church leaders among his young people.

A great union meeting was recently held in Mt. Hope, W. Virginia, in which there were 400 conversions and 300 applicants for church membership. Dr. Theodore Copeland did the preaching.

Mr. Asa Weston, of the H. Weston Lumber Co., of Logtown, Miss., was buried on March 20, Dr. I. W. Cooper, a life-long member of the family, officiating. The Masons conducted the latter part of the services.

Rev. H. F. Brooks, pastor, began a revival meeting in First Church, Shreveport, La., on February 19. He is being assisted by the Wisdom Sisters, the singers who have been heard in the sessions of a number of our Conferences.

Mr. W. F. Elam has been appointed District Secretary of Epworth Leagues, Brookhaven District, succeeding Mr. Lee Craft, who has recently removed to Texas.

Mr. Asa M. Weston, whose death is announced in these columns, was the father of Mrs. J. Cude Rousseaux, wife of Brother Rousseaux of the Louisiana Conference.

Rev. J. O. Hanes, of Birmingham, Ala., general evangelist, was in the Advocate office Tuesday, February 21. He was passing through the city en route to San Antonio, Texas, to begin a meeting.

The hosts of the Centenary group meetings in the Meridian District—Rev. T. H. King at Scooba, Rev. J. Loyd Decell at Meridian, and Dr. W. H. Huntley at Shuhuta—were most gracious in their entertainment of their visitors.

Rev. M. L. White, of the DeKalb charge, Mississippi Conference, says he travels about two hundred and fifty miles a week in his Ford in attending to his pastoral duties. He says he has the best car in the State—and his people say they have the best pastor.

On the Lecompte charge, Louisiana Conference, services have been resumed in two churches which had long been abandoned. A new church enterprise is being discussed at Lecompte. Rev. J. W. Faulk is the pastor.

Rev. James M. Lewis, pastor at Collins, Miss., will be able to engage in several weeks of evangelistic work outside his own charge. Brother Lewis can both preach and sing the gospel. Brethren desiring his help may address him at Collins.

We regret to learn that Mrs. M. A. Chadwick, of Walnut Grove, Miss., a lifetime subscriber to the Advocate, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. D. A. McIntosh, in Collins, Miss., February 21. Her remains were carried to Walnut Grove for interment.

Rev. Paul D. Hardin, presiding elder of the Meridian District, Mississippi Conference, seems now to be in vigorous health, and he is giving himself unreservedly to the work of his district. He took the lead in all the Centenary group meetings recently held in his district.

We learn from press dispatches that Rev. E. H. Cunningham, of Okolona, Miss., was chosen grand chaplain of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Mississippi last week, and that Rev. John W. Chisholm, of Forest, was chosen chaplain of the Grand Chapter and the Grand Council.

Rev. R. S. Walton writes that the Methodist Sunday schools of Shreveport had a record-breaking attendance on February 12, over 2200 being present in the several schools on that day. Plans are being discussed for the organization of some Mission Sunday schools in and around Shreveport.

Rev. James M. Smith, Conference Evangelist, Mississippi Conference, has not to the present date any meetings scheduled for the months of March and April nor for all of the fall months. Those desiring his assistance may address him as follows: Rev. James M. Smith, Poplar Springs Drive, Meridian, Miss.

Through Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the Alexandria District, we learn that the work at Winnfield, La., is in a most flourishing condition. At a recent quarterly conference there it was reported that the assessment for ministerial support has been paid in full to March 1, while attendance upon Sunday school and church is very fine.

At the annual banquet of the Wesleyan Bible Class of First Methodist Church, this city, recently held in the social hall of the church, there were 115 young persons present and the occasion was a delightful one. Mr. C. F. Niebergall is the teacher. This is a fine class. They have an average attendance of almost 200 on Sunday mornings.

If any sojourning in Meridian, Miss., are in a hurry to get to any of the surrounding towns, we are position to say that if they can prevail upon Mr. S. M. Graham, the lay leader of the Meridian District, to drive them through in his car, they will have their ardent desires abundantly satisfied. He likes to be connected with things that are moving—and when he is in his car he "steps on the gas." Rapid locomotion results.

We learn from Rev. James M. Lewis, pastor, that the work at Collins, Miss., is advancing very nicely. Brother Lewis is looking forward to a great spiritual revival throughout the church. He writes that Brothers Greenway, Westbrook and Byrd, the other Methodist preachers in Covington County, are awake to all the interests of the Kingdom. Arrangements are being made for a Sunday school institute to be held at Collins in the near future.

We are in receipt of the attractive program of the "Father and Son Banquet" enjoyed by eighty men and boys, February 10, at Cedar Grove, La., where Rev. H. L. Johns is the pastor. Dr. R. E. Smith, dean of Centenary College, and Dr. R. H. Wynn, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, were among the speakers. Twenty-one have been added to the church at Cedar Grove, the Sunday school is growing, and the Boy Scouts and Camp Fire Girls are doing good work.

Through the kindness of Rev. L. W. Smart, the pastor, we have on our desk the first copy of the "Circuit Outlook" of the Elmore charge, Louisiana Conference. It is a neat little paper of six pages and it covers every interest of the church. We are becoming accustomed to the calendars and bulletins of city churches, but papers for circuits are rare, and Brother Smart and his people are to be commended for the enterprise which they have begun. It ought to accomplish great good throughout the circuit.

An interesting event was the marriage at 9 p.m., February 22, 1922, in Hawkins Memorial Church, Meridian, Miss., of Mr. Walter Thomas Roak to Miss Annie Sale Hawkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Hawkins. Mr. Roak is connected with the freight traffic management of the Southern Railway, Memphis, Tenn. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. G. Hawkins, of Newton, Miss., former pastor and long-time friend of the family, who had christened the bride in babyhood. A reception was held from 9:30 to 11:30 p.m. at Morning View, the residence of the bride's parents on the heights south of Meridian.

Our pastor at Carrollton, Miss., Rev. S. C. Yates, writes that he is among a delightful people and that great progress is being made in the work of the charge. Prayer meetings and regular services on Sunday are well attended; in fact, Brother Yates finds that he is preaching to the largest congregations in his career as a minister. Remarkable growth is reported from the Sunday school in North Carrollton. Until three weeks ago it was a union school with an average attendance of forty. The Sunday following its organization as a Methodist school there were 62 present. The next Sunday there were 91 in attendance and on February 19 there were an even hundred present.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

The following friends have our thanks for two or more subscriptions sent in recently: Mr. F. A. Howell, Durant, Miss., 10; Rev. H. W. Ledbetter, Hammond, La., 7; Mr. F. Afton Smith, Water Valley, Miss., 8; Rev. C. A. Northington, Lambert, Miss., 8; Rev. H. T. Young, Natchitoches, La., 6; Mrs. H. C. Carnes, Shelby, Miss., 18; Rev. H. L. Johns, Cedar Grove, La., 6; Rev. R. S. Walton, Shreveport, La., 5; Mr. H. B. McEachern, Haynesville, La., 2; Rev. D. B. Boddie, Glenmora, La., 2; Rev. B. E. Crowson, Ashland, Miss., 2; Rev. J. R. Roy, Mer Rouge, La., 2; Rev. B. H. Andrews. Zachary, La., 2; Mr. C. B. Rives, Buntyn, Tenn., 2; Rev. Chas. E. Downer, Terry, Miss., 2; Rev. J. W. Faulk, Lecompte, La., 3; Mrs. C. A. Brunson, Minden, La., 2; Rev. H. L. Norton, Fernwood, Miss., 3.

A JOINT STATEMENT.

Believing that the highest interests of our church and of the Kingdom, as represented by it, will be served by the success of both the Centenary and Educational Movements, and, as representatives of these two Movements, being equally concerned for the success of both, on the hasis of continued good understanding and sympathetic co-operation, and in view of the fact that the two Movements are now in the field, tho Education Movement to collect its first installment and to complete its campaign and the Centenary to collect arrearages in pledges already made, we hereby affirm our adherence to the action of the General Conference and our sincere purpose fuliy to carry out the same according to its plain intention, as follows:

"That, in the interest of efficiency and in order that there may be carried on but one popular campaign in the Church at the same time, and without prejudice to exsting campaigns, the right of way be given to the Centenary Movement during the first two years and to the Educational Campaign during the second two years of the quadrennium, and that during these two periods, as far as possible, the full power of the Church be delivered in these respective campaigns."

1. We fully recognize that the Educational Commission, under the action of the General Conference, has the "right of way in the Church" at this time for the compietion of the campaign for education. There was no intention on the part of the Memphis meeting to encroach upon the rights of the Educational Commission nor to interfere with its plans; neither is there any such intention in the present Centenary collection movement. Should it appear, in any Annual Conference or section of a Conference, that to carry out the plan for the Centenary collection would come in conflict with the plans of the Educational Commission for compieting the educational campaign, then the plans of the Centenary collection shall be modified through the local representatives of the Movements, so as to harmonize with the plans of the educational campaign in such Conference or section of Conference.

2. The Centenary in its present movement, initiated at the Memphis meeting and now in process, is working for the collection of arrearages on pledges already made and no appeals are to be made for new subscriptions or new money.

3. Inasmuch as meetings, including the district group meetings have been planned and in large part already heid in the interest of the Centenary Coliection Movement, these meetings are to he completed, and the Centenary representatives cordiaily invite representatives of the Educational Campaign to be present at all meetings that may be held in preparation for World Sunday, and assure them of ample opportunity for representing their cause. But following World Sunday no such district group meetings shall he held hy the Centenary, except in the case of a Conference or district in which the Coliection Movement has been deferred.

4. The proposed World Sunday, March 26, is to be observed according to the plan already set forth and for the purpose of securing a canvass of all those who are in arrears in the payment of Centenary pledges in each church; and except in the case of churches in which another day has been suhstituted, tho special and extraordinary collection movement of the Centenary shall come to an end on April 1.

5. We pledge ourselves to earnest support and to hearty co-operation in efforts to hring the fullest possible measure of success to hoth enterprises. And we appeal to the membership of the churches generally to make every reasonable sacrifice to bring the collections for both causes up to date and to complete the educational campaign, thus securing for the quadrennium a glorious record; and we further appeal to the church to maintain under the pressure of the next few months the same fine Christian spirit that has characterized its activities in these great movements to this hour.

THE EDUCATIONAL FORCES MEET.

The educational leaders of the church, including all the college presidents, the Conference secretaries of education and general secretaries of the Board, recently gathered in two great meetings for the discussion of the plans of the Christian Education Movement. The educators from the western section of the church met at Little Rock on February 10th, while those from the eastern section gathered at Birmingham on February 14th.

Inasmuch as the first quadrennium of the great forward movements authorized hy the General Conference in 1918 is nearing its close, the discussions and actions of the men responsihie for the Christian Education Movement, which by General Conference action, occupied the last two years, are of great importance. There was evidenced a spirit of gratitude at the wonderful success which has already heen attalned and a determination to press the fundamental issues of the Movement during the remaining months of the quadrennium.

In view of the magnificent response made by the people at the call of the church, the meeting adopted the following resolutions:

"First, That this meeting of Conference Educational Secretaries, College Presidents and memhers of Conference Boards of Education express appreciation of the spirit and character of the response which has been made to the call of the General Conference, and that we appeal to the membership of the church generaliy to make every reasonahle sacrifice to enahle the Educational forces to bring the collections up to date and compiete a glorious record for the quadrennium, and that we further appeal to the church to maintain, under the pressure of the next few months, the same fine Christian spirit that has characterized its activities in this great movement to this hour; and

"Second, That we pledge ourselves to fervent prayer and diligent effort that this enterprise so splendidly begun may be carried forward to successful compietion within the period designated by the General Conference; and that in the accomplishment of this great undertaking we pray that a spirit of co-operation and brotheriy love may prevail to the end that the church may he richly blessed and God's name glorified.

"Third, That we hereby express our appreciation of the emergency which confronts the Centenary Movement at this time, and declaro our willingness to aid the cause in every way consistent with the purpose expressed hy the General Conference."

WHAT WILL WE DO ABOUT IT?

On Centenary pledges our church had paid to February 1, 1922, a total of $12,879,026. Tho balance due on the 60 per cent of total pledge (and this per cent due in 1921) is $9,267,673. Let us face these figures in the light of the following facts:

This total represents amounts paid on individual pledges hy Sunday schools and by Epworth Leagues. Ten per cent of tho amount paid on individual pledges in each Annual Conferenco is returned to that Conference for its own work. Ten per cent of the amount paid by tho Sunday schools is given to the Sunday School Board for extension of its work. The net amount available for Centenary enterprises is approximateiy $11,500,000. This can tako care of two years of the Centenary program and obligations, and on practicaliy the basis of the original askings—not on the basis of pledges. Appropriations have heen made for three years, and we are well advanced in the third year. Figure that out, and see whero the church and the Board of Missions stand today—where we stand as regards our missionary enterprises, as regards our pledged faith.

We have attempted to carry a three years' program and budget on less than two years payment, for the church has not yet come to 40 per cent in Centenary payments. Perhaps the leaders in Centenary work have erred in that they have not for some time made plainer the real situation. But they have known that "hard times" were with us, and they have not believed that it was the part of wisdom to press our people, as would a business concern facing a similar situation. And they have preferred, aiso, to keep before the people the worth-while achievements of the Centenary, believing that the church shouid know of these achievements, and that the church would not be wiiiing to abandon any of its great missionary enterprises.

The facts in the case are piaced hefore our people—with a liberal allowance for deferred payments, appropriations have been made for threo years. Payments to date take care of hut little more, and very little more, than two years' appropriations. The work suffers, the good namo of the church is involved, the enterprises of the Kingdom of Christ are delayed and hindered hecause of our delays. What will you do about your Centenary ohligations?

WILLIAM WILLIAMS (Uncle Billie) was born in August, 1847, and went to his reward on February 8, 1922, at the age of seventy-four years six months. He was ill only about ten days. He had resided for some time with his children near the Hillsdale church. His sister, Miss Adaline Williams, preceded him in death on October 23, at the age of eighty one years. The deceased is survived by one aged sister, four sons, and three daughters: D. M. Williams, of Amite; R. G. Williams, of Hillsdale; W. H. and J. H. Williams, of Harvells Mill; Mrs. Miller, Mrs. E. T. Warren of Hillsdale, and Mrs. Zula Ware, of Baton Rouge; also by thirty-four grandchildren, and one great-grandchild. Brother Williams was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Pipkin's Chapel, near his old homestead, several years ago and remained a devout and sweet-spirited Christian until death. His hearty hand-shake, pleasant disposition and great faith in the Holy Ghost religion were a great inspiration to me during over one year that I have been his pastor. He loved the church, and was devoted to every interest. Without doubt he has joined the church triumphant. The funeral services were conducted by the writer at Pipkin's Chapel, his old home church, in the presence of a host of friends and relatives. L. C. SPENCER, Pastor.

Pinegrove, La.

Died in Sabine Parish, Louisiana, at Mitchell, Brother BENJAMIN F. MOORE, who was born October 25, 1855, and departed this life January 8, 1922. He was married to Miss Maggie Robertson, December 18, 1879. To this union were born eight children, three boys and five girls, all of whom are living except one. In early life Brother Moore gave his heart and life to God and lived a consistent life until he was called from labor to rest. Brother Moore served the church as steward for many years and was serving in that capacity when he went away. The church has lost a faithful member, the community a good citizen, and the children a loving father that gave his life to the cause of God and his family. A good man has gone from among us, one whose place in the church will be hard to fill. On the 9th of January the writer preached his funeral, being assisted by the pastor, Rev. J. G. Sloane, there being present a large congregation and sorrowing ones to mourn his departure. To those who mourn, we will say, "Be thou faithful unto death and meet father, where all these tears shall be wiped away and we will never say good-bye." S. S. HOLLADAY.

February 14, 1922.

JAMES ASBURY LEWIS was born in Bibbs County, Alabama, May 13, 1836. He moved with his parents to Oktibbeha County, Mississippi, in 1843. He was happily married to Miss Bettie Foster, January 13, 1859, and settled in Chickasaw County, Mississippi, where he spent the remainder of his earthly life. He was the father of seven children, his wife and three children having preceded him to the better world; he leaves to mourn his departure Rev. T. W. Lewis, of Memphis, Tenn.; Attorney W. N. Lewis, of Davis, Oklahoma; Rev. E. S. Lewis, of Greenville, Miss., and Dixie L. Lewis, of Chattanooga, Tenn., while he truly sleeps with the redeemed of God. He was blessed with a long and useful life of service for his country, church, and God; serving for four years as a Confederate soldier, he was engaged in more than fifty battles; was State legislator; he served eight years on the county school board; as county supervisor and president of pension board, he served twenty-nine years most effectively; he was twenty years an officer in the Masonic Lodge.

Brother Lewis, as he was commonly known, gave his tender, boyish heart to Jesus when only eight years of age, and the beautiful friendship he entered into with Christ at that early date was surely never broken, but ever grew sweeter and dearer, ripening into a most blessed, fruitful life of constant, faithful service rendered through the channels of the great Methodist Church, of which he was a member for more than seventy-seven years. For forty years he served as a faithful superintendent of one Sunday school and fifty-five years as a member of the board of stewards. His home was ever the home of preachers, as was his heart the home of the blessed Christ. He never entertained a doubt as to the saving power of his beloved Lord.

After the long life of uncomplaining service his worn body yielded to the gentle touch of Jesus and his physical eyes were closed in the sleep of death at his home in Houston, Miss., Wednesday evening, January 25, 1922, and we can truly say in the language of Charles Wesley, "Servant of God, well done! Thy glorious warfare past; The battle's fought, the race is won, and thou art crowned at last." E. E. McKEITHEN.

Houston, Miss.

Brother BANISTER A. CLARK was born July 4, 1856, and departed this life June 6, 1921. He was living at D'Lo, Miss., up to the time of death. He was first married to Miss Sarah E. Slay, of Simpson County, Mississippi, February 20, 1879, with whom he lived happily two years and two months. To this union were born two daughters, both having died in infancy. After the death of his first wife he was married to Miss Susie Holmes, of Rankin County, Mississippi, August 2, 1881, who still survives him and with whom he lived happily until death. To this union were born four sons and seven daughters. The eldest son died in infancy and one fell on the battle field in France. Those left to mourn his departure are: Mrs. Susan M. (wife); Mrs. Vera Sue and Mrs. Emma C. Moore, daughters living at D'Lo, Miss.; Mrs. Minnie Overly, Johns, Miss.; Mrs. Hattie Grantham, D'Lo, Miss.; Mrs. Ada Wedgeworth and Mrs. Ina Hocker, of Delhi, La.; Mrs. Mamie Lee, Bogalusa, La.; T. [illegible] and Edward J. Floyd, La. Brother Clark was a devoted husband and father. It was indeed a pleasure to be in his home and hear him speak so tenderly to each member of the family. He was indeed pleasant and ready to respond, as far as possible, to every demand. He took pride in speaking of the goodness and mercy of God to him all along the way of life. You could always depend on him at Sunday school, prayer meeting, and the regular preaching services. It is hard to estimate the loss of a real, true Christian. His favorite song was, "There'll be no sorrow there." His favorite passage of Scripture was II Tim. 1:8-8. May God very graciously comfort and sustain the bereaved.

FRECKLES

March Brings Out Unsightly Spots. How to Remove Easily.

The woman with tender skin dreads March because it is likely to cover her face with ugly freckles. No matter how thick her veil, the sun and winds have a strong tendency to make her freckle.

Fortunately for her peace of mind, Othine—double strength, makes it possible for even those most susceptible to freckles to keep their skin clear and white. No matter how stubborn a case of freckles you have, the double strength Othine should remove them.

Get an ounce from your druggist and banish the freckles. Money back if it fails.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Moorhead has agreed to meet all the conditions for a District Standard Training School to be held August 13-18. The teachers adjacent to this enterprising church have agreed to take advantage of this school. Mark the place and date and arrange to attend the full six days.

The church at Doddsville is raising funds to add two rooms to their building to accommodate their growing school. Faith always finds that God has money. Have faith in God and go on, is a good motto.

The Cradle Roll at Ruleville has twenty-six members. The superintendent of this department ordered Object Lessons for the Cradle Roll and the blocks used in giving instruction to the little ones. I spent two days with the teachers giving such help as they need in making their work more effective.

Emory is the place and March 12 is the date of the institute to be held for the Byhalia circuit. Services will begin at 10 a.m. and continue through the day.

Mrs. H. L. Talbert, Elementary Superintendent of the Greenville District, has announced an institute to be held at Shelby, March 24-25. The teachers near Shelby are urged to attend this meeting that they may give and get all the help possible in a two days' institute. A half dozen trained workers will give the instruction.

Have you read the article in the March number of the Sunday School Magazine by Miss Kennedy on Plans for Children's Week? Write to Miss Lynda Ramey, Grenada, Miss., for a large poster and leaflets. The main purpose of this week is to reach the home; it is to center the attention of the parents upon their children. Those who observed the week last year are still reaping rich results. Go thou, and do likewise.

Now is the time to appoint committees for the proper observance of Sunday School Day. The first program will be ready by the first of March, the second one by the 15th of the month. Every school in the Conference is required to observe the day, every class in the school is expected to take part. Every teacher in the school is a member of the program committee. It will be well to have a committee on publicity, one on decoration, another on the offering.

MOTHER! MOVE CHILD'S BOWELS WITH CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP

Hurry mother! Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup" and it never fails to open the bowels. A teaspoonful today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. If constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has cold, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good cleansing of the little bowels is often all that is necessary.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

We still hear people ask, "What classes ought to be organized?" and "What is the use of organizing?" Organize every class above the juniors. Organize to increase the class membership, to clean up the church yard and building, to put in some new equipment, to look after the sick, to help the poor, to build new rooms, to pay the Centenary and Educational pledges, to hold prayer meetings, to win the unsaved to Christ and a thousand other things. A lot of the wickedness we witness is the heart-cry for Christ. Organize and go to work and help save the lost. Organize so you will have something to say at the Wesley Bible Class Federation.

We have dates for six Standard Training Schools, one Conference school, and five District schools. We are planning to reach one thousand teachers and have these teachers reach one hundred thousand who hunger for the Bread of Life. These schools are projected for the purpose of deepening the spiritual life, to give a larger knowledge of the needs of the child, and to show how these needs may be met. The results from these schools have been greater than we expected. The students take the work of teaching more seriously, they get a clearer idea of the meaning of religious education, a holy enthusiasm is kindled in their hearts that tends to grow as they acquire more knowledge of God's way of saving the world.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The Broad Street Sunday School is a progressive school. They have four ranking departments: Beginners', Primary, Junior, and Intermediate. All their classes above the Juniors are now organized and enrolled as W. B. C. They are looking and planning for advanced work.

The Gulfport Sunday School reported 693 present Sunday, the 19th; 102 in their Men's Bible Class. This is the largest attendance we have had reported this year. They beat this last Easter, and have set their goal at 1000 for this Easter.

Galloway Memorial School averaged 100 more in attendance this past month than a year ago. They have a growing Men's Bible Class.

Raleigh Sunday School is growing and they are having a very high average attendance for their enrollment. The circuit is doing good work and is improving. Trinity School has pulled through the winter for the first time in a long time.

The Rolling Fork Sunday School has outgrown its present quarters, and they are adding more rooms to the building to care for it.

Of the fourteen leading Sunday schools in Intermediate-Senior work of the whole church, Central (Meridian) and Capitol Street (Jackson) appear in the list. We have other schools that will appear in the next list.

A school, to reach the standard, must have an official representative at the District Institute, with a written report. Please hear this in mind, as it will hurt our Conference standing, which cannot stand much rough treatment. Please see that your delegate comes with a written report.

Conference Standard Training School. Forget it? Never! June 8-14. Dr. C. A. Bowen, of the Chair of Religious Education, Millsaps, has been elected Dean of the School. Let us make this school the best yet.

Mr. O. C. Hull has been employed for part-time service. He can be of great service to your school if you will use him.

Pray for the work and the workers.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS,
Field Secretary.

"According to thy faith be it unto thee," was no more an answer to petitions of old than it is to petitions today.—Exchange.

Prayer has been called "a wish turned heavenward." That is the way the noblest and sweetest wishes all point.—Selected.

We express ourselves by acts more than by words. Unless me show loyalty to Christ by kind deeds, our words of belief are useless.—Selected.

Dare, O weak and faltering soul—dare at any rate to wish to have that which is your chief good.—Mozley.

A SOCIETY ABOVE THE ORDINARY.

One of the pleasant features of the Newton pastorship is to be found in the unique work that is being done by the local Woman's Missionary Society, and the helpfulness that comes from that source. This auxiliary is thoroughly organized, and keeps up its organization by its busy life and by operating its departments. The officers and fifty-eight members evince a splendid spirit of co-operation among themselves and towards undertakings of the church community.

The meetings are held four times each month, regardless of weather conditions. The meeting is omitted only after each fifth Sabbath. Even in very unfavorable weather enough attend to give interest and enthusiasm; and when conditions are more favorable the places of assembly fill up. Some business is attended to at each meeting, but one meeting per month is more especially for business. This and one other of the sessions are held on Monday afternoons at the church. The other two times the meetings are called "Social," and held on Tuesday afternoons at one of the homes, two ladies pairing as joint-hostesses. There is a program at each meeting centering around some study. One time it is a study direct from the Bible; another is from the book on the Bible, The Mind of the Messiah; a third is the study given in the Missionary Voice; and the fourth is from the Mission study book, Wembo Nyama's Land. At the Social meetings light refreshments are invariably served by the hostesses.

Besides dues and pledges, a penny collection is taken regularly. Mrs. W. G. Allen is President; and Mrs. Z. T. Gibson, Secretary. Six weeks ago the President introduced a feature that has caused merriment and good will. Capsules were passed to each member, each capsule containing the name of one lady who for following six weeks was to be known as the "capsule lady" of the person drawing that name.

During the following six weeks each was to do little kindnesses to her "capsule lady," and in such a way as would not reveal the identity of the benefactor. As a result the 58 members have been receiving constantly fruit, flowers, candies, handkerchiefs, pot plants, etc., for six weeks, without knowing exactly the source, except that it was from her "capsule lady." The six weeks have just ended with a social at which the capsule ladies revealed themselves to one another. The weather was good, and it was a jolly occasion.

Last Sunday, when the question of an addition to the church building was up before the congregation for consideration, the Missionary Society pledged $500 per year for five years, or $2500.

Mrs. W. G. Allen and Mrs. A. L. Myers have been elected delegates to the Conference Meeting at McComb City.

GIRLS! LEMONS WHITEN HANDS

Press the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, which any drug store will supply for a few cents, shake well, and you have a quarter-pint of harmless and delightful lemon-bleach lotion to soften and whiten red, rough or chapped hands. This home-made lemon lotion is far superior to glycerin and rose water to smoothen the skin. Famous stage beauties use it to bleach and bring that soft, clear, rosy-white complexion, because it doesn't irritate.

Its Easy With a Broider Fast!

This new invention enables you to do the most beautiful embroidery. There are 3 sizes of the Broider-Fast needle—suitable for wools, cotton or silks. Embroiders chain stitch, solid French knots, or a thick velvet effect. You can quickly transform your own dresses, hats, household linens, and children's clothes.

Direct from us, or at your dealer's—only $1.00 for holder. Three sizes of needles, and directions.

THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY FIRST.

Mrs. M. and Mrs. L. came out from the church together to take the car. They had spent the greater part of the day in a meeting of the Missionary Society. Both women were enthusiastic concerning missionary matters, and as they rode down town they reviewed the day's work with eagerness, noting the encouraging features of the meeting as to attendance and interest. Then Mrs. L. said with a sigh: "I thought there was a large number present, until the roll was called, then I realized how many were absent. Why is it that many of our most talented women pay their dues, but never come and take part with us in the meeting? They have leisure for everything they want to do. I see their names in connection with the leading social events and the prominent club functions of the city, but they never seem to have time for the Missionary Society. Last year they worked so splendidly for the Red Cross! How I do covet them for the Missionary Society!"

"I do not understand it," answered Mrs. M. "The things in which they are interested are most pleasant, many of them very helpful and necessary, but to me the church of God is first, and the organizations to which my church membership commits me must have my first loyalty. When I was mentioned for an office in the Missionary Society, my impulse was to refuse, because of pressure of duties; but when I thought it over I was forced to admit that, in spite of these duties, I had accepted an office in the Era Club, and that settled the matter. Whatever I can do for any organization I must do first for my church. I want the best I have and am to be invested in the service of my Lord and Master."

With this speech she was gone, and Mrs. L. was left with her thoughts for company during the remainder of her ride, and they ran after this fashion: "Why is it easier to give money than to give self to those enterprises to which we are called by God's church? God asks for ourselves, our time, our talents, and until we have given him these our gift of money has small significance. What a large contribution these absent ones could make to the kingdom through their presence at the Missionary Society, and how disappointed the Father must be when, instead of meeting him there, they only send money!"

No organization to which these women are giving themselves can compare in far-reaching influence and tremendous results with this organization to which churchwomen owe their first allegiance. The Woman's Missionary Society was the pioneer woman's club. When the first thrill of the "new woman" movement was felt in our country, it took shape in an organization among churchwomen in behalf of women and children of the non-Christian world, and its course from the beginning till now has been one of constructive helpfulness and has left a trail of blessing in its wake. No organization of women in the world can make such a magnificent exhibit of results. It has girdled the globe with schools, hospitals, and settlements, and its program of work includes every ministry needed by the human race. These ministries are ushering in a new day for the womanhood of the world and are making womankind a sisterhood around the globe.

Money alone has not accomplished these things. Time, talent, love, and sacrilce on the part of hundreds of thousands of Christ's followers have been invested in this magnificent enterprise. Women have met together in little bands for study and prayer, often at great sacrifice and inconvenience to themselves. But now a host of women rise up and call them blessed.

In the face of this, professing Christian women disregard their privileges through the Missionary Society and choose the less important avenues through which to expend their best energies.

Mrs. S. chose the presidency of the Book Club rather than that of the Missionary Society, and yet Mrs. S. owes all that she counts dear, all that makes her life happy and beautiful—domestic joys, intellectual attainments (the very power to be President of the Book Club), religious privileges—all of these to the gospel of Jesus Christ. Not one of them could she have secured without that gospel. Nevertheless, she gives the lower place in her affections and service (only her money) to its concerns, while her best goes into second-rate things.

But these women can be stirred to splendid service. Last year, when their sons were in camps and trenches, they were giving themselves in unstinted devotion to the service of their country and of their boys. No service or sacrifice was too great for them. When one recalls this service now, the question arises. Will not these same women give themselves to a cause which is greater than, because it is inclusive of, the Red Cross organizations? Under the white cross of Jesus Christ they have a ministry to millions of bleeding hearts and suffering bodies, living under conditions far more heartbreaking than those in war-stricken Europe—conditions which have existed unrelieved in these non-Christian lands for centuries.

And will not the women who love the missionary cause make its claims so real and so attractive to this demobilized body of Red Cross workers that they cannot resist their appeal? Can they not bring hem to such a realization of these world conditions as will demand their sacrificial service in even a larger measure than the Red Cross has done? The Master is saying: "These ought ye to have done (minister to the soldiers in the trenches and to the suffering in war-stricken Europe) and not to have left

If Your Trouble Is Scrofula

As Often Acquired as Inherited,

You have eruptions and sores, and perhaps enlarged glands of the neck. This blood disease affects the internal organs, especially the lungs, and if neglected may develop into consumption.

It causes many troubles, and is aggravated by impure air, unwholesome food, bad water, too much heat or cold, and want of proper exercise.

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the blood-purifying medicine that has been used with so much satisfaction by three generations, is wonderfully successful in the treatment of scrofula. Give it a trial.

If a cathartic or laxative is needed, take Hood's Pills.

THE PROGRAM FROM NOW UNTIL APRIL 2.

From now until April 2 we will be driving toward a definite goal—the ... ment of 60 per cent of our Centenary pledges. We are now far short of that goal, but we can reach it if only the church gives itself to this ... with the willingness to make whatever sacrifices the situation demands.

Presiding elders, pastors, lay leaders, minute men, Centenary treasurers, and other workers are to keep before the membership of the church the Centenary needs. The local treasurer and the collection committee will ... ganize for personal work. World Sunday, March 26, will be the day when in every Methodist congregation the people are to answer the call for cash payments on Centenary obligations. The week ending April 2 is "follow-up week."

There is nothing new in the plan—it is practically the same as the original Centenary conservation program. Let's work it; and to guarantee that the goal will be reached, let those who can do so make their payments in advance of World Sunday. We must carry it through.—Centenary Commission.

IN WEMBO NYAMA'S LAND.

Your greatest problem is to get the members of your society interested in ... sions. More than any one other thing, is the book that you use. However valuable the text book material may be if it is not written in an interesting style the book loses its message.

The approved Mission Study book for this year, IN WEMBO-NYAMA'S LAND by Reeve will hold the interest of any class. The writer being one of our own missionaries has written out of the experiences of his own life. Although it is brimming over with missionary facts the story charms the reader like a romance. A SWEET LITTLE BABY BOY

Makes a Bright Spot in Every Home. A Comfort in Years to Come

Park Rapids, Minnesota.—"I have taken your medicine — Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound — when I was a girl for pains and before and after my marriage. I now have a sweet little baby boy and will send you his picture if you wish to publish it. My sisters also take your medicine and find it a great help, and I recommend it to those who suffer before their babies are born." — Mrs. WM. JOHNSON, Box 155, Park Rapids, Minn.

To marry and arrive at middle age without children is a great disappointment to many women. Think of the joy and comfort other women have in their children as they grow older.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped to bring great happiness to many families by restoring women to health. Often the childless home is due to a run down condition of the wife, which may be helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It brought health and happiness into the home of Mrs. Johnson. Why not to yours?

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

the other undone (that ministry to the Christless millions of earth.")

As Mrs. L. alighted from the car with her heart full of these things she encountered Mrs. J. at the corner. She had long coveted Mrs. J. for the Missionary Society; in fact, Mrs. J. had once been an active leader of the women of her church, but social matters and the Red Cross had absorbed her of late. Taking advantage of the opportunity afforded by the chance meeting as they walked together, Mrs. L. poured out her soul in an earnest plea for the claims of the Missionary Society upon Christian women.

Her eager words were seed in soil made ready by the stirring experiences of the past two years, and Mrs. J. quickly responded: "My Red Cross work is done, and my two sons are on their way home from France. In loving gratitude to God for this and all his other blessings to me, and in deepest sympathy for the millions of mothers who have never known the joys that crown my life, I dedicate myself anew to him and his church and to that organization which is meaning so much to the womanhood and childhood of the world. I will be with you at the next meeting of the society, and you may depend on me for the best service I can give."

Her face was aglow with feeling as she voiced this resolution, and the two women went their separate ways with happy hearts.

LOVE.

Into our work for others we can take nothing greater than love, for love is a wonderful guide and teacher. Will and experience are worth little without it, and toil and sacrifice never could make up for its lack. There is courage and healing, strength and inspiration in the mere fact that some one loves us and cares for what we are doing.—Selected.

IN THE PILGRIM'S ROAD.

We may fail a thousand times; but as long as we are ashamed of our failure, as long as we do not helplessly acquiesce, as long as we do not try to comfort ourselves for it by a careful parade of our other virtues, we are in the pilgrim's road.—Arthur Christopher Benson.

Patience is the finest and worthiest part of fortitude, and the rarest, too.

CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 69—No. 10. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3448.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

ROLLING AWAY THE STONE.

It is a significant fact that the women who were on their way to the sepulcher of the Lord to anoint his body after the hurial and were questioning as they went who would roll away the stone from its mouth, found it already rolled away when they reached the place where they were to perform their ministry of love. They knew the stone was there, and they did not know how they would get rld of it—hut they were not deterred from their service of love. The great difficulty in the way of their doing what was in their hearts to do had disappeared when they came to the place where their beautiful deed was to be wrought. So it ls in the life of the Christian today—there is no insuperable ohstacle to the performance of duty. The way may seem to be hedged about, but where there is no fear and no holding back, the way is cleared and the duty can be done. And ln the rendering of loving service in the line of duty, there always come a heavenly vision and a reassuring voice to guide the Christian to still further service. There is absolutely nothing that can hide the Lord from the earnest seeker, or keep the humble penitent from finding him.

THE RESULTS OF THE PEACE CONFERENCE.

While the whole world followed with great interest the proceedings of the recent Washington Conference looking toward disarmament, it has been somewhat difficult to know just exactly what was accomplished by that historic gathering. The Commission on International Justice and Goodwill of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America has recently issued a resume of the definite agreements of that Conference that is so clear that we reproduce it for the benefit of those who would like to have in convenient and condensed form the proposals of the Conference. They are as follows:

1. To scrap many existing capital ships and stop building new ones—a five-Power, fifteen-year treaty.

2. To continue the naval ratio indefinitely until two years after the treaty has been denounced by one of the five Powers concerned.

3. To limit the caliber of guns on naval vessels to sixteen inches.

4. To condemn the use of submarines as commerce destroyers.

5. To condemn absolutely all poison gas warfare.

6. To enact a four-Power, ten-year treaty regarding all island possessions in the Pacific.

7. To stop building naval hases on specified islands in the Pacific.

8. To enact a permanent treaty between nine Powers for just, fair and friendly treatment of China.

9. To confer together whenever any Power feels that threatening difficulties are developing in regard to China.

10. To establish a Commission of the nine Powers to deal with alleged intringements of the "open door" agreements.

In addition to these definite recommendations to the participating nations, these important agreements were reached outside the Conference:

1. To settle the Yap cable dispute.

2. To settle the question of American rights in Japanese "mandates" in the Pacific.

3. To return Shantung completely to China.

In connection with the campaign for a warless world, following the Washington Conference, the Federal Council bulletin pertinently says: "A warless world can never be imposed by Governments on peoples, hut it can be imposed by people on Governments." The Christian people of the world as represented by the membership of the churches now have an opportunity such as they have never had before to shape public sentiment in favor of permanent universal peace. It is a goal worth striving for.

THE JUDGES OUGHT TO KNOW.

At the annual convention of the American Bar Association, held at Cincinnati last August, the Judicial Section, composed only of judges, gave formal expression to a warning that the American people need to pay heed to. We quote that warning, as follows: "Reverence for law and enforcement of law depend mainly upon the ideals and customs of those who occupy the vantage ground of life in business and society. The people of the United States, hy solemn constitutional and statutory enactment, have undertaken to suppress the age-long evil of the liquor traffic. When, for the gratification of their appetites, or the promotion of their interests, lawyers, bankers, great merchants and manufacturers, and social leaders, both men and women, disobey and sceff at this law, or any other law, they are aiding the cause of anarchy and promoting mob violence, robbery and homicide; they are sowing dragons' teeth, and they need not be surprised when they find that no judicial or police authority can save our country or humanity from reaping the harvest." When the character and standing of those who issue this warning are taken into consideration, it can easily he seen that it is not lightly or rashly given. In the propaganda to discount and render non-effective the prohihition law there is a much more serious danger involved than the mere abrogation of a specific act, and these learned gentlemen have called attention to it in their utterance. The fact that it was unanimously adopted hy the Judicial Section adds to its impressiveness.

HOW TO MAKE THE CHURCH EFFECTIVE.

Recently the students of St, Stephen's College, an institution under the auspices of the Episcopal Church in New York, were asked to state how, in their opinion, the church may he made more effective. Seventy students replied to the questionnaire, and their answers are interesting and suggestive. Ahout half the students declared the greatest need of the church to be hetter clergymen; hut there was a good deal sald about the laymen. The students thought that "there should he more religion ln lay circles; laymen should so well attend to the temporal affairs of the church that the clergy might give undivided attention to the spiritual; all the members should work; there should he fewer disputes; members should take greater interest in the work of the church; hypocrites should he eliminated; stricter membership rules should prevail." While we are not disposed to feel that we shall have to look to college students for Instructions as to how hest to conduct ecclesiastical affairs, we do think lt is significant of the general Interest in the affalrs of the church that these young men should hold such definite views concerning so important a matter. It certainly ls true that that the church can never he as effective as it ought to be unil the laity recognize their responsihility as well as their opportunities in the service of the church.

A DEVIL'S TRICK.

A recent news item from New York relates the Ingenulty of a landlord in ralsing rents three times successively during one year. In order to escape the suspicion that might be aroused lf he raised it in his own name, he adopted the expedient of "selling" the property to a company or corporation, and letting the new owner Increase the rental, himself, of course, being the purchaser, under the assumed names, in each case. When his villainy hecame known, there was great Indignation —and court action. But his procedure is exactly that of the devil in his attempts to ensnare foolish men and women. When one trick fails, he tries another; and the tragedy of it all is that he is constantly deceiving, by his changing devices, those who escaped him at first. Beware of the devil's tricks!

WOULD IT?

We read this the other day: "What a godsend lt would he lf there were some device that would ring a hell when we turn out a sloppy piece of work, or automatically give us a kick when we use only ahout a quarter of our energy on a job!" We are not so certain lt would be a godsend, for a good many of us like to enjoy restful repose—and how could we get lt with a bell ringing all the time, and while being kicked all over creation?

LEAVES FROM MY NOTEBOOK.

By Bishop James Cannon, Jr.

I.

On October 28 the College of Bishops requested me to visit the Congo Mission in Africa, provided it was found to be practicable so to do and to return by the date of the General Conference the coming May. The routes and schedules of travel were carefully investigated. The Congo missionaries were of the opinion that the trip could not possibly be made in the time indicated, but having had some experience in foreign travel, and knowing that the necessity for the accomplishment of certain things in a limited time will increase skill to remove or diminish obstacles, I decided that there was a fair probability of making the trip and returning by May 1. The route by London, Cape Town, and by rail through South Africa to Bakuma in the southern part of the Belgian Congo and from Bakuma, by steamer and caravan or by caravan alone, to Lusambo and Wembo Nyama, was apparently the most rapid and certain. But it developed that Dr. Egbert W. Smith, one of the Missionary Secretaries of the Southern Presbyterian Church, and Dr. Stixrud and wife, medical missionaries of the same church, were planning to sail from Antwerp on December 24 direct to the Congo and would go to the Presbyterian mission at Luebo, which is about twelve days' journey by caravan from Wembo Nyama. While this was about ten days or two weeks later in sailing than the route by South Africa, it seemed worth the delay to travel with those holding the same purpose, and studying practically the same type of people, and similar problems. The date fixed gave ample time for holding the two Alabama Conferences and for attending the Biennial National Convention of the Anti-Saloon League of America in Washington, December 1 to 8, and for reaching New York December 9 in time to take the Olympic December 10.

I had not engaged passage before reaching New York, because certain information concerning the Mexican work had not been received and it was possible to catch the Canadian Pacific at St. John's by rail, leaving New York the 12th, reaching England in time. I did not wish to leave without my Mexican data, for the Committee on Estimates of the Board of Missions would meet before my return, and while they are somewhat acquainted with the Mexican situation, yet I knew that Bishops Moore, McMurry and Atkins would give them so much information about the Orient, Brazil, Cuba and Europe that Mexico would be somewhat in the background. Indeed I may frankly confess that the only real hesitation I felt about taking the trip to the Congo was the surrender of plans made at the Mexican Conference to spend at least a month in careful inspection and conference with the elders and superintendents before the General Conference. But no bishop or missionary secretary had been to the Congo since the establishment of that Mission in 1914, and the brave little band might begin to think or to feel that they were forgotten, and if any of our missionaries should have the loving sympathy and prayers of the church, the Congo missionaries should have, for certainly the picture of their experiences is not an alluring one after the flesh. The ocean travel to the mouth of the Congo is about 8000 miles, taking thirty days; then twelve or fifteen days by river steamer, traveling in the company of the hot sun, flies and mosquitoes by day, and tying up at the bank with additional mosquitoes and nameless insects by night, until 1000 miles have been covered; then by caravan on foot or in hammock to the mission station. Other missionaries have their trials. These Congo missionaries have, in addition to the usual trials, sand fleas, jiggers, ants of various kinds and sizes, mosquitoes, and tsetse flies, bringing not only physical discomfort but dangerous and fatal diseases.

Bishop Lambuth had wished to visit the Mission this past year, but owing to the pressing need of his supervision and counsel in our great Oriental field, he had realized that he could not possibly make the trip. He had, therefore, at the meeting of the College of Bishops in May, requested me to go, and I had agreed to do so if it was practicable. When I was in Europe in September I had looked into the matter, and had mapped out my schedule, but upon my return home, hearing the sad and unexpected news of his death, I had abandoned the plan, as he was no longer in charge of the work, and I had agreed to undertake it at his request. But when the College of Bishops took action requesting me to go, I knew that in going I would carry out the wishes of my departed friend and brother.

I have no deep-seated aversion to the trip, but I should prefer some other trips that I can think of. I may be unable to do what I hope. I may be greatly retarded in my movements, but I shall spare no effort, and no expense, to do what I have been sent to do and return by the first of May. Certainly, the work left to us to do by the Master includes Africa, both the present and the future population. There is little doubt but that in much of the thinly populated areas of Africa there will be later millions of immigrants from densely populated portions of the world. The country must be Christianized, not only for the sake of the present, but of the future population.

Owing to my personal acquaintance with the agent, a large, comfortable stateroom on the E Deck of the Olympic was secured, and that without a roommate. The Olympic is nearly 47,000 tons register, the mightiest of the English passenger service; I had sailed on her in 1913, and again last August, and prefer her for comfort to any vessel I have used, although the Aquitania is better for speed. The steamer was scheduled to sail at 1 p.m., December 10. My wife, who had accompanied me to New York, and I reached the dock at noon, just about the time the gong sounded for visitors and friends "not sailing" to go ashore. The gangway was drawn up, and a few minutes later my wife was lost sight of in the crowd on the dock, and I went to my stateroom, E-15, to write a number of letters to send back by the pilot. It is not easy to write at that time, if any one has come to the boat to see you off. You cannot pick up your train of thought and write what you want to write. Of course, one should ordinarily have written all the important letters before getting on board. But so much had to be planned for, in advance, and in so short a time, and so many letters had come to me at New York on the last two days, and failing a stenographer, I was far in arrears. I had cleared up the most urgent letters by writing until the "wee sma' hours" of the morning, and yet there were ten or a dozen to be written in the two hours before the mail was sent back from the "outgoing Olympic." It was well they were so urgent, as it prevented my dwelling, right then, upon the separation from all my family for the next five months. I started in vigorously and finished up my banking letters and a Christmas letter to the family. Having mailed these, I went in to lunch, where I greatly upset the matter-of-fact English steward by writing while waiting for him to bring the courses, and then at the close of each letter, rushing up to mail the completed one, lest the box be closed. I mailed one to my two youngest boys, and was assured I would have "ten minutes more," but when I returned in eight minutes more, the pilot had slipped off and the mail had gone. Two minutes was a small margin and could be accounted for by differences in the timepieces, but it missed getting my other letter in the box, which was a disappointment to me, but a satisfaction to the English steward, as I am sure he viewed it as a just retribution for my (to him) inexplicable table manners.

As the Olympic steamed down the river, she rode the water like a queen, dwarfing all other objects in the harbor and in the bay. Thirty-six hours later she was alone in the great storm off the Grand Banks of Newfoundland, buffeted, tossed and torn by the giant waves rising 75 to 90 feet high, sweeping over her topmost decks, smashing her heavy glass portholes, and even the bridge itself. Mighty indeed she was in comparison with other ships, but small indeed out on the vast, wind-swept, tempest-tossed ocean.

On Sunday I sent a wireless to my wife concerning some important matters, and should have received an answer by night. I received no reply until Tuesday when she wired "All is well." The reason for the delay will be given later.

I selected a table amidship, next the wall, at the end seat at the table. The two men on my left are business and social friends, men moving in good English middle-class society, who are fairly well read and traveled, with that curious combination of phlegmatic importance which is found in many Englishmen, non-committal, half-bored look, which, however, changes into positive assertion, often, very quickly. They always dress for dinner, usually have wine for lunch, always champagne or whiskey for dinner, and view the rest of the world in a very conservative fashion.

On the right side, next to me, are two Englishmen also, but active, alert, with none of the impassive, non-committal air of the two on my left. They are very talkative, one quite interesting. Both of them drink ale and wine, not whiskey or champagne, and not at every meal. The father of one of them had over twenty thousand pounds (about $80,000 American money) invested in American brewery stock, and when he died the estate had to be settled by the son, and he tells me that the total receipts from the $80,000 will not be over $25,000. None of them can understand Prohibition, and I have not mentioned it to them yet. They do not know my work, much less my relation to Prohibition, and they are expressing their views with varying shades of emphasis.

I retired early and slept very soundly. I felt as though I were years behind in sleep. I do not want to get the "sleeping sickness," but I need the "sleeping cure." Therefore I shall not use coffee regularly. I doubt if there is any good in it for me. I am satisfied that the abstaining from coffee, tobacco, intoxicants, indeed narcotics of any kind, has resulted in more vigorous mental living than would have been possible had I stimulated my system, inclined naturally to nervousness. I regret, however, that I did not bring some chewing gum with me, as I am sure it would be a comfort during the long journey on sea and land that is before me. I do not uphold the habit, as it prevails, of chewing gum anywhere, everywhere, under all circumstances, by everybody. But sometimes it is a "friend in need." Like the man applying for life insurance, when asked: "Have you any bad habits that might tend to shorten your life?" replied deprecatingly, "I sometimes chew a little gum," and so on a trip like this one "I sometimes chew a little gum."

December 11 and 12. The morning was pleasant. I slept late and finished breakfast at about 10:15. Service in the lounge was held at 10:30. It was poorly advertised, poorly attended, and poorly conducted. There is no effort whatever to magnify the service. No member of the ship's crew was present except the doctor, who read the service, not perfunctorily, for I think he is sincere, but with little spirit. And so, outside of the hymns, there was little help in the service. There should be some plan by which a regular preaching service could be held by those who desire it. I have thought of writing to the Company concerning it.

I sent a wireless to my wife at noon, New York time, and thought I would get a reply by evening. Shortly after dinner, however, the weather changed, and by nine-thirty we were tossing about considerably. I went to bed and slept fairly well through the night. About day the sea became very rough and although I was on the E-Deck, nearest to the water, the roll was so great that my trunk and bags went sliding over the floor, backward and forward in a slipshod movement. Presently the other bed in the room slipped its moorings and joined the other things in a movement no longer slipshod, but dashing back and forth. The drawers to the bureau and wardrobe, and the chairs with my clothes and the papers on the desk followed suit. I lay still and wondered whether the bed I was in would do likewise, but it held fast. Out in the passage-way there was quite a smashing of china. I sent for my breakfast and the steward sent a tiny bellboy named "Longman," saying he could not come. I stayed in bed, the only safe place, all day, while the storm raged, and passed a fairly comfortable time with my books, papers and magazines—Review of Reviews, World's Work, British Weekly, Sherlock Holmes, Hardy's Stories.

December 13. The storm had abated somewhat, but we were walloping considerably in a rough sea. I decided to send for breakfast. The steward said he must work "on the muss" and would send the bellboy. But the boy did not come, so I got out and went to breakfast. Then I learned of the strength of the storm and the havoc it had wrought. On the D-Deck just above me is the dining saloon and in front of it a great reception room for coffee and cards and music and dancing. There are two sections with eight port-holes in each. These port-holes are filled in with heavy annealed glass one and one-fourth to one and one-half inches thick. On the southern side of the reception room (for the storm came from the southeast) fifteen of the sixteen of these heavy glass porthole windows were shattered by one great wave, which broke the glass and hurled it across the room for thirty-eight feet, and imbedded the glass in the woodwork of the partition wall, cutting severely several passengers who were sitting (or trying to sit) in the room after breakfast. The water poured in through these fifteen holes, about sixteen inches in diameter, and flooded the reception room, swept the chairs and safes and tables round and round, smashing them to pieces. The stewards came running with buckets and mops. The officers dashed in with carpenters and engineers, and to-day all that side of the reception room has fifteen "black eyes" and one good eye, the port holes being filled in with heavy blocks of wood bolted through with inch bolts. I went upstairs and there on the B-Deck another great wave had smashed in the glass windows of the restaurant, and had thrown practically all the china and handsome cut glass, in which the ship took great pride, to the floor, and it is now in the bottom of the sea. On the A-Deck the same wave had swept into the smoking room, picked up the great table in the center, dashed it against the opposite wall, broken the legs and splintered the top. In the lounge and writing room, the heavy chairs, sofas and tables were thrown into one great mass and dashed from one side of the room to the other, and in these rooms there was a continual sliding of furniture and passengers for hours.

There were many casualties of bruised and cut heads and bodies among the first class. But it was in the third class that the worst occurred. One of the passengers was thrown violently across the deck, and his leg broken in two places; another had similar experience with one break. Another passenger was standing in the doorway, where the water-tight compartment door closes, and the severe concussion of the waves broke the fastenings which held the door open, and it closed with such suddenness that he was caught and killed instantly.

It seems incredible that a liquid substance (?) like a wave should have such driving power, and especially that a wave should sweep ninety feet high and have sufficient force to smash things as it did. I have learned one great advantage of being on the deck closest to the water level. The waves may rush around the port-hole and cover it, but it is too close to give a chance to the "cracker of the whip" to lash you. I think from all accounts that I, staying in my berth, had the easiest time of anybody on board.

I discovered also that the wireless had taken only emergency messages on Monday, which explains why I had received no answer from my wireless sent my wife on Sunday morning.

The sight of the strength of the storm, and the unexpected cuts, bruises and deaths which accompanied it, testified anew to control of the great elemental forces of life and death by a great power unseen, but not unknown, for that power demands and compels attention to its lordship and its ultimate dominion over all the works of men's hands. The great liner did swing through the storm, but it was easy to see that even her splendid construction would not have availed had the tempest increased and developed power. For hours she lay "hove to," making no progress. The captain was of the opinion that another day of such a storm and the ship would have been battered to pieces and gone down.

The 107th Psalm is not obsolete. It was applicable when it was written to the frail barks of those days, and it is applicable to the mighty steel ships of to-day, and it is a marvelous description in simple graphic terms:

"They mount up to the heaven, they go down again to the depths: their soul is melted because of trouble.

"They reel to and fro, and stagger like a drunken man, and are at their wit's end.

"Then they cry unto the Lord in their trouble, and he bringeth them out of their distresses."

Men may try to get along without God, but every thoughtful person realizes that the power of God can easily overwhelm and destroy the mightiest works of man's hands. Who can estimate or who can resist the power of God? The earthquake, the volcano, or the storm? Men may sometimes call this Power "Nature" or "It," but in their terror and helplessness they call this Power "God."

December 14. My English tablemates finally became somewhat curious as to my views on Prohibition and made inquiries, which I answered as fully as possible. The next meal I brought them copies of the pamphlet just off the press, entitled, "Temperance Reform in America." The printer had printed on the title page my various offices in connection with Temperance, Anti-Saloon and World League work, all of which they had read. I said to them that it was evident that all prohibitionists were not fanatics, or they would have had "an explosion" during some of their discussions of American conditions, for they had very evidently been only in a few large cities where law-enforcement was at its worst, and that their ideas of the motives underlying Prohibition work were so distorted that it was evident they had never been thrown with any of the leaders who really shaped the policies of the work.

The attitude of the average Englishman is intensely personal. The Prohibitionist is the personification of meddling with the affairs of others, and is therefore, of necessity, a narrow meddlesome person.

I tried to make plain to these Englishmen that the final overpowering objection to the liquor traffic was its effect upon the life of the community; that the traffic had been abated because it was a public nuisance which society had a right to abate for its own self-protection.

They listened fairly well, but insisted that conditions in the United States were very much worse than in Great Britain, and that the time had not come in Great Britain when society was threatened to such an extent that the great mass of Englishmen should give up innocent pleasures because a small number could not practice temperance. They did not relish my reference to their bar-maids and women drinking, cheek-by-jowl, with men, but "it was not sufficiently widespread to produce alarm."

They winced considerably at the mention of the two billion dollars which a debt-burdened nation was spending on drink indulgence, while hundreds of thousands of willing workers were without employment. They hesitated at the thought of possible advantages from more efficient workmen which would come to America in trade competition, but their confidence in British ways was not easily shaken and they were certain that England would never adopt Prohibition.

The two at the left-hand never joined in the conversations, and they were held, almost altogether, in their absence. But the Englishman on my right had recognized the power behind the Prohibition Movement, and the decision of the Supreme Court that the liquor traffic had no legal rights except as granted by special license law and therefore could be abated by the law, with no claim for compensation because of damages, had opened his eyes to the fact of the difference between the English and the American viewpoint.

I do not think any converts were made, but there was not as much ignorance as before.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY AT DE RIDDER, LA.

The Rev. J. B. Williams, presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, called the laymen and preachers of the De Ridder section together to meet and agree to make good on the sixty per cent call on the Centenary collections. They did so. Our new elder resembles the Apostle Paul in being born out of due time. We all have such confidence in his character, diligence and preaching ability that we feel that he will do much to restore this sadly discredited office among us. Mr. S. S. Thomas, the Conference Centenary Treasurer, is a singular illustration of the wisdom of using laymen on a salaried basis in the larger Conference official staff. He is highly charged with facts, figures, information, sympathetic understanding of conditions, and helpful suggestions to laymen and preachers.

The Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the Alexandria District, is so clean-looking and modest withal, he captured us in a feeling address on the real greatness of our response to the noblest task our church has yet enterprised on a church-wide scale.

As a pleasant noon hour, the Rev. Harry W. Rickey entertained as his guests at the Jackson Cafe the following brethren: Clerical—Revs. Williams, Doss, R. M. Brown, McCormack, Henderson, McVey. Lay—Messrs. Thomas, Nichols, Nelson, Mashburn, Fuller, Smith, Porter, O'Neal, Cain. The Rev. P. M. Brown and Steward Nye Patterson rendered the pastor valued aid in several ways.

The pastor's son, Robert, had never seen a pine tree. En route to De Ridder he asked: "What kind of trees are those, father?" "Pine trees, my son." "Well," said Robert, of six summers, "what a good time we'll have gathering pineapples!"

On Wednesday night, after the prayer meeting, the chairman of the Board of Stewards, Mr. A. S. Hamilton, delivered an address on the "Life and Character of George Washington" that left us with a larger appreciation of the many-sided elements mixed up in the great founder of our republic.

Washington's Birthday at De Ridder was productive of good things for the upper half of the district.

We regretted the absence of Rev. Lastie Hoffpaulr, the Leesville pastor.

SUPPLYING MISSING ELEMENTS.

By Dr. Stonewall Anderson.

"Four thousand two hundred college professors caused the World War." Prof. Althearn no doubt refers in this statement to the professors of the German Empire. The causes of the collapse of the world which began in 1914 undoubtedly are to be found in the defective education of the peoples of so-called Christian lands, for let it not be forgotten that it is Christendom and not heathendom, which has collapsed. The glaring deficiencies of German education brought on the war, and the war precipitated the collapse. General Smoots has told us that it was not Wilson who failed at Paris, but humanity, the humanity of Christendom. The collapse is with us still.

What were the qualities which education lacked? What were the missing elements in that education which fashioned a great people in such wise that they became a menace to the whole world? Such was their devotion to education that illiteracy was and is unknown amongst them. What was the missing element in the education of the statesmanship of America in 1919 and 1920 that rendered it unequal to the task of leading the world into a new and larger life? What is it that is lacking in the statesmanship of the world today that renders it unequal to the task of recovering the world from the great collapse?

There are fewer illiterate people in the world to-day than ever before. There are more keen intellects to-day than ever before. Education has given more men a wider range of freedom and larger power and efficiency than ever before. The defect is found in the missing qualities of the education of the world.

Modern education has enabled civilization to carry forward its industrial, commercial, financial, and political interests at a tremendous rate and on a gigantic scale. The qualities which were absent from German education were the spirit and ideals of the Christian religion. The absence of the same qualities from so much of the culture of the statesmanship of the world renders it impotent in grappling with present world conditions. The forces which have created the leadership of the world have failed to make that leadership big enough, and broad enough, and strong enough, and unselfish enough of soul to do the things which need to be done. Civilization is suffering from arrested development of the soul. Progress in things material, and commercial, and political, has outrun progress in moral and spiritual things. We see men everywhere who are giants in business and politics, but in morals and in religion they are pygmies. We shall neither understand the debacle of 1914 nor the present world confusion without reference to the moral and spiritual vacuum created in Christian civilization by the absence of a genuine Christian culture of the souls of men.

What is the great need of the critical times in which we live? The following answer is given, not by a preacher or politician or college professor, but by one of America's greatest business men.

"The need of the hour is not more factories or materials, not more railroads or steamships, not more armies or more navies, but rather more education based on the plain teachings of Jesus. The prosperity of our country depends on the motives and purposes of the people. These motives and purposes are directed in the right course only through religion. Legislation, bounties, or force are of no avail in determining men's attitude toward life. Harmony at home and peace with the world will only be determined in the same way."

Religion, like everything else of value, must be taught; it is possible to get more religion in industry and business only through the development of Christian education and leadership. With the forces of evil backed by men and money, systematically organized to destroy, we must back with men and money all campaigns for Christian education.

We are willing to give our property and even our lives when our country calls in time of war. Yet the call of Christian education is to-day of even greater importance than was ever the call of the army and navy. I say this because we shall probably never live to see America attacked from without, but we may at any time see our best institutions attacked from within.

I am not offering Christian education as a protector of property, because nearly all the great progressive and liberal movements of history have been born in the hearts of Christian educators. I do, however, insist that the safety of our sons and daughters, as they go out on the streets this very night, is due to the influence of the preachers rather than to the influence of the policeman and law makers. Yes, the safety of our nation, including all groups, depends on Christian education. Furthermore, at no time in our history has it been more greatly needed.

We insure our homes and factories, our automobiles, and our businesses through mutual and stock insurance companies, but the same amount of money invested in Christian education would give far greater results. Besides, Christian education can insure what no corporation insures—namely, prosperity.

As the great life insurance companies are spending huge sums on doctors, scientific investigations, and district nurses to improve the health of the nation, so we business men should spend huge sums to develop those fundamental religious qualities of integrity, industry, faith, and service, which make for true prosperity. I repeat it, the need of the hour is—not more factories or materials, not more railroads or steamships, not more armies or navies—but rather more Christian education. This is not the time to reduce investments in schools and colleges. This is the time of all times to increase our subscriptions.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

"Backfire"—an expenditure of power with no results, except noise; a flash of fire, a puff of smoke and a "bust." It gets on the nerves, but not the driving gear—"id preterea nihil." Misdirected energy is so frequently seen in church and State that it has become common, and calls for little comment, much less condemnation. Preaching just for preaching's sake, holding conferences and getting up elaborate plans and programmes, and—and—oh, Lord, pardon our shortcomings, for they are surely short-"backfire," shouting to keep the courage up, laughing when there is nothing to laugh at, applauding when the crowd claps, calling some very strenuous and perspiratory effort a grand sermon, telling some silly woman her dress is dainty or becoming, when her apparel violates every rule of good taste and may even be immodest.

"Backfire," arguing for argument's sake, not caring which way the decision goes so long as the disputants get the exercise and sometimes "fuss" and fury. Mere professionalism, hollow, empty pretentiousness of learning and knowledge to which one never attained. Talking about Hebrew terms and Greek roots, when not knowing the difference between aforesaid and an ante-deluvian lizard's track. Consistency, indeed a jewel because so rare. But there is no jewel so precious with which to adorn and beautify character.

I have quite recently read a book on the modern man and Christianity. There is much said in this book about harmonizing Christianity with the thought and life of the modern man. Little, or at least not much, was said about the modern man adapting his life and character to Christianity. Revelation and authority are two of the basic principles of our holy religion. Christ, we believe, is the ultimate expression of God to the world of mankind for all time. And the things he taught—love, righteousness, faith in God as a Father, life in all its transcendent values and boundless reaches—these graces are eternal and are the assured hope of the world to-day as they were to the saints of the early church. Much is said about sociology nowadays, but when the ethics of Jesus touch and transform all life, social, civic, and spiritual, we will have the loftiest type of human relation—call it what you may. For, after all, the social and civic life of the people can only be reached and uplifted by the spiritual forces and powers that come from faith in him. "Yesterday, to-day and forever," they abide. Let us comfort ourselves with this assurance.

If "more ruin is wrought by want of thought than by want of feeling," surely right-thinking is a Christian grace of paramount value. We are told in the Epistle to the Hebrews to "consider one another, to provoke unto love and good works." Consideration is but another expression of one's right thought and consequent attitude toward others. Every soul has its sacred inclosure, the barracks of which must not be battered down. For there are treasures within which must be guarded and kept. Some worthless, inconsiderate ones think all of life one grand advertising page, and do not hesitate to display thereon in boldest type their blatant wares. Let me consider myself lest I also be tempted. First person, singular number, in the subjective case.

After all, consideration for others is love's supreme expression. It runs all along the line of service and sacrifice. Spring is coming, weaving with deft, busy fingers, garments of varied green for the silent, unrefreshing earth. I hear no noise of weaving, no flying shuttles, yet this reclashing goes on. If the spring came with a sudden burst of splendor at some time, men would think it a miracle. But the common miracle goes on unhindered.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The Christian Education Movement has commended itself to right-thinking American citizens. They see that the present generation must be lifted to loftier ideals if they are to be prepared for their day and generation. Dollars put now into our Christian institutions will be returned one hundredfold in Christian manhood and womanhood. It has been noted that the "churches have given one per cent of their sons and daughters to their colleges; and the colleges have given back ninety per cent of the church's ministers and missionaries."

All through history individuals have made larger contributions to colleges and universities than to any other cause. This is as true in Europe and England as it is in America. All of the great universities of Europe and England, like Oxford, Paris, Heidelberg, Cambridge, rest upon large gifts, while Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Chicago, and Stanford, as well as our strong colleges like Amherst, Dartmouth, Williams and Trinity in America, have big gifts as the chief basis of their support. Now is the time when we wish to appeal to our people of means to put new buildings on the campus of Mansfield and Centenary Colleges. We need these buildings right now.

Prompt payment of the Christian Education pledge will help us to solve some of the problems that confront us at this time. The time is short. The need is urgent. So we are asking that by March 15, every subscriber meet his first payment if possible.

ALBERT S. LUTZ,
Conference Secretary of Education.

THE GOAL FOR MARCH.

That every church go to at least 60 per cent paid on its Centenary pledge. In some cases a congregation can go well beyond that standard; and it is a fact that 80 per cent is now due. But do not be satisfied to let your church fall below the 60 per cent standard—this the minimum for the entire church. It is our opportunity to prove that Southern Methodists can do big things even when "hard times" are with us—that they are ready to make real sacrifices that the work of the Kingdom go forward.

AMOUNT PER MEMBER.

The Centenary pledge of $37,000,000 represented a per member pledge of approximately $16.50 for five years, or $3.30 per member a year. This, certainly, is not big giving for world evangelization, but it represents a distinct advance over any previous giving by our church. Not every Conference came to this average in its pledge, these ranging from an average of $8.37 to $25.64 per member for five years, but with only one Conference below $13.00 per member. The Conferences pledging the largest amount per member, in the order named, are: South Carolina; Pacific; Los Angeles; South Georgia, and New Mexico.

If we take the average for the entire church there is now past due per member $9.90, this for three years. The amount paid is $5.10 per member for three years—or less than $2.00 per member a year. This does not look as though we have impoverished the church by Centenary giving. Nor is it a record that a great church can face and say that it has reached the limit of its giving for world evangelization.

We must do better than this or the missionary program of our church be surrendered. Even in times such as these we can do better than this. Perhaps the fairest test to apply to the Conference is the per member payment to the Centenary, and this record is here given. And keep in mind that the following shows payments per member for three years. See how your Conference stands. Do your part in bringing it to a better showing.

A PROGRAM OF EVANGELISM FOR THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The Committee on Evangelism for the Louisiana Conference, at its session during the Annual Conference and at a later meeting at Alexandria, has considered carefully the task of statewide evangelism that faces and challenges our Conference. We rejoice in the success of the efforts that resulted in a net gain of more than two thousand in our membership last year, but we realize that there are many communities that we are not adequately reaching with the evangelistic message which is our heritage from the fathers. The committee is handicapped by not having a man who can give his whole time to the work of evangelism in our territory, not only leading in evangelistic campaigns, but organizing a thoroughgoing plan of evangelistic effort for our entire territory. We hope that the way may be opened in the near future to appoint such a leader. In the meantime, the committee is trying to meet the need as fully as possible. Under our present conditions, the means of planning our evangelistic work is through the presiding elder's district as a unit. We are assured of the hearty co-operation of each of the presiding elders in such organization.

It is suggested that in each district a committee on evangelism, not a mere paper committee, but one that will really face the task, be appointed as early as possible. We suggest that this committee secure the promise of pastors and as many laymen as possible, to unite in daily prayer for a real revival of the Lord's work in their district.

This committee will make special effort to find all the neglected communities—communities which are not in position to arrange for evangelistic help for themselves—and also to secure the promise of pastors throughout the district to give a week or more of service to help in such communities, and arrange thus for holding meetings where most needed. The district committee would also help pastors to secure the service of other pastors in meetings. At least two districts, possibly others, have already organized in this way, and are planning to employ in each district a choir leader to help in these meetings constantly throughout the season. This plan was tried very successfully in the Alexandria District last year, where Rev. D. B. Boddie, as chairman of the committee, did excellent service in organizing a district-wide campaign of evangelism. They are planning to do similar work this year and the Shreveport District committee has already been appointed and is working along similar lines.

It is assumed that pastors of well established churches will secure such assistance as they think best, and that they will follow the wise plans of thoroughgoing and definite effort, which are suggested by the general Committee on Evangelism.

If these plans are fully carried out, and the entire territory of our State is covered by evangelistic effort, there is no reason why we should not report at our next Conference five thousand additions on profession of faith, instead of thirty-five hundred as last year. May we not set that number as a minimum goal of our efforts?

PASTORS AND CENTENARY TREASURERS, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Our Group Meetings in the interest of "Church-wide Collection Week" for bringing the Centenary collections up to date have been held in the Meridian, Vicksburg, Jackson, and Hattiesburg Districts, with splendid results.

Please have the Centenary treasurers to make up the statement showing the standing of each subscriber, also get your collecting committee ready. Have the "Minute Men" speak before all the services of the church. Have announcement made at each church where the "World Sunday speakers" are to conduct the service, so that everything may be ready for World Sunday, March 26.

Let us all work together to make this a "Great Day" in Methodist history by collecting the balance due on the Centenary pledges in each church from each one who pledged. Much depends upon our faithfulness. May each one do his best.

Yours for service,
W. D. HAWKINS,
Conference Missionary Secretary.

SALESMEN WANTED—To sell auto specialties of merit. Can prove worth within five minutes. State men make big money appointing county agents, county agents make big money. Bird-Liberty Brass Works, 542 W. Jackson, Chicago, Illinois.

SUGGESTED PLANS FOR SPECIAL CENTENARY EFFORT.

1. In every congregation let there be a lay organization of speakers. Minute men to be used in the station charges for each Sunday in March. The laymen used to fill unoccupied pulpits to be known as World Sunday Speakers. (Material for speakers can be secured from J. M. Way, Centenary Building, Nashville, Tennessee.)

2. Pastors to keep before their people the Centenary plans and needs; the achievements until now and the pressing need for payments on Centenary pledges to protect the good name of the church and to make good the appropriations to home and foreign fields.

3. World Sunday, March 26, the day on which our people are to make Centenary payments. This to be the program in every congregation of Southern Methodism.

4. During the week following World Sunday the Centenary Treasurer, with the help of the Collection Committee, to make a personal appeal for payment on Centenary pledges. Reports to be made daily, through pastor, to the presiding elder to the Conference Missionary Secretary.

This plan was adopted by the Memphis meeting of bishops, presiding elders, Conference Secretaries, and others. If worked in every congregation it will save the Centenary program and will guarantee that our church will keep faith with its pledges. Let the whole church in this emergency, give its support and its best effort.

WHO GIVES CHARITABLE FUNDS?

The pastor of one of our New York State churches was recently trading in a store and made some reference to the church. To this allusion the woman waiting upon him made some sneering remark about the church. Anxious to know her reason for the attitude, he questioned her as to why she felt that way. Her reply was that the church is such a selfish organization; it is always asking for something but never does anything for anybody. The pastor told her that probably ninety per cent of all the money contributed by the city for war relief work came out of the churches. The treasurer of the war chest, who had handled all the funds contributed by the city, was called on the telephone in her presence and asked if he could tell what percentage was contributed by the members of the churches. He replied that he had just had occasion to look that matter up and found that ninety-seven per cent of the entire amount came from members of the churches.

Here it is in a nutshell. Ninety-seven per cent contributed by church members, but done in such a way that the church gets no credit, and people outside say, "The church never does anything."

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Mississippi Conference Church Extension.

In the issue of February 16 there was an announcement from the Chairman, Rev. W. M. Williams, of the Mississippi Conference Church Extension Board, that the Executive Committee of this Board would meet in Capitol Street Church, Jackson, at 2 p.m., March 14.

It behooves every church that expects to make application for aid from the General Board this year to have your applications filled out in due form, and sent to me before that date. Owing to the short time between our meeting and that of the General Board, there will not be time for these applications to be returned to any pastor for additional signature, or information, and reach the General Office in time to be placed on the calendar for consideration at its annual session. Don't expect help unless you are on time with your application.

Yours sincerely,
L. E. ALFORD, Secretary.

JUST A LITTLE BOY.

There is a boy in our town
(And he is wondrous wise),
Who when the rain comes pouring down
And clouds o'erspread the skies,
Says, "I'll just smile the best I can,
No matter how it pours;
And we'll have sunshine in the house
If it does rain out of doors."

When naughty words swarm through his brain
And clamor to be said,
He shuts his teeth together tight
And says, "I'll kill you dead,
Unless you will be sweet and kind,
And good and full of fun;
You can't come out until you are—
No, not a single one!"

He thinks when he's a grown-up man
With wise and sober face,
He'll do some wondrous deed to make
This earth a brighter place;
But nothing in this whole world
Can give more lasting joy,
Or make more solid sunshine,
Than just a little boy.

ROSAMOND SEES HERSELF.

"Ain't she a sight?" giggled Rosamond Lyon, nudging Dolly Paterick, who sat beside her on the street car.

"Sh-h," cautioned kind little Dolly. "I'm afraid she heard you, Rose."

Rosamond wiggled her plump shoulders. "Don't do you any harm to know how you look to other folks," she said. "If she knew how she looks, she's pull that hat further down on her head and not look such a guy."

Old Miss Belinda Maybrick's face flushed painfully. She had heard the thoughtless speech. Presently she put up her thin, wrinkled hand and gave a stealthy jerk to the shabby hat which was perched so unfashionably on her scant topknot of hair.

"Washington Street!" called the conductor, and the two little girls jumped up to join the crowd getting off. They were bound for a store to buy color boxes, but just this side there was an electric supply shop with windows full of lamps and irons and newfangled toasters.

"O, look at that cute little electric iron!" cried Dolly, catching Rosamond's arm. "Stop just a minute!"

An odd sound made her look around. Rosamond was staring wide-eyed at her reflection in the mirror which formed the back of the show window.

"Dolly!" she gasped. "How awful I look! Am I as fat and dumpy as that," Dolly, a slender wisp of a child, gazed in her turn, feeling a secret thrill of satisfaction at her own unusually robust look. But Rosamond did indeed present a queer, unattractive appearance. Her face looked as broad as it was long, her neck seemed ridiculously short, and her waist as thick as a meal bag tied in the middle.

She ran desperately over to the other window How clumsy her feet looked!

"O, dear!" she wailed. "I didn't know I looked like that!"

"I thought you said it didn't matter how we looked to other people," Dolly reminded her, suddenly remembering Miss Belinda's face. "You said it did people good to know—"

Rosamond's eyes filled with tears. "I didn't know how it felt," she said. "I know I'm fat, but I didn't know—"

A step backward and her angle of vision was altered, and with a glad scream she seized Dolly. "O, Dolly! It's a curved glass—don't you see I'm gettin' squarer an' squarer the farther away I get. O, I don't look that way to other people, after all!"

With intense amusement the children stood and watched others come within the line of the convex mirrors and pass out again, and as they went on at last Rosamond said soberly: "Catch me ever laughing at people's looks any more, Dolly. I don't want them to feel as I did when I saw myself just now!"—Janet Allan Bryan, in Junior Life.

FISHING THROUGH THE ICE.

By Jean McIntyre.

Winter fishing is great sport, Have you ever tried it, boys?

The French Canadian boys enjoy it. They go out on Lake Champlain in twos and threes, carrying a small hut on a sleigh, and all the things they need for a few days' camping on the ice.

A hole two or three feet square is cut in the ice and the hut is set over it. An opening has already been made in the floor of the hut with a board which may be fastened down when not required; and when the weather is stormy or too cold to be outside, they sit comfortably by the warm stove fishing through the floor.

Each hut has a stove, a couple of stools, a bunk built against the wall, and sometimes a shelf which does duty as a table. There is one small window and a stove-pipe hole in the roof. Then there may be a nail or two, on which to hang a coat or cap. These, with frying pan and coffee-pot, constitute the whole furnishing of the hut. Not many comforts, you see; but what does a boy want with luxuries on a fishing trip?

The first thing in the morning the boy comes ashore carrying his hatchet and cuts a few logs for the fire, which are easily dragged across the ice and piled outside. Then he can begin the work of the day. The fishing is done at a depth of twenty or thirty feet, with a fine line and small hook. Sometimes he will use a short stick about a foot in length for a fishing pole. It is mostly smelt and perch they catch, but occasionally a pike or pickerel is caught.

There is the same uncertainty about ice fishing that there is in the summer-time. Some days the fish bite well, and the fisherman returns to shore with a large load, which is soon disposed of in the towns along the lake. He gets fair prices, too, so the men and boys feel well rewarded for their work, which is so often mere play, particularly to the boys, although a great many men depend upon this fishing for their livelihood.

The season is long and the ice always safe for a horse to be driven over it. In fine weather the fishing is done outside the huts, and groups may be seen dotting the lake, with here and there a horse and sleigh gliding along, making a stirring outdoor picture.

Although the huts are well banked up with snow to keep them warm, when a blizzard comes the fishermen lock the doors and come ashore until the weather moderates.—Selected.

FREEDOM.

The brute is free from the binding force of moral law; the more slave he. The man is free because he is bound. He is free to control his appetites by bringing them under obedience to the law. This is the only freedom worthy the name. Nobody does as he pleases but he who pleases to do right. He who, like the animals, follows impulse does a thousand things which by no means please him after they are done. He is in leading strings.

The young and the superficial think that to be free from rules means to do the things which the rules forbid. On the contrary, a man may be quite as free in obeying laws as in disregarding them.

God made us to be free. How is it that, free-born sons of God, we are ready to sell ourselves daily for so small a price? We have been Satan's bondservants, and the habits of our servitude are strong upon us. When shall we stand fast in the liberty with which Christ has made us free?—Mary Emily Case.

"Yes."

"Well, t-t-that's your peculiarity. Most p-p-people use a s-s-spoon."—Baptist Boys and Girls.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Lab l on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Rev. T. J. Hopper, of Kossuth, Miss., finds many things that encourage him in his work. He speaks very highly of the work of his predecessor, and expresses appreciation of the fine people he serves.

Rev. R. I. Coilins, of Shannon, Miss., informs us of the recent death of one of his fine iaymen—Dr. T. J. Campbell, a true and ioyai Christian. The church at Shannon has suffered a great loss in his going away.

Rev. Walter H. Moore has heen eiected to the presidency of Granbery Coliege, Juiz de Fora, Brazii. Dr. Moore is a graduate of Kentucky Wesieyan College, and is especially gifted as a ieader of young men.

We iearn from the Big Brother that the second half of April is to he given to evangelistic services in the First Methodist Church, Greenviile, Miss., with Dr. S. W. Walker, of Sanford, Fia., doing the preaching.

Bad weather and other things have prevented the beginning of the work of repairing and improving our church at Coahoma, Miss., Rev. Dei Longgrear, pastor, hut the work wiii he undertaken as soon as possihle.

We thank Rev. D. B. Boddie for sending us the program of the "Efficiency Week" services, held at Gienmora, La., this week. The program is spiendidiy arranged, and we feel sure that good wiii foiiow its presentation.

From a personal note from a friend at Biioxi, Miss., we learn that Methodism is prosperous on the Gulf Coast, Rev. M. B. Sharbrough at Biloxi, and Rev. W. L. Linfieid at Gulfport, hoth being in great favor with their people.

Rev. W. R. Lott, our pastor at Holiy Springs, Miss., announces that he wiii hegin a meeting on March 12, with Rev. L. J. Miiler, one of our general evangeiists, to do the preaching, and Mr. D. Ward Milam to lead the singing.

From a personal letter from a friend, we learn that Methodism in Baton Rouge, La., is in a prosperous condition. Dr. Chas. W. Crisler is doing fine work at First Church, and Rev. C. C. Miiier, at Keener Memorial, has one of the livest churches in the Conference.

Bishop W. F. McMurry and Dr. O. E. Goddard spent iast Friday in New Orleans in connection with the work of city missions. Bishop McMurry delivered a stirring address at a Centenary group meeting held at Rayne Memorial Church on Friday evening.

Dr. Will W. Alexander, executive director of the Commission on Interracial Co-operation in the Southern States, has been appointed secretary of the new Commission on the Church and Race Relations of the Federai Counciі of the Churches of Christ in America.

Rev. Ira F. Hawkins, presiding elder of tthe Roanoke District, North Alahama Conference, is this week visiting his mother and other relatives in Hattieshurg, Miss. On Sunday, March 12, he will preach at Newton, Miss., where his brother, Rev. H. G. Hawkins, is pastor.

Mr. Stephen S. Thomas, Louisiana Conference Centenary secretary-treasurer, is husiiy engaged in holding Centenary group meetings throughout the Conference. He reports much interest in the movement to bring the payment of Centenary pledges up to date.

We learn through Brother F. A. Howeii, of Durant, Miss., that Rev. George Tucker, of Jackson, Tenn., began a meeting recently at Durant. At the time Brother Howell wrote, the interest in the meeting was great, and the outlook for a gracious revivai was most encouraging.

Hon. C. L. Bates, whose articles on the Constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, have been appearing in the Advocate, has received requests from some of the highest officials of the church to put the series in permanent form. We trust he wiii comply with these requests.

We regret to iearn that Rev. R. H. Harper, pastor of the First Methodist Church, this city, is suffering from an attack of influenza. His pulpit was fiiled iast Sunday evening hy Rev. Eilis Smith, pastor of the Carrollton Avenue Church, the editor of the Advocate preaching at Carroiiton Avenue.

Under date of February 28, we received a note from the daughter of Rev. W. J. Porter, our pastor at Coiumbia, La., informing us that her father was very iii with pneumonia, and asking the brethren of the Conference and friends to pray for him. We are sure this request will be heeded by ail those who read these words.

Rev. W. B. Alsworth, our pastor at Utica, Miss., had the misfortune recentiy to have his arm broken by the kick of a refractory Ford. The bones of the arms were shattered and it wiii be several months before the injury is healed. We sympathize with Brother Aisworth in his sufferings.

Dr. Charies D. Bulia, presiding eider of the San Francisco District, Pacific Conference, will edit the Daily Christian Advocate at the General Conference in May. Dr. Bulia was editor of the Daiiy at Okiahoma City in 1914, and at Atlanta in 1918, and knows how to get aiong without sieep for a month.

Rev. M. L. McCormick is pastor of the Roxie charge, Mississippi Conference. He was cordiaiiy received by the good people of his charge, being given many tokens of appreciation. The salary has heen increased $300 over last year. Revivai meetings have been pianned for aii his churches, and he is iooking forward to a fine year's work.

A note from Rev. J. W. Pearson, our pastor at Mansfieid, La., gives a most encouraging account of the work of the church in that splendid iittie city. The congregations are iarge, and new members are heing received at aimost every service. The general interest in aii departments of the work indicates a fruitfui year.

A note from his sister, Mrs. H. S. Foote, of Utica, Miss., brings to the Advocate the sad news of the death of Rev. G. W. Hively, rormerly a resident of Copiah County, Miss., at his home near Bon Aqua, Tenn., of typhoid-pneumonia, after a brief iiiness. We extend sincere sympathy to the sorrowing family and friends of the deceased.

Rev. J. B. Randolph, presiding eider of the Corinth District, North Mississippi Conference, writes: "We had two group meetings iast week in the interest of the Centenary. Brothers Jaco and Burgin were the principal speakers, and they did well. One meeting was held at Corinth and one at New Albany. We must pay our piedges."

Brother Jno. P. Rembert, of Longview, Texas, in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, states that he enjoys the articles hy Rev. T. W. Adams, and that he, too, was born in February—the same month as Brother Adams. He says, however, that he is still young—eats whatever he wants and does as much work as he ever did. Blessings upon the young man!

The quarterly conference of First Church, Laurel, Miss., held on February 24, was an interesting and profitable occasion. In addition to the pastor and presiding elder, seventeen stewards and two trustees were present. Every department of the church reported progress. Rev. J. A. Moore, the presiding elder, preached an unusually impressive sermon on Sunday morning.

The Federal Council's Commission on Relations with Religious Bodies in Europe desires to be advised of the names of ministers who are planning to visit Europe during the present year. Those who are going are requested to communicate with Bishop James Cannon, Jr., 1016 South 28th street, Birmingham, Ala., or Rev. Chas. S. MacFarland, 105 East 22d Street, New York City.

Rev. G. P. Fikes, who took the supernumerary relation at the recent session of the North Arkansas Conference on account of ill-health, has recovered his health and is now pastor at Elaine, Ark., in the Helena District, a splendid appointment made vacant not long ago by the sudden death of Rev. E. M. Kelsey. Brother Fikes has many friends in Mississippi, having been born and reared in that State.

At the first quarterly conference of our West End Church, Laurel, Miss., Rev. John W. Ramsey, pastor, the reports showed progress along all lines. The pastor's salary is paid to date, an indebtedness made on the church last year is being liquidated, a Woman's Missionary Society of 24 members has been organized, 27 members havo been added to the church, and attendance upon all the services is large and steadily growing.

A note from Dr. R. H. Wynn, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, Louisiana Conference, informs us that Rev. J. G. Sloane, pastor of the Pelican charge, has been compelled, under advice of his physician, to give up his work for the remainder of the year. His address will be 1816 Magnolia St., Shreveport. He will apprcciate the prayers and sympathy of all the brethren. His charge will be supplied by Rev. S. S. Holladay.

It is with sorrow that we learn of the death of Rev. J. M. Massey, on Thursday morning, Feb. 23. He was for many years a member of the North Mississippi Conference, but for several years past he held membership in the Mississippi Conference, being a superannuate. He was about 75 years of age at his death. We extend sincere sympathy to the sorrowing family. We shall expect a suitable memoir for publication in due time.

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America has issued a statement calling attention to an error in its recent bulletin concerning religious statistics of the United States. The error was in connection with the membership of the Unitarian churches, the correct figures showing a gain instead of a loss. In the case of the Salvation Army, also, an error in addition at its own headquarters resulted in crediting it with 10,000 fewer members than its full strength.

A note from Rev. C. C. Miller, Baton Rouge, La., informs us that Rev. J. E. Craig, a local preacher in the Baton Rouge District, died at his home in East Baton Rouge Parish on Saturday morning, February 25. He was at one time a member of the Louisiana Conference. He was a good man and true, faithful and courageous. He was buried from the Black Water Church on Sunday following the regular preaching services. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing loved ones.

Rev. D. W. Babb, pastor of the Prairie and Strongs charge, North Mississippi Conference, reports the completion at Strongs of one of the most substantial and well-equipped churches he has ever seen in the country. There are five Sunday school rooms, and an auditorium that is perfect in acoustic properties. The building cost $6500, and it is all paid for. The church at Prairie is also being repaired. A spirit of harmony and co-operation prevails in the charge, and a prosperous year is in prospect.

The first Standard District Training School in the Louisiana Conference will be held at First Church, New Orleans, April 2-8. Courses will be offered as follows: "Life and Letters of Paul," by Dr. Thos. Carter; "The Pupil," by Prof. C. A. Bowen; "Marks of a World Christian," teacher to be supplied; "Methods for Primary Teachers," by Mrs. W. M. Walker; "The Junior Worker and Work," by Mrs. W. F. Carn; "The Religious Education of Adolescents," by Rev. E. R. Stanford; "The Organization and Administration of the Sunday School," by Mr. C. M. Dannelly. This corps of teachers is one of the best that can be secured, and a most successful school is in prospect.

In addition to the Centenary group meetings mentioned in last week's Advocate in which the editor participated, the following were attended by him also: Crawford Street, Vicksburg; Fayette; Galloway Memorial, Jackson; Yazoo City. The interest that had been manifested by preachers and laymen at the first continued throughout all the meetings The presiding elders of the Vicksburg and the Jackson Districts, Rev. J. R. Jones and Rev. M. L. Burton, entered enthusiastically into the work, and the pastors of the churches where the meetings were held — Rev. Robt. Selby, Rev. C. F. Emery, Rev. E. K. Means, Rev. W. J. Ferguson—assisted by the good ladies of their charges. had perfected delightful arrangements for the entertainment of the visitors. There is every reason to believe that the campaign for bringing up to date the unpaid Centenary pledges in the Mississippi Conference will be successful. The editor will this week attend meetings at Brookhaven and at McComb.

CENTENARY LITERATURE.

The many calls for Centenary literature—these from preachers and laymen—give proof of the interest of our people in this great enterprise of the church. There appears to be a reaction from the "state of mind" which protested against too much literature. The Publicity Department wishes to supply, in so far as is possible, all literature requested by pastors and laymen. Kindly make request to John S. Chadwick, Secretary, Centenary Building, Nashville, Tennessee.

SCALING THE CITY OF THE MIGHTY.

By Rev. C. A. S. Dwight, Ph. D.

"A wise man," says Solomon, "scaleth the city of the mighty, and casteth down the strength of the confidence thereof." It takes a wise man to do that! Most people would say that the strong man takes the city. Not at all, unless his vigor be directed by wit or wisdom.

There is strength in strategy. It was so in ancient warfare, when some Archimedes perhaps turned from his mathematical studies to invent a new kind of storming-engine or catapult, and it is so now in respect to the myriad activities of modern life.

Here is a proposition carrying millions, or a political problem regarded as insoluble, or an international difficulty so complicated that few can even understand where the trouble is, when along comes a modern Solon or Solomon who, by his clearness of mind, his extraordinary astuteness, or his fertility of invention, simply scales the city of the mighty, and is hailed by mankind as a Daniel come to judgment.

There are many smaller tasks or problems which will confront us all in turn, but which, if we keep our wits about us, pray over them, "bide a bit" in meditation, and maintain self-control, we can surmount with sureness, even as the old-time assailant leaped from some wooden tower to the walls of a Tyre, Jerusalem, or Antioch. The world may often defy our strength, but it cannot dodge our wit. This is true both in religious and in secular matters. In every church and community are found a few wise people who serve as the riddle-solvers and the wall-scalers of the neighborhood, so proving themselves to be the real moral leaders of their kind.

It is our business to make constant progress in the path of duty, and if at times we come up against what seems an interminable Great Wall of China, where it is impossible to go around, we must simply seek for the divine wisdom which will carry us over. Look around then for some "city of the mighty" which God means you to take, and then, by grace of the wisdom that He gives you, get on the other side of the obstacle, and leave it behind you as a mere memory on the march to the Millennium!—Selected.

THE EVERLASTING YEA.

There is in man a higher than love of happiness: he can do without happiness, and instead thereof find blessedness! Was it not to preach forth this same higher that sages and martyrs, the poet and the priest, in all times, have spoken and suffered, bearing testimony, through life and through death, of the Godlike that is in man, and how in the Godlike only is strength and freedom? Which God-inspired doctrine art thou also honored to be taught? O Heavens! and broken with manifold merciful afflictions, even till thou become contrite and learn it! Oh, thank thy destiny for these; thankfully bear what yet remain—thou hast need of them: the self in thee needed to be annihilated. By benignant fever-paraoxysms is life rooting out the deep-seated chronic disease, and triumphs over death. On the roaring billows of time thou art not engulfed, but borne aloft into the azure of eternity. Love not pleasure: love God. This is the everlasting yea, wherein all contradiction is solved—wherein whoso walks and works it is well with him.—Carlyle.

Obituaries

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

On February 8, the angel of death visited the bome of Brother and Sister J. H. Green, and took from their mldst tbeir lltte infant son, JOHN THOMPSON GREEN, to blossom in the courts of God. The little babe that brought such joy and gladness for a little while on earth is safe in the arms of Jesus, and will never have to battle with the storms of life, but safe and secure, will wait on eternity's shore until we, too, shall cross the harbor bar and meet again. Weep not, dear loved ones, because thy little one has escaped the toils and struggles of life on earth. God's ways are best, and he will reveal his purposes to us in his own good time. Though earth has lost its greatest treasure our eternal home is richer and nearer and dearer. A few more days on earth, and we shall meet again on eternity's shore, where God shall wipe all tears away, and sorrow and sighing shall be no more. The spirit of God comfort you in this sad hour as only He can comfort.

Their pastor, A. T. LONG.

MRS. M. E. ABBEY was born in Erie County, Penn., and died near Ellisville, Miss., on February 16, 1922, aged 85 years and 11 months. She had lived in Mississippi 42 years, 21 years of which were spent in Ellisville and vicinity. She was a devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. She was fond of religious literature, and especially enjoyed her church paper. The visits of her pastor were always appreciated. On account of her age and ill-health, she was denied for several years the privilege of attending the services of her church, but she exemplified in her daily life the Christian virtues that recommended her religion to her neighbors and the more intimate members of her household. When the time came for her departure she was ready to go and peacefully fell asleep in Jesus, her Savior. Her body was tenderly laid away in the Bynum cemetery at Ellisville to await the resurrection of the dead. Her spirit is with him who said, "I am the resurrection and the life." She is survived by her devoted husband, C. A. Abbey, two sons, A. L. and M. C. Abbey, of Ellisville, Miss., and one daughter, Mrs. S. A. Creech, of Oklahoma. May they all follow her as she followed Christ!

L. CARLEY.

MRS. M. E. JAMES, widow of Mr. Peter James, of Bee Lake and Yazoo City, died at her home in Jackson, January 26, in the 86th year of her age, and was buried in Yazoo City, January 27. Few laymen were better known to the preachers of the Mississippi Conference than Peter James, and few homes have entertained more preachers than theirs, where Mrs. James always made them to feel that her home was their home. Mrs. James was a gentle, sweet-spirited, lovable woman, who continued to make friends to the end of her long and useful life. She had known many of the joys and much of the sorrows of life. She was first married to Mr. Gordon, of Yazoo County. By this union there were two sons. After the death of Mr. Gordon, she was married to Mr. Peter James. To them were born five children, two daughters, who died in infancy, and three sons. With the passing away of her husband, her sorrows came fast and heavy, for she was soon called to give up four of her sons. Only one of her children, T. W. James, of Memphis, survives, who, with several grandchildren, mourns the passing away of this good woman. The Psalmist says: "With long life will I satisfy him and show him my salvation." Surely this can be said of her.

RESOLUTIONS.

The death of MRS. DOLLIE DICKERSON COVINGTON occurred in her home at Shrock, Miss., December 13, 1921. She was born November 6, 1869. Mrs. Covington, having been reared from infancy in the Shrock community, was loved by all. She joined the Methodist Church in early life and from that time until her death she was an active worker in all phases of church work. She gave to it the best of her Christian influence. Words are inadequate to express our grief over this untimely death, but in the midst of our sorrow at the loss of a dear friend and the deep sympathy we feel for the bereaved family, we can but feel comforted when we think of the earthly life of this dear woman, a beautiful Christian character from her childhood, ever wielding an influence for good. Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we as members of the Woman's Missionary Society deeply deplore the death of Mrs. Covington, and feel that in her passing away the Society has lost a faithful and conscientious member.

2. That we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy.

Signed by: Mrs. E. L. Hearst, Mrs. W. F. Shrock, Miss Mary Thomas, Committee.

RESOLUTIONS.

Our efficient co-worker, our wise counsellor, our trusted friend, MRS. ALBERT GLENN, of Brooksville, Miss., has passed from her earthly home into the "city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God."

The steadfastness of her faith, the loyalty of her love, the broadness of her service, reaching far into unobtrusive places, oftenest beyond the ken of others, make her memory a blessed inspiration to the members of the Woman's Missonary Socety of the Methodst Church. Whereas, her "mansion in the Father's House" was ready for occupancy and she has gone thither; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we are grateful that the beautiful life of this noble woman was planted in our midst here to bear the fruits that attest her strengtb of character, her sweetness of nature, her Christlikeness of spirit.

2. That we shall greatly miss her in all the varied activities of our church life, and especially in this organization of which she was an officer.

3. That to the family, whose center she was, we express our appreciation of their rich heritage in her, and extend to them our deepest sympathy in this, their hour of grief, yet knowing "they sorrow not even as others that have no hope," for "now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept," "afterward, they that are Christ's at his coming."

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, the Missionary Bulletin, The Brooksville News, the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and be spread upon the minutes of the Woman's Missionary Society.

Signed by: Mrs. Lem R. Long, Mrs. B. M. Bragg, Mrs. George L. Crymes.

FRECKLES

March Brings Out Unsightly Spots. How to Remove Easily.

The woman with tender skin dreads March because it is likely to cover her face with ugly freckles. No matter how thick her veil, the sun and winds have a strong tendency to make her freckle.
Fortunately for her peace of mind, Othine—double strength, makes it possible for even those most susceptible to freckles to keep their skin clear and white. No matter how stubborn a case of freckles you have, the double strength Othine should remove them.
Get an ounce from your druggist and banish the freckles. Money back if it fails.

Recipe For Gray Hair

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.—Adv.

Neutralizes Uric Acid!

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. In order to be cured of rheumatism it is necessary to neutralize this acid. RENWAR is a scientific combination of salts prepared to neutralize the uric acid in the blood. There is nothing in Renwar to injure the stomach or affect the heart. It acts solely upon uric acid, completely eliminating it from the blood and thereby relieving your rheumatism. It is harmless but effective. Positively guaranteed by money-back offer. It is a godsend to sufferers from rheumatism. Renwar also corrects constipation. Mr. J. M. Willis of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says, "I must say that Renwar far surpassed my expectations, for it gave me almost immediate relief; too much can not be spoken in behalf of 'Renwar' for rheumatism." Sold by druggists, price 50 cents, or by mail from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.

Every Married Couple

and all who contemplate carriage should own a complete book of life, such as the "Medical Adviser." It unfolds the secrets of married happiness, so often revealed too late. Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The 25th and 26th of March were spent on the Wesson charge. The stereopticon lecture was given Saturday. Sunday was a full day. In spite of the rain, we had good services at Wesson and Beauregard. The Wesson school is more than a "progressive" school on the "new standard." The Beauregard school needs much. They have loyal and faithful workers. They put in graded work for the Beginners, and a Cradle Roll. I feel sure there is a great future for this charge.

Monday we went to the Agricultural High School. There we found a large and unusually promising student body, fine equipment, and a strong faculty. The Wesson church not only needs the prayers of the church, but financial aid as well. The responsibility of meeting the religious needs of this large student body is great. May this loyal band of workers receive the encouragement they so richly deserve.

Biloxi has elected a Board of Managers to plan for a Standard Training School. Last Sunday they had 397 present. They are striving for 500 by Easter. They have made wonderful progress. They grade "Progressive" and better on "B" schedule.

Rev. M. L. Burton, P. E. of the Jackson District, has put on an attendance contest. He is striving to have as many people present Easter Sunday as the schools and churches have enrolled, the school making the highest per cent being the winner. I trust we shall have many schools out of the Jackson District to enter this contest.

The Gulfport school stands at the head of the list with 697 present. They are striving for 1000 Easter. This would be 120 per cent for them.

No school can be a standard school if it fails to have an official representative at the District Institute, with a written report.

Seashore District Institute, Poplarville, April 19, at 2:30 p.m.; Newton District Institute, Forest, April 26, 9:30 a.m.

Pray for the work and workers.

Yours in Him.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Have you seen a copy of the Sunday School Messenger, issued by the Sunday School Board of the North Mississippi Conference? Read it and pass it on to some other teacher or friend of the children. If your school is doing anything worth printing, tell it to us so we can give it to others to cheer them on the way.

Brother Superintendent, Brother Preacher, do not wait to the last minute to order your Sunday School Day Programs. It is not good for you to have some one to write to you and remind you, is it? If you order through your Field Secretary, you will not have to pay for them, but if you order from the Publishing House the bill will be sent to you. Two programs will be issued, one for small schools and the other will be more elaborate. Indicate the one you want, No. 1 or No. 2. Order as many as you need; but no more. In a school of one hundred, it seems to me that 50 programs would be sufficient for all to take part.

Report blanks have been sent to 125 Intermediate and Senior Wesley Bible classes, with a stamped envelope for an immediate reply. This report will show the class what it is doing for itself and for others. These reports will be used to stimulate other classes to organize and encourage the class to do greater things. You ask what ought a class do? The one supreme task we all have to do is to reach the thousands who are not in the Sunday school. We have got to get them in before we can do anything for them. When we get in church members we want to feed their souls and train them to bring in the unsaved for the purpose of winning them to the Savior. The one supreme qualification every teacher needs is a passion for souls. When the teacher's heart is aflame, others will be set on fire. Get rid of the ice and kindle a flame of sacred love for the lost.

What is our object in holding a Wesley Bible Class Federation in Grenada, May 31 and June 1? Only one object, and that is to learn how to reach men for the sake of Jesus Christ. The organized classes of the Conference have done a wonderful work in reaching the careless and irreligious men. What a dozen or more classes have done is but a prophesy of what they might do. Let our classes go after the wanderers. They want God, they hunger for a better life. Let us learn how to win them.

GERMS OF DISEASE should be promptly expelled from the blood. This is a time when the system is especially susceptible to them. Get rid of all impurities in the blood by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and thus fortify your whole body and prevent illness.—Adv.

WESLEY BIBLE CLASS ORGANIZED AT TUNICA, MISS.

The Men's Bible Class of the Methodist Church met recently at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Hardy, and was organized into a Wesley Bible Class and adopted the name "Pathfinders." The name is truly appropriate and significant. This class is the first men's class ever organized in Tunica, being organized some fifteen years ago by Mrs. J. D. Magruder. There are several of the charter members still in the class. Through the faithfulness and efficiency of Mrs. Magruder as teacher, the class has hung together until it has become a very valuable fixture in the church. It was with reluctance that the class accepted the resignation of its long and faithful teacher, but fortunate in having as a member, ready to receive the mantle, Brother H. J. Allen. The following officers were elected: H. C. Gause, president; W. P. Warfield, vice president; J. B. Hardy, treasurer; J. W. Thompson, secretary. H. J. Allen was re-elected teacher, and W. L. Bankston was elected assistant teacher. W. B. Coggin, Ted Poare and Elliott Simmons were elected chairmen of the committees. It is the aim of the class to enroll every man who is a member of the church as a member of the class. With an enrollment now of 25, it is hoped to be doubled within a short while. Monthly meetings will be held to plan for future activities. The meeting closed with a delightful course of punch and sweet sandwiches served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. W. L. Bankston.

THAT GREAT SUNDAY SCHOOL AT GULFPORT, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Our Sunday school is still growing. In fact, it is growing so fast that we must do something to make room for the students. You recall the man who felt it necessary to tear down his barns and build larger. We are not tearing down anything, but we are laying plans for building a real school building for our school. We have the lot which the Baracas are paying for, and we hope to get to work with our building some time this year.

We need it. There are classes so large that the children must stand outside the class room until the teacher gets to her place. There are others that have no class room at all. The Baraca class has more than doubled in the past year under the able direction of Col. McGehee as teacher and Mr. F. E. Cottrell as president. That class has outgrown everything we have in the way of room, and now contemplates meeting in the city hall across the street from the church. And this in spite of the fact that when we built our church in 1913 we thought we had more church than we could ever use.

As to statistics. February 12 we had 669; the 19th we had 693, and next Sunday we are promised 700 if the weather permits. We have made no special drive. It's just growth. Every week we renew the pledge we took GREATEST FOES.

Every household should have its life-guards. The need of them is especially great when diseases, the greatest foes of life, find allies in the very elements, as colds, influenza, catarrh, the grip, and pneumonia do in this stormy month.

The best way to guard against these diseases is to strengthen the system with Hood's Sarsaparilla—one of th greatest of all life-guards. It removes the conditions in which these diseases make their most successful attack, gives vigor and tone to the vital organs and functions, and imparts a genial warmth to the blood.

Remember, the weaker the system the grater the exposure to disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the system strong.

If the liver is torpid or the bowels are sluggish, causing biliousness or constipation, Hood's Pills will be found of great service. They are especially made to be taken with Hood's Sarsaparilla.—Adv.

FROM GREENWOOD SPRINGS, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Perhaps a note from this part of the Lord's vineyard will be of interest to some of the many readers of the Advocate; so I am minded to write.

At the last Conference I was assigned to this charge and began the discharge of my duties the first Sunday in December. The people have received us very kindly and have given us many tokens of friendship and appreciation. We have had no great poundings, nor an over-supply of good things, but a substantial reception that manifested itself at the first quarterly conference, the 24th of February, when every church (seven in number) was well represented with fine reports, that were far above my expectations. It was a good day for us all. Our beloved presiding elder, Brother T. H. Dorsey, seemed to be at his best, and preached for us a great sermon (as his custom is), which was enjoyed by all of the large congregation. Then, we had a beautiful spread of good things to eat. All seemed to be in good spirits and had love one for another. So we are feeling good over it. The Lord bless all of our faithful stewards, who have met the awful financial conditions with such faith and courage.

We are praying for and expecting a good year with the good and faithful men and women of this charge. We ask for the prayers of our friends and brethren; and may the Lord bless you and the dear Advocate.

GIRLS! LEMONS
WHITEN ROUGH
CHAPPED HANDS

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, which any drug store will supply for a few cents, shake well, and you have a quarter-pint of harmless and delightful lemon-bleach lotion to soften and whiten red, rough or chapped hands. This home-made lemon lotion is far superior to glycerin and rose water to smoothen the skin. Famous stage beauties use it to bleach and bring that soft, clear, rosy-white complexion, because it doesn't irritate. —Adv.

OLD AT 30 OR YOUNG AT 60?

The choice is largely up to you. If your blood lacks red corpuscles, you're going to be fagged and dragged out, you're going to lack "pep," to look sallow and unhealthy, to grow old before your time.

DR. MILES' TONIC

actually increases the number or red corpuscles in the blood. It makes the cheeks plump and rosy, stilmulates the digestive organs, creates a healthy appetite, and leads to increased vigor and vitality. First bottle guaranteed to help you or money refunded.

WE TURN COTTON TO CHARACTER

Hundreds of thousands who worked in the Southern cotton mills as children have come to maturity with little or no cultural education. Thousands of these are so eager for common learning that they are willing to postpone marriage and work every other week to get to go to school every other week. They are highly experienced in textiles and make wonderful cloth which is trade marked "CHARACTER CLOTH", because of its marvelous intrinsic value, and the fact that its manufacture and sale form the financial basis for a great character-forming school.

"Character Cloth" is Guaranteed Superior

to imported fabrics, and is cheaper in price. The reputation of a great educational institution is back of this statement. Adapted to shirts, pajamas, dresses, bathing suits, childrens' clothes. Many beautiful designs and colors.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Our Greatest Need.

(Given by Mrs. R. H. Harper at the Workers Council at De Ridder.)

A complete organization, a strong body, with all active limbs and organs.

1. The head or mind controls the body—so our president should be the head or mind of the organization.

2. Three-fourths of all we know comes through the eyes. So our corresponding secretary should be the eyes for the organization, seeing the needs of the world, "the fields that are already white unto the harvest."

3. The facts that are recorded come through hearing. So our recording secretary should be the ears for the Society.

4. It is necessary that the needs of the work, the Council budget, be kept before us. So our treasurer should be the mouthpiece for the organization, calling attention to the question, "How much owest thou?"

5. The right hand is our Young People's work, reaching out and holding them for the Master.

6. The left hand is our Children's work, "Leading onward and upward to God."

7. The right limb is our Social Service—"Building up the waste places and causing the desert to blossom like the rose."

8. The left limb is our Supply Department—going to the needy preachers and to the missions, supplying their needs.

9. As the heart sends blood through the veins, giving life unto all the body, so our study of God's Word and the study of His world is the heart of the organization, sending life into every part of the work.

10. Then the very pulse is the kind of church member we make at home, the service we render our pastor in his needs and the needs of our own. This is our superintendent of the Local Department.

Most of our Conference Officers were re-elected at the recent meeting at De Ridder. The several new officers are: Superintendent of Children's Work, Mrs. T. B. Peyton, 545 Vine Street, Shreveport, La.; Lake Charles District Secretary, Mrs. Joe Wynn, Rayne, La.; Shreveport District Secretary, Mrs. J. F. Giles, Springhill, La.

Report of Social Service Committee, Annual Meeting, De Ridder, La., Feb. 14-17, 1922.

Believing that in every community there is a need for definite constructive work along Social Service lines, and realizing that such work is best accomplished through Christian organizations, whose representatives go in the spirit of the Master, we, your Committee on Social Service, beg to submit the following recommendations:

I. That each auxiliary Social Service Superintendent name as her Committee, women who are especially interested in this line of work, and are ready to serve the needy of the community, regardless of race or creed.

II. That the Social Service programs issued by the Council be presented at the third meeting of each quarter, and that reference work be done as suggested, posters made, and that whenever practicable, representatives from other organizations working for community betterment be invited to take part on the programs.

III. That through the Social Service Department, systematic visiting to the sick and strangers in the community be done.

IV. That every auxiliary conduct an active and continued campaign of visiting jails, houses of correction and poor farms, and having religious services conducted regularly, looking into the sanitary and moral conditions of these institutions.

V. That the Social Service Committee systematically visit the moving picture theaters in their own communities; that they reach the manager with approval of good films and condemnation of the bad, and that they use every available means for the creation of a more sensitive public conscience concerning moving pictures.

VI. That we use our influence to condemn the sale, in our public news stands, of all poisonous literature.

VII. That women be urged to pay their poll taxes, thus being enabled to vote for righteous measures.

VIII. That the Social Service Committee investigate the needs of the community, and co-operate with such other organizations as are looking to the moral and social betterment of the people.

IX. We further recommend that we adopt the following recommendations of the Inter-Racial Committee of the Woman's Missionary Council and other Christian agencies:

That an additional committee be appointed by the Social Service Superintendent of each Auxiliary to be known as "The Inter-Racial Committee" (preferably three) who shall be chosen because of their fitness for the work. It shall be the duty of this Committee to

(a) To seek a knowledge of the Negro leaders of the community, that a sympathetic basis of co-operation may be established.

(b) To direct a study of Negro community life in matters of housing, sanitation, neighborhood conditions, and the needs of Negro women and children.

(c) To adopt methods of co-operation with other agencies and with colored women so that a constructive program of community betterment may be accomplished.

(d) To lead the Society in a study of Negro achievement in literature, poetry, music, art and other lines of endeavor, that there may be a sympathetic appreciation of the Negro's contribution to American life along these lines.

(e) To represent the Society in any local co-operative work that may be undertaken in the community Interracial Committees, when organized.

X. That these recommendations be used as working basis for the Auxiliary, and that the Social Service Superintendent thoroughly familiarize herself with them, keeping a copy conveniently at hand and making a determined effort to carry on the work suggested.

OMITTING THE FOURTH STANZA.

It was a favorite and appropriate closing hymn, "Take My Life and Let It Be Consecrated, Lord, to Thee." But the presiding officer, either because the meeting had overrun the hour, or because it was customary to omit a verse or two of every hymn, announced that they would omit the fourth stanza. The audience sang the three verses heartily, and then were startled by a voice which addressed the chair in protest of omitting the fourth stanza. It was one who did not take part in meeting, and while the people found the hymn again, she read the verse she wanted sung, "Take my silver and my gold, Not a mite would I withhold." While the organist was finding the music she continued: "The trouble is that we omit this fourth verse not only in our singing but in the life of our society as well. The appeals that come to us from our Boards are listened to with great interest, and the work our missionaries are doing is soul-inspiring. But our gifts do not measure up to our enthusiasm nor the needs of the fields. I object to omitting the fourth stanza either in our singing or in our lives. Let's all sing and act out the fourth verse."—Adapted from the Expositor.

MOTHER, QUICK! GIVE CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP FOR CHILD'S BOWELS

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, a teaspoonful will never fail to open the bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation poison, sour bile and waste from the tender, little bowels and gives you a well, playful child again.

Millions of Mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

DOES LAUNDRY WORK AND HOUSEWORK TOO

Surprised to Find Herself Feeling So Well

Taunton, Mass.—"I used to have pains in my back and legs so badly, with other troubles that women sometimes have, that my doctor ordered me to stay in bed a week in every month. It didn't do me much good, so one day after talking with a friend who took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for about the same troubles I had, I thought I would try it also.

I find that I can work in the laundry all through the time and do my housework, too. Last month I was so surprised at myself to be up and around and feeling so good while before I used to feel completely lifeless. I have told some of the girls who work with me and have such troubles to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I tell them how it has helped me. You can use my testimonial for the good of others."—Mrs. BLANCHE SILVIA, 59 Grant St., Taunton, Mass.

It's the same story—one friend telling another of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry

For real effectiveness, this old home-made remedy has no equal. Easily and cheaply prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all day and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It is very easily prepared, and there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a pint bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, the full pint saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out and disappear. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

THE PASSING OF THE CHURCH OF THE OPEN COUNTRY.

By Rev. J. A. Poe.

It seems that we are in a period of transition, socially, morally and materially; and that all old forms are doomed to pass and be numbered with "things that have been"; if so, surely among the things of the past "the little brown church in the wildwood" will be treasured as a heritage of precious memory by many of the best people of this generation, and as they shall sing—

"There's a church in the valley, by the wildwood:
No lovelier spot in the dale,
No place so dear to my childhood,
As the little brown church in the vale.

"From the church in the valley of the wildwood:
When day fades away into night.
I would fain, from this spot of my childhood,
Wing my way to the mansions of light,"

their hearts will swell with tender emotion, and their eyes swim in tears of a sad, sweet recollection.

With the passing of the country church will pass a certain type of manhood and womanhood — strong physically, vigorous mentally and clean morally. They constitute the vanguard of all the best movements of our day. Whether the new situation will produce as good, or a better type of people, remains to be seen. But when we consider our civilization, the greatness of our people, our great resources, the wonderful achievements we have wrought in so short time, as compared with the largely urban civilizations of Europe and Asia, with their physical, moral and mental pygmies, are we not forced to concede that the conditions under which we have, and are still living to some extent, had much to do with making us the superior people—cast in a larger mold? The greatness of nature, and the nearness we are brought to the great God of nature,

"Where we can roam in thoughtful need,
In bower, in grove and glen,
And catch the whispers of the God of the wood,
As He speaks to the hearts of men."

have had much to do with making us what we are. When we consider that till only a few years past most of our population was in the open country and worshiping in the country churches, from which have come most of our leading characters in all the varied departments of religious scientific, social and political life, we are loath to say good-by to our little country temples of worship.

From the first rude log church built by Robert Strawbridge on Sar Creek in the lonely Maryland forests where orisons rose as incense from bended knees of faithful pioneers to the God that led the Pilgrims like a flock through the trackless wastes o the land of religious freedom, wher cottage and hut, field and forest, hil and dale, became temples wher praiso rose like angels on wings o faith to the great Father of all, Meth odism has been building churche wherever men could be found, whos spires point toward heaven, indicating a hope beyond. Her ministers, a flaming evangels, have gone to the remotest habitations of our country, seeking out the neglected and break ing to them the bread of life. Bu alas! those days are drawing to close. The old-time country churc with the old-style circuit-rider will be seen no more in our land. Already we see the beginning of the end, as we travel the country-side and pass the neglected church. The walls are dark with decay, the windows are falling out, the doors down, the steps rotting away. It presents a sad picture of desolation, standing, not where it ought not, but as it should not.

No more will the ringing voice of the simple prophet of truth and love be heard at all in thee! No more will the sweet songs of Zion be heard for ever in thee! No more will the glad shout of the new-born soul nor the pean of the happy heart be heard in thee! No more, on the holy Sabbath, day of rest, to the simple plebelan of all days the best, shall they gather, attired in glad regalia—insignia of rural royalty—on the hallowed trysting spot where silently sleep their lamented dead! Ah! Shall thy sacred walls become the home of owl and bat, or the haunt of beast of prey? Shall thy holy soil be laid fallow by the farmer's plow, or becom the sward for the cattle of the field? Dear little church, thou hast been Bethel to many sin-smitten, sad and Others Relieved— Why Not You?

Catarrh Does Harm—Get Rid Of It.

Catarrh of the nose or throat when it becomes chronic weakens the delicate lung tissues, deranges the digestive organs, and may lead to consumption. It impairs the taste, smell and hearing, and affects the voice. It is a constitutional disease and requires a constitutional remedy.

Take Hood's Sarsaparilla, which by purifying the blood removes the cause of the disease and gives permanent relief. This alterative and tonic medicine has proved entirely satisfactory to thousands of families in three generations.

If there is biliousness or constipation, take Hood's Pills—they are purely vegetable, gentle, thorough.

Philadelphia, Pa.

Observe These Rules:

1. The contest is open to every man, woman, girl or boy living in America, except employees or relatives of employees of E. J. Reefer, 9th and Spruce Sts. There is no entrance fee of any kind.
2. You must use only one side of paper. You must number your list of objects in regular order—1, 2, 3, etc. Your full name and address must be written on each page in the paper right hand corner. Use a separate sheet for anything you may wish to write outside of your list of names and your name and address.
3. English words only will be accepted as they appear in the English dictionary. Obsolete words will not be counted. Both the singular and the plural of a word will not count; either one of them may be used.
4. Compounds or words which are made up of two or more complete English words cannot be used.
5. The same spelling of a word will be counted only once even though it is used for different articles or objects, or parts of them. Each article or object can be given only under one name.
6. Two or more people may co-operate in answering the puzzle. However only one prize will be given to any one household. No prizes will be awarded to more than one of any combination outside of the family where a number—two or more—have worked together.
7. If a contestant sends more than one list under the same name, an assumed name, or a pre-married name, then all lists of such contestant will be disqualified. If more than one list is sent by any group or by any members of the same group who have co-operated in the preparation of such lists, then all lists of such contestants will be disqualified.
8. All answers must be received though the mail by E. J. Reefer, 9th and Spruce Streets, Philadelphia, Pa., and must be post-marked by Post Office closing time, April 10th, 1922.
9. The first prize will be awarded for the answer containing the largest and most nearly correct list of the names of visible objects and articles beginning with "S" shown in the picture. No other consideration, such as neatness, style or handwriting will have any bearing in making the decision.
10. The full amount of any of the prizes will be awarded to each contestant in the event of ties.
11. The decision will be made by three judges entirely independent of and having no connection with E. J. Reefer. They will judge the answers submitted and award the prizes at the end of the contest. Participation in the contest carries with it the acceptance of the decision of the judges as final and conclusive.
12. All answers will receive full consideration whether or not "Reefer's Yeast Tablets" is purchased. At the close of the contest, when all lists have been graded, the names of the prize winners will be announced and the list of words will be sent upon request to any participant who sends us a stamped, addressed envelope.

Win the $5000 Prize!

A one package order for Reefer's Yeast Tablets qualifies your list for first prize of $750. A two package order qualifies you for $1500. But if you have ordered five $1.00 packages and your list is largest and nearest correct, you win $5000. Study the Prize List.

PASSING OF THE CHURCH OF THE OPEN COUNTRY.

lonely hearts, where the angels ascended and descended. Full and rich are the blessings thou hast brought.

"We love thy little church, Lord;
Sacred temple of thine abode,
Where our fathers heard thy word;
While to them a beacon it stood.

With things that pass it must go,
It was not bullt for pleasure or show
From its sacred altars rich graces flow
To bless sinful mortals here below.

Farewell, little temple of holy light;
Shall thy going deepen our sordid night?
We shall no more in thee delight.
Then good-by, for thou takest thy flight."

It is almost evident that with the passing of the small country school the small country church must become a thing of the past. In this day of good roads and improved methods of travel, it is only a matter of time till our churches will consolidate just as our schools are doing. There should be a strategic point for the center. At this center a modern plant must be erected, which will consist of Sunday school departments, League hall, and departments for social service, and community recreations. This work must be in the hands of competent leadership. No indifferent, inefficient or incompetent leader will meet the demands of such a task. The man that makes a success of this work must be equal to the man that cares for the important urban centers; if any difference, the man of the rural work must be the stronger of the two. We must do this and we must not be long about it, or our civilization is going to suffer. No country is stronger than its rural life, and unless we take care of our rural situation, the whole fabric of our civilization must feel the effects of the let-down that is bound to come. We put no man in our foreign fields without equipment and adequate maintenance. Are not our rural fields at home, from which we draw most of our leadership—preachers, missionaries, and leading laymen—worth taking care of? We shall see in a very few years, if we continue to concentrate on the segregated centers and neglect the rural and semi-rural sections of our country, that we have lost the "goose that laid the golden egg." THAT GREAT SUNDAY SCHOOL AT GULFPORT, MISS.

the first Sunday in January: "Every week I will ask some one to come to Sunday school." But unless we get more room we are going to have to withdraw the pledge.

One thing our Sunday school is doing that pleases me much. It is functioning as the door to the church, and the door is always open. It is no unusual sight to see one or two or three of our children applying for membership. Why should they not? Of such is the kingdom. The older I grow the more I am convinced that in the future the strengeh and growth of the church rests in the Sunday school. Old things are passing. We haven't had a formal revival in our church in a number of years, but the revival spirit is present always, and under the leadership of Brother Linfield the church is growing, not by sudden spurts and bounds, but steadily and sturdily as an oak tree.

This is a long dissertation from me. I am trying to tempt you to come over some time and see for yourself. It's worth a longer trip than from New Orleans to hear our Sunday school sing from memory "Come, Thou Fount," or any of a dozen hymns they know, or recite some of the Psalms, to say nothing of a visit to our Baraca class, our cradle roll, if you can find standing room, or to see and hear any of a number of other interesting things that happen every Sunday. Come and see. Your friend,

EDITORIAL COMMENT

ONE IS ENOUGH.

We recently read these suggestive words: "There are many roads to success; how many of them have you tried?" Without undertaking to interpret the mind of the writer, we suppose he meant to say that there are so many avenues open to success that there is no excuse for failure, the explanation of failure being in the fact that the road to success has not been followed. We should hate to believe that a man must spend much of his life trying out roads before he can find one that will lead him to the goal of his desire. If there is one road to success, that is enough; and if there are more than one, still one is enough. Of one thing we are sure: no matter how many roads there are to success, no man will be able to travel them unless he properly equips himself for the arduous journey. He must start out with determination, courage, the willingness to work hard and, if need be, to suffer; and he must have the moral virtues without which apparent success is nothing more than camouflaged failure. Only good men gain the goal of real success.

SOMETHING BETTER.

It is one of the glories of real manhood that the best in life is always beckoning. There are no depths from which a glimpse of a higher realm may not be had, and there are no shackles strong enough to keep a man from the upward path. Something better—that is the thing that took Frederick R. Wedge—known as "Kid"—from the prize-fighting ring to the Harvard Graduate School at the age of forty-two. Of course, there is a reason. In Wedge's own words: "My interest in higher education is due to the fact that I married in my prize-ring days a college graduate. She taught me that the battle of life was not to be fought with my fists, but with the mind. She saw good in me when others saw only evil, and believed I would win in spite of every handicap." And handicaps he has had. To make up for the deficiencies of his boyhood, he entered, a grown man, an academy to secure an elementary education—and he completed the work of twelve years in six; then he spent three years in a State university, leaving in his junior year to teach school; the war came on and he received an appointment as boxing instructor in one of the army camps—but within a few months he was stricken with tuberculosis and the doctors told him he could live not more than six months; married at this time, he moved to a salubrious climate, got a position as motorman on the street cars, and fought his way back to health; he then entered another State university and, at the age of forty, received an A. B. degree; now he is pursuing graduate studies at Harvard. In his struggles to obtain something better, he has not been misled by the current emphasis upon the purely utilitarian—hear him: "Why do I study the classics? In my undergraduate work, I studied Latin, Greek, and Hebrew, in addition to the sciences. I was interested in the origins and excellencies of man's intellectual achievements. In other words, I have never hunted for a snap course and never worked just for a degree. I am entering Harvard that I may be a more useful man back in Arizona." With such an example of determination and pure grit before them, how can the more favored youth of our land be content to face their own boundless opportunities and wail, "I can't?" The one "better thing" that is above all price is the perfect adjustment of the life to the Divine will. We do not know—but we hope the "Kid" has attained that.

GET READY FOR THE FIGHT.

If the whole sordid mass of horse racing scandal in New Orleans has not already nauseated the right-thinking citizenship of this State beyond further forbearance, it is high time for the moral element of the State to begin a campaign of information and education that will make inevitable the enactment of laws by the next Legislature that will effectively prohibit the continuance of a "sport" that is absolutely dependent upon gambling for its maintenance—a form of economic and moral evil which the Constitution of Louisiana declares to be an evil and which is directed to be suppressed by legislation. If horse racing as now conducted were only a local evil, the welfare of this great city ought to demand its repression by the Legislature; but it is an evil that reaches out to all sections of the State by means of a widespread gambling system that debauches our young people in other towns and cities. The suggestion that a State Racing Commission can "regulate" racing so as to do away with its evils is worth no more than the worn-out suggestion that the liquor business could be "regulated." The only way to get rid of an evil is to get rid of it—and the time has come for Louisiana to get rid of racing.

THE FIGURES ARE AGAINST THEM.

There are still a few people fatuous enough to believe that there is more drunkenness under constitutional prohibition than there was before the Eighteenth Amendment was adopted. Talk is cheap and big claims are not hard to make; but sensible people like to get at the facts in the case before they render a judgement. Mr. Roy A. Haynes, Federal Prohibition Commissioner, ought to be pretty well informed concerning the facts, and we quote from a recent statement by him: "In 59 cities, with a population of more than 30,000 and a combined population of 20,000,000 (including New York, Chicago, and Philadelphia), official and estimated figures show a decrease in arrests for drunkenness from 316,842 in 1917 to 109,768, notwithstanding bad booze, temporary hard drinking, and a zeal to 'jug' all intoxicated people." And then to show that prohibition enforcement is making headway and to prove that prohibition sentiment is growing, he says further: "During the last fiscal year approximately 950,000 gallons of distilled liquor and wines were seized, and property seized (exclusive of property levied on for payment of taxes, or distillery apparatus or other property destroyed) was valued at $12,907,693. The miscellaneous seized property included automobiles, boats, wagons, carriages, horses, mules, airplanes, motorcycles, land, and so on. It is becoming more clear every day that thinking persons favor the Eighteenth Amendment. The 'personal liberty' argument is not as popular as it used to be. It is alleged that the prohibition laws infringe upon personal liberty by restricting one's personal habits. Every law does that in a larger or smaller degree. The narcotic law greatly interferes with the personal habits of the drug addict, and the traffic laws seriously restrict the speed fiend, but these restrictions do not seriously limit the man who puts the community good above his self-indulgence, nor do they greatly embarrass the man who places the public welfare above his personal convenience. Liberty is, after all, the restriction of personal habits by law for public good; and license, these same impulses unrestricted. Prohibition is a great movement for the public good, and all great movements are evolutionary. The idea of the men who enacted the Eighteenth Amendment was not that it would become an established fact in a moment. The law is slowly making its way by the method of attrition. The forces of law and order are gaining their objective. The progress is insistent, definite, and sure, and decrees the final doom of the illegal liquor business." All of which is a heartening sermon to those whose faith is strong enough to believe that the right will ultimately triumph.

NOT FIT FOR THE PARENTS.

We saw a news item the other day to the effect that officials of London have decreed that children under sixteen shall not see certain motion pictures unless accompanied by parents or guardians. It seems that there are two classes of films passed by the British censors—one for "universal" exhibition and another for "adult" exhibition only. It seems to us to be a self-evident proposition that pictures that are not fit for children to see alone are not fit for them to see at all. And pictures that are not fit for children certainly ought not to appeal to their parents.

WORSHIP.

When the great sun sinks to his rest,
His golden glories thrilling me,
And voiceless longings stir my breast,
Then teach me, Lord, to worship thee.

And when the stars—the daylight fled—
In serried, shining ranks, I see,
Filling the splendid vault o'erhead,
Then teach me, Lord, to worship thee.

If roaming by the ocean's shore,
The murmuring waves sing low to me,
Or thundering billows hoarsely roar,
Then teach me, Lord, to worship thee.

Or if in solemn forest shades,
The calm of nature steals o'er me,
And silence all my soul pervades,
Then teach me, Lord, to worship thee.

Not in the sacred shrines alone,
Which chime their summons unto me,
Would I look to thy heavenly throne,
But everywhere would worship thee.

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

By Hon. C. L. Bates.

Twelfth Paper.

I.

On May 19, 1845, the Louisville Convention, after it had concluded the work for which it had assembled, adopted and issued to its constituency a notable "Pastoral Address"—a great church paper—signed by James O. Andrews, President, and Thomas O. Summers, Secretary, and sent it out to the whole of Southern Methodism. The address is one of the great constitutional documents of the Southern Methodist Church, inasmuch as it is a contemporaneous exposition by the Convention itself of the authority by and the purposes for which it assembled and the governmental and ecclesiastical principles upon which it had proceeded, consummated its work, and erected and established the church.

II.

The "Pastoral Address" is, in part, as follows, to-wit:

"Louisville, Ky., May 19, 1845.

"To the Ministers of the Several Annual Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and to all the brethren of their pastoral oversight, the Convention of said Annual Conferences address this letter, with Christian salutation.

"We gratefully regard it matter of congratulation, beloved brethren, for which our thanks should be offered at the throne of grace, that we have been enabled to conduct the business confided to us by you with great harmony, and, except, perhaps, some inconsiderable shades of difference on points of minor import, with unexampled unanimity. Our management on all questions of importance has probably been as perfect as the weakness of human knowledge might allow or reason should require.

"For full information of all that we have done, we refer you to the Journal of our proceedings and the documents which accompany it, particularly the Reports of the Committees on Organization and on Missions. This latter interest we have made the subject of a special letter, wishing to bring it immediately to the notice of all our churches and congregations (to whom we have requested the letter might be read), to engage their instant liberality.

"We made it a point of early inquiry, in the course of our proceedings, to ascertain with what unanimity the Annual Conferences represented by us, and the entire body of the ministry and membership within their general bounds, were known to have concurred in sustaining the Declaration of the Southern delegates in the late General Conference, and in approving of the plan provided by that Conference for our being constituted a distinct ecclesiastical connection, separate from the North.

"The Committee on Organization, being composed of two members from each of the Annual Conferences, were furnished with ample means of obtaining satisfactory information. The members of the Committee held meetings with their several delegations apart, and on a comparison of their several reports, carefully made, it was found that, both as to the members of the Annual Conferences and the local ministry and membership of our entire territory, the Declaration had been sustained, and a separate organization called for, by as great a majority as ninety-five to five.

"Nor did it appear that even five in a hundred were disposed to array themselves against their brethren, whose interests were identical with their own, but that part were Northern brethren sojourning in our borders, and part were dwelling in sections of the country where the questions involved did not materially concern their Christian privileges, or those of the slaves among them. So great appears to have been the unanimity of opinion prevailing, both among the pastors and people, as to the urgent necessity of the great measure which we were deputed to effect, by organizing on the basis of the Discipline, and the plan provided by the late General Conference, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

"That on so grave a question, concerning interests so sacred, and affecting so numerous a people, spread over the vast extent of the country from Missouri to the Atlantic Ocean, and from Virginia to Texas, there should be found some who dissent, is what we could not but expect. But that the number dissenting should have been so small, compared to the number of those who have required us to act, is, at least to our minds, conclusive proof of the absolute necessity of this action, as affording the only means left in our power to preserve the church in the more Southern States from hopeless ruin.

* * * * * * * *

"We avow, brethren, and we do it with the greatest solemnity, that while we have thus been laid under the imperative force of an absolute necessity to organize the Southern and Southwestern Conferences into an independent ecclesiastical connection, whose jurisdiction shall be exclusive of all interference on the part of the North, we do not withdraw from the true Christian and Catholic pale of the Methodist Episcopal Church. * * *

"We could not be Methodist at all—as we have been taught what Methodism is—if, with our knowledge of its nature, its aims, its constitution, its discipline, and of the ruin inevitable to the work of the ministry in most of the Southern States, if not in all of them, should we still cleave to a Northern jurisdiction; we nevertheless could not be persuaded to yield the Gospel for a jurisdictional affinity with brethren who, we believe in our hearts, cannot govern us without great injury to the cause of Christ in most parts of our work. If we err, it is the spirit of Methodism which prompts us to error. We 'call God for a record' that, as far as we know our hearts, we intend nothing, we desire nothing, we do nothing, having any other object or aim but that the gospel may be preached, without let or hindrance, in all parts of our country, and especially to the poor. There is nothing belonging of right to the church—her doctrines, her discipline, her economy, her usages, hor efficiency—which we do not cherish in our inmost hearts."

III.

It appears from the first paragraph of the "Pastoral Address (1) that it was issued by the Convention of the Annual Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; and (2) that it was directed to "the ministers of the several Annual Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and to all the brethren of their pastoral oversight"—to the whole people of Southern Methodism—five hundred thousand strong. It is perfectly clear from the face of the paper, taken as a whole, that the Convention was, in it, rendering an Account to its constituencies of the manner in which it had performed the duties confided to it.

"We gratefully regard it," said the Convention, "matter of congratulation, beloved brethren, for which our thanks should be offered at the throne of grace, that we have been enabled to conduct the business confided to us by you with great harmony;" and, after stating that 95 per cent of the 500,000 Southern Methodists had voted in favor of the establishment of an independent Southern jurisdiction, "so great appears to have been the unanimity of opinion prevailing, both among the pastors and the people, as to the urgent necessity of the great measure which we were deputed to effect, by organizing on the basis of the Discipline, and the plan provided by the late General Conference, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South;" and—"but that the number dissenting should have been so small, compared to the number of those who have required us to act, is, at least to our minds, conclusive proof of the absolute necessity of this action, as affording the only means left in our power to preserve the Church in the more Southern States from hopeless ruin."

IV.

The "Pastoral Address" declares that the Convention made it a point of early inquiry in its proceedings to ascertain with what unanimity the Annual Conferences and "the entire body of the ministry and membership had sustained the Declaration of the Southern delegates and had approved the plan of separation; and the importance of that inquiry will appear when recurrence is made to the stipulation in the plan of separation that the relinquishment of jurisdiction over the South by the Northern Church, and a division of the common property, were conditioned alone upon a majority vote of the members; the regularity of the proceedings of the Convention, and title to an equitable share of the church property could not be secured without the required vote of the people, and, hence the "Address" showed with great particularity that there had been full compliance with the condition. That was an essential point in the accounting of the Convention with its constituencies; it was necessary to show the ecclesiastical regularity of its proceedings, and it accordingly declared:

"Nor yet can we be charged with any factious or schismatic opposition to the General Conference for we have done nothing, and mean to do nothing, not authorized by express enactment of that body, in view of the very emergency which compels our action."

V.

The true intent and legal meaning of the "Pastoral Address" is that: the Convention derived its whole power and authority from the vote of the people of the sixteen participating Annual Conferences, acting not as one common, unorganized mass, but in their separate, organic capacities as Annual Conferences, each respectively, and reporting and submitting, separately and severally, their action to the Convention through its Committee on organization; and that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was ordained, created and established by the people, acting through their Annual Confereuces and the delegated Convention.

The relinquishment of and cession of soverelgnty over Southern Methodism by the General Conference of 1844 was to the Annual Conferences conditioned on a majority vote of their people; and the main purpose of the Convention in the "Address" was to show full compliance with that condition.

VI.

The Convention points out to its constituencies the sources of definite information as to its official action in the execution of its duties respecting the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

"For full information," says the Address, "of all that we have done, we refer you to the Journal of our proceedings and the documents which accompany it, particularly the Reports of the Committees on Organization and on Missions."

If the learned ecclesiastics who have been unable to find the Constitution of the church would diligently follow up this reference, they would, probably, acquire some definite conceptions on this important subject.

A search for the Constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, which does not give first place to the proceedings of the Louisville Convention and the causes which led up to it, together with the Declaration of the Southern delegates in the General Conference of 1844, their Protest, the Plan of Separation, the call for the Convention, and the proceedings of the Annual Conferences appointing and instructing their delegates, betrays an ignorance of the methods of constitutional study which at once puts the searcher out of the game; his opinions on the subject are not worthy of the respect of any man or woman. Or else, it suggests a treasonable purpose to subvert the government of the church as founded and declared by the Convention, and to create in its stead an autocracy or an oligarchy, in derogation of the rights of the people who established the church, and whose votes under the plan of separation secured its regularity and legitimacy, and a title to a share in the common property of the undivided church.

REV. ROBERT HARTWELL BARR.

A Memoir of Rev. Robert Hartwell Barr, late of the Mississippi Conference — Affectionately Pregared by his Conference Classmate, Rev. Geo. H. Thompson.

Rev. Robert Hartwell Barr began life near Lower Peach Tree, Ala., June 24, 1849, and finished his labors and entered into the rest that remaineth for the people of God at Moss Point, Miss., December 30, 1921. He was the first-born of eight children given to his parents, Bartlett S. and Martha A. Barr. His was a good inheritance. Both grandfathers, Bartlett Barr, Sr., and Isham J. Clark, were Methodist preachers, and his uncle for whom he was named, Rev. Robert Clark, was a ploneer preacher in Montana; and a member of the Montana Conference. This was an inheritance of which Brother Barr was justly proud.

He had the good fortune of early life on the farm, and was developed in his spirit of helpfulness to others when young by helping his mother care for younger children while the father did his part in the Civil War. When the verdict of arms had been rendered, and the South had suffered the loss of all save its honor and courage, the father and son joined in battle against the biting poverty that had been thrust on them and others who had defended the right to withdraw from the Union. His schooldays were thus cut short in his early teens, and further efforts for knowledge were without a teacher. His mind was always thirsty for knowledge, and the open eye and the attentive ear continually watered the mental plant. His memory was developed to a very unusual degree. I have seen few men who could retain so much of a sermon or lecture as he. With a strong love for good literature, and with power to concentrate his thoughts on the matter read, and aided by his rare memory, he gathered a large fund of information.

When about 15 years old, and while attending a camp meeting near Lower Peach Tree, Ala., he was converted, and united with the Methodist Church, in whose communion and ministry he spent his life. The date that he was licensed to preach is not definitely known, but he was ordained local deacon at the Conference when he was admitted on trial. This Conference was held at Crystal Springs in December, 1889, and was presided over by Bishop Galloway, who ordained him. Nine years later, in Hattiesburg, he was ordained elder by Bishop Galloway. He was the oldest member of a class of sixteen admitted on trial in 1889, being at that time in his forty-first year. The following list shows the charges served by him as pastor, and the years of this service: Hillsboro circuit, 1890-91; Westville circuit, 1892-93; Trenton circuit 1894-95; Vimville circuit, 1896-98; Mathersville circuit, 1899-1901; Winchester circuit, 1902; Escatawpa circuit, 1903-1906; Americus circuit, 1907; DeKalb circuit, 1908-1910; North Wesson, 1911-1913; Adams circuit, 1914-1917; Foxworth circuit, 1918-1920.

The foregoing list of appointments shows that Brother Barr gave to the Mississippi Conference thirty-one years of service, and they were given uninterruptedly to the pastorate. He felt that his call was to preach the gospel, and to shepherd the flock over which the Holy Ghost, acting through the church, had made him overseer. His church called on him to serve some charges that are commonly called "hard charges"—hard, because of much travel and meager support. To these he went with the loyalty and courage of a soldier summoned to battle. I do not think that pipe organs, high steeples, studios, and swivel chairs had much lure for him, but humanity, hungry and thirsty for the "meat indeed" and the "drink indeed," tugged mightily at his soul. The impelling conviction was upon him that the Cross of Christ which had lifted him above the power of sin could do the same for all others. Untried modern theology could never rival in his mind and heart the theology that had transformed a world, and which had transformed his own life. He did not have time nor inclination to try it out.

You would not call Brother Barr a great preacher, but you must call him a good preacher. His sermon matter was extracted from the Bible, and it appealed to the head and heart of the hearer, and was delivered in a pleasing manner. To a mellow voice of splendid carrying qualities was added pleasing gestures. He spoke smooth-flowing English with animation, but without vehemence. His fondness for simile led him to an over-use of metaphor. He made liberal use of quotations, which were skillfully selected and accurately quoted. For him John was a better model for preaching than Isaiah, but he did not shirk sternness when he felt that it was needed. He was not a "son of thunder," but a messenger of consolation.

A large part, perhaps the larger part, of the good done by him as an itinerant Methodist preacher was done through his pastoral work. He diligently visited the people. The pastorate of large circuits, such as he served most of his ministerial life, required much travel to reach the homes of the people, but this duty was cheerfully accepted and faithfully done. Always an optimist, and breathing a buoyant, cheerful spirit, his optimism was contagious. The tenderness of his heart and the largeness of his soul put him in close touch with all who were weary and heavy-laden. His tenderness opened the hearts of the children to him, and they loved him as he loved them. The devotion of himself to God and duty carried conviction to the careless and halting with much force.

The outstanding trait in Brother Barr's life was his great brotherliness. What member of the Mississippi Conference will not sadly miss at its next session the hearty handshake, the cordial greeting, the love-beaming face that has greeted them during the last thirty-one years? Can any of us say that we ever heard him speak unkindly of any one? Is there a soul, living or dead, who ever felt that Brother Barr ever did him knowingly an unkindness? He was incapable of such an act. He loved the members of his Conference, rejoiced in their successes, and sorrowed when their failures came. We say that he was guileless; that may be, for it is born of love, and his life was made richer because he thought no evil.

At the age of twenty years Brother Barr was married to Miss Eliza Moore, a member of an Alabama family whose social and religious life was a rich asset to any community. Truly God had joined them together. At the time Brother Barr was admitted into the Mississippi Conference he owned a good farm in Neshoba County, and had provided for his family a comfortable home. Out from this home the faithful and noble wife went, like Abraham, not knowing where she was going, but, knowing the God of Abraham, she went cheerfully. The way led to at least three charges which did not have parsonages, but Brother Barr left no one of these without a parsonage. To these servants of God four children were given to brighten and bless their home, but two of them died in childhood. Two daughters, Mrs. J. A. Elder and Miss Ursula Barr, are left on this side of the great divide, heirs of the mantle of their parents, and are making a splendid contribution to the ongoing of the kingdom of Christ through their social and religious activities. The honored father spent his last earthly days under the affectionate care of the two daughters in Mrs Elder's home at Moss Point, Miss. No word of praise given to the unmarried daughter would be extravagant for her unselfish service, whole-hearted devotion, and affectionate care given to her parents in their declining days. She was truly an angel of mercy in her ministries.

Failing health had admonished Brother Barr that he must rest awhile, and at the Conference held in 1920 he asked for and was granted a superannuate relation. Having served the Foxworth charge three years immediately preceding his superannuation, and having many warm friends there, he decided to spend the remainder of his time on earth with them. He built a cozy home where he and his daughter could spend their days together, and the home was comfortably furnished, and free from debt. It gave him great pleasure to have his friends call and look through his house. It seems sad that he could enjoy it for only one year; but a Great Builder had finished and furnished a better home for him, and took him away from us. He told us that the call had come, that he was going soon, that he had no fears for the journey, and that we would know where to find him afterwhile. On Sunday, the first day of the new year, in the Methodist church at Foxworth, in the presence of a great gathering of friends and neighbors, we gave him the benison of Christian burial. Revs. H. M. Ellis, L. L. Roberts, W. W. Murray and the writer joined in conducting the service. His body rests in the village cemetery, laid there by the fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The work of collecting the pledges is no easy task. Yet some of our collectors have been so diligent that they have completed their part of the job in reaching all the first-year payments on their list. This is truly church work. It is building up the Kingdom. Pastors ought to keep in personal touch with such workers. The true shepherd knows his sheep and is interested in them. He is the best pastor who can set the most people to work. Be swift to recognize approvingly every well-meant endeavor to build up the great cause of Christian Education.

Dr. P. L. Cobb, Secretary of the Department of Spiritual Resources of the Board of Education, is sending out a new edition of "Keep the Home Fires Burning" to all members of the Daily Bible Reading and Family Worship Leagues. He announces that this book will be sent free to any parent who will agree to establish a family altar. Cards for signatures can be had by addressing Dr. Cobb at 160 Fourth Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn. Why not have a family altar in every Methodist home?

Mr. W. E. Hogan, Treasurer of the Board of Education, recently announced that the pledges in the Christian Education Movement now total $20,830,222, this sum being within less than $2,225,000 of the total quota fixed by the General Conference. The Treasurer further announces that $707,792.77 has already been disbursed to the various schools and colleges of the church out of the funds collected.

Let every Methodist make a subscription to the Christian Education Movement before the meeting of the General Conference in May.

ALBERT S. LUTZ,
Conference Secretary of Education.

REV. JAMES MONROE MASSEY.

James Monroe Massey was born in Attala County, Mississippi, August 3, 1849. He was married to Miss Burroughs in 1873. At the age of 21 he found Jesus in His regenerating power, and united with the Methodist Church. In 1876 he was licensed to preach; joined the North Mississippi Conference in 1879: transferred to the Mississippi Conference in 1905; superannuated in December, 1913, and moved to Houston, Miss., where he made his home with his daughter, Mrs. W. J. McWhorter, until summons to come up higher was received January 23, 1922.

Brother Massey was a strong believer in the old-time Gospel as the power of God unto salvation to all who would believe, and was ever willing to make sacrifices to speed this Gospel. The fruits of his labors in his home State and beloved church will only be revealed as stars in the crown of eternal life, placed upon his brow by the pierced hand of his loving Christ, to whom he expressed a deep affection and an abiding faith unto the end.

His wife having preceded him to the better world, he leaves behind four brothers, three sons, and two daughters, with other relatives and friends, while he rests from his labors.

Funeral services were held in Houston Methodist Church and interment made in the adjacent cemetery. E. E. McKEITHEN, P. C.

OUR SUPREMACY NOT SURRENDERED.

By Rev. J. W. Pearson.

"Our Supremacy Surrendered." Is the caption of an article of recent date by Brother S. Curtis Yates. Let us not become stampeded by statistics. A report from Washington showing that there are a few more Baptists in America than Methodists is no great cause for alarm, and certainly they do not justify the conclusions of Brother Yates. Even if such figures were reliable, which this writer seriously questions, Methodism has not yet surrendered its supremacy. Brother Yates acknowledges defeat as a fact and accounts for it in two ways, viz.: Lack of doctrinal preaching and too much "union" with others. He makes bold to give us a new proverb, "In union there is weakness." I am wondering if any one is able to point out a Methodist church anywhere in our connection that has practiced the "close communion, one mode of baptism, and the one church" policy with any great success in building the Kingdom along any lines? In respect to the point of preaching, I believe with all my heart that our preachers as a whole are preaching more New Testament truth and exemplifying as much real religion and sane spirituality as any other people on "God's footstool," and, therefore, I do not believe for a single minute that Methodism is taking a nap like "Aesop's hare."

According to facts and figures, just as reliable as the Washington report, "There are more Methodists in America than there are Baptists in the whole world." What is weakening our Methodism more than any one thing is that spirit which is forever saying, "We are beaten by the Baptists." John Wesley never said it in the darkest hours of his ministry. George Whitefield did not know how to use the word. Dr. Pinson, Dr. Goddard and a host of the leaders of the church of to-day do not know how to strike any such note. This is Methodism's great hour. It is coming into its own as never before. What characterized early Methodism is becoming more true of us every day. The evangelistic fires are burning. The missionary spirit of our church has set in motion movements that have resulted in the subscription of thirty-three million dollars. There is such a strong social passion as has not been witnessed since the days of Mills and others. Religious education never had such a hold on the hearts of preachers and laymen as now. The church was never better organized for taking the world for Jesus Christ. It is true we are up against tremendous difficulties, but "The Lord God omnipotent reigneth." Let us pray for the spirit of Richmond P. Nolly and that of Walter R. Lambuth to come upon us. Let us not be stampeded by statistics or count ourselves outrun by the tortoise.

Mansfield, La.

THE BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT.

This has been a very busy week with the Methodist leaders of the district. Two Centenary Group Meetings have been held. Brother W. D. Hawkins, the Conference Secretary, was in special charge of both of the meetings, and Presiding Elder Ellis was the Generalissimo.

The meetings were held in the interest of "Church-wide Collection Week" for bringing the Centenary collections up to date. Brother Hawkins was full of facts to give to all the workers, and of plans to organize the working forces of the district for "World Sunday," March 26. He is intent on "putting over" this great movement. The wide-awake presiding elder, Rev. H. M. Ellis, was full of urgency, whooping up things.

The Northern Group meeting was held at Brookhaven on the 8th. Dr. A. F. Watkins was present and conducted the devotional service, reading from the Scripture, making a very interesting exposition of the same, and offering a wonderful prayer. Rev. J. M. Morse attended both meetings, keeping a watchful eye on the Educational interests, which are committed to his care. Morse is always on his job. Two old superannuates, Rev. W. H. Vaughan and the writer, were present, watching proceedings, to see that everything was done all right. We "old fellows" can't do anything, but we can say "Amen" to things that are right or grunt our disapproval if things go wrong.

At 12:30 p.m. the meeting was adjourned to partake of a very sumptuous dinner provided by the good women of the Brookhaven Methodist Church. It is good to be here, was the feeling of every one at the table. I know it for it was shown by the face of every one there.

The Southern Group Meeting was held at McComb on Thursday, the 9th. This meeting was better attended by the preachers, but not so well attended by the laymen, than the Brookhaven meeting. Both meetings were marked by enthusiasm and determined purpose to collect up to the full amount due for the third year on the Centenary pledges. The Brookhaven Group challenged the McComb Group. There is going to be a hot old time in this part of "Dixie" for the next three weeks. I am a little uneasy about Hicks Ellis. I am afraid he will collapse from heart failure if his district should fail to go "over the top." Let the brethren take due notice thereof and govern themselves accordingly. I forgot to say that McComb accepted Brookhaven's challenge. Of course, they did.

Editor Carley, of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, gave the brethren of both groups great pleasure by his presence at both meetings, and by his fine speeches in behalf of the Centenary work. His addresses were of a high order, and contributed largely to the inspiration and helpfulness of the occasions.

The Editor of the Magaphone told the Editor of the Advocate that he thought the Editor of the Advocate ought to spend the night with the Editor of The Megaphene. But Editor Carley wouldn't do it; he stayed with President Cooper. Editor Adams says that when he goes to New Orleans he is not going to the home of Editor Carley. He says that "tit for tat" is not the right practice for "ordinary" folks, but that it is all right between editors.

We feel "hope up" about our meetings. They were distinguished by the presence of three D.D.'s, two College presidents and a superannuate from the Central Texas Conference, Rev. W. H. Vaughan. When Hicks Ellis pulls off a stunt he makes it as spectacular and commanding as possible. It is a wonder he didn't have two or three bishops on hand. We are going to look for them the next time. "So mote it be!"

The Woman's Missionary Conference of the Mississippi Conference, held its Annual session in McComb, at the Centenary church, March 7 to 10, and was in the midst of its work when our Centenary meeting was held. The Conference suspended work to introduce us to the body. Dr. Carley and Brother Hawkins addressed the Conference, making felicitous speeches.

The personnel of the Conference was strikingly fine. The business was dispatched with ease and thoroughness. When addressing the Conference, making and arguing motions or resolutions, or making reports, the women held up their heads, opened their mouths and spoke right out. Good! That is the way to do to be heard. Some of our brethren talk like they have hot mush in their mouths. It is too bad to afflict a congregation with such "throaty" talking. Let us all be careful at this point.

I was very much impressed with the way the women dealt with the discrepances in some reports they had under consideration. They just went after things in a business-like way. It made me think of some troubles of the same kind we have in our Conference sessions. Our secretaries and treasurers have a mighty hard time to make things balance all right in the matter of membership and moneys collected. If any bank were to keep books and accounts as loosely as some of our preachers do, it would not be long until its doors would be closed.

What are we going to do about this careless reporting? I move that we turn these careless preachers over to the Missionary women. They will straighten them up or run them out. Will anybody second my motion? I am sure the women will attend to them. I am going to whoop up the women when they begin the castigation. I am going to say to them, "Lay on, MacDuff!"

A very interesting time to me was when they announced luncheon (I call it dinner). If that was simply a luncheon, I would be afraid to see Weems and Jones at a dinner. What a spread the good women of McComb laid! The "vittels" were good and bountiful. It was served in a most gracious manner. I'll not soon forget that dinner—excuse me, "luncheon."

There were two or three things about that dinner that made me "sit up and take notice." They sure enough practiced "close communion." That is not just a la Methodist. What have you got to say about that, Henry? They segregated us men. They put us all at a table by our lonesome selves. The women wouldn't let us—"their lords"—eat and drink with them at all. If anybody should call this in question, let him write to Hicks Ellis and ask him about it.

Another thing seemed strange to me. The Methodist Church has always preached against "caste." But I am reliably informed that the women practiced it at the Conference. Didn't they put all the preachers' wives by themselves at one table and refuse to let anybody else's wife eat with them? Didn't they flatly refuse to let the officers eat at the same table with the "high privates?" I don't know what we will have to do about this breach of Methodist practice. I guess we will have to go to them and work with them. And if they don't mend their ways, will have to go to them again and take two or more witnesses with us. And then, if they don't hear us, we will just have to let them go and do just as they have always done—just as they please. I am sure that is the safest way we can deal with the matter. I am told that Mrs. Lewis got in a little late for dinner, and they penalized her by making her eat with the privates. If this is not true, I hope Mrs.

Lewis will drop me a card denying it. It is mighty bad for a president to be tardy.

The officers were all re-elected except Mrs. D. M. Key, who asked to be excused. Mrs. Robert Ricketts was elected to fill her place as treasurer.

About one-fourth of the membership of the Conference were wives of our preachers. Isn't that a significant and wonderful fact? The preachers' wives, and daughters as well, are big factors in the work of the church. Let everybody say, "Hurrah for the preachers' wives!"

The next conference will be held at First Church, Laurel.

"THE DISCOVERY OF THE PHILOSOPHER'S STONE."

By Rev. Jas. M. Lewis.

In looking over one of my notebooks the other day I came across notes I had taken on a lecture delivered by Dr. J. W. Lee at the Divinity School in the summer of 1912. Those who heard that lecture on the above subject were profoundly impressed with the depth of knowledge and far-sighted vision of the learned Doctor.

In this article I shall attempt to give the great secret that was revealed to me in that lecture.

Dr. Lee began his lecture by stating that "The discovery of radium in 1898 was the most remarkable feature in all history." "All things that are made, are made out of some ONE thing." To find what that one thing is and to solve the problem of reducing all things to that one thing was the discovering of the Philosopher's Stone.

The Greeks narrowed the conception of the Philosopher's Stone to that which could be couched in natural terms—a formula that could produce gold, and gold in abundance was to their minds the great elixir of life. There were three forms of the Philosopher's Stone mentioned in those early days: 1. The great elixir, a red tincture transmuting metals into gold; 2. The elixir vitae, restoring youth and prolonging life; 3. The lesser elixir, a white tincture changing metals into silver. It was the first conception or form of the Philosopher's Stone that kept the alchemists of the Middle Ages busy in their laboratories trying to discover the right formula that would produce the object of their desires—GOLD. About the twelfth century a little, transparent brittle, ruby-like substance was finally produced that was called the real Philosopher's Stone. After the thirteenth century there was put into the conception of the "stone" the power to transform morals—it would add virtue and wisdom and the purification of the soul to the one wearing the Philosopher's Stone.

At the coming of John Dalton (1766-1844), the science of chemistry was completely revolutionized. It was his progressive development of the atomic theory, resolving all things down to the atom, which upset the theories of all past alchemists and set in motion a skeptical idea in relation to the mechanism of all things. (Dalton, of course, was not to blame for the skeptical ideas of the so-called learned materialists and scientists who followed him.)

Dr. Lee says that "materialism reached its high tide between 1870 and 1880, and there was the cry among those who professed that 'there was no God and no need of one.'" They said "all life is found in the atom, generating, self-producing life, and the world and all that therein is, evolved from this generating, life-giving substance found in the atom."

It was Sir William Crookes who recognized "the separate existence of particles of mass smaller than that of the hydrogen atom. He took the position that the luminous streams ("cathode rays") that proceed from the cathodes of highly exhausted vacuum tubes are composed of tiny material particles moving away from the cathode like a storm of projectiles. "J. J. Thomson in 1897, succeeded in completely demonstrating the general correctness of Crookes' hypothesis and in defining very closely the nature of the rays." Lord Kelvin, in a paper called "Aepinus Atomized," substantiates the claims of Thompson and in the experiments of Zeemer they are completely verified. These smaller particles of which the atom is composed are called "electrons," and, as Dr. Lee expressed it: "They are packed away in the atom like sardines in a can." There are many thousands of them, all in motion, and are seemingly alive. All substances are composed of atoms. There are different kinds of atoms—those composing hard and those composing soft substances. While there are different kinds of atoms, yet all atoms are composed of the same kind of electrons. That is—to put it in the words of Dr. Lee—"electrons are all alike."

In 1898, M. and Mme. Curie and M. Bemont discovered radium. When it was discovered Dr. Lee said, "it upset the scientists and materialists, and it put all the theories of the atoms from 400 B. C. to this day out of date." It set in motion a deeper study of the atoms and of the electrons composing the atoms. It was discovered that something more than 220,000 electrons were in an atom—that the force of the atom was on the inside, and that force was in each one of those electrons composing the atom. What is it in the electron which gives the atom that force and power? Dr. Lee makes the statement, that "all electrons in their last analysis are reduced to ether."

Of course the "ether" Dr. Lee has reference to, is not that ether that lulls people to sleep; it is derived from the Latin "aether," and means "upper air." It is a medium into which electrical sound-waves, if you please, advance, and is sometimes called "luminiferous ether." It is the last substance into which any and all things are reduced. "All things are made from or with ether, and can be reduced back to ether. It is the final substance and it must have a God back of it." It is this fact that sent a bombshell into the camp of the materialist and which has kept him floundering ever since.

We are told in the blessed Bible that God made this old world out of nothing; that He spoke the Word and everything swung into being. I well remember the expression on Dr. Lee's face when he made the remarkable statement that, "any one could hold enough ether between the palms of his hands for God to take and make another system of worlds like the one we have." I firmly believe when God said "let there be light, and there was light," that this light is that "luminiferous ether" emanating from the Father—that created light which was separated from the outer darkness.

Dr. Lee, in closing that most wonderful lecture, said: "The search of the Philosopher's Stone was ended in ether. You can turn it into anything and turn everything back into ether." "The real thing in the universe is God, and his child." "Love is the Philosopher's Stone in God and Man."

I have been thinking of late, Where can you, where can I find the real Philosopher's Stone, that mysterious thing that will bring peace, happiness, joy, the spirit of youth and love into our lives and make us blessings to this troubled and tired old world? and the answer is, "It is found, my friend, in the Christ-like spirit of unselfish service to our fellow-men."

CENTENARY GROUP MEETINGS, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Since my last letter, I have finished the group meetings in the Hattiesburg District, also held the meetings at Brookhaven and McComb in the Brookhaven District, and the meeting at Newton in the Newton District, and before you read this article the group meetings in Seashore District will have been held. The interest has been splendid and the outlook promising. In every group those attending have said they were going to do their best to bring up their churches to date.

Some have already gone "over the top." Much depends upon the preparation you make for the campaign, March 26-April 2. Be sure that your "minute men" make their speeches before every service; that your treasurer makes his statement of how every subscriber stands; that your "collecting committee" is organized and ready; that the letters to subscribers mailed to your treasurers are gotten into the subscribers' hands.

Let's all work together, to accomplish that for which we have planned.

Yours for service,

W. D. HAWKINS,

Conference Centenary Treasurer.

NOTICE TO THE COLLEGES AND CHURCHES OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

I am authorized by the authorities of our Millsaps, Whitworth, and Port Gibson Colleges, and the Seashore Camp Ground School to offer a scholarship, covering the tuition fee, to the pastoral charge in each district of the Mississippi Conference, that, by the 1st of May, raises the highest percentage of its contribution to the Christian Education Campaign.

The official boards of the charges winning these scholarships will select the young man or young woman to whom the scholarship is to be awarded, and will also select the school which the student desires to attend.

J. M. MORSE, Secretary-Treasurer.

PERSONALITY.

By L. D. Stearns.

On my return from a shopping trip last evening I paused before the brilliantly lighted window of a furniture store. Within, the arrangement was that of a luxurious living room. Every color harmonized; soft draperies—beautiful rugs—an exquisite vase met the gaze beguilingly. It was so beautiful it almost hurt, as one wondered, for a moment, how it would feel to possess it and then be obliged to leave it for that last long trip on which possessions are left behind.

In almost the same instant I was visioning a home where I had formerly often called, in which all the appointments had of old been beautiful, homey and restful. But a new atmosphere had crept in with a new inmate; the quiet beauty was a thing of the past—efficient service vanished—all system fled. And the memory of it hurt for a moment, even as had the beauty of the other; for beneath the surface thought was the realization that at some point during the change a spirit that had started toward a high goal had lost its grip and courage and was now groping almost fearfully on.

All the mere things—the pictures, and other works of art, the soft draperies, flowers and birds—are still there; one simply doesn't see them any more. For the one drew the shades at just the right angle, coaxed the flowers into bloom and saw that no one was homesick or dull, singing steadily on while her own heart was breaking, seems to have carried with her into the far country something one never realized she had.

So, after all, it is not things, but personality, that counts.

The Law of Life and of God is very sure, and very just. We build to-day, and we reap to-morrow. Always, within, the process of construction is going on; a line of strength added here, a touch of beauty and grace there; weakness; deterioration; perceptions dulled or quickened according to the way we grow. Yet somehow, even as we acknowledge the justice, we can but pity him who trades his most valued possession for what he deems a precious jewel, only to find it a bit of common stone. And we pause and wonder a little space that one forgets so easily at times where honor lies—forgets that when ready at last to face and solve the "Great Mystery" we retain only that self-built personality that makes life and all its surroundings here either harmonious or discordant, base or fine.—American Messenger.

A LITTLE CARPENTER.

Close beside my bed at night
A little workman sleeps,
And, waiting for morn's early light,
His tools at hand he keeps.

So when the lids lift up each day,
And two brown eyes appear,
"Come, little carpenter," I say;
"O, see! The day is here!"

Then up my little workman springs,
And how the work does fly!
While merrily his gay voice rings—
"Who'll quicker build than I?"

Foundation posts he first puts down,
And fastens them with vim
In two small waiting shoes of brown;
He buttons sure and trim.

The sides he boards up in a rush,
With coat and trousers gray;
Nails down the roof with comb and brush—
The house is done, hooray!

A CONCENTRATING PLANT.

Martha Ralston came home from school one night with a determined look and more books than usual.

"We learned a new word at school to-day, mother," she explained. "It's a long, hard one—con-cen-tra-tion. It means putting your whole mind on what you are doing till it is done. Miss Mason says if we would do that we could do our work in half the time it takes now, and have the rest of the time for other things. It is true; I know it is. I spend two hours on home study and waste half of it talking or playing. To-night I'm going to concentrate, and then maybe I'll have an hour more to work on Christmas presents."

The Ralstons were such a comfortable family to live with. When one had a new plan, the others all tried to help it along. So when Martha spread out her books and set to work, the rest let her quite alone.

"It's so easy, mother," whispered Martha, delightedly, when she changed books at the end of fifteen minutes; but almost at that same instant there was a clatter of feet outside, the front door flew open, and in rushed a gay party of young people who wanted to take big sister May to a concert.

One of the young men, who was fond of children, tilted Martha's chair until she rolled out of it, and in the romp that followed she forgot there was such a thing as concentration. When it was all over, she glanced at the clock in dismay.

"Oh, mother! Twenty minutes wasted!" she cried, and flew to her books again.

All went well for ten minutes more, then there was a shriek from the kitchen that struck terror to every heart. As one person, the Ralston family hurried out to see what had happened.

"I told them to send me sliced bacon, and they sent me a big, ugly chunk. I thought I'd slice it to-night in case I should oversleep, and look at that!" wailed Katie, flourishing her wounded forefinger. "It's a piece of my mind they'll get in the morning."

When Katie's finger was safely tied up, Martha ran back to the living room to find ten more minutes gone. She was working hard to make up the lost time when a tiny draft from somewhere struck the light globe over her head, and it flew, Fred said, "into a million pieces." Not near so many as that, of course, but it took a long time to find them all and to put on a new globe.

Martha gazed at the clock despairingly. A whole hour gone and very little done.

"Mother, I ask you, how could any one concentrate in a place like this?" she exclaimed.

"It isn't always so bad as this; but there will be many interruptions. Do the best you can to-night, and I will put my thinking cap on," said mother, soothingly.

Martha had great confidence in mother's thinking cap; so she was not at all surprised when she came home the next night to find the new concentrating plant all ready. The old piano nobody ever played on had been moved out of the alcove into the attic, where it was just as well off and not at all in the way. The old dining table had been moved into the vacant place and covered with felt; and the big student lamp had been brought down and polished and filled. It had a green shade; gave a soft, clear light; and was warranted not to explode without warning. The alcove curtains shut this cozy corner quite away from the rest of the living room.

"This is to be the children's study," said mother, smiling, "and there will be just one rule: Anybody that wants to talk must get up and get outside at once. Visitors won't disturb you if you keep still, for they won't know you are here; and if there is any unusual noise outside, you must not notice it. That is partly what concentration means—paying no attention to what doesn't concern you."

"That's what Miss Mason said," Martha agreed; "but when people roll you around and things explode on you, you can't help being disturbed. I sha'nt mind just noise. If it gets too bad, I'll put my fingers in my ears."

It was Father Ralston who first called the new study a concentrating plant. A concentrating plant, he explained, is a place where ores are crushed and worked over and valuable metals taken out of them. The young Ralstons, he said, were getting something more valuable than gold out of their "plant"—precious knowledge and precious time. Martha agreed with him. Her lessons were better prepared; and yet she easily saved an extra hour for other things.—Baptist Boys and girls.

NELL'S ECONOMY.

"Let's go in here and get ice cream," suggested Grace.

"I can't afford it," returned Nell. "My allowance won't hold out till the end of the month, if I don't economize."

"O, economize!" snapped Grace. "I think it's little to be always thinking about every five cents before you spend it."

Nell said nothing. Her father was poor, and Grace's allowance was twice as large as hers. Yet the next day as they walked home from school together Grace exclaimed: "Oh dear! I forgot I needed new gloves and did not ask mother for the money. I've spent all my allowance, and she won't let me charge things. How provoking!"

"I can lend it to you if you like," said Nell, quietly, taking out her purse. Grace hesitated and then accepted.

"Thank you so much, Nell! I'll give it back to you next week."

A girl stopped them to ask for a contribution to the Red Cross. Nell had a quarter to spare.

"I'm so sorry! I spent my last penny on soda water," confessed Grace.

A little newsboy proffered a card, asking contributions for a case of destitution; and for this, too, Nell could spare a dime, while Grace had nothing.

"Your way is the best, Nell," Grace was obliged to own. "My allowance is larger than yours, and yet you have had money to lend and to give for charity, and I spent all of mine on myself and have nothing to show for it. I'll try your way after this."

"It's only not to waste it," said Nell, simply.

CONSECRATION.

"Few years, no wisdom, no renown,
Only my life can I lay down!
Only my heart, Lord, to thy throne
I bring, and pray
That child of thine I may go forth,
And spread glad tidings through the earth,
And teach sad hearts to know thy worth.
Lord, here am I."

We need to get this matter of consecration down out of cloudland into the region of actual, common daily living. We sing about it and pray for it and talk of it in our religious meetings, ofttimes in glowing mood, as if it were some exalted state with which earth's life of toil, struggle, and care had nothing whatever to do. But the consecration suggested by the living sacrifice is one that walks on the earth, that meets life's actual duties, struggles, temptations, and sorrows, and that falters not in obedience, fidelity, or submission, but follows Christ with love and joy wherever he leads.—J. R. Miller.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

WORLD SUNDAY, MARCH 26.

On Sunday, March 26, every Centenary subscriber is expected to make a payment on Centenary pledge—every one, at least, not paid to date. The need for your help is so urgent that even if a real sacrifice is demanded, you should count it a privilege to have some share in answering this call from every mission field of the church. Let's make on that day a record worthy of our great church. IT MUST BE DONE.

ONE MILLION DUE PASTORS.

What of the nearly $1,000,000 now due, past due, our pastors of mission charges in the home field? These faithful men on the hard charges need this money; we promised this help in our Centenary program and in our Centenary subscriptions. Ten per cent of the Centenary payments of any Conference goes to that Conference for its own missions. In paying your Centenary pledge you serve, first of all, the mission pastors in your own Conference.

AN UNFINISHED TASK.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has an unfinished task in every field in which it has work. This unfinished task is represented in the difference between the Centenary pledge and Centenary payments. Shall we leave it unfinished, or shall we carry on? There is but one answer to that question for a church that gives first place to the interests of the Kingdom of Christ. Our own church will give that answer in the sacrifices of its people.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL RECORD.

The good record in Centenary giving made by the Sunday school is known to the church. With unfavorable conditions in the country generally, 1921 payments went beyond the 1920 total—this is far better than the record made in payments on individual pledges. It is one of the many indications that the church of the future is to attempt bigger things than our faith to-day dares to undertake. And it is proof that the Centenary still holds the interest and the faith of the church.

In payments to date to the Centenary the Sunday schools have gone well beyond $800,000, this nearly as much as the entire church paid on regular assessments for foreign missions during any like period before the Centenary came. If this does not hearten us, we are not able to see the light shining above us and around us; it is cause for thanksgiving to the Head of the church.

But the goal to be reached by the Sunday school is: "One Million Dollars for Missions by March 31." With a little extra effort, it can be reached. To be so near, and yet fail, would be a real calamity, and we believe that our Sunday school people will see to it that we do not fail. This extra effort is to be put forth within the next two weeks, and the appeal goes out to every pastor, Sunday school superintendent, treasurer, and to all our Sunday school people. Send your Sunday school Centenary money now on hand and the amount secured by this special effort to John Edgerton, Treasurer, Centenary Building, Nashville, Tennessee, and send not later than March 27.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The American Bible Society is producing a small volume of Scripture selections for the blind.

A note from Rev. C. F. Sheppard, of Athens, La., informs us that the work goes well on that charge.

An Epworth League has recently been organized at Coahoma, Miss., with a membership of 22. This is the first League ever organized at that place.

Plans are under way for the erection of a new church at Osyka, Miss., the old church to be used as a Sunday school building. Rev. H. E. Raley is the pastor.

We have heard good reports of the work of Rev. Claude P. Jones at Magnolia, Miss. Large congregations are attending the regular services of the church.

The new Algiers Methodist church, Rev. C. C. Wier, pastor, will be dedicated at 4:30 o'clock, Sunday afternoon, March 26, Bishop W. F. McMurry officiating.

Rev. C. S. Moody, Hattiesburg, Miss., Route 6, requests us to say that he would like to get in communication with some one who has a second-hand set of the Pulpit Commentary for sale.

The Sunday School Outlook is the name of a new monthly periodical issued under the auspices of the Louisiana Conference Sunday School Board. The March number is devoted largely to the Federation meeting at Mansfield, March 21-23.

It has been announced that Dr. S. A. Steel will give a course of Bible lectures at the First Methodist Church, Greenville, Miss., beginning on Monday, March 20. Dr. Steel is giving a similar course of lectures this week at Clarksdale, Miss.

Last week we reported the serious illness of Rev. W. J. Porter, our pastor at Columbia, La. Under date of March 5, his daughter wrote that his condition was unchanged. Let prayer continue to be made for the recovery of this good man.

While in McComb, Miss., on Thursday of last week, we learned that Mrs. A. S. Oliver, wife of the pastor of the La Branch Street Church at that place, was seriously ill. We earnestly trust that the worst is past and that she is on the road to recovery.

Rev. J. H. French gives an encouraging account of the work on the Marksville charge, Louisiana Conference. A circuit-wide canvass for subscriptions to the Advocate is being conducted, a "helper" having been selected at each of the four appointments.

Brother Jno. P. Rembert, formerly a Mississippian, but now living at Longview, Texas, in a business letter to the Advocate office, states that his pastor is in great favor with the people, and that he has received 94 members into the church within three months.

"We are lining up our forces here for the World Sunday Centenary collection," writes Rev. S. W. Johnson, from Leakesville, Miss.

Rev. R. E. Woodfin, of the Marietta charge, North Mississippi Conference, writes that he likes his work and that he is looking forward to and praying for a great revival this year. His good people are interested with him in the work.

The committee appointed by the recent session of the Louisiana Conference to arrange for a Preachers' Institute at Centenary College had a meeting on Friday of last week and fixed June 1-8 as the time for holding the Institute. A splendid program is being planned.

Rev A. J. Coburn is meeting with gratifying success in his work at Kentwood, La. The Sunday school has an enrollment of 164, and the attendance averages about 70 per cent of the enrollment. The congregations at the preaching services are increasing in size.

Through the kindness of the Sunday School Field Secretary, Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, we have received the first issue of the Sunday School Messenger, published under the auspices of the North Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board. It is full of interesting Sunday school material.

The Oak Bowery church of the Seminary charge, Mississippi Conference, was recently destroyed by fire. The Baptist brethren have tendered the pastor, Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook, the use of their church until we can rebuild. The work on the Seminary charge is moving along well.

We take the following from the Pacific Methodist Advocate of March 2: "Rev. Dan E. Kelley, of Hattiesburg, Miss., has just closed a fine meeting in our Centenary Church, Modesto, Rev. Chas. P. Martin. There were sixteen additions and the whole church was quickened spiritually. It was a glorious revival."

While in Brookhaven, Miss., last week, it was our privilege to inspect the new gymnasium of Whitworth College and to see some of the gymnastic drills under a skillful instructor. It is our opinion that the physical benefit derived from this systematic training is of itself worth the cost of a year's stay at this great school.

We are distressed to learn that Rev. J. D. Harper, the Nestor of the Louisiana Conference, is seriously ill of pneumonia at his parsonage home in McDonoghville, just across the river from New Orleans. We are sure that earnest prayer will be made by many for the recovery of this nobleman in the Kingdom of God.

The work at Oberlin, on the Elizabeth charge, Louisiana Conference, is in fine shape. The officials have increased the assessment $200 since the first quarterly conference, and have paid in full through March. The church at Elizabeth is also doing fine work. It pays $1200 for two Sundays a month. Rev. J. F. Waltman is the pastor.

A good report comes to us of the work at Coffeeville, Miss., where Rev. W. F. Rogers is pastor. The good women are raising money to paint the parsonage, and are active in other ways. The Sunday school, under the direction of Mr. J. N. Bailey, is doing fine work. The midweek prayer meeting is one of the finest features of the work.

Just as Rev. S L. Riggs, our faithful pastor at Opelousas, La., was recovering from a recent serious surgical operation he was stricken with an attack of acute malaria, and it will be several weeks before he will be able to fill his pulpit. At the same time, Mrs. Riggs was smitten with influenza. We pray that the health of these splendid Christian workers may soon be restored.

Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of tho Alexandria District, Louisiana Conference, calls attention to the fact that the quarterly conference announcement for the Pleasant Hill charge does not appear in the list of the second round. The conference will be held at Marthaville, on April 2. He also announces a change in the date of the Provencal conference, from May 14 to April 28.

A note from Rev. W. M. Sullivan, presiding elder of the Seashore District, Mississippi Conference, brings the sad news of the death of William Denson Landrum, young son of Rev. V. R. Landrum, our pastor at Americus, Miss., on March 8, after a three weeks' illness. He was buried at Lyman, Miss., on March 10. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing family and friends.

Mr. Geo. B. Ramsey, for forty years a steward in the Methodist church at Durant, Miss., died suddenly at his home on Wednesday, March 1. He was a son of the late Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, of the North Mississippi Conference. He was buried from the church on Saturday, March 4, his pastor, Rev. R. P. Neblett, officiating. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing friends and loved ones.

The February number of the Millsaps College Bulletin is devoted especially to the interests of the new Religious Education Department of tho college, functioning under the direction of Professor C. A. Bowen. The outlines of courses offered in this Department show that exceedingly valuable work is being done. The Bulletin also contains many interesting notes of the activities of the alumni of the collego.

Rev. J. B. Randolph, presiding elder of the Corinth District, North Mississippi Conference, requests us to announce a change of date for tho second quarterly conference of the Tishomingo circuit, from March 21 to April 13, tho place of meeting—Salem—remaining the same. This change is made necessary because the pastor, Rev. W. T. Bazzell, represents Tishomingo County in the State Legislature, which is now in session.

We came across recently the following interesting statistics showing tho number of beneficiaries of the funds for the support of superannuated preachers, their widows and dependent children, of the churches named: Methodist Episcopal Church, 8000; Southern Baptist, 800; Congregational, 750; Church of the Disciples, 287; United Lutheran, 640; Canadian Methodist, 455; Protestant Episcopal, 627; Presbyterian, 1881; Southern Presbyterian, 309.

We clip the following from the Texas Christian Advocate of March 2, the announcement being signed by Bishop W. N. Ainsworth: "Rev. J. Fisher Simpson, formerly pastor at San Benito, is appointed presiding elder of the Cuero District, in place of Rev. A. L. Scarborough, deceased. Rev. J. C. Campbell, formerly pastor at Seguin, is appointed pastor at San Benito, and Rev. J. W. Chisholm, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, is appointed pastor at Seguin."

Rev. E. C. Terry, a local preacher of the Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference, died at the home of his son, Rev. W. A. Terry, in Summit, Miss., on Thursday of last week. His home was at McCall's Creek. He had recently undergone a severe surgical operation, from which it was thought he was recovering. He was 74 years of age. He was a faithful servant of the Lord. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to his bereaved loved ones and friends. The son, Rev. W. A. Terry, is pastor of the Summit and Topisaw charge.

We have received a copy of the Minutes of the Thirty-sixth Session of the China Conference, held at Soochow, China, October 19-24, 1921. In the absence of a bishop, Dr. A. P. Parker was elected president. We were forcibly reminded that we were reading the Minutes of a Chinese Conference when, in answer to the question, "Who are admitted on trial?" our eyes fell on the following: "Vong Kwe-sung, Li Liang-ting, Nyi Tsi-kwan, Dzau Nyoh-z, Sung Ten-daung." The volume gives a full account of the China Conference and of the China Mission Meeting.

Miss Mollie Higginbotham, of Mer Rouge, La., is one of the Advocate's best friends. For several years she has looked carefully after the interests of tho paper in her community, sending us many new subscribers and renewals. We regret very greatly to learn that she was unable to do this work this year on account of ill health, and we earnestly pray that she may soon be restored to health. We sincerely thank her for all she has done. We are greatly indebted to Mrs. Lawson Higginbotham for taking over this work of love and for sending us a fine list of renewals.

We had the pleasure of visiting and addressing the Annual Meeting of the Mississippi Conference Woman's Missionary Society, in session at McComb, Miss., last week. There were 121 delegates in attendance, and the reports of the work were most encouraging. If we heard correctly, a total of $19,234.31 was raised last year. The Pledge for this year amounted to $8,731.50—a healthy increaso over the same item last year. Mrs. B. F. Lewis makes a most efficient president. Mrs. P. L. Cobb was the Council visitor, and the devotional studies conducted by her were exceedingly helpful.

It was the privilege of the editor of the Advocate to attend two Centenary group meetings within the bounds of the Brookhaven District last week—one at Brookhaven and the other at McComb. The interest manifested in the other meetings attended was evident in these, and there is good reason to believe that the Brookhaven District will make a fine record during the week following World Sunday. Rev. H. M. Ellis, the presiding elder, is vigorously and enthusiastically pushing the cause, and he is being ably seconded by the pastors and laymen of the district. The pastor-hosts of these two group meetings—Rev. W. H. Lewis at Brookhaven and Rev. Geo. H. Thompson at McComb—extended delightful courtesies to all the visitors. The editor, in company with Mr. W. D. Hawkins, greatly enjoyed the hospitality of Dr. I. W. Cooper's home on Wednesday night.

An attendance contest, beginning March 5 and ending May 28, has been arranged between the Sunday school at Merryville, La., and at De Ridder, La., the contest to be decided on the percentage of increase in membership and attendance, using two-thirds of the membership reported at the last Annual Conference as a basis, giving Merryville 121 and DeRidder 179. The rules of the contest provide that no one shall be counted who arrives later than 10:30, that only those are to be counted new members who attend three Sundays and express their intention of becoming members, and that the superintendent of each school report to the other by telephone at 10:40 each Sunday morning so that the status of the contest may be known by each school. The losing school will present a pennant to the winner and entertain at a union picnic, the time and place of tho latter to be determined. The pastor and the superintendent at Merryville are Rev. Robert M. Brown and Mr. R. H. Nelson, and at DeRidder, Rev. H. W. Rickey and Mr. J. H. Cain. Reports of the contest will be furnished the Advocate each week.

DE RIDDER-MERRYVILLE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONTEST.

Mr. R. H. Nelson, superintendent of the Merryville, La., Sunday school, sends us the following report for last Sunday:

DeRidder had 220 present; Merryville had 305 present. DeRidder's total gain, 56; Merryville's total gain, 255.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. W. Winans Drake, Shreveport, La., 4; Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, Poplarville, Miss., 6; Rev. S. W. Johnson, Leakesville, Miss., 2; Rev. C. T. Floyd, Evansville, Miss., 10; Rev. J. T. Abney, Gallman, Miss., 3; Rev. E. S. Lewis, Greenville, Miss., 13; Rev. W. F. Henderson, Jr., Zwolle, La., 2; Rev. D. B. Raulins, Shreveport, La., 5; Rev. C. F. Sheppard, Athens, La., 2; Rev. W. F. Rogers, Coffeeville, Miss., 2; Mrs. Lawson Higginbotham, Mer Rouge, La., 14; Rev. W. J. Ferguson, Yazoo City, Miss., 2; Rev. E. E. McKeithon, Houston, Miss., 2; Rev. E. C. Driskell, Buena Vista, Miss., 4; Rev. R. G. Lord, Abbeville, Miss., 3.

THE JURY AS AN INSTRUMENT OF JUSTICE.

Some time ago,, after a sensational trial in which the interest of the nation was more or less centered, the jury disagreed. So far as newspapers sentiment reflects popular sentiment, it would seem that practically the entire nation regarded the accused as a beast and desired the administration of rigid and unrelenting justice. More recently a Chicago judge severely reprimanded a jury for setting a man free when the evidence plainly showed that he was a brutal murderer. The judge said to them: "You have turned a murderer loose on the streets to menace again the lives of the innocent." The police forces of all our large cities have become practically demoralized because magistrates, juries and judges in so many cases free persons guilty of the most serious offences and against whom evidence of guilt of the most convincing character has been presented. Practically all courts of the criminal law are infested with professional witnesses and professional jurymen. These perjurers make very difficult the path of men seeking a speedy and just decision of any case under the law. The personnel of the ordinary jury is of low grade as to both character and mentality. When men of character are required to serve as jurymen they are allowed ordinarily to sit only in the adjudication of relatively minor and unimportant cases. The ordinary "hard boiled" criminal law practitioner does not want men of intelligence and character as jurymen. He wants men wholly pliable to his will and purpose. The average county pays little attention to the character of its jury commissioner. The public welfare requires that he be a high-grade man, and the public conscience ought to insist that he be just that sort of man.—The United Presbyterian.

I would be quiet, Lord,
Nor tease nor fret;
Not one small need of mine
Wilt thou forget.

What I most crave perchance
Thou wilt withhold,
As we from hands unmeet
Keep pearls or gold.

Yet chose thou for me—thou
Who knowest best;
This one short prayer of mine
Holds all the rest.

—Julia C. R. Dorr.

EDWARD H. STEPHENS was born Feb. 2, 1896, in Jefferson County, Mississippi, and died Aug. 16, 1921, in Shreveport, La., aged 25 years and 5 months. The funeral service was held at Mizpah Church, of which he was a member, conducted by Rev. M. Ainsworth. Beneath a wealth of flowers, surrounded by numerous friends and loved ones, we sadly laid his body to rest in the Stephens Cemetery, near Fayette, Jefferson County, Mississippi. He was the only son and brother. God only knows how we loved him. Just two weeks before his death he came to see us; how we enjoyed his visit home! He talked of future plans, how bright his life seemed before him. But God knew best. How we miss his letters, and visits home! It was so hard to give him up, but we bow in humble submission to the will of God. Dear brother, you are not forgotten. Though afflicted, we are not alone. God gave, and God hath taken. Blessed Lord, thy will be done.

SISTER.

STEVEN P. DALRYMPLE was born in Florence, Ala., Dec. 5, 1855, and died at his home in Guntown, Miss., Feb. 25, 1922. He moved from Alabama to Mississippi in 1871, and was married to Miss Dona Elkins in 1881, who, with seven children, survives him. Brother Dalrymple had been in the mercantile business for about 35 years. This made him one of the pioneer business men of the town. In business he was safe and sane. Brother Dalrymple was a quiet, unassuming gentleman of the old type. He was a man whom to appreciate you had to know. In my short acquaintance with him I learned to appreciate him more and more as I learned him better. When Brother Dalrymple was stricken with illness about ten weeks before his death his friends did not realize the seriousness of his condition and thought it would be only a short time till he would be back at his post. When finally the seriousness of his condition was realized, there was nothing heard but expressions of regret. Brother Dalrymple had been a member of the Methodist Church for about 40 years. He was not a demonstrative man and therefore lived a quiet, unassuming life. As the end was drawing near, even during the time of unconsciousness, he was heard to hum "Blessed assurance, Jesus is mine," and on the morning of February 24, just as day was breaking, he gently fell asleep to awake on the last great day. Sunday, February 25, though dark and dreary, a great concourse of friends gathered at the home for the funeral service, and, after services by the writer, he was buried. His grave was a mound of flowers, the offering of his friends and neighbors.

C. WESLEY BALEY.

Guntown, Miss.

BEULAH PAULINE HOLDER, the oldest daughter of Rev. James Hardy Holder and Beulah Kizer Holder, was born at Lamar, Miss., November 5, 1902. She died February 10, 1922, at New Albany, Miss., at which place she was buried on the following day. Her father and two sisters, Jamie and Elizabeth, are left to keep the memory of her bright; the mother having gone on before, leaving this earth from Sardis, Miss., Dec. 26, 1916.

The above are some of the simple facts and dates concerning a life which burned fast but bright. Life was sweet to her, and she seemed to think that God had given her all the treasures of life for her to enjoy. We can not refrain from wishing that her stay here had not been so short, only nineteen short years, but when we see how full those years were of service the fact is forcibly impressed that life does not consist in years.

Pauline was a Christian, the example of the home life of her mother and father, dedicating her to the Heavenly Father in infancy, leading her feet to the door of the church where she entered as a member at the early age of seven. As a church member she demonstrated those Christian virtues which made her so attractive. Her buoyant spirit, her zeal for the cause of Christ, her willingness to work even to the limit of physical endurance if necessary, were marks of a Christian faith. After the death of her mother she became a little mother to her young sisters. She willingly stepped under the load and bore better than many. Her friends can be numbered by her acquaintances, for all responded to her spirit.

We buried her under a bank of flowers which loving hands had fashioned in wreaths and kind friends had sent. At the resurrection we shall see her.

W. R. LOTT.

Holly Springs, Miss.

I write to note the passing of three of our older members of the Oak Ridge charge, one at this church and two at Flower Hill. In their passing we miss their wise counsel and beneficent influence.

MRS. ELLEN DALTON died in the latter part of December after a severe illness of two months following a serious accident. She had long been a member of the Flower Hill church and took a vital interest in its services during the last year of her life, as she had for scores of years before. She was a bright and happy Christian and it was a real privilege to know her and be her pastor.

Brother TYRA M. DAVIDSON was converted during his last illness at the Vicksburg Sanitarium, under the helpful influence of Rev. R. Selby of Crawford Street Church, and was received into the church by the latter and the pastor at Oak Ridge, where Brother Davidson lived. His death came on December 27, after months of suffering, but through it all he remained true to the faith and trusted in his Savior to the last.

MRS. MARY RANEY had been an invalid for years and died on February 23 at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. J. W. Bradshaw. She was the oldest member of the Flower Hill church, and her devotion to it was beautiful in its sincerity. Though helpless in body, her mind was always bright and clear and her faith in God and in the future was always unshaken. A noble woman has gone from us.

The lives of these saints constitute a challenge to those of us who are younger, that we, too, will walk long and faithfully in the footsteps of our Master along the path where he leads us.

J. B. CAIN.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas our Heavenly Father has seen fit in his infinite wisdom to remove from the walks of men MATTHEW H. TURNER; and whereas the life of this noble and generous hearted man was a benediction to humanity; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we, the members of the quarterly conference of the Heidelberg charge, mourn the loss of a friend and brother in the church of God, and shall treasure in our hearts the memory of the deeds he did, and the life he lived. These shall ever be an inspiration to us.

2. That we extend to the family our sincerest sympathy, and share with them in no small measure the

BUSINESS MEN LEARN LESSON.

The conservative business man long ago learned the lesson that is sought to be taught by the annual observance of Thrift Week; months ago he realized that the excessive credits had brought him face to face with a real danger and that thrift was insistently demanded by the state of the business of the country, says the Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser.

DAUGHTER HAD TO HELP MOTHER

Now Can Do All Her Housework Alone Because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her

Jasper, Minn. — "I saw in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and took it because I was having such pains in my stomach and through my back that I could not do my work. I had tried other medicines, but none did me the good that your Vegetable Compound did. Now I am able to do all my work alone while before I had my daughter staying at home to do it. I have told a number of friends what it has done for me and give you permission to use my letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. JESSE PETERSEN, Route 1, Jasper, Minn.

There is no better reason for your trying Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound than this—it has helped other women. So if you suffer from displacements, irregularities, backache, nervousness or are passing through the Change of Life remember this splendid medicine. What it did for Mrs. Petersen it may do for you.

The Vegetable Compound stands upon a foundation of nearly fifty years of service.

Sunday School

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

North Mississippi Notes.

The Sunday School Messenger was cordially received by many of our workers. If you want it continued, say so.

Now is the time to organize those classes you have been promising to organize. While you wait, men perish. When they are gone, you cannot reach them.

Are you getting ready to hold those Four-Times-a-Year Institutes on your circuit? It is not possible to visit every church, but it is possible to help in many circuits where the workers come together. The roads will be good before you are ready to hold these institutes.

Kind brother, send me your order for Sunday School Day programs and thus save time and money—my time and your money. Order them so you can study them and be prepared to lay your plans intelligently. You remember, we are expecting every school in the Conference to give the children the instruction contained in these programs. The children are depending upon you; you will not defraud them out of their rights.

Quite a number have made reports of their intermediate and senior Wesley Bible classes on the blanks sent out several days since. You see, it is this way: You report to me; I report to the central office; the central office reports to the General Conference; the other churches see what we are doing; and what we are doing stimulates thousands and thousands of people to do better. But if we fail to report—then what? Make haste and send in your report before it is too late.

Courses have been outlined for the Sardis District, Grenada District, and Corinth District Standard Training Schools. We are to have some of our strongest instructors in each of these schools. The presiding elders, pastors, superintendents, and teachers are back of these schools and it is certain great good shall be accomplished in all of them. We have the promise of several praying people to ask God for a definite blessing upon these schools. Think of it, when you reach one teacher, you have possibly reached hundreds of lives this teacher may touch. It is a wonderful thing to get the young parents as well as those who are engaged in teaching in the Sunday schools to spend a week in serious study guided by a master

R. H. B. GLADNEY,
Field Secretary.

Children's Week.

There have been some questions in the mind of the person who was responsible in securing a key woman for the Sunday scrool, and possibly in the mind of the key woman, too. In looking over the plans for Children's Week, do you not see real need for this person? She may be your medium of communication, getting leaflets on arrangements, reporting your school as one to observe the "week," taking care of the report to be sent by filling out and returning, helping in numbers of ways to keep your school in touch.

There has been an unforeseen development in connection with the key woman. Some have been appointed without their consent. Let us at least serve notice, or we may be taking too much for granted. This should be a voluntary, pleasurable task, counted as a privilege to serve these "little ones." We have them with us to-day, and time will not turn back in its flight.

LYNDA RAMEY,
Conf. Elementary Sec'y.

Children's Week in Aberdeen Church.

At the church in Aberdeen, we decided to use the afternoon and evenings of the week. We began, first, with a meeting Monday night, of the officers and teachers. This meeting consisted of such exercises as we thought would get into our minds an idea of what we were trying to do. Next afternoon and evening we had the Adult Department. And so on through the week—every day we had certain departments present. The programs were arranged with special reference to the department that was under consideration for that day. We closed up the "week" with the littlo folks, on Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning. Refreshments were served each evening. Suitable programs were put on each day. The children of the departments, themselves, executed the program. Officers of the school were present at each service, though the different departments had only the teachers and pupils of that particular branch present for their special meetings. This prevented the confusion that so often interferes with good results when several interests are put on at the same time.

Our school was thoroughly delighted with the work of the "week." It was the universal opinion that it should be followed from year to year.

J. E. CUNNINGHAM.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Our Sixth Annual Sunday School Federation opens Tuesday, at 2 p.m., March 21, at Mansfield, with Mr. A. M. Mayo, of Lake Charles, presiding. Pastors and superintendents will please see that the best delegation possible is sent from each Sunday school. It would be better to bring than to send.

Some of the outstanding subjects that will be presented at the Federation are as follows: "Our Evangelistic Task," by Dr. W. W. Drake; "World Missions," by Bishop W. F. McMurry; "Christian Education," by the Secretary and Dr. Sexton; "Program of Work," by M. W. Brabham, of Nashville; "Sunday School Efficiency," by Rev. C. W. Owen and Rev. R. E. Stanford, of Nashville; "Children's Week," by Miss Sudduth, of Nashville, Tenn.; "Teacher-Training," by Rev. W. J. Pearson.

One of the most interesting parts of the Federation will be the Departmental Conferences under expert leadership.

The Standard Training School for New Orleans, April 2-8, will be the first of a number of training schools we have in mind for our great Conference.

C. D. ATKINSON, Sec'y.

FROM CARTHAGE, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: With a list of 10 new subscribers I send along a little report from our work, the Carthage charge.

We are now well into the third year of our pastorate, and everything bids fair for a good year. Our good people welcomed our return with a very nice Christmas pounding, bringing us a whole barrel of flour, a nice lot of sugar, and many other nice things, some of which we are still enjoying. This brings us under many obligations to them and causes us to feel like putting forth the best that is in us in service to them and for our Lord.

Our congregations are good and the church work seems to prosper along most lines. The Sunday school deserves special mention. Our church at Carthage has added another Sunday's service, making three Sundays now in each month.

We have organized one new church since Conference. The church at Goshen that has been a Congregational Methodist Church is now one of the churches of the Carthage charge, and bids fair to do a good work this year.

We are planning our revivals. The meeting at Carthage is already arranged. We are to have with us Brother C. M. Dunaway, of Decatur, Ga., beginning the third Sunday in August. Pray that we may have a great meeting, and a great year's work throughout the charge, and that our labors will be crowned with the addition of many souls to the church and to God's Kingdom.

Come to see us some time, Brother Carley, and we will let you preach to some of the best people you ever saw. May God bless you and the Advocate, and the whole church, is our prayer.

Yours sincerely,
T. B. WINSTEAD, P. C.

FINE REVIVAL AT DURANT, MISS.

The revival meeting which has been conducted at the Methodist church here for more than two weeks by Rev. Geo. Tucker, railroad evangelist, of Jackson, Tenn., came to a close Sunday night. Large crowds attended every service, the stores closed for the morning services and more than half of the pupils of the public school attended the day services. Many ministers from adjoining towns and people from the surrounding territory came in to the meeting when the weather permitted.

Last Sunday morning a total of 89 people joined the various churches of the town, with the visible result: 66 at the Methodist Church; 19 at the Baptist, and 4 at the Presbyterian. Many of the oldest citizens declare that "Not for more than twenty years has Durant been so stirred religiously." Men who had long passed and repassed upon the streets without speaking, shook hands, buried the hatchet, and promised to live for God. Women stood up in the crowded church and told how they had thrown their deck of cards in the fire and were through forever; others walked down the isles and gave their hand to the ministers, saying they were ready to quit dancing and anything else that would hinder their usefulness as Christians.

A total of 1,171 men attended the store meetings, held each afternoon at 4 o'clock, and 759 ladies attended the cottage prayer meetings, held in five different sections of the city at 2:30 each afternoon. During the second week large numbers were at the "mourners' bench," and 263 were converted or reclaimed, and testified to the gracious benefits received by the revival.

The song service, under the direction of Mr. Chas. B. Wiatt, of Barlow, Ky., was a great help, and Mr. Wiatt's solos were splendid gospel invitations, which drew the people to the meetings. In addition to the offering raised for the evangelist and his helper, a neat sum was sent to Mrs. Geo. Tucker, the minister's wife. Just before the benediction was pronounced, $500 was quickly raised to start a fund for procuring pews to furnish the new church which was erected a few years ago. Mr. Tucker goes from here to Gallatin, Tenn.

FROM CARROLLTON, MISS.

We have just had our second quarterly conference. All reports were good. All the Sunday schools, prayer meetings, the young people's organization, showed marked increase in numbers and general enthusiasm. S. L. Pope, the presiding elder, preached twice at the Carrollton church. His sermon at the evening hour, preached from the text, "Love never faileth" was a masterpiece, yet simple and warm with the Gospel spirit. All goes well.

FROM RIPLEY, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: We had two great services at the Methodist church here yesterday. Dr. W. C. Murphy, of the department of history in the University of Mississippi, spoke both morning and evening on the life of John Wesley and the beginnings of Methodism. The congregations were large and intensely interested in the addresses. I feel sure these services will mean much for Methodism in the years to come.

In the afternoon we organized a Junior congregation with about forty members present. The organization provides for a board of stewards and all other necessary officers. Regular preaching services for the Juniors will be held, and special programs rendered from time to time. The social life of the child is provided for also.

We purpose systematic training and instruction of these Juniors, looking to efficient leadership in the church of the future. Mr. Lee Cox, Mrs. Sam Fryar, and Miss Sallie Etta Brown will be associated with me in this special undertaking. The meeting was enthusiastic. S. A. BROWN.

March 6, 1922.

UNION METHODISM.

The work of our Methodist church at Union, Miss., is well above the average and deserves commendation. Every phase of the church life has an interest for the members of the church here. Our church is not strong in membership or finances, but it is alive to the calls of the gospel.

The men of our church and town have seen fit to have enacted a town ordinance which declares that public dances in Union are a "public nuisance." There is also a town law requiring that any show—picture show or circus—must get the permission of the presidents of the Woman's Missionary Societies of the town before they are allowed to show. Needless to say that this permission is hard to obtain.

Our Sunday school is as good as any in this district except that at First Church, Laurel; and, taking into consideration the membership of the church, it is ahead of that one. With a church membership of 215, our Sunday school attendance thus far in 1922 has averaged about 150. The school is alive in all particulars. The superintendent, Mr. L. Q. C. Williams, and his assistant, Mr. W. V. Horton, deserve credit for a great deal of the success of the school.

Frequently we see write-ups of the various Woman's Missionary Societies of our Conference, but none of them have shown the work of a better Society than the one at Union. The Society is not a one-woman Society, but has many women in it who are well qualified to lead. All the meetings are well attended and are very interesting. The Society also supervises the work of the Young People and the Juniors, and these two Societies are well worthy of praise.

The Epworth League here is young, being less than a year old, but is doing well when we consider its youth. The membership of the League is above forty.

The preaching services and prayer meeting services are well attended, and the numbers seem to be increasing. God has blessed the work of our church here, and our prayers are for a deeper spiritual awakening, which is so sorely needed here as elsewhere. * * *

GIRLS! LEMONS WHITEN HANDS

Press the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, which any drug store will supply for a few cents, shake well, and you have a quarter-pint of harmless and delightful lemon-bleach lotion to soften and whiten red, rough or chapped hands. This home-made lemon lotion is far superior to glycerin and rose water to smoothen the skin. Famous stage beauties use it to bleach and bring that soft, clear, rosy-white complexion, because it doesn't irritate.

A half time boarding school where grown, disadvantaged, young men and women from the Southern mountains by way of the cotton mills could earn in adult age that common learning which should have been their childhood heritage. Hundreds of those who toiled in the Southern mills when children are now toiling in this school, honestly earning a living and education at the same time, equipping themselves for leadership of a significant, social sort. They are sane, Christian, 100% American, Anti-bolshevistic, Altruistic.

The Institute Owns and Operates a Complete Cotton Mill

in which its students, once expert workers in other mills, now make marvelous shirtings, dress goods, romper cloth, etc., called "Character Cloth," (trade mark reg.) They work one week in the mill and go to school a week. The school pays them to work, and they in turn pay the school. The cloth is sold to meet expenses. Experts pronounce the cloth "incomparable." It is guaranteed superior to the best imported fabrics, and is cheaper in price. Sold through stores and by mail direct to the home where not carried by a local store. LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Our Corresponding Secretary "A Workman that Needeth Not to be Ashamed."

HER REPORT.

Number of Adult Auxiliaries, 135; number of Young People's Auxiliaries, 20; number of Junior Divisions, 37; Total number of Members Ad., Y. P., Jr., and Baby, 5176; number of Auxiliaries observing week of prayer, 65; number of Boxes of Supplies, 104; number of Missionaries Supported, 3; number of Louisiana girls in active service, 6; number Louisiana candidates in Scarritt Bible and Training School, 1; number Louisiana girls in training in college, 5; number of day schools supported, 1; number of Bible Women, 7; number of Scholarships, 8; Total amount sent Conference Treasurer, $23,971.97; increase over last year, $687.33.

The above figures speak but a small part of the work that has been done by the women, young people, and children of the Louisiana Conference this year; for the most important things cannot be tabulated. Even the figures are but a half-told tale, as it is almost impossible to get accurate reports from some of the auxiliaries.

According to the number of Adult membership reported, we passed the "goal of 4,000 members" by 56. Also in subscriptions to the Missionary Voice we went 131 over the 1,000 asked for.

The Alexandria District shows a 16 per cent increase in members, the Baton Rouge 11 per cent, the French Mission 1 per cent, Lake Charles 47 per cent, New Orleans a decrease of 12 per cent. Monroe-Ruston and Shreveport could not be estimated on account of a change in the boundary of the districts. The Shreveport District does not show as many auxiliaries reporting as last year and no report on the Week of Prayer. The entire Conference shows a 12 per cent increase in adult membership. With one exception all of the districts have held district meetings during the year. Lake Charles was unable to do so on account of continued illness in the family of the Secretary.

The New Orleans District reports 12 auxiliaries on the Honor Roll.

Lake Charles District reports one on the Honor Roll—De Ridder.

Monroe-Ruston District stands at the head of the list in the organization of new auxiliaries. She was also the first to send in a complete list of the new officers of auxiliaries, with New Orleans following second.

Shreveport District reports the largest number of subscriptions to the Voice and Young Christian Worker.

Shreveport Young People report the only Life Member for the year—Mrs. B. F. Key, Superintendent of Young People's work.

The following auxiliaries have been organized during the year: Castor, Campti, Gilead, Baton Rouge Y. P., Indian Bayou, Pickering, Lake Charles Y. P., Collinston, Jonesboro, Ferriday, Little Creek, Wesley Chapel, Eros Y. P., Delhi Y. P.

The final statement of the treasurer showed that we fell $69.46 short on the Pledge to the Council and while we regret this we can but feel that we did well in spite of the financial strain and the extra pledges of the Centenary and Educational Campaign. These two great movements have stimulated the churches to larger giving and the influence is felt in our missionary societies so that we are reaping in many ways the fruits of such a sowing. Let us not falter in our efforts to help bring these two claims up in full, for every foundation of all of our work is dependent upon the education and training of our young people.

The Secretary has kept a record of 100 letters written during the year giving and seeking information about the work. Others of less importance have been thrown in for "Lagniappe." She has gotten a list of all the pastors in the conference with their addresses for the District Secretaries except the Lake Charles District so that it may be possible for them to try to organize in every charge, and has visited the two institutions of the Council located in our Conference. I am happy to report that the bids have been accepted for the new St. Mark's Building and we hope by another year to report that we have moved in and are "moving on."

The visit to MacDonell Wesley House was one of unusual pleasure and interest for it chanced to be at the time of the dedication of the building by Bishop McMurry. I was impressed with the spiritual atmosphere as well as the neat and orderly appearance of the home and the happy and congenial personnel of the household. It is my pleasure to announce that there, too, is to be a considerable addition to the work at Wesley House in the erection of a new building to be used for an agricultural and vocational school for the French Mission Section. An appropriation has been made by the Council for the building and the Louisiana Conference is asked to support thirty scholarships at $150 each, which will make a small but worthwhile beginning.

Your secretary has written to each of the Louisiana girls on the Prayer Roll for this year with the exception of one whose address could not be obtained, Helen Johnston. So far as can be ascertained each of them is happy in her work. We hope our women have not failed them in their daily prayers.

We have been unable to get any data upon Tithing and Family Worship as the Record Books do not provide for these items.

Dr. P. E. Cobb, who is in charge of the Department of Spiritual Resources, has furnished me with some figures that may be of interest to you on this point. Early in the year he sent out cards to be signed by those having family worship and has had the following number of responses from the Louisiana Conference: Alexandria District, 47; Baton Rouge District, 7; Houma District, 7; Lake Charles District, 32; Monroe-Ruston District, 2; New Orleans District, 34; Shreveport District, 45; Total, 174. These figures were the report of six months and we trust they have more than doubled themselves in the remaining half of the year.

What more shall I say then? The year is passed, the records are closed. Much has been left undone that should have been done but let us not waste time in repining. Look the coming year straight in the face with a determination to make it the best year in our history. This is the Master's work. Let us not be unmindful of His call.

MRS. S. A. MONTGOMERY,
Corresponding Secretary.

FOURTH ANNUAL ASSEMBLY OF THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE, JUNE 13 TO 20.

We are delighted to announce the dates of our Fourth Annual State Epworth League Assembly for June 13-20, 1922, at the same place, namely, the Mansfield Female College, Mansfield, La. This date is one week later than it has been in the past, and there are several reasons why this date was accepted. First of all, we have received numerous requests during the past three years from school teachers and others who were in school asking for a later date. Second, the dates fit exactly with the Central Office schedule, and that means that we will get good help from headquarters.

The program for the Assembly is being constructed at the present time, and from all indications it will be a fine one, and there will be a very fine group of teachers and leaders on the faculty.

The theme of the program will be "Recreation," which will take in all lines of the Third Department work, and will equip our young people to do great things in their local communities.

We hope to be able to print in these columns at a very early date the faculty and a brief outline of the class work.

The past three assemblies have grown year by year in the chapter and church representation, and we are hoping that this year we will be able to have a delegate from at least seventy-five per cent of our pastoral charges. We are having large attendances, but we reached only fifty-two churches last year. Why not have every church in the State represented? We can do this if every pastor will determine to do so, and immediately get to work and look the field over, and then take the matter up with his people.

I would advise the Leagues not to put off raising their delegate fund, but do so at once if you have not already done so.

On account of the limited space which we have at the College, it will be necessary for all delegates to send in their registration as early as possible to Miss Julia Reid, Mansfield College, Mansfield, La., together with $1.00 registration fee. These registrations will be numbered and assigned accordingly.

Don't forget the dates, Leaguers—June 13 to 20.

Our slogan is, "Put on your hat and meet me at Mansfield."

MOTHER! CLEAN CHILD'S BOWELS WITH CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, give a teaspoonful to clease the liver and bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation poison, sour bile and waste out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful to-day saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM OXFORD, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Some weeks ago there appeared in the columns of your good paper an article from our much loved Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, in regard to organized Sunday school class activities, which inspires this report.

As Mrs. Wyatt was for several years a resident of this city, and an indispensable factor in our church life, and also a mutual friend, I deem it both a pleasure and a privilege to co-operate with her in magnifying this phase of Sunday school work.

I am happy to state that the old "Mothers' Class" of our Sunday school, founded back in the years and first taught by our noble Mrs. S. A. Murray, now of Jackson, and later by such beautiful characters as Mesdames Jas. Stone, J. M. Wyatt, and E. N. Lowe, has developed into an elegant and duly organized class of fifty active members, now known as "The Home-makers Class," and to say that they are "alive," "in love with each other," and "doing things," does not half express it. Their watchword is "Love" their motto "Others," and their class song, "Help Somebody To-day." They are beautifully exemplifying these virtues every day, and their influence is being felt at home and abroad.

Within a twelvemonth's period they have sent one box to the Orphans' Home valued at forty dollars; sent clothing and provisions to a widow and her family amounting to thirty dollars; sent to sick and shut-ins forty baskets of fruit and candy, valued at 75 cents each; systematically sent flowers to sick in homes and hospitals, also furnished flowers for the churches; pledged $25 to Methodist Hospital in Memphis; given $35 to the Junior Department of our Sunday school; sent a Christmas surprise box to our superintendent, containing a beautiful, old-fashioned poundcake; and given the teacher of the class a birthday shower, and, as a Christmas remembrance, a nicely bound copy of Peloubet's Notes. At the open meetings they have given from time to time bouquets to Men's Bible class; reception to officers, teachers, and societies of the church, luncheon to our splendid Young Men's Baraca Class—all these magnificently spiced with superb and inspirational programs and eats. These meetings have meant much for our church life, both socially and religiously.

At Thanksgiving, just as our good pastor and honorary member, Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, was returned to us for another Conference year, this class, which holds him in very high esteem, was wholly responsible for a truck-load of groceries and good things to eat of almost every conceivable kind, accompanied by a flattering representation of his parishioners swooping down upon the parsonage home and almost sweeping him and his fine family off their feet with pleasant surprise. They marched into the parlor, with Prof. Milden, of the University, as master of ceremonies. Toasts were given on behalf of the pastor and his family, interspersed with tears and songs of thanksgiving and brotherly love. Many of the old citizens declared that they had not seen it on this wise in Oxford before.

But as a close observer of true and genuine Christian character, I believe I am correct in declaring that the greatest achievements have been in the reflex influence fruiting in the deep piety of the individual members of this class. Suffice it to say, they have been a wellspring of joy to my soul, as I have for the past six years been pledged under God to lead them in things divine, and now to have the opportunity of introducing to the Sunday school workers of North Mississippi the "Home Makers' Class" of the Methodist Sunday school at Oxford; and to add that our Sunday school as a whole has made marvelous strides in all departments, brings greater happiness.

Very much more of interest might be written pertaining to the various activities of our church here, did not space forbid. However, I must let you share with us the fine compliment paid our pastor recently, when Dr Hunt, professor of Biology of the

A Successful Man

Among the notable professional men of this country who achieved great success along strictly legitimate lines was Dr. R. V. Pierce. Devoting his attention to the specialty of women's diseases, he became a recognized authority in that line.

Over fifty years ago this noted physician gave to the world a Prescription which has never been equaled for the weaknesses of women. Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., long since found out what is naturally best for women's diseases. He learned it all thru treating thousands of cases. The result of his studies was a medicine called Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This medicine is made of vegetable growths that nature surely intended for backache, headache, weakening pains, and for the many disorders common to women in all ages of life. Women who take this standard remedy know that in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription they are getting a safe woman's tonic so good that druggists everywhere sell it in both tablet and fluid form.

AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM OXFORD, MISS.

University here conceded to be, by those competent to judge, one of the brightest and best informed men in the things that make for perfection in human life and character, was addressing a great congregation, the majority of whom were students of th University, upon "Character Building." He said: "I wish you students would come out more frequently Sunday mornings to hear my good friend, Rev. L. M. Lipscomb. I know few ministers who can surpass him in qualities of mind and heart."

I feel a pardonable liberty in adding that Brother Lipscomb may be excelled in the building of structures composed of brick and mortar, and in the organizing of forces for ostentatious display, but where the building of a character and a life is applied to the straight-edge, he stands as a peer to the best of them in precept and example. The time has come in our civilization when men of this caliber are invaluable to any community. God is smiling upon Oxford; Lord, help us to appreciate the blessing!

THE DAILY CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

The General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, will meet in quadrennial session in Hot Springs, Ark., commencing Wednesday, May 3. This will be the nineteenth session of that great body since the organization of the Church, South, in 1844. It will be composed of about four hundred delegates; and for the first time women delegates will take part in its deliberations. Since the last General Conference in Atlanta, Ga., in 1918, four bishops have died, and the number to be elected and the choice for the men to fill that high office will be determined by this General Conference. There will be many questions of vital interest brought before the Conference, and that readers may get at first hand the proceedings of the General Conference, the Publishing Agents, Smith & Lamar, will print at Hot Springs, Ark., a daily edition of the Christian Advocate containing verbatim reports of the debates, reports of committees, and other matters brought before the Conference. Those who desire to keep informed as to its proceedings should subscribe for the Daily Christian Advocate, the price of which will be $1.25 for the session. Send that amount with an order for the Daily Advocate to Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Tenn., as the mailing list, which is now open, will be made up there to within a few days of the Conference. Dr. Charles D. Bulla, who edited the paper in Oklahoma City, Okla., in 1914, and in Atlanta, Ga., in 1918, will again be the Editor. He will have his former able associate in the preceding Conferences, Mr. J. P. Cherry, to assist him, and will have the very best stenographers to report the proceedings. The meeting promises to be a most interesting one, and not only Methodist people, but the public in general will be interested in the deliberations.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

SIMPLE JUSTICE.

We happen to know that the pastors of some of the churches in our patronizing territory have been compelled to get along as best they could since Conference on a mighty small part of the salaries that were assessed for their support. We do not know, either, of any church that overpledged itself for the support of the ministry, the tendency being to assess less rather than more than the congregation might reasonably be expected to contribute upon a basis of even moderate giving. While we are forced to wonder how these pastors and their families have managed to maintain themselves upon such meager resources as their charges have made available for them, we wonder still more that these charges can seem to be well content with what they are doing in comparison with what they have promised to do. In the business world, when an employer fails to pay regularly and promptly the wages he has engaged to pay, he pretty soon goes into bankruptcy—or out of business. Our churches are not going into bankruptcy and they are not going out of business—but it is not always because they observe business-like methods. We respectfully suggest to all official boards that do not know they have paid their pastors in full to date, the wisdom of getting the exact facts in hand and then doing what simple justice indicates. If they will do this, we know some faithful preachers who will be made very happy.

THE PEBBLE AND THE ROCK.

In a recent issue of the Literary Digest an interesting fact of science is discussed under the caption, "How Tiny Pebbles Rend Great Rocks." In the introduction to the article, which is quoted from the American Journal of Science, the editor of the Digest says: "Night and day, year in and year out, little pebbles are at work in thousands of places, wedging apart mighty masses of rock. Both pebble and rock shrink and swell as the thermometer rises and falls. Whenever there is a chance the pebble settles a little, and it always moves down—never upward. In the course of centuries the crack in which the pebble has found a resting-place is forced open more and more, and its sides are pushed widely apart." And the article itself shows how these pebbles ultimately break asunder mighty masses of rock. As we read this interesting discussion we could not keep from thinking of the effect of tiny sins upon great characters. There are no "tiny" sins, but some are thought of as such. Whenever a "tiny" sin is harbored in the heart, it will invariably accomplish its work of destruction unless it is wholly cast out; and the process is the same as that by which the pebble rends the rock—"whenever there is a chance the pebble settles a little, and it always moves down—never up." Sin always sinks deeper and deeper into the soul, and it always drags down—never lifts. No character is great enough or strong enough to withstand its insidious power so long as it has a place in which to work. The sin—the "little" sin—may be kept hidden in the heart for years, but at last the crash will come. "The wages of sin is death"—and pay-day always arrives.

HARD WORK.

The complex and perplexing problems of today cannot be solved and settled by intellectual weaklings. These problems have not arisen from insignificant happenings, and they are not to be disposed of by children expedients and puerile programs. They must be grappled with by men and women who have developed the power to think and who are willing to concentrate their thinking upon difficult themes. But thinking is the hardest work men are called upon to do—that may be why so little of it is done. The seeker after honor may have his ambition gratified by the doing of great deeds; but the seeker after power must think, for the world is ruled by its thinkers. We hear a good deal about the problem of unemployed hands—but the greatest problem of the day is unemployed heads. There may be a shortage of work for hands, but the real shortage is of heads for work. Real thinkers have more jobs than they know what to do with. If we would make "foot-prints on the sands of time," we must do it with our heads!

"CLEAN" RACING.

For the benefit of those who persist in claiming there is such a thing as clean racing, we quote from an article appearing in a local daily newspaper this week under the caption, "A True Racing Story—In Which the Victim Sheds a Little Light on the Sport of Kings." The experience of this victim is not different, we have reason to believe, from that of hundreds and thousands of others who have lost all that makes life worth living in their foolish thinking that gambling is a highway to happiness—for let it be thoroughly understood that there is no such thing as horse racing as an institution without gambling. When betting on the races is effectively outlawed, horse racing is done for, notwithstanding the rot about "improving the breed of horses," etc., etc. No betting, no racing—that is the ultimatum of the altruistic promoters of this "sport" that has become the scandal of New Orleans and of the whole State. But to our article: " 'Are the races crooked? My God, you ought to be in my fix to know just how crooked they are. Before I commenced playing them I was a fine fellow, a good man, but now I'm a fool, slinking around the town I was born in like a crook the police are after. That's what the races have done for me.' He was a young man who was speaking, trembling and almost on the verge of tears pleading, for the sake of his wife and three dependent children, not to be broken on the pitiless wheel of publicity. He had tried to beat the races. For two years he had plunged with the money that belonged to his family, the money he had borrowed from friends, blood money he had secured, oh so easily, from the loan sharks to feed the race track 'oralizers' and the handbook scouts. He, like so many thousands of others, had made a miserable failure of his get-rich-quick scheme until, harassed and threatened by debtors, he went into the bankruptcy court for relief until he could make a new start. * * * 'At the office my fellow employes were asking me for the loans they had advanced. I couldn't pay a nickel. To save my face I had to resign. My wife was a nervous wreck and so was I. I deserved it and she didn't. Good God, it was awful. I was into the loan sharks for $1000 and into my friends, who had more confidence in me than I was worth, for $7000 more. * * * It can't be done, tell the rest of the young men that for me. I know, and I've paid for my experience. Right now I should walk out of this office and throw myself in the Mississippi and end everything, and the only thing that holds me back is my wife and the kids. I know I'm whining like a cur, a whipped yellow dog, but the races not only got my money—they got my nerve and my manhood.' " That is what "clean" racing does!

NOT ALL ROMANCE.

The poppies of Flanders fields have become identified with a sacred sentiment in connection with the graves of our soldier-dead beyond the seas, but that sentiment attaches to them only in Flanders, and not elsewhere. The Federal Horticultural Board has declared them a nuisance and a pest to agriculture, and their importation will not be permitted. They threaten to overrun gardens and truck farms wherever introduced, and an expert of the Horticultural Board says the only reason they flourish in France and Belgium is because the farmers cannot get rid of them. There are many things that are romantically attractive at a distance that become a curse near at hand.

IT IS NEVER LOST.

We read this little incident a few days ago: "One day a particularly good piece of type composition came to my attention. I sent a word of commendation to the man who did it, and he nearly burst into tears! He had been working at a type case all his life; he loved his work, and for ten years he had been putting his brains and heart into his job. Yet in all that time no one had gone to the trouble of stopping for a moment to say, 'Good work!' " If you have it in mind to say a kind word to somebody to-day, say it—it will not be lost.

A JOURNEY TO THE ORIENT.

Back in Japan.

By Dr. Fitzgerald S. Parker.

X.

Getting into Russia had been easy, but getting out proved to be so difficult that at one time it appeared as if I was to gain some personal knowledge of Siberian exile, an institution that we have been accustomed to think of in connection with the days of Tsardom. At the boundary the train stopped at about midnight and waited an hour or two for the customs inspector, who then went through the train adding the dim glow of a lantern to the brilliant electric lights as a means of detecting contraband. When he invaded Mr. Ryang's and my compartment we promptly opened our bags, but he merely glanced at them and demanded, "Americansky?" To this Ryang, in his best Russian, replied affirmatively, and that was the end of it. But when I went promptly to the steamship office in Vladivostock to take up my reservation for Tsuruga, Japan, the clerk pronounced my passport defective without the vise of the Japanese Consul. So off I went to see that official, only to be informed that I must make application in duplicate with photographs attached. Nobody in the office could speak either French or English, but fortunately a Russian merchant, also in trouble, was standing by and proved a kind and competent interpreter. When, an hour later, I returned in triumph with my photographs, I was further informed that I must have also the vise of the Russian Government and a special permit from that august body to sail before the Japanese Consul could grant me a vise. Trustworthy sources yielded the information that at least three days would be required for this formality. But my ship would sail at 4 the next afternoon; so I implored the Japanese officer to do something for an American citizen, and was assured that if the American Consul would write a letter to the Consul General personally requesting it, the Japanese office would vise my passport and grant me permission to sail. I next drove furiously to the American Consulate and laid the matter before Mr. Magoon, to whom fortunately I had letters. With my documents and high hopes I then returned to find that the documents work at the Japanese Consulate, but the hopes were blasted at the ship's booking office, where the inexorable agent bade defiance to both the Japanese and the American authorities and would have nothing short of the Russian Government's permission for this American citizen to leave for home. To make a long story short, at the cost of 35 roubles (gold), the necessary documents were secured through the kindly offices of a gifted hotel employe who knew all the devious ways and for a commission of 10 roubles threaded them and enabled me in good time to board the good ship Hozan Maru. I stood upon the deck bidding farewell to a number of my newly-made Korean friends, already very dear, among them Ryang, who is to remain some time in Siberia holding ministers' institutes and otherwise strengthening the hands of these new recruits, the men who are carrying on this youngest of our missions, so far north that our ecclesiastical suffix "South" becomes a violent misnomer, so apostolic that it is a fitting close to the long list of achievements of the most apostolic man of his generation, Bishop Walter R. Lambuth.

On board the Hozan Maru I found the American Vice-Consul, Mr. Stephan, whom I had met at the Consulate, and the Russian chance acquaintance who had befriended me the day before. Besides a number of Japanese and Russian passengers there were a Swedish consular officer and his Russian wife, the latter having some acquaintance with English; but this list defines the limit of my opportunities for conversation in my native tongue and nobody knew French. Hence I was much alone, much in prayer and thought and little tempted to sin with my tongue.

As the ship steamed out Mr. Stephan pointed out to me the interesting features of the Bay, known as "the Golden Horn," especially the points once occupied by the American troops during the war, when military stores had to be protected from the Bolshevik Government. The icy wind cut keen, but the sky was bright and the sea was blue. A hulk, and American war vessel, and one freighter were all that remained of the vast marine that once filled this splendid harbor and bore testimony to the commerce and prowess of a mighty empire, now groveling under the heel of a communistic despotism that is characterized by ruthless violation of the command, "Thou shalt not steal," and that on occasion with fatal facility breaks the rest of the commandments of the second table. The great area covered by Vladivostok makes the buildings appear widely scattered and only the situation is beautiful upon the hills of the Sihoti Alin range as they reach down and bathe their feet in the Pacific Ocean. While we gazed on water, land and sky, the sun set early in gold and crimson and the long northern night was ushered in with many glittering stars, old acquaintances of the skies.

The period of the voyage included Thanksgiving Day, but no note was taken of our American home festival. The last day and night of the voyage across the Japan Sea were stormy and no loose article could be trusted to remain in place. Entering the harbor of Tsuruga we welcomed the wooded mountains of Japan and were soon at the dock. Thanks to Mr. W. J. Callahan, of Matusyama, I was met by Mr. Ito, the local pastor of the Japan Methodist Church, who delivered a letter acquainting me with the itinerary the brethren had kindly arranged, which started me at Yukuhashi with the dedication of Centenary church, and was to end three weeks later at Kobe. To get back to Japan was almost a pure delight after an absence of two and a half months. Snow was gleaming upon the peaks of the high mountains; the November air was crisp, but vegetation was green, except where the maples were burning themselves away in autum tints. From the moment of landing the impression was made of Japanese governmental efficiency in contrast with Chinese looseness, and of care and neatness, in contrast with Russian carelessness and neglect. From the window of the car, journeying from Tsuruga to Kobe and thence to Shimonoseki, where Mr. Callahan was to meet me, I could see the threshing and winnowing of the rice harvest, which had been green when I passed this way before. The Anglo-Saxon home owes much to the fireside, but the home atmosphere is possible without it, as one observes all through Japan. The Japanese, like the French, are poor colonizers. There are less than half a million of them all told living outside the Empire, and most of these will come home when they have accumulated a modest competence. No wonder! The beauty and charm and homelikeness of the land can never cease to pull the sojourner in other countries back; the Japanese cannot strike his roots deep into an alien soil as do the Germanic peoples and the Chinese. Wherever he may go, the Japanese will hear the call of the homeland.

Thus speaking, may I add a few reflections upon some present political questions about Japan? In America there are others beside Jingo politicians and yellow journalists who regard the Japanese conscienceless territory grabbers and unscrupulous militarists, whose dominant note is the enlargement of the Empire at whatever cost to other peoples. It must be admitted that prominent Japanese have given cause for this belief. Even in Japan, no one denies that the spirit of militarism is strong and that the Government itself is compelled to have regard to the General Staff. But I am sure that our American critics have need to revise their views in the interest of truth and fair play. Opposition to militarism is both strong and vocal in Japan, and has made itself felt in determining policies.

The Japanese are confronted by two inexorable facts: the population increases at the rate of 12 per cent a decade, and the land is incapable of producing much more than it now produces. By the most thorough application of scientific agriculture and intensive cultivation, of which the American farmer knows nothing, during the past decade production was increased four per cent. Already large quantities of food must be imported. This imported food must be paid for with manufactured goods; else Japan would be confronted by the alternatives of diminishing her birth rate or bringing about the emigration of the increase of her population. In view of the Japanese attachment to native land and the restrictions to their settlement in the more attractive parts of the temperate zones, emigration does not promise much relief.

With their customary thoroughness and far vision, Japanese statesmen have applied themselves to the solution of their economic problem. Vast regions of Mongolia, Siberia and Manchuria are available for immigration, and if emigration can be encouraged into these countries without alienation, very good. Hence the Japanese penetration of these regions. But the Japanese do not emigrate very largely; California is needlessly alarmed. Hence the expansion of industry and commerce must be resorted to, as in England. Japan is not rich in the raw materials of manufacture, but China and Manchuria are fabulously rich in these resources, which are scarcely touched by native enterprise. Why should not Japan have access to the bounties of creation that their present possessors neglect, horde or despise? "Take from him the pound and give it to him that hath ten pounds." Again, markets must be had, as by Great Britain. But there is no India to conquer, no Canada to colonize; is it strange that Japan has taken advantage of the chaos in China, a condition due to the rapacity and corruptness of her own leaders, to secure special advantages? One may reply that Japan ought to be content to take her share under the open door policy initiated by John Hay. Undoubtedly; but let us remember that even John Hay was Roosevelt's apologist for certain special advantages that America secured in Panama when the construction of the canal seemed imperiled.

I am not trying to justify everything that Japan has done, certainly not the arrogant demands of the twenty-one points, but I plead that Japan may be accorded judgment by the standards by which we have been judging Western nations. Whether her statesmen have chosen the wisest and most honorable policy for the solution of their economic problem or not, they could not remain inert and allow a great and fecund people to be strangled.

On a sad mission with Dr. Cram and Mr. Ryang, going to join the escort of Bishop Lambuth's ashes, I had journeyed along the western shore of Kyuchiu early in October and had then seen the great cement and iron and steel works and something of the enormous shipbuilding on that island that attest Japanese resourcefulness. This time by an early train Mr. Callahan, Superintendent of the Matsuyama District, and I journeyed along the east coast, beside the Inland Sea, the islands and bays of which are ever varying their lines and tints, and this morning over them the alternating mists were casting spells of mystic beauty. Yukuhashi was our destination, a truly and completely Japanese city; hence Japanese hotels were the only places of entertainment. On entering, one must take off his shoes, as it would be as appropriate at home to walk over beds and chairs in street footgear as to walk on the tatami-covered floors and polished passageways of a Japanese house in the same footwear. This process of getting into and out of one's shoes becomes monotonous to an American; it is easy enough for the Japanese; for even those who vary from the native tabi and geta wear old-fashioned gaiters, which slip off and on without lacing. A Japanese house has no chairs; the occupants sit on their heels, a painful posture that etiquette requires. For a day and a half, except when in church, I did not sit upon a chair or any other elevated article; nevertheless, I refused to sit upon my heels and made out in vulgar tailor fashion. At the hotel we were joined by Mr. J. W. Frank, our missionary at Uwajma, and Mr. Murati, a minister of the Japan Methodist Church, a gentleman of the finest type and an excellent scholar. Mr. Murati interpreted for me, and at the conclusion of the dedication service I was permitted to baptize a young man. Speeches of acceptance were made and the impressive service ended. In the evening Mr. Mitani, a talented and fervent Japanese minister, preached, and following the sermon the contractor by whom the church had been built, his wife and their infant child were baptized.

By noon on Monday I had parted from Messrs. Callahan, Frank and Murati, and, under the careful ciceronage of Mr. Mitani, was seeking shelter in the residence of Mr. H. L. Hughes, our resident missionary at Nakatau, who, however, had hardly moved in when Mrs. Hughes had to resort to Kobe for medical attention. Mr. and Mrs. Hughes had not returned, but Mr. Mitani was equal to the occasion. He found coal and warmed us up, pleasant enough after two days in a Japanese hotel, where the only heating is by the hebashi, a charcoal brazier. He had tea made by a Japanese neighbor, and ere long we were seated on our heels before a table six inches high partaking of a savory meal at the parsonage of the Japanese pastor, Mr. Muraoka, a graduate of Vanderbilt University, who speaks English very well and is doing a fine pastoral work.

In the evening Mr. Mitani interpreted for me while I addressed the Wesley Endeavor Society. One beautiful feature of the service was a concerted piece sung by five young women, all school teachers, assisted by two young men. Among the fruits of a recent revival these young ladies had been baptized and brought into the church.

Nakatsu is still a thoroughly Japanese city, and well presents the features of neatness, cleanliness and beauty that belong to the type. One can find American goods in some of the stores, but almost everything is truly Japanese. Our Western inconsiderateness has not here marred the beautiful courtesy of the Japanese. Possibly we, in our inconsiderateness, are more sincere; but why should we not lubricate our sincerity by cultivating pleasing as an art? No art needs insincerity; on the contrary, the quality of sincerity alone can save art from degenerating into formal and empty conventionality.

FOURTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE BOARD OF FINANCE.

By Luther E. Todd, Secretary.

The Board of Finance held its fourth annual meeting at the Missouri Athletic Association, St. Louis, Mo., March 6, 1922, the following members being in attendance: Bishop W. F. McMurry, Mr. J. W. Fristoe, Dr. C. W. Tadlock, Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, Bishop H. M. DuBose, Rev. J. A. Smith, Rev. H. E. Draper, Rev. A. F. Watkins, Dr. T. N. Ivey, Dr. C. Wesley Webdell, Dr. S. P. Cresap, Mr. Louis Blaylock, and Luther E. Todd.

The secretary was instructed to send a special telegram to Bishop E. R. Hendrix, regretting the circumstances which prevented his attendance and a special telegram of sympathy to General Julian S. Carr, who was kept from the annual meeting on account of serious illness.

The annual meeting was held one month before the end of the fiscal year, the advance date for the meeting being necessary to give time for the Board to put certain matters in shape to present to the General Conference. Therefore, any figures which may now be quoted as coming out of the annual meeting should be regarded as representing the work of the Board during eleven months of the fiscal year.

The secretary reported that $34,101.86 had been distributed to the claimants; that the unified standard record system had been adopted by nearly every Conference Board of Finance; that practically every Annual Conference in the whole church had memorialized the General Conference to give the right-of-way to the Board of Finance for a special effort in behalf of adequate superannuate endowment during the ensuing quadrennium; that thirty-two of the thirty-eight Annual Conferences had been visited at the last sessions of these bodies; that a Christmas emergency fund had been collected and immediately distributed to a number of the claimants throughout the church who were reported to the Board as being desperately in need.

During the three and one-half years that the Board of Finance has been operating it has added to the General Superannuate Endowment Fund $367,971.25. The total amount of this fund on March 6, 1922, was $813,967.97. Inasmuch as the Board has been greatly handicapped on account of two great campaigns operating in the church for many millions of dollars for other purposes, the amount which has been added to the General Superannuate Endowment Fund should be accepted as splendid progress.

In addition to the amount that has been added to the General Superannuate Endowment Fund, the Board has definite knowledge of bequests that have been made to the cause during the last three and one-half years of a total approximate amount of $500,000. Our people are more and more turning to the Board of Finance, representing the worn-out preachers, when they wish to make bequests to benevolent objects.

Of the $813,967.97 constituting the total General Superannuate Endowment Fund March 6, 1922, the total amount subject to annuity is $132,053.65, and the average rate of annuity paid on these deposits is 6¾ per cent. Of course in some cases where the ages of annuitants justify, the Board pays a higher rate, but the average per cent on the total amount subject to annuity is as stated.

One of the most appealing gifts made to the General Superannuate Endowment Fund since the annual meeting of one year ago was that of Miss M. J. Curd, Colorado Springs, Colo., wherein she subscribed $5000 to a special $100,000 fund to be raised, the income from which is to go to preachers having to superannuate on account of tuberculosis, to help them to regain their health in the Colorado climate. This foundation is known as the M. J. Curd Helping Fund, and any persons interested in its completion are at perfect liberty to make contributions to it.

The church now has 860 superannuates and 1,332 widows and preachers, a total of 2,192 claimants. This does not include the orphans. The Conference Boards of Finance paid these claimants for the year 1921 the total of $473,952, and the General Board paid them $33,288, making a grand total of $507,221. The average per capita received by superannuates was $283, and the average per capita received by widows of preachers was $186.

The church has 133 superannuate homes, valued at $359,560. The Annual Conferences have Conference Superannuate Endowment Funds in the total amount of $719,925, which, added to the value of superannuate homes, makes the total Conference Superannuate Endowment $1,079,485.

The church has actively engaged 286 presiding elders and 6,379 pastors in charge, including supplies. The total amount assessed for presiding elders and preachers in charge for the year 1921 was $10,066,761.

The preachers in the pastoral relation are related to the salaries paid by the various churches, as follows: One thousand, eight hundred and sixty pastors receive each annually less than $1,000; 1,935 pastors receive each annually between $1,000 and $1,500; 1,328 pastors receive each annually between $1,500 and $2,000; 647 pastors receive each annually between $2,000 and $2,500; 207 pastors receive each annually between $2,500 and $3,000; 287 pastors receive each annually between $3,000 and $4,000; 101 pastors receive each annually $4,000 and up.

The report of the Commission on Plan for the special effort in behalf of Superannuate Endowment during the ensuing quadrennium was most carefully considered by the annual meeting, and after various suggestions which were consented to, and amendments which were made, the plan was adopted, and the secretary was instructed to submit same in the quadrennial report to the General Conference. The members of the Board were unanimous in their conclusions that a plan had been decided upon which would appeal to the whole church with great force.

The Board was greatly pleased to hear the secretary's announcement that he had been advised by Dr. Marion S. Monk, pastor Central Methodist Church, Hot Springs, Ark., that the second Thursday night of the General Conference had been reserved for the Board of Finance, as an anniversary occasion. The Board instructed the Executive Committee to take the matter of program in hand and to make the best possible arrangement for the service.

Inasmuch as practically every Conference Board of Finance in the entire connection, at the request of the secretary of the Board of Finance, had elected a representative to attend a council meeting with the General Board, to be held during the meeting of the General Conference, the secretary was instructed to call these representatives to meet, as stated, during the week that the requests of the General Board to the General Conference will most likely be considered.

Mr. F. M. Jackson, Birmingham, Ala., tendered his resignation as a member of the Board, and it was accepted. As the General Conference was so near at hand, at which time the new Board will be appointed for the ensuing quadrennium, it was thought best not to fill the place made vacant by Mr. Jackson.

No body of men ever worked harder, or with more interest in the work they were doing, than did the members of the Board of Finance during their annual meeting. Every man was in his place promptly at the various sessions, stayed through the long hours of patient and determined effort to do the wisest and best things for the cause of the "Forgotten Man," and not a single complaint of overstrain in the arduous task was heard from any one of them. In the judgement of the writer this was truly an historical occasion in the church, and it will prove to be a real beginning of the church's remembering the "Forgotten Man." When all of the business had been satisfactorily attended to, Dr. T. N. Ivey, Rev. H. E. Draper, and Bishop Ainsworth made very forceful and encouraging statements concerning the work of the Board in the past, and the work which had been outlined for it in the future.

The president of the Board, Bishop W. F. McMurry, made a short address to the members, in which he expressed himself as deeply grateful for what had been accomplished, and confident that the task which had been set for the Board of Finance would be wrought out to the entire satisfaction of the whole church.

SUNDAY SCHOOL GOAL.

One Million Dollars for the Centenary by March 31, 1922. And we are within easy reach of that goal. To fail now would be a real calamity. Your school can help much if you will see to it that an offering is made next Sunday, and that all Centenary funds on hand be sent not later than March 27 to John E. Edgerton, Treasurer, Centenary Building, Nashville, Tenn. Do not fail of this.

PREACHERS' INSTITUTE FOR LOUISIANA.

At our last Annual Conference, a Preachers' Institute was authorized to be held at Centenary College, Shreveport, La., at the close of school. The committee met and wish to announce the date from June 1 to 8. Plans are being projected for a most excellent program. The morning hours will be devoted to considering the "Fundamentals of Methodism" and a message on the "Spiritual Uplift in Life."

The afternoon will be given to the "Rural Problem" by an outstanding expert in this line of work. Those interested in this most important phase of our church work will not want to miss this part of the program.

At night, it is proposed to have an inspirational address by a prominent speaker who will bring to us the great questions of the hour.

It is our desire to make this Preachers' Institute epochal in the history of our Louisiana Methodism. We are anxious to have present every preacher in our Conference, and unto this end we wish to urge the churches to provide the necessary expense to send their pastors.

We will have the free use of all college property. The rooms will be equipped with the ordinary furnishings. We are asked to bring a pillow, sheet and towel to suit our convenience.

The dining room will be run on the co-operative plan. The college will furnish the dietitian and the cook free. We will appoint a director of the dining room, so our expense for meals will be at actual cost. There will be no matriculation fee nor extra expense for any part of the Institute. It is our intention to cut down the expense to only the necessary things.

Make your plans to be present to enjoy the fellowship, rest, and inspiration that will come out of this great institute. ALBERT S. LUTZ,
Secretary.

CREDIT TO VICTORIA SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Dear Brother Carley: In December we received a Christmas offering from the Victoria Sunday school, North Mississippi Conference, of $8.14 sent us by Brother A. E. Carrington, Superintendent. Through a typographical error Victoria Sunday school was given credit for only $1 in our little paper. Brother Carrington read it and at once called our attention to the error and we promised to correct the mistake in the next issue of the paper. Through an unusual pressure of work in the office, which has kept us busy from early morning until 10 o'clock at night, unfortunately this correction has not been made.

I am taking ths opportunity now to state that the published statement in the January issue of Our Home crediting the Victoria Sunday school with $1 should have been $8.14.

I shall be very glad if you will give this publicity for the benefit of our friends in that community. Yours sincerely,
B. F. LEWIS, Supt.

EFFICIENCY WEEK AT GLENMORA, LA.

The Efficiency Week in our church here at Glenmora, that has just closed, was a glorious success. Every number of it was full of inspiration. We showed seven sets of pictures, which were on the following subjects: "Our Mission Fields," "Rural Problems," "Europe," "Education," "Epworth Assembly," "Japan and China," "Korea." We closed out with a great service Sunday night with a life service call. One dozen of our young people signed the part-time service card, and I will have about three to sign the full-time life service card as volunteers. This was a great day for Methodism in these parts. Our church is on its feet and moving. We could not get the great crowd into the house the last service. The whole town was moved by the services. Every department of the church is functioning as it has not before since I have been here.

Watch Glenmora this year, for she is going to make a record. Brother Grambling put the Epworth League on its feet in fine shape. We had organized only a few weeks before this meeting.

A GREAT DAY AT CENTRAL, MERIDIAN.

Sunday, March 5, was indeed a great day for us at Central. The day was beautiful and a large audience faced Bishop McMurry, who preached a great sermon on Genesis 28:17: "This is none other than the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven." After this appropriate message the Bishop, in his inimitable way, took a collection, receiving over $15,000 in cash and good subscriptions. Since that time the church has continued the work and our total indebtedness of $23,500 has been more than met, our total subscriptions being $25,025; and more will follow.

The foundation laid by our lamented H. B. Watkins and his predecessors was deep and permanent, and Central Church is growing into one of the great churches of our Methodism.

Now our efforts are turned upon "World Sunday" and our Educational interests. Our people are liberal supporters of every movement of the church. J. LOYD DECELL.

DIGGING FOR GOLD IN JAPAN.

By Dr. R. S. Stewart, D.D.

First Letter.

There is probably no missionary enterprise of our church that is more widely and favorably known than the Hiroshima Girls' School. This is a splendid group of 700 girls who have come to our church for instruction and offer one of those opportunities for evangelism whose value is beyond any possibility of appraisal.

For many years Miss Gaines has been president of this school and only a year ago retired from the post that she had brilliantly and faithfully held from the beginning of the institution. But the word "retire" has a different meaning with Miss Gaines from what it usually implies. Some one has said that in the language of the automobile trade to re-tire does not mean to quit running, but to get the car ready for further travel. Miss Gaines has accepted this meaning of "retire," and is laboring in the schoolroom, in personal work, and in outside evangelism as diligently as if she had come fresh to the task.

Rev. S. A. Stewart is the present head of this school and carries upon his heart a great burden for the salvation of his girls. At his invitation, I had the privilege of seeing this company of students and preaching to them for several days. The time of the meeting was all too short, but on the last afternoon many girls who wanted special help stood outside the door of the office for several hours waiting their turn to come in and get some word for their souls. To speak to some of these girls was to see a heathen home with parents whose hearts were black with prejudice against Christ and whose cruelty threatened the daughter who dared to espouse the hated name of Jesus. And I felt that if I wanted to write a story of heroism I would need to look no further for a subject than there, among those young girls who dared to brave a father's anger for the love of Christ. But I have had many letters from these girls and I think I will let you listen to some of their testimonies, and you may hear from their own words something of what Christ is doing at Hiroshima Girls' School:

1. "I was awakened and saved in the meeting; God has forgiven my sins. I believe in God and Jesus, and I am determined to live day by day in carefulness."

2. "I was saved through the special meeting, and I have determined to pray to continue in this blessing and stand strongly."

3. "I am born again perfectly and entered into new life. But still there is fear that bad will come forth in my heart from the stamp of my old sin, and I am praying continually that the dynamite of the Holy Ghost may take out the stamp of my old sin."

4. "Since I confessed my heart before God I have come to feel an inner light in my spirit. My father does not give his ear to the story of God. I feel a heavy responsibility. This is my great problem. Please pray for me."

5. "In the meeting I realized that my peace with God was broken, but I did not let the condition remain for an hour. I again went to him and made peace."

6. "I am living now. Why did I not hear earlier? Christ has knocked at the door of my heart many times. Why did I not let Him in before? I want to consecrate body and soul in order to show my gratitude for such love of God. Please pray for me who am so weak. Formerly I did not know why I was living in the world, but now many problems are solved, and I have come to know the message of God clearly."

7. (The following was written in English and signed "New Daughter of God.")

"I was saved from my sins and I can see God. Now I know I am His daughter, and I can speak to Him. Please pray to our Father for me."

8. "I wrote to my father and mother, telling all I heard. I hope to be a shining girl."

9. "I am thankful to be counted among God's children for the first time."

These testimonies speak directly of vital things and indicate that "the Kingdom of God is at hand" in Japan. The work at Hiroshima and these girls are worthy of the deep sympathy and the burdened intercession of the church.

One is staggered at the possibilities of blessing and power for Japan in this great institution. They are entering upon a new era of development, having added a college course through the aid of the Centenary.

THE MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The District Conference of the Meridian District, Mississippi Annual Conference, will convene at Scooba on Tuesday, May 2, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and continue in session until the afternoon of Thursday, May 4.

Rev. R. E. Rutledge, of DeSoto, will preach the opening sermon on Tuesday night, to be followed by the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

The pastors will see that delegates are elected promptly and that their names are sent to our host, the Rev. Thos. H. King, and to me.

Let all local preachers be present wth reports as required by the Discipline. Let the pastors see that their quarterly conference records are in the hands of the committee for examination.

Brethren representing special interests of the church are invited to be present and to address the conference.

Let us all pray that this conference may be a great Pentecost of spiritual blessing and power.

THE RECORD OF A GREAT CHURCH.

Centenary Pledge, to be paid through 1921	$22,146,700
Paid to January 1, 1922	12,648,046
Past due	9,498,653

Even in "hard times" a great church cannot let a record such as this stand. That church is now in a church-wide effort to remove this reproach.

We Can Do It—Let's Prove It!

The deepest want of man is not a desire for happiness, but a craving for peace; not a wish for the gratification of every desire, but a craving for the repose of acquiescence in the will of God: and it is this which Christianity promises. Christianity does not promise happiness, but it does promise peace. "In the world ye shall have tribulation," said our Master, "but be of good cheer: I have overcome the world."—F. W. Robertson.

World Sunday—March 26

One of the Great Days in Methodist History

Our Day of Opportunity

Our Day of Testing

The Church's Program

1. "A World Sunday, March 26, in which an effort shall be made to reach every congregation of the Church with the World Message" (Give to the people the facts concerning the Centenary achievements until now).

2. "A follow-up week for which the local Centenary Committee shall be reorganized and all subscribers who are in arrears shall be personally interviewed and urged to bring their payments up to date."

Why This Call?

Because, as the Bishops say in their "Message to the Ministry and Membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South":

"We cannot withhold from you the information that the Centenary Movement is in danger of being marred and our victories of faith dimmed by the failure of many to redeem their pledges. To avert this peril now imminent, not less than $4,500,000 (which is no more than half of the unpaid pledges that are past due) must be in the Centenary treasury before May 1. . . . We cannot contemplate the possibility of failure without the most painful anxiety."

Will We Prove Our Faith?

If we use for this special effort the resources that are ours—our great Connectional System, which makes it possible to move as one people to the doing of one big task—we will prove, even in "hard times," our right to claim the leadership of our Lord in all our enterprises. WE MUST DO THIS BIG TASK.

In this Church-wide effort to vindicate the Faith and Courage of a Church, let no congregation, no Centenary subscriber fail to "Carry On." The Goal—"A Payment from Every Subscriber; if Possible, this Payment to Bring the Centenary Pledge to date. Every Church to Reach the Sixty Per Cent Paid Standard."

We Will Go Forward

Moving as One Great Church to One Definite Goal, We Can Do All that Our Lord Would Have Us Do. Let No Congregation Fail to Have Share in this Glorious Achievement!

Great-but Limited

"I am in no way untrue to State institutions when I say that in our day a boy might become a bachelor or master in almost any one of the best of them, and be as ignorant of the Bible, the moral and spiritual truth which it represents and the fundamental principles of religion, their nature and value to society, as if he had been educated in a non-Christian country. Who is to supply this lack if not the Christian college?"

ADDING UP THE BABY.

One mouth, one nose, and two blue eyes
As blue as any summer skies;
Two ears so very pink and small,
One dimpled chin—and that's not all;

One head of curly golden hair,
Two cheeks so very pink and fair.
Eight teeth, and—well, almost a half
Whene'er she gives a hearty laugh;

Two arms, elght fingers, and a pair
Of thumbs that wander everywhere;
Two legs, and, last of all, ten toes,
That stand straight up whene'er she crows.

That makes just "forty-two," you say,
If added in the usual way.
But not to us—it makes, we think,
Just one good baby, plump and pink!

THE PRINCESS AND THE BIRD.

Once there was a princess who had as a pet the smallest bird in all the world. She tied one end of a golden cord round the bird's leg, and fastened the other end to her wrist. At night she put the bird into a jeweled cage, the bars of which were pure gold. But the little bird was not happy, for it wished to go free among the garden flowers. "O, let me go," it pleaded.

But the princess shook her head. "I love you," she said.

"If you did love me," replied the bird, "you would wish me to be happy. I can never be happy till I'm free."

Still the princess shook her head. "You are the smallest bird in all the wide world," she said. "If I were to let you go, you would have no golden cage. Where would you find shelter and food?"

"I should find the open sunlight better than a golden cage, and my food should be the sweetness of the flowers," the bird pleaded.

"O, little bird, you would never return to me!"

"No," said the little bird, "I should never come back, for I do not love you. You bound me with a golden cord."

Then the princess thought: "If the bird does not love me, I will not keep it against its will. I love it so much that I wish it to be happy. Perhaps, if I let it go, it will love me a little in return."

So she cut the cord and let the bird out into the wide world where the trees and flowers grow.

Then its happiness was as wide as the wind. It flittered hither and thither in the sunlight all day. Its little feathers that had been brown turned into emerald, and ruby, and amethyst, and sapphire, and topaz, for those were the colors of the flowers it visited. But one day, as it went from flower to flower, it came upon a rose. In the heart of the rose there lay a tear that was like crystal. "The princess passed this way," said the rose. "She mourns because she is lonely without you. I have kept her tear to give to you."

"Poor princess," said the little bird, "I do love her! She gave me the sunlight and the flowers. I will go back, and I will see if I can comfort her. I shall miss my freedom, but I shall have her love."

So the little bird flew back to the princess. "It was your love that brought me," said the bird. "I have been happy in the sunlight and the flowers. See! Where I have dipped into the flowers, all the feathers about my throat have become emerald, and ruby, and amethyst, and sapphire, and topaz; for the flowers are the jewels of the wide, wide world, and I have found their magic."

The princess did not bind the bird with golden cord. It was ever after as free to come and go as the wind, and both the princess and the bird were happy.

Some day when you go into the garden, you may see the little bird. It is the smallest that there is in the wide, wide world, and the feathers about its throat are like jewels. As the bird goes from flower to flower, it hums a song about the princess and her love, and that, perhaps, is why it is called the humming bird.—Youth's Companion.

MISPLACED THINGS.

"Be careful, Aunt Nancy—O!"

The warning had been a second too late. Aunt Nancy carried her seventy years like a girl; you could hardly speak quickly enough to catch her, once she had started. She had started in this case to seat herself in young Nancy's big chair. She was up like a flash at the sound of something breaking; she and Nancy, the girl, looked ruefully at the fragments of the lovely shell comb.

"It's my fault; I had no business to put it there," Nancy acknowledged. "I tossed it there when I dropped down on the couch. I knew I ought to get up and put it on my dressing table."

Great-Aunt Nancy, with the pieces of shell in her careful, withered fingers, answered slowly. Her keen eyes had noticed Nancy's red lids.

"So much of the trouble of life comes from things being out of place," she said.

"Clothes—yes'm; and dishes—I seem to remember frantic searches for missing pans and bowls. But still, I wouldn't call those troubles, would you?"

Nancy was "playing up" pluckily; her voice strove for its usual sauciness.

"Of course I realize that dishes and clothes incidents sometimes have unpleasant consequences.

For want of a shoe a minute was lost,
For want of a minute a car was lost,
For want of a car an appointment was lost,
For want of an appointment a position was lost.

Only, you know, it doesn't often really turn out so important as all that, except in fiction, where authors, poor things, are bound to make everything have consequences."

"No, I didn't mean that, precisely." Aunt Nancy's keen eyes smiled back at her namesake. "I was thinking of other things: the lost time put on things that aren't worth it; letting a real talent go to waste while you are busy with fads that last a month; letting a good mind get cluttered up with rubbish; putting a fine friendship in a place where fine friendships don't belong—those are the real misplacements of life. There child, I think I can get this mended, after all."—Selected.

HIS HEART IN IT.

A manufacturer in Philadelphia once told a friend the story of one of his superintendents.

"Twelve years ago a boy applied to me for work. He was employed at low wages. Two days later the awards of premiums were made to manufactories at the Centennial Exposition.

"Passing down Chestnut Street early in the morning, I saw Bob poring over the bulletin board in front of a newspaper office. Suddenly he jerked off his cap with a shout.

"'What is the matter?' some one asked.

"'We have taken the medal for sheetings!' he exclaimed.

"I said nothing, but kept my eye on Bob. The boy who could identify himself in two days with my interests would be of use to me hereafter.

"His work was to deliver packages. I found that he took a real pride in it. His wagon must be cleaned, his horse better fed, his orders filled more carefully and more promptly than those of the men belonging to any other firm. He was as zealous for the house as though he had been a partner in it. I have advanced him step by step. His fortune is made, and the firm has added to its capital so much energy and force."—Exchange.

WORLD SUNDAY—MARCH 26.

On Sunday, March 26, every Centenary subscriber is expected to make a payment on Centenary pledge—everyone, at least, not paid to date. The need for your help is so urgent that even if a real sacrifice is demanded you should count it a privilege to have some share in answering this call from every mission field of the church. Let's make on that day a record worthy of our great church. IT MUST BE DONE.

God will not let us be without pleasures of our own. The fields are full of such: flowers, verdure, beautiful plants at every step; birds everywhere; and then an air all perfumed.—Eugenie de Guerin.

REV. J. D. HARPER.

The death of Rev. J. D. Harper, pastor at McDonoghville, La., just across the river from New Orleans, Friday afternoon, March 17, brought sorrow to all of Louisiana Methodism. He was the oldest member of the Louisiana Annual Conference in active service, having been admitted into full connection in 1875. During all these years he served the church faithfully and efficently. He was a man of sound faith, vigorous intellect, persistent and fruitful activity, and the achievements of his long and useful life have become a part of the history of Methodism in Louisiana. His unswerving loyalty to the church and his clear judgment in all questions concerning its welfare made him a trusted counsellor in its affairs and gave him a position of leadership in which he won the esteem and love of all his brethren. For many years he was president of the Conference Board of Church Extension, and at the time of his death he was president of the Board of Finance.

Brother Harper is survived by his wife and three children—two daughters, and a son, Rev. R. H. Harper, the distinguished pastor of the First Methodist Church, New Orleans, to whom the Advocate extends deep sympathy in their great sorrow. Funeral services were held at McDonoghville at six o'clock on Saturday evening, after which the body of the deceased was carried to Mansfield, La., for interement. We hope to have a suitable memoir for publication in the near future.

A CENTENARY TRIP.

The editor of the Advocate, on invitation of Mr. Stephen S. Thomas, Centenary secretary-treasurer of the Louisiana Conference, made a little tour last week in the interest of the Centenary pay-up campaign that brought him into delightful association with some of our pastors and members of the church at several places.

On Tuesday, March 14, a meeting was held at New Iberia, where Rev. S. D. Roberts is pastor. In spite of conflicting meetings in the town, there was a good attendance at the Centenary meeting, and there was encouraging evidence that interest in the Centenary Movement is still keen. We doubt not that New Iberia will make a good showing when the results are all in after World Sunday.

We found the work of the church at New Iberia in a prosperous condition, with interest constantly growing in all departments. Since Conference, twenty-five members have been received on profession of faith, fourteen of these being men. The growing interest of the men in the services of the church is seen from the fact that the average attendance of men at the Sunday evening service has increased from two or three to about forty. The evening congregation as a whole has increased till it numbers now about one hundred.

The Sunday school, under the superintency of Mr. H. N. Pharr, has an attendance of about one hundred, and splendid work is being done. The Woman's Missionary Society, Mrs. S. F. Hale, president, has about fifty members, and it is a very active organization. There are three Epworth Leagues—Senior, Intermediate, and Junior—all of them in good shape.

A recent occurrence of special interest at New Iberia was a "get-together meeting" for the men of the community, the meeting being held on the evening of March 7. Mr. W. H. Black, assistant manager of the Federal Reserve Bank, New Orleans, was the invited guest and speaker of the occasion, and we heard numerous comments on the splendid service he rendered in that capacity. The meeting was attended by about eighty men—something unusual on such occasion in that part of the State—and the meeting was counted a great success. The ladies of the church served refreshments.

The editor and Mr. Thomas had the privilege of being guests in the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Pharr Tuesday night. We shall not soon forget the hospitality we received in that Christian home on the banks of the romantic Bayou Teche, or the delightful drive in company with Mr. Pharr on Wednesday morning.

We spent Wednesday evening at Franklin, where Rev. Lee R. Sparks is pastor. After a fine automobile drive in the afternoon in company with Brother Sparks, Mrs. Sparks, and their daughter, we met with a fine audience at the regular midweek prayer meeting hour in the evening. Both the visiting speakers were heard with close attention, and it was evident that the Centenary spirit is still alive in that church. We were especially glad to meet so many of the good people of Franklin, because recently a good many copies of the Advocate have been going to them, through the efforts of Brother Sparks, and those who are receiving the paper were kind enough to tell us they like it.

The work of the church at Franklin is prospering. We learned that about sixty members have been received on profession of faith since Conference, a fact which indicates a vital concern on the part of the church for the spiritual welfare of the community.

The only unpleasant incident in connection with the visit to Franklin was the necessity of leaving on a train scheduled at 2:55 a.m. We still believe a law should be passed making it illegal for a train to pass a town at such an unearthly hour. Our feelings were somewhat ruffled by the fact that the cabman who makes the calls at the hotel aroused us at 1:30 instead of 2:30, as we had instructed him; but we will forgive him when we have caught up with our sleep.

Leaving Franklin at 2:55 a.m., we reached New Orleans about 7 o'clock Thursday morning and, after a bite of breakfast at the lunch counter, left at 8 o'clock for Slidell, La., where we were met by the pastor, Rev. W. H. Giles, and shown many appreciated courtesies. Brother Giles had arranged for a noon meeting, with lunch, at the Community House, where a fine group of men and women duly assembled. We had the pleasure of finding at this meeting, Rev. Jno. F. Foster, our pastor at Covington, La., and Dr. Singleton, a brother of the late Rev. H. R. Singleton, of the Louisiana Conference, who is a prominent physician of Slidell. After a dellcious lunch had been served—the crab gumbo was especially fine—the visiting Centenary speakers were given the opportunity of saying their pieces. The apparent interest of the auditors was all that could be desired, and we have not the least doubt that Slidell will do its part in carrying on the Centenary work. Brother Giles knows his people, they know him, and peace and harmony prevail.

Leaving Slidell at 5:45 p.m., we arrived at Franklinton, La., at 7:55—just in time to step into a waiting automobile and hurry to the church for the meeting that had been carefully planned and widely announced by the pastor, Rev. L. W. Cain. By this time the editor was pretty well tired—so he spoke longer than he should have done. However, the people listened attentively to him and Mr. Thomas, and there were expressions of appreciation. The Centenary interest seemed to be fine, and we have no doubt but that Franklinton will be "on the map" when the returns are in after World Sunday.

The visitors were guests in the home of Brother Cain for the night, and the hospitality was delightful. Mrs. Cain had prepared for the travelers a dainty supper, to be served after the service, and it was enjoyed to the fullest extent. We have a great desire to visit that home again—and we hope to be able to accept the gracious invitation to return when the fish are biting.

We left Franklinton Friday morning at 5:25 o'clock—not quite so bad as 2:55, but bad enough—and reached New Orleans at 8:45, feeling, as the children say in their school compositions about picnics, "tired, but happy." We found so great an accumulation of work at the office that we haven't rested yet; but we are still happy.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. F. Waltman, our pastor at Elizabeth, La., has sent us 22 subscriptions since Conference.

Rev. D. E. Kelley, Mississippi Conference evangelist, began a meeting at New Iberia, La., last Sunday.

Rev. A. L. Harper is meeting with encouraging success in this, his third year, on the Ringgold charge, Louisiana Conference.

The annual meeting of the General Epworth League Board will be held in Hot Springs, Ark., Monday and Tuesday, May 1 and 2.

Rev. A. H. Parker, our pastor at Bossler City, La., was operated on for appendicitis recently. He is reported as doing well after the operation.

Our Sunday school at Jeanerette, La., has had 100 per cent increase in attendance this year. Professor T. G. Pears, Millsaps '20, is superintendent.

Dr. Theodore Copeland is engaged in a very successful meeting at San Angelo, Texas. More than fifty people had united with the church within the first few days of the meeting.

A note from Rev. W. W. Graves, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, gives an encouraging report of the work in his field. The outlook for World Sunday and the collection week following is especially encouraging.

Mrs. A. P. Holt, prominent in the work of the Woman's Missionary Society in Louisiana, but now residing in Colorado Springs, Colo., for the benefit of her health, writes that she looks forward eagerly to the weekly visits of the Advocate.

A note from Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the Alexandria District, Louisiana Conference, gives a fine account of the Centenary interest in that district. The pastors are zealously pushing the collections with the determination to make as good showing as possible.

Our church at Hosston, La., was dedicated by Dr. R. H. Wynn, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, on Sunday, March 5, all indebtedness having been liquidated. Two other churches in the Shreveport District—Belcher and Greenwood—have paid all debts since Conference.

Professor John H. Strong, son of the late Dr. Augustus H. Strong, and sometime professor in Rochester Theological Seminary but lately of Eutaw Place Baptist Church in Baltimore, has accepted a professorship in the Biblical Seminary in New York, of which Dr. Wilbert W. White is president.

The editor regrets that he was out of the office when Rev. W. M. Sullivan, presiding elder of the Seashore District, Mississippi Conference, called one day last week. Brother Sullivan was on a round of Centenary group meetings, and he was greatly pleased with the manifest interest in the Centenary cause.

The address of Rev. J. L. Neill, superintendent of mission and principal of the Bible Training School, is Jecna Uiice, Prague, Czecho-Slovakia, Europe. A personal note from Brother Neill states that the work in that new field is most interesting. He promises to give us some account of it in the future.

A note from Mrs. T. W. Beville, of Bernice, La., brings the sad news that her mother, the only surviving sister of the late Rev. J. D. Harper, is seriously ill, and that Dr. T. W. Harper, of Ruston, La., the only surviving brother, is also very sick. We are sure many prayers will be offered for their restoration to health.

The second quarterly conference of the Rankin Street Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss., Rev. F. L. Applewhite, pastor, appointed a building committee and a handsome new church is in prospect for the near future. As a result of the meeting recently conducted by Rev. J. V. Bennett at Rankin Street, thirteen members were added to the church.

A telegram from Dr. R. H. Wynn, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, received just before the Advocate went to press, announced the critical illness from pneumonia of Rev. W. A. Mangum, our pastor at Queensborough Church, Shreveport, La., and requested prayer in his behalf. Let earnest prayer be made for the recovery of this faithful minister of the gospel.

The work on the Boyce charge, Louisiana Conference, is moving along splendidly under the leadership of Rev. J. M. Boykin. Financial obligations are being met, and interest in all departments of the work is growing. This charge reports that, with the exception of about $7 at one church, funds are already in the hands of church treasurers to pay the Centenary obligations to date.

Rev. John W. Chisholm, formerly our pastor at Forest, Miss., has been transferred to the West Texas Conference and stationed at Seguin, Texas, the move becoming expedient on account of the health of his young son. Brother Chisholm recently closed a two-weeks' meeting in San Antonio, Texas, in which there were thirty additions to the membership of the church on profesion of faith.

Fourteen persons, eleven of them adults and seven of them men of families, have been received into the membership of the church at Biloxi, Miss., on profession of faith at the regular services since January 1. The Sunday school at this church is now larger than ever before in its history, high-water mark having been reached the past two Sundays. Rev. M. B. Sharbrough is the pastor.

Mr. Joe R. Hyde, organizer of the Character Builder Class, of Memphis, Tenn., the largest Bble class in the South, visited and addressed the Big Brothers' Class at Greenville, Miss., on Sunday, March 12. The Character Builder Class has an enrollment of about 2000, with an average weekly attendance of about 1000. This class recently completed a building for its own use, at a cost of $75,000.

We have just received a copy of "The Greenville District," a bulletin issued by Rev. J. H. Felts, presiding elder of the Greenville District, North Mississippi Conference, which is filled with good things generally concerning "the district that sounds no retreat." One of its features is a display article calling attention to the New Orleans Christian Advocate as the official organ of the church in Louisiana and Mississippi.

Our work at Columbia, Miss., flourishes under the leadership of Rev. L. L. Roberts. A check has already been forwarded the Conference treasurer to cover all assessments for Conference and General Work this year. Congregations are large, and accessions to the church are being had at the regular services. Not the least indication of progress is the fact that Brother Roberts has sent us a list of 155 subscriptions to the Advocate.

Dr. R. L. Russell, Secretary of the Department of Home Missions of the General Board of Missions, has issued announcements concerning the Summer Schools for Rural Pastors. These schools will be held as follows: Russellville, Ky., May 29-June 8; Conway, Ark., June 9-20; Birmingham, Ala., May 31-June 14; Ashland, Va., June 15-25, Durham, N. C., June 7-16; Dallas, Tex., July 4-14. Some of the most competent instructors and lecturers in the nation have been secured for these schools. Great profit is bound to accrue to those who attend them.

A copy of the Southern Methodist Handbook for 1922 has just reached our desk. Its coming was like the appearance of a long-lost friend, for the publication was not issued for 1920 and 1921. Many times during those years we wished for it for the sake of information not elsewhere available in such convenient form. It is amazing that so much valuable information can be compressed within one hundred and sixty-two pages. It is indispensable for the person who wishes to have immediately at hand authoritative information concerning every phase of the work of our great church. It may be had of Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Dallas, or Richmond, for the small sum of fifty cents. It is worth a great deal more.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. R. H. Clegg, Raleigh, Miss., 2; Mrs. A. P. Holt, Colorado Springs, Colo., 2; Rev. J. W. York, New Albany, Miss., 2; Rev. H. B. Thomason, Gibsland, La., 2; Rev. J. W. Dorman, Louisville, Miss., 3; Rev. E. S. Lewis, Greenville, Miss., 3; Rev. J. E. Cunningham, Aberdeen, Miss., 10; Rev. J. F. Waltman, Elizabeth, La., 2; Rev. A. L. Harper, Ringgold, La., 2; E. Afton Smith, Water Valley, Miss., 2; Rev. H. J. Maddox, Taylorsville, Miss., 2; Rev. C. F. Emery, Fayette, Miss., 3; Rev. W. H. Saunders, Hazlehurst, Miss., 2; Rev. L. L. Roberts, Columbia, Miss., 155.

CRURCH ATTENDANCE CONTEST, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The following are the reports for last Sunday evening in the church attendance contest, Louisiana Conference:

DE RIDDER-MRRYVILLE SUNDAY SCHOOL

The report for the DeRidder-Merryville Sunday school contest for last Sunday is as follows:

DeRidder had present 252, a total gain of 129.

Merryville had present 344, a total gain of 458.

The Merryville school is anxious to see its superintendent presiding over the greatest Sunday school ever assembled in the Lake Charles District—and it is working determinedly to that end

"AT EVENING TIME."

By William C. Allen.

Days of my age,
Ye will shortly be past;
Pains of my age,
Yet awhile ye can last;
Joys of my age,
In true wisdom delight;
Eyes of my age,
Be religion your light;
Thoughts of my age,
Dread ye not the cold sod;
Hopes of my age,
Be ye fixed on your God.
—St. George Tucker.

I came across the following a few years ago: "When John Quincy Adams was 80 years of age, he met in the streets of Boston an old friend, who shook his trembling hand and said: 'Good morning, and how is John Quincy Adams to-day?'

"'Thank you,' was the ex-president's answer; 'John Quincy Adams himself is well, quite well, I thank you. But the house in which he lives at present is becoming dilapidated. It is tottering upon its foundation. Time and seasons have nearly destroyed it. Its roof is pretty well worn out. Its walls are much shattered, and it trembles with the wind. The old tenement is becoming almost uninhabitable, and I think John Quincy Adams will have to move out of it soon. But he himself is quite well, quite well!'"

It is good to see old people, with an unconquerable spirit. When their earthly course is almost run, how often they fearlessly look into the future. It is well when they have such vital faith in God that they think of the worn body, shaken by every wind, as only becoming "uninhabitable," that soon they must "move out of it," as expressed by the venerable ex-president of the United States.

Generally speaking, there are two kinds of old age. One represents an attitude of mind that has become mistrustful or cynical after participating in the great adventure of life. This sort has not laid hold on that restful confidence in "the eternal goodness" that Whittier sang of. It relinquishes its uncertain hold on this life with doubtfulness or dismay. God pity such—but let these remember that He ever loves them! The other kind of old age revives its career as a wonderful school in which sweet and bitter lessons have been learned, but during which preparation has been made for the mellow years and for the triumphant life beyond. These experiences have developed a firm reliance on the gracious intent of the Great Caretaker of men. The valley of the shadow of death may, in some of the waiting hours, look dark, but beyond is the victory and the glory, the beauty and the joy that await the faithful child of God!

And now the searching question comes home to each one of us—are we regulating our lives so that our swiftly passing days shall become fragrant and beautiful, if ripe years shall overtake us? Are not youth and middle age the periods in which to form the habit of voluntary obedience to God and to acquire the happiness of unmixed trust in Him? Shall not his fortitude and grace finally sustain us when physical and mental powers shall diminish and our earthly ties are soon to be sundered? I ask my readers to think of the abundant possibilities associated with age, and of how it can become a flower-strewn pathway to the gates of heaven! Zachariah, the far-seeing prophet, wrote: "At evening time there shall be light!"

ROBERT SUTTON BYRD was born February 28, 1856, and died June 4, 1921. He was born and reared in Harrison County. When he was 26 years old he moved to Jackson County, where he was married to Miss Mary Jane Rouse, Jan. 26, 1882. To this union were born four sons and one daughter. The deceased is survived by his wife and four sons. Brother Byrd joined the M. E. Church, South, at New Prospect Camp Meeting, and soon afterwards was converted in a prayer meeting at old Union Church on Bluff Creek, which was conducted by Brother A. P. Cox, who was his pastor at that time. He was a devout Christian the remainder of his life. He was always ready to help those who were sick, or any who were in need of help in any way. Just a few weeks before his death he was visited by his pastor, Brother E. J. Coker, and in their conversation he told Brother Coker he did not fear death. His favorite song was, "We'll never say good-bye in Heaven." His favorite passage of Scripture was the fourteenth chapter of St. John. The funeral services were conducted by his pastor and his remains were laid to rest in the Pine Grove cemetery, awaiting the resurrection, while his spirit is with his Savior in the paradise of God. May the Lord of hosts very graciously comfort and sustain the bereaved family, is my prayer.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas in his infinite wisdom God has taken from us our friend and beloved brother, Robert B. Lampton,

Resolved, That we, the Board of Stewards of the Magnolia Methodist Church, of which he was a member, do hereby give expression to our deep sorrow in the taking off of our beloved brother; and while we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well, we tender our deepest sympathy to the bereaved ones.

Resolved, further, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, one to the New Orleans Advocate, one to the Magnolia Gazette, and that they be spread upon the minutes of this board.

Signed.

BOARD OF STEWARDS.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, God in his wisdom, has seen fit to call Brother WALTER SCOTT CATCHING from his earthly labors to his reward in heaven; and

Whereas, he lived to the ripe old age of sixty-six years, having been a devoted member of the Georgetown Methodist church and Sunday school for a period of fifty years; and

Whereas, his life has been worthy in every respect of emulation, not only by the Georgetown church and Sunday school, but by the entire charge and district, therefore be it

Resolved by the members of this church and Sunday school, That we extend to the bereaved family of our beloved friend and brother, Walter Scott Catching, our sincerest sympathy in their deep sorrow and point them to Him whom he so worshiped and loved and who alone can comfort the sad and broken-hearted.

Resolved, That we as a church and Sunday school, can point to him and say, "He was indeed a father in Israel in whom there was no guile," and his devotedness will ever inspire us to walk more closely in the footsteps of Him who was ever his friend and guide.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the Sunday school records, that a copy be furnished the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and one be sent to the bereaved family.

Signed by: R. C. Berry, S. A. Williams, and J. B. Catching.

FROM BALDWYN, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: I want to say a few words for Baldwyn. This is a new charge, made at the last Annual Conference, with the parsonage at Baldwyn. When I reached Baldwyn, I found a real neat new brick vencered parsonage ready for the preacher and his wife. The people of Baldwyn have shown real appreciation of their church and preacher in building such a beautiful parsonage. The people have been very kind to us and have shown their appreciation of the preacher and his family in many ways. I have a good people to serve and feel that it is good to be here. The church is very well organized and at work. The Sunday school is doing good work and growing. I have organized a prayer meeting and reorganized the Epworth League; we also have a Woman's Missionary Society and a Junior Missionary Society, doing good work. I feel that the prospects are good for a good year on the Baldwyn charge.

Yours fraternally,

March 11. J. J. GARNER, P. C.

RENWAR VS. RHEUMATISM.

It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Salts. Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve or your money is refunded. It contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Boehmer says, "One 50c bottle has done me more good than all sanatorium treatment, and what it did for me, why should it not do the same for others? Should any one doubt the virtue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, refer them to me." For sale by druggists, price 50c; or by mail on receipt of price from WARNER DRUG COMPANY, NASHVILLE, TENN.—Adv.

MOTHER! OPEN CHILD'S BOWELS WITH CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP

Your little one will love the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup" even if constipated, bilious, irritable, feverish, or full of cold. A teaspoonful never fails to cleanse the liver and bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the sour bile and undigested food out of the bowels and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

HOW TWO WOMEN ESCAPED OPERATIONS

Doctor Advised Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Happy Results in Both Cases

St. Joseph, Missouri.—"Both of my sides swelled and hurt me so that I could not move or do any of my work. There was heavy pressure and pains through my lower organs and the doctor told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for these troubles. He said I had this one chance, and if the Vegetable Compound did not help me nothing but an operation would. After taking several bottles I felt it was helping me and now I am able to do my own work. If my testimonial will help others I shall be glad for them to read it and hope your Vegetable Compound will do them as much good as it did me." —Mrs. Wm. Lockman, 513 N. 4th St., St. Joseph, Mo.

White Plains, N. Y.—"I had such a pain that I could hardly walk and the doctor said that I needed an operation. I was sick for a year before I started taking your medicine and I could not work. I saw your advertisement in a little book and that is how I came to take Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines. I have been taking the Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine, also Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and the capsules and prescription recommended. I am doing all my work and have gained twenty pounds. I am taking the medicines still, but I feel fine. You have my permission to use this letter for the good of others." —Mrs. Mary Mark, 37 Hamilton Ave., White Plains, N. Y.

Some female troubles may through neglect reach a stage when an operation is necessary. But most of the commoner ailments are not the surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors, or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same.

When disturbing ailments first appear, take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve the present distress and prevent more serious troubles. Many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after operations have been advised by attending physicians.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent you free upon request. Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Good reports are coming in from the Intermediate and Senior Bible classes. Send in yours so we can make a creditable showing at the General Conference. Better still, send it in to show you are doing something to train leaders and to win the ten thousand people who are not in the Sunday school.

Some thoughtful people have paid attention to the request to send orders for Sunday School Day programs. We shall have to begin early, and work late and hard to get every school in the Conference to observe the day. The subject of the program this year is, "The Sunday School and the Saving of Society." You know society is saved by reaching individuals, every individual. May the Lord give us a holy ambition to save souls, a passion for the lost.

Look out next week for the best reports from the Intermediate and Senior classes that have been received. We want 500 members of our Wesley Bible classes to attend the federation at Grenada, May 31 and June 1. We must get them there to make them willing to win the ten thousand who are as sheep without a shepherd, untended, unfed—a prey for the wolves of society. Organize, Enroll, Federate—Go to Work.

It is not too late to see that your school is observing one day in the month as Missionary Day. Our people have the money to pay the Centenary pledge, but their temper is such we have to get it a little at a time, regularly, systematically, and constantly. We must show them how they can pay their pledges, we must help them by making it somewhat easy and convenient. They have not been brought up to do big things for a lost world. The Sunday schools of the church have started out to give one million for missions. What is North Missssippi going to do about it? Shame on the man that encourages the people in their covetousness!

Last Sunday we held the first of the series of the Four-Times-a-Year circuit institutes on the Byhalia circuit at Emory church. On the grounds were thirty cars, seven buggies, and one wagon. More than two hundred people from the three churches were on hand. They were well dressed, good looking, and happy. The pastor, three superintendents, and ten teachers composed the organization. The three superintendents were made the officers of the organization. We reorganized the school at Emory and mapped out work for the three schools to do during the next two months. Brother Augustus systematically advertised the meeting and got the people out. Numbers said they had the best preacher in the Conference, and that is true.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Sunday School Day programs have been ordered sent direct to the pastors. If for any reason you do not get yours, or want more, please let me know and you shall have them.

Sunday School Day is the last Sunday in April. Give us the DAY.

I wonder how many schools are planning for Decision Day? It would be great for all the schools to observe Easter or the Sunday before as Decision Day and have thousands coming to God. Tbis is surely possible.

Rev. M. L. Burton, presiding elder of the Jackson Dstrict, has a campaign for Sunday school attendance to culminate Easter—100 per cent is the same number present at Sunday school as the church enrollment. The school winning is the school with the largest per cent. It is entirely possible for the Jackson District to have as many present Easter Sunday morning as the church membership. If this happens, it will mean an increase of practically 4000 Sunday school pupils for the Jackson District. Keep an eye on this contest.

The Logtown Sunday school is planning forward work. They are launching movements that will tell. Brother Alford has a fine class of young men. Two Epworth Leagues have been organized, and many other fine things are being done.

Biloxi will have a Standard Training School in June. Good for Biloxi! I trust that this school will be the turning point for that church to even a more forward looking task tban at present.

First Church, Laurel, begins a Training School, Conference type, the first of May. We are hoping that this will accomplish much and lasting good.

The District Institutes will start in a short time. Please take notice that no school can be 100 per cent. no matter what type it may be, "A," "B," or "C"—that has no representative with a written report at the District Institute.

The new Standard of Efficiency will be presented to the District Institutes, and reports from district officers and from Sunday schools. We hope to have time for open discussions. I trust these Institutes will be the most profitable we have ever had.

Mr. O. C. Hull enters upon part-time work this month. His home district has received him with open arms and the future looks bright for him and his work. Pray for him.

Pray for the work and the workers.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

MORE ABOUT CHILDREN'S WEEK AS GIVEN OUT BY THE ELEMENTARY DEPARTMENT OF THE GENERAL SUNDAY SCHOOL BOARD.

Slogan: "The race moves forward on the feet of little children."

Date: April 23-30.

I. Primary Objective: To reach the home and arouse parents to a sense of their responsibility for the religious education and nurture of their children.

II. Denominations Co-operating as Such: Methodist Episcopal; Methodist Episcopal, South; Methodist Protestant; Presbyterian, U. S. A.; Southern Presbyterian; Northern Baptist; Disciples of Christ; Christian; Reformed; United Brethren.

III. Outline of Plan: Three main features: (1) Home visitation during week by all elementary teachers. (2) Parents' Meeting in each local church. (3) Forward step of progress.

IV. Results of Last Year's Promotion in our Church:

1. 22 Conferences observed the week.

2. Approximately 10,000 parents attended the Parents' Meeting.

3. Approximately 20,000 homes were visited.

4. Practically every church that observed the week undertook some forward step to benefit child life of the community.

V. Importance of Childhood: Sayings of some of our Bishops:

"I am learning more and more in the extension and establishment of the Kingdom of God; to lay emphasis upon the work with children."—Walter R. Lambuth.

"Those who handle childhood fashion the molds for shaping civilization and determining the destiny of the race. Childhood is God's challenge and man's chance."—John M. Moore.

"The importance of childhood! Nothing whatsoever is of greater importance. Whosoever receives one such little child receives Christ; and whosoever causes one of these little ones to stumble, it were better for him that a great millstone were tied about his neck and he cast into the depth of tbe sea."—Edwin D. Mouzon.

"The child is at the very fountain of life. If we capture that and keep it pure, the Kingdom of Heaven will come speedily."—W. B. Murrah.

"All the hopes of the next generation depend upon the work done with the children of this generation. Unless our children be given intellectual, moral and spiritual training, the world will go to ruin."—Collins Denny.

"Milton says: 'Childhood shows the man as morning shows the day.' If the church fail to save the children of to-day, I cannot hope for a hright and blessed to-morrow."—W. A. Candler.

VI. How to Inaugurate Local Observance:

1. Present plan to Workers' Council, or, in case this body is not organized, to the pastor and Sunday school superintendent.

2. Appoint Children's Week Committee.

3. Send name and address of chairman of this committee to your Conference Sunday School Headquarters or Elemcntary Department, with request for Children's Week leaflet on arrangements.

4. Follow general plan outlined in leaflet.

VII. Programs for Parents' Meeting: The program for this meeting includes three talks on these subjects: "The Place of Play in the Life of the Child;" "Observing Sunday in the Home;" "A Proper Sunday School Equipment for Our Children."

VIII. Suggestions for Forward Steps:

1. Build or remodel Sunday school rooms for children under twelve.

2. Furnish Sunday school rooms properly, adding attractive features, piano, or pictures.

3. Paint dingy walls.

4. Put in Graded Course of Study.

5. Organize Mothers' Class.

6. Organizo Parent-Teacher Association.

7. Establish parents' library.

8. Establish family altars.

9. Establish and equip play grounds.

10. Secure right supervision for playgrounds.

11. Build gymnasium or play rooms. Provide supervision for same.

A CLEAR BRAIN and healthy body are essential for success. Business men, teachers, students, housewives, and other workers say Hood's Sarsaparilla gives them appetite and strength, and makes their work seem easy. It overcomes that tired feeling.—Adv.

How's Your Appetite? Headache? Weak?

Good Looks Follow Good Health

Saratoga, Texas—"A year ago I tried several different medicines, but kept getting worse, and felt that I never would have good health again. I became so poor and weak I could hardly do my housework. I suffered from loss of appetite, headache, constipation, shortness of breath, also functional disturbances. Sometimes I would have spells of indigestion and weak sick spells and thought I would die. I never expected to be well any more. At last I wrote to Dr. Pierce and he advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, Golden Medical Discovery and Pleasant Pellets (sold by druggists) and now I can truthfully say I am in better health than I have been for several years. I advise all women suffering as I did to take Dr. Pierce's medicines. If there are any medicines on earth that will help women who are broken-down in health, these will."—Mrs Winnie Comer.

12. Organize social and athletic boys' and girls' clubs in rural communities.

13. Clean up lots and provide play grounds for tenement and factory children.

14. Make plans for increasing average Sunday school attendance.

IX. Tabulating and Reporting Results:

1. The local Children's Week Committee should report results of week to Workers' Council.

2. A report should also be made to district or Conference Sunday school headquarters. This is important.

3. Blanks for the above report may be obtained from Conference Sunday school headquarters. Write for one beforehand so that you'll know what records should be kept.

X. Available Helps: Posters to be illustrated; Leaflets on District and Conference Promotion; Leaflets on Arrangements; the Place of Play in the Life of the Child; Sunday in the Home; the Child's Physical Environment in the Church; Report Blanks; Words and Music to "Up to Me Sweet Childhood Looketh."

FROM HAZLEHURST, MISS.

My Dear Dr. Carley: We have been in this town and community long enough to be able to speak from personal knowledge and observation. At the very start these good people gave us a cordial and gracious reception. Not only the Methodist, but the Presbyterian and Baptist pastors and their people joined in the welcome extended to the new pastor and his family. Both of these pastors called off their evening service the first Sunday and came around to our church, and both spoke words of greeting, revealing a gracious spirit of fellowship and brotherly love.

As time passes, these people continue to prove that they know how to make a stranger and his family feel that they are welcome. On Feb. 27, at the evening hour, the date and time for our first quarterly conference, the ladies of the church entertained the men of the congregation. Brother H. M. Ellis, our hustling P. E., was with us, and we were glad to extend to him a cordial welcome on his return to this district. Before the reception opened, we held the session of the quarterly conference, to which quite a large congregation listened with interest. The reports rendered to the last session of the Annual Conference gave a large amount of satisfaction to the church membership. Brother Ellis had preached the evening before, coming in from Center Point, ten miles in the country, and gave us a sound, strong, and understandable gospel message. He dispatched the business of the quarterly conference, and soon we were ready to enjoy the program prepared by the ladies, and to partake of the refreshments. A delightful social evening was had.

At this time, they are overhauling the parsonage, and in a few weeks we will have a delightful home, both inside and out. Congregations at all the services are good, and the outlook is encouraging, and things are taking on more interest. The pastor has been diligent in the pastoral work, and has been into all the homes of the people and some of the homes of the other friends. The presiding elder and the pastors of the Brookhaven District give this preacher a most cordial reception on his return to the district, after being away for four years.

The work of the district opens up with a bright outlook, and with the men we have on the charges of this district, under the leadership of our presiding elder, it is quite sure that the year will be one of gratifying results at the end.

As far as I know, all the pastors in the district are hard at work, and are happy in the Lord. The home of Brother Oliver has been afflicted in the illness of his good wife. When the angel of the parsonage home is sick, it makes things hang heavy on the heart of the pastor. We are praying that she may soon come back to health, and let that home be bright and happy again.

Tom Walker, that matchless superannuate of this district, is on the go much of the time, and spent last Sunday evening and night with us. He preached a very fine sermon at the evening service, and gave us a message worth while. By the way, do not forget that Tom Walker is an editor now. I introduced him as Dr. and an editor. He took exceptions to the doctor business, but he let the editor go all right. He took several subscriptions for the Megaphone, and the folks say they like to read the jokes in the paper. From the way the people read Hambone's Meditations, they do like fun of that sort.

On Sunday evening, the 5th inst., Dr. J. M. Sullivan, of Millsaps College, came down and gave a splendid and inspiring address to our laymen. This part of our work, under the leadership of Brother Caruthers, is making itself felt in the work of the church.

We have organized a League, and it bids fair to be one of the best in the district, under the leadership of Miss Mamie Grey Cook, one of the best equipped young women in the Brookhaven District.

We are thinking of bantering the Sunday schools of McComb, Brookhaven, Magnolia, Fernwood and Crystal Springs for a competitive race on the question of attendance. Let us hear from the superintendents of these schools. W. H. SAUNDERS.

FROM MOORHEAD, MISS.

Dear Advocate: It might be interesting to some to see a note from Moorhead. Moorhead is still on the map, and growing. New dwellings are being finished nearly every week and families moving in.

We have one of the nicest and most conveniently arranged churches in this section of the country for a town of this size. We are making a desperate effort to make the final payment on our church note this week. We will succeed without a doubt; in fact, it is all arranged for. We rejoice to know that it will be free from a note.

The Sunflower County Agricultural High School is located here, which is one of the largest in the State. There are about one hundred and fifty boys and girls in the dormitories. This is where one of our greatest opportunities is.

We have a live Sunday school, which is well attended and doing good work. We need better trained teachers, and are planning to have a District Training School here this summer. We hope to have good attendance from the near-by towns and country communities. We are looking for nothing but success.

We have a splendid Epworth League, with a large membership and splendid attendance and interest. We are proud of our young people. A Junior League, under the leadership of Miss Eva Sanders, who is our efficient county home demonstration agent, is doing good work.

The people have been very nice to us since our arrival here on Nov. 28, last. The Missionary Society remembered us kindly all along, together with different individuals. But about the middle of February we were "stormed." About 7 o'clock one evening it began to sprinkle, and it showered along till about 7:30, when a regular deluge came. When it was over, the dining room looked like a tousled grocery store. We are feeling the effects of it yet, and will for some time to come. We have some very choice people here.

THE BOY.

You can do anything with boys, but you can do nothing for them.

Unless a boy is given something to do to express his religion, it will mean very little to him.

Every virile boy will respond to a worth-while task.

If a boy is trained to serve his Master during the "teen" ages, he will probably desire to serve him for the rest of his life.

If he is not trained to serve, he will probably, and often does, become indifferent to religion.—Selected.

Dodson's Liver Tone Instead of Calomel

Calomel is quicksilver. It attacks the bones and paralyzes the liver. Your dealer sells each bottle of pleasant, harmless "Dodson's Liver Tone" under an ironclad, money-back guarantee that it will regulate the liver, stomach and bowels better than calomel, without sickening or salivating you—15 million bottles sold.—Adv.

SCHOOLS OF MISSIONS.

There are seventeen interdenominational schools of missions affiliated with the Council, four having joined the group during the past year: Houston, Tex.; Illinois-Missouri, Lake Geneva, Wis., and New Orleans, La.

SCHOOL OF MISSIONS AT NEW ORLEANS.

The School of Missions held recently in New Orleans, under the auspices of the Woman's Church and Missionary Federation (Department of Missions), was greatly appreciated by all who attended. The entire program for each day was decidedly good; the outstanding features of the school were the lessons and lectures given by Miss Frances B. Patterson, of Chicago, and the daily Bible lessons by Miss May Allen, of Newcomb College. Miss Patterson, having been a missionary to the Orient, added much of living illustration, anecdote and experience in the teaching of the text book, "The Kingdom and the Nations," by Eric M. North. Miss Patterson also taught the home mission book, "From Survey to Service." The Pageant, "The Bible in Many Tongues," directed by Miss May Allen, of Newcomb, and given by students of Newcomb College, was pronounced a beautiful and effective presentation, and was really a fitting climax to the whole program.

BATON ROUGE, LA.

The Woman's Missionary Auxiliary of Keener Memorial Church has been doing very good work for the past quarter. During the first month committees were appointed, the auxiliary divided into circles and gotten into working order. Pledges, both undirected and local, were made for the ensuing year. On account of a number of members moving out of town, we have not as many on roll as at the beginning of last year, but, in spite of the decrease in members, there was an increase in the amount of the pledges.

The second month was very satisfactory. Besides the accomplishing of work that had been planned, a Young People's Society was organized with twenty-two wide awake, active young people who will we believe come up to the aim and expectations of their capable and efficient superintendent.

Our president was sent as a delegate to the Conference at De Ridder. We are more than pleased that she was our choice. Her report was fine; but, above all, was the interest and enthusiasm with which she took up her duties on her return.

The Mission and Bible Study are interesting departments of our society. The Book of Mark is being taken up in the Bible study, and no more beautiful or inspiring study can be found than the life and teachings of our Savior. It demonstrates to us a love "that passes all understanding," and we can take nothing greater into our work.

AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM REV. WALDO W. MOORE.

Dear Brother Carley: The work in and around the Wesley House, East Biloxi, appeals to any one who has a missionary spirit. Miss Tinsley, head deaconess, and Miss Chapman, helper, are doing a fine work at the Wesley House. We have a few splendid American people in that community and a great many foreigners in that section of Biloxi, being the oyster factory district. Within three blocks of our Wesley Memorial Church there are Catholic, Holiness, Baptist, and Episcopal churches. On that account and on account of the floating foreign population, it is difficult to build up a strong, permanent Protestant church membership.

This will be missionary territory for at least twenty years, or perhaps indefinitely. Yesterday I went into an Austrian settlement to give the Gospel of John to a man. I met a woman in front of the house who said she could read a little Croatian, which is the Austrian language. I handed her one of the Gospels of John and without moving out of my tracks I gave out six Gospels of John in the Croatian language, and also gave three Gospels of Matthew in English. I could have given several more, but my supply was exhausted.

The work at Back Bay is doing well. We are getting a few of our pews made. Our Sunday school there is doing a good work, but we have not reached the standard of efficiency. A remarkable Sunday school pupil at Back Bay, Ted Raymond, a little boy eight years old and in third grade in school, in preparing his Sunday school lesson on Jonah, read the entire book and could intelligently answer questions in every chapter in the book. In distributing Bibles as pastor, I hesitated to give him a Bible, but he has shown rare ability in understanding the Bible and giving answers. The above shows some of my work as pastor.

Fraternally,

WALDO W. MOORE.

DEDICATION OF ALGIERS METHODIST CHURCH.

The Algiers Methodist Church will be opened and dedicated, Sunday, March 26, 1922, at 4:30 p.m. All our people are invited, but especially all former pastors. There will be no especial collection taken. The pews are in, the pipe organ is installed, and carpets laid. All things are in readiness—come and rejoice with us. The church is of pressed brick and was designed by Mr. T. L. Brodie, church architect, Birmingham, Ala. Mr. J. A. Petty, Godchaux Building, was the builder. The church was begun August 8, 1921. It is well and substantially built. The Building Committee has been presided over by Mr. J. U. Melanson, a retired contractor, who has superintended the work without cost. Peace and harmony have prevailed in the board, and all of us are very happy and truly grateful that God has blessed us in our labors.

Fraternally,

C. C. WIER.

THE SHREVEPORT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Shreveport District Conference will convene in Vivian, La., on Wednesday, April 19, at 10:15 a.m. Delegates expecting to attend will please send in their names as early as possible, so that entertainment may be secured. Write a card at once to Mrs. C. M. Caldwell, Vivian, La., if you wish entertainment.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

DO YOU WANT A TENT REVIVAL?

We are ready to arrange tent meeting dates. Since all real success can only come through our Lord Jesus Christ, we only mean to give the glory to Him by saying He never fails to bless our efforts with great victory in every tent meeting. A gospel tent itself has no power to save souls, but by the power of the Spirit working through divinely appointed human instrumentality trained in that special line of work, great congregations are attracted, and there is no quicker way to reach a community than in a great tent meeting. A place to put a gospel tent down in the midst of a multitude of souls is what we want, whether in a country village, town, or city.

In the name of the Lord we promise a great meeting. The world is full of crime and sin. The people need saving. My tent is 40x60 feet. We oftentimes have thousands under and around the tent. Let nothing get between you and the salvation of men. Secondary matters work automatically when the will of the Lord is done truly and intelligently; and this applies to pastors and other agencies.

We were glad Brother J. B. Randolph was returned to the Corinth District. We have never known First Church, Corinth, so delighted as they are with Brother Smoot. He has good congregations in the main auditorium at his midweek prayer meetings. South Side is much pleased with Brother J. D. Boggs.

Corinth Circuit is being acceptably served by Brother D. R. McDougle All the brethren of the District are doing well.

SHIFTING POINTS IN MISSIONS.

"I lingered some time after the committment of 'ashes to ashes,' examining the headstones of some of our heroic men and women of the elder day, who through faith valiantly wrought and opened the way for those who have now entered into the inheritance of a great, strong church, with schools and colleges, hospitals and social centers, in a land which would once have been impenetrable to all but the most persevering, and among a people whose prejudices and self-conceit would have resisted anything but the sword of the Spirit in the hands of the most courageous soldiers of the cross.

"I do not mean to intimate that the missionaries' task is now an easy one; the points of pressure have shifted and the pioneer work has been accomplished, but new problems have arisen that demand the utmost sincerity and courage and other works are to be done that require unremitting toil and consecration to the great ideals of the kingdom of God. The change is in the form, not the substance; our very successes constitute new difficulties and the ground of a new obligation upon the churches at home."

The above statement was made by Dr. F. S. Parker, General Secretary of the Epworth League Board, referring to the occasion of Bishop Lambuth's funeral. Dr. Parker was making the itinerary of the Eastern conferences with Bishop Lambuth and was with him at the time of his last illness.—Bulletin.

WE TURN COTTON TO CHARACTER:

Hundreds of thousands who worked in the Southern cotton mills as children have come to maturity with little or no cultural education. Thousands of these are so eager for common learning that they are willing to postpone marriage and work every other week to get to go to school every other week. They are highly experienced in textiles and make wonderful cloth which is trade marked "CHARACTER CLOTH", because of its marvelous intrinsic value, and the fact that its manufacture and sale form the financial basis for a great character-forming school.

"Character Cloth" is Guaranteed Superior

to imported fabrics, and is cheaper in price. The reputation of a great educational institution is back of this statement. Adapted to shirts, pajamas, dresses, bathing suits, childrens' clothes. Many beautiful designs and colors.

Observe These Rules:

1. The contest is open to every man, woman, girl or boy living in America, except employees or relatives of employees of E. J. Reefer, 9th and Spruce Sts. There is no entrance fee of any kind.
2. You must use only one side of paper. You must number your list of objects in regular order—1, 2, 3, etc. Your full name and address must be written on each page in the upper right hand corner. Use a separate sheet for anything you may wish to write outside of your list of names and your name and address.
3. English words only will be accepted as they appear in the English dictionary. Obsolete words will not be counted. Both the singular and the plural of a word will not count; either one of them may be used.
4. Compounds or words which are made up of two or more complete English words cannot be used.
5. The same spelling of a word will be counted only once even though it is used for different articles or objects, or parts of them. Each article or object can be given only under one name.
6. Two or more people may co-operate in answering the puzzle. However only one prize will be given to any one household. No prizes will be awarded to more than one of any combination outside of the family where number—two or more—have worked together.
7. If a contestant sends more than one list under the same name, an assumed name, or a pre-married name, then all lists of such contestant will be disqualified. If more than one list is sent by any group or by any members of the same group who have co-operated in the preparation of such lists, then all lists of such contestants will be disqualified.
8. All answers must be received through the mail by E. J. Reefer, 9th and Spruce Streets, Philadelphia, Pa., and must be post-marked by Post Office closing time, April 10th, 1922.
9. The first prize will be awarded for the answer containing the largest and most nearly correct list of the names of visible objects and articles beginning with "S" shown in the picture. No other consideration, such as neatness, style or handwriting will have any bearing in making the decision.
10. The full amount of any of the prizes will be awarded to each contestant in the event of ties.
11. The decision will be made by three judges entirely independent of and having no connection with E. J. Reefer. They will judge the answers submitted and and award the prizes at the end of the contest. Participation in the contest carries with it the acceptance of the decision of the judges as final and conclusive.
12. All answers will receive full consideration whether or not "Reefer's Yeast Tablets" is purchased. At the close of the contest, when all lists have been graded, the names of the prize winners will be announced and the list of words will be sent upon request to any participant who sends a stamped, addressed envelope.

THE MONROE-RUSTON DISTRICT.

We have had three set-up meetings in the different parts of the district. The pastors attended these meetings well—only two did not report. Many of the laymen were present and all seemed ready to do their part.

Dr. C. C. Selecman was with us at two of our meetings—at Monroe and at Winnsboro. He made stirring talks at each place. He showed that he was intensely interested in the work and has such a splendid way of presenting his thoughts to others.

Brother S. S. Thomas, of course, was with us in all three meetings. He is always on the job. The Louisiana Conference is very fortunate in having a man like Brother Thomas for its Centenary Secretary. I believe that our heroic pastors and people will bring the collections up to at least the 60 per cent asked for.

But just a word to the pastors and committees of the Monroe-Ruston District. I trust that you have your committees well organized and have kept before the people the importance of this collection. I believe that you are interested in this as I am, that you think, as I do, that this is one of the most important parts of our work at this time; that we cannot, as a church, afford to fail; that if we do, the church will suffer; that individual lives will lose much of the joy of the Lord.

Have we faith enough to believe with Joshua, who said: "If the Lord delight in us, he will bring us into this land and give it us?" The 24th of March—Friday—has been suggested as a day of fasting and prayer. Let us pray much and work as we pray.

Sincerely yours,
K. W. DODSON, P. E.

TO THE PASTORS OF MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Co-workers: As you will note from our letter to the Treasurers herewith, we are sending each a sufficient number of letters to place one in the hands of every subscriber to the Centenary, and we are asking that you see your Treasurers and urge that they get these letters out in time to be in the subscribers' hands by "World Sunday," March 26, and if you can assist them in any way in getting out the letters, I am sure they will appreciate it. Now is the crucial hour in the Centenary, and much depends upon the effort put forth by us all in the week beginning with "World Sunday," March 26, asd lasting through April 2.

Thanking you in advance for your co-operation, and praying that your church may "go over the top," and collect the full 60 per cent now due, I am,

Yours for service,
W. D. HAWKINS,
Conference Missionary Secretary,
Conference Centenary Treasurer.

To the Centenary Treasurers, Mississippi Conference.

I am mailing you under separate cover enough letters and pamphlets so that each subscriber at your church may have one. Please get to each subscriber one of the letters and pamphlets right away—be sure that it reaches them before "World Sunday," March 26. Either deliver them by hand, or mail them, and send them to the subscribers who have moved elsewhere. Fill in the amount paid and amount due for three years, and sign your name at the bottom of the letter. Much of the success at your church will depend upon the faithful work done by you and your Collection Committee in the Campaign. Should there be any that you do not understand, ask your pastor. The earlier you get these letters to the subscribers, the better. If you are faitbful in the work as Treasurer, I think you are just as much a missionary as though you were working in the mission field.

May God bless you and use you to bring your church up to the amount due for the First Three Years, is my prayer.

Yours for service,
W. D. HAWKINS,
Conference Missionary Secretary,
Conference Centenary Treasurer.

SPRING DEBILITY

Loss of Appetite, That Tired Feeling and Sometimes Eruptions.

Thousands take Hood's Sarsaparilla as a spring medicine for that tired feeling, nervous weakness, impure blood and say it makes them feel better, eat and sleep better, and "makes food taste good."

Spring debility is a condition in which it is especially hard to combat disease germs, which invade the system here, there and everywhere. The white blood corpuscles, sometimes called "the little soldiers in the blood," because it is their duty to fight disease germs, are too weak to do good service.

Hood's Sarsaparilla strengthens the "little soldiers" and enables them to repel germs of grip, influenza, fevers and other ailments; relieves catarrh and rheumatism. It has given satisfaction to three generations. Get it today, and for a laxative take Hood's Pills.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE DEEP CURRENTS.

It is upon the deep currents of the ocean that the mighty vessels that carry the commerce of the world float, and it is along the deep currents that we look for the traffic that shows how the commerce of the world is moving. It is so in life. There are little streams flowing hither and thither, covered with froth and foam, that lead nowhere, that bear no cargoes worth while, that give no real indication of what men are thinking about. It is hard not to be deceived by them—but we should not be deceived. In every age there are fads and fancies and follies that seem to be the outstanding characteristics of that age; but they are merely of the surface. The great issues of life are always in the minds of the mass of the people, and the great values of life always draw the multitudes to serious thought and high endeavor. Jazz may jar our nerves to-day—but noble harmonies sweep our souls onward and upward forever.

NO SHORT CUTS.

A young man is fairly on the road to success when he fully realizes that there are no short cuts to the goal of his ambition. No matter what other people seem to have done; no matter how alluring the easy way may appear; no matter how monotonous and wearisome the grind of daily toil may be—it is work that counts. The young man who is just beginning his business career may not pay much attention to what a preacher has to say about such things, but he will take seriously the testimony of a man who has made a conspicuous success in life. Let him listen, then, to Mr. George A. Tomlinson, president of seven lake steamship companies, president of a great dry dock company, president of one ship building company and a member of the executive committee of another that is the largest of its kind in the country—a man who undoubtedly has achieved success. In the April number of the American Magazine Mr. Tomlinson says: "An ordinary man who works fourteen hours a day at a job will accomplish more than the genius who works only four hours a day at the same job. You can't beat that, no matter how hard you try. And tho trouble with geniuses, or with people of unusual ability, is that they think they don't need to work fourteen hours a day. I'll take the hard-working average young man every time, in preference to the brilliant youngster who catches on so quickly that he doesn't need to put in long hours. And I'll guarantee that the slower-witted chap, who uses what wits he has, and who makes a gospel of long, close, hard work, will come out ahead in the long run. Of course the genius who will work will beat the slow chap sometimes. But that kind of genius is as rare as an eagle in a poultry yard. * * * Only ten per cent of the mass of men ever reach what we call success. But I do say that you can't get to the front without everlasting plugging. It is the long day's work, month after month, and year after year, that is the biggest factor in that ten per cent of success. * * * I've had personal experience in two lines of business: transportation and newspaper work. And I don't know of a single outstanding figure in either of these fields that has not won success by being eternally on the job. And, what is more, that is the only way they keep at the top." We forget, though, that it is heresy to-day even to speak of working fourteen hours a day.

PURE IGNORANCE.

The story is told of the great Dr. Johnson that when a woman asked him why he had defined "pastern" as "the knee of a horse," he replied, "Ignorance, madam, pure ignorance." This is the only answer we can imagine Premier Poincaire could make if he should be asked to explain a statement attributed to him at a banquet in Paris recently in connection with the closing of "wine week," that statement being as follows: "If wine were bad for the health, this fact would have been known since the days of the Romans, the Greeks—since the days of Genesis. America is, of course, the mistress of her own internal legislation, but she must recognize the truth as stated by the Anglo-Saxon poet—wine is health, courage, and life." If the distinguished Frenchman had read Genesis recently, he would have recalled some very shameful happenings that took place through the drinking of wine; and if he would read Proverbs 23:29-35, he would be compelled to admit that some, at least, of the ancients had discovered that wine is a curse. We shall be charitable and assume that it is pure ignorance that causes M. Poincare to make such silly statements. If we were not charitable, we would assume that he himself had tarried too long at the wine.

WORK THAT COUNTS.

One of the most interesting phenomena in human life is what we call habit. Habits do not just happen; back of them are causes that may have been in existence for long periods of time, either consciously active or apparently dormant, but powerful nevertheless. It is largely habit that makes or mars life for time and eternity. Some people think bad habits are more easily formed than good habits. Be that as it may, we know that it is hard to change bad habits. Parents, teachers, and others, therefore, never do a greater work than that of helping the young to shun bad habits and to form good ones. This is work that counts.

JUST COMMON SENSE.

"Farmer" Burns is one of the best-known wrestlers in the world, his success both as an amateur and as a professional being phenomenal—out of more than six thousand matches he has lost only seven. He has held three world's championships, and has developed six other champions. But it is to what he thinks about swearing that we wish to call attention. In a recent magazine article, Hugh S. Fullerton, the famous sporting writer, says of Burns: "He never drank, smoked, chewed, or dissipated. He abhors swearing, believing that it is as injurious to health as is any other bad habit." And Burns himself is quoted as saying: "I never figured out why cussing is poison, but it is. I know it, because I've seen fellows poison themselves by doing it. Get a wrestler to cussing during a match and he might as well take a drink of poison. It affects them the same way." He didn't have to figure it out—common sense ought to teach anybody that it is wrong. "Farmer" Burns likes to read good books, including Shakespeare, for he says he has won more wrestling matches with his brains than he has with his legs and arms, and he intends to keep his brain in condition.

HOW DID THIS HAPPEN?

We read the following dispatch from London in a daily newspaper last week: "The man behind the scenes in the Italian political crisis is a priest, Don Luigi Sturzo, 37 years old. He is the founder of the Popular Party, which was responsible for proportional representation in Italy—a form of election which gained the party 100 seats in the Chamber of Deputies in the last election. He leads the party without a seat in Parliament, says the Central News. He had three representatives in the Bonomi cabinet. The hundred members of Parliament obey his dictates faithfully and he has the power to make or unmake governments. He never appears on the public platform, but is the man who pulls the strings." All of which may be true—but we wonder how it happens that a secular newspaper allowed anything to appear in its pages that would suggest that an official of the Roman Catholic Church meddles in politics.

GENERALLY THE HEART.

We read not long ago that a vicious criminal had been changed into a peaceful man who abhorred crime, by a surgical operation that removed a bullet from his head that had been pressing upon his brain for twenty-five years. We can very easily believe that the trouble in this case was in the man's head; but it is generally in the heart. The grace of God is worth infinitely more than the surgeon's knife in changing a bad man into a good man.

BEAUTY.

By Rev. M. B. Sharbrough.

In search of scenes grand and sublime,
Majestic mountains men may climb—
Mounting upward from below
To summits wrapped in clouds and snow;
Thence into awful chasms peer,
Filled with wonder, awe and fear:
Or they may cross the ocean's tide,
Trace and roam the deserts wide—
They may visit many a strand,
Journeying from land to land;

But for beauty, quiet, sweet,
Such as all delight to greet,
Such as calms the troubled breast,
Such as brings the weary rest,
Such as lights an hour of gloom,
Such as in the violet blooms,
Such as peeps from every star,
Through the gates of night ajar,
Such as glows on maiden's cheek,
Afar we need not roam to seek.

Such beauty God, with lavish hand,
Scatters wide o'er every land,
Pours it out on all the seas,
Whispers it on every breeze;
In songs of birds it constant trills,
Both field and forest ever fills;
It rests on hill and vale and mountain,
And gleams on lake and stream and fountain,
In spring it vaunts in buds and flowers,

In summer, lurks in shady bowers;
In gorgeous garb through autumn glows,
In winter shimmers on the snows;
Thus it journeys down the years,
Makes glad our hearts and dries our tears.
Our Father notes the sparrow's fall,
And his best gifts are free to all.

LEAVES FROM MY NOTEBOOK.

By Bishop James Cannon, Jr.

II.

It is never safe to count upon the accomplishment of a definite amount of work on an ocean voyage. You can not determine the weather conditions, and few people can ignore them. I had laid out much work; important personal correspondence to care for matters during my possible five months' absence; a final careful examination of the conditions and needs of the Mexican work upon which to base recommendations for the Committee on Estimates of the Board of Missions; and finally the absorption of as much information as possible concerning the geography, climate, races and history of Africa. I did not finish the Mexican survey and recommendations till after reaching Belgium. Some of the facts concerning Mexico will not be amiss at the close of a quadrennium of service.

A New Era in Mexico.

The General Conference of 1918 very wisely approved the plan for the division into zones of Protestant mission work in Mexico, so that the waste and friction caused hy overlapping would be eliminated. This plan is being carried out in the main in good faith. Of course, the Southern Baptists have refused to participate in that agreement. There are many splendid examples of highly developed Christian character in that denomination, with some of whom I have had uninterrupted brotherly relations for years, but the policy of the Southern Baptist Mission Board in its mission field is narrow and intolerant and more like that of the Roman Catholics than of a Protestant denomination. They know, of course, that they have neither the money nor the workers to occupy the whole field, but when requested to join in an effort so to distribute the money and workers that the whole Mexican territory may be speedily evangelized by Protestant workers, they refuse to enter into any agreement; and so to-day, in consequence of that refusal, the other denominations find themselves faced in many of the important centers with the Roman Catholics and the Southern Baptists. There is only one compensation for this state of affairs, and that is that it would be sad for any considerable number of people to be given to the influence of the Southern Baptists alone, as they would of necessity become exclusive, narrow advocates of close communion and know little of the great breadth and freedom of the Gospel of Christ.

But notwithstanding the Baptist refusal, the other denominations are reaping the fruits of the new policy. A compact, contiguous, but limited territory permits a careful, thorough study of the task to be accomplished, frequent conferences among the workers at small cost of time and money, the concentration of men and money at the stragetic points, and the development of the work from these natural centers into all the surrounding country. One of the wisest features of the plan was the assignment of the Northern States of Mexico to our church, thus putting all of our work from the Gulf of Mexico to the Gulf of California in direct connection on both sides of the national boundary line. The agreement permitted all the denominations to retain work in Mexico City, and that of our church was as flourishing as any, but at the Conference of all the missionaries and the Mexican pastors in El Paso iu 1918 it was decided to withdraw all workers at once from all the territory not included in that assigned to our church, which comprises the States of Nuevo Leon, Coahuila, Durango, Chihuahua, Northern Sonora and Northern Tamaulipas. By this prompt withdrawal we opened the way for the immediate exchange of properties with the other Mission Boards, and for the immediate withdrawal of their workers from our territory, so that when the Conference met in 1919 in Monterey, all of our workers were in the North, and our field was clear of all the workers of other Mission Boards. This does not mean that there are no churches of other denominations still existing in our territory. There are local congregations of the Disciples and of the Southern Presbyterians still living in our territory, but this is partly explained by the difference in the form of church government. Our ministers are appointed by the bishop, and a charge exists, not separately, but only in relation to a Conference, or mission. When a charge is no longer included in the list of appointments of a Conference, and no pastor is assigned to it, there is no method by which the charge can claim to be an independent charge of our church. The members can still claim membership in our church, hut there is no longer a duly organized Methodist charge. By the action taken in 1918 in El Paso, all the charges outside of Northern Mexico were dropped from the list of appointments, no pastors were assigned to them, and the members were advised to transfer to the churches of other denominations, and the church properties, titles to which were vested in the Board of Missions, were transferred to other Boards, either by sale or exchange. The local churches of the Disciples and Presbyterians are less closely bound together than Methodist churches and more independent in local affairs. So, while the Mission Boards of these churches have officially withdrawn their support, except for a decreasing yearly subsidy in the case of the Presbyterians, the local churches have in several cases insisted on maintaining their organization, calling native pastors, and carrying on work to a greater or less extent. There appears to be no case where these local congregations have been urged to dissolve their organization, or to transfer their membership to our church. Indeed, in a few cases they have even opposed improperly our efforts to meet our responsihility and to press the work in the fields where their weak, inefficient churches are located. But there has been no serious friction, and the outlook is good for the future. It should be stated here that the Congregationalists pursued the same course which we did, withdrew their ministers and all kinds of workers from the field at once, and advised their people to unite with our church, which most of them have done.

The Centenary Providential.

The responsibility having been clearly defined and accepted, it was necessary to plan to meet it. Providentially, the same General Conference which provided for the reorganization of our Mexican work also provided for the Centenary Movement. Of course we could have reorganized our Mexican work without the Centenary, but it would have taken twenty years to do what we will do in four years. Following out the plan of the Centenary Commission, our workers among the Mexicans, both in Mexico and in the United States, sent in their askings for schools, for hospitals, for social settlements, for church buildings, for doctors, teachers and preachers. The total sum asked for was one million dollars in round numbers: $750,000 from the home churches and $225,000 from the field itself. The underlying thought in the askings was that indicated above, namely, the securing of sufficient men and money to establish our work firmly in the great centers, and from those strong central stations to evangelize the contiguous outlying towns and villages. Remarkable success is attending our efforts. The churches in Chihuahua, Durango, Monterey and Saltillo, the capital cities in our territory, are all now entirely self-supporting, not only meeting all the expenses of pastors' salaries and local church expenses, but paying the assessments for the various Boards of the church. This is also true of the church at Allende, which has in addition contributed one-half of the cost of an $18,000 hrick church. The churches at Torreon and Piedras Negras are paying one-half of the pastor's salary and at several other points a good beginning has been made in the matter of self-support. New church buildings have been erected or a building purchased and remodeled at Teran, Las Herraras, Villadama, Ramos Arizpe, and other smaller places. The contract has been let for a handsome, well arranged church at Saltillo to cost $25,000 exclusive of the lot and furnishings of the church. Similar work has been carried on in church building in the Texas Mexican Mission. A beautiful, convenient church and parsonage have been built at San Antonio at a cost of about $37,500; a church built at Fort Worth at a cost of $10,000; a church and parsonage bought and remodeled at Houston at a cost of $12,500. In the Western Mexican Mission, a finely-located church and parsonage have been bought and remodeled for $7,000 at East El Paso; a tasteful church has just been erected at Juarez at a cost of $20,000, including the lot; a property for church and school has been bought and equipped at Magdelena for $9,500; an excellent parsonage has been purchased at Phoenix and the school building complete for approximately $5,000. Buildings have been purchased or remodeled at Sanderson, Alpine, Marathon, and Tucumcari; a parsonage has been bought for the presiding elder at Roswell; a fine lot has been bought at Marfa, and a parsonage and school building are to be erected at once; lots are to be purchased at Carlsbad and Roswell and chapels built. A new building is to be bought or built at Canannae.

A similar splendid record has been made in school and hospital work. First and foremost, is Mexico, is the handsome, thoroughly equipped school building in course of erection at Saltillo, to cost $200,000, in which is to be housed the great school for girls so successfully carried on by Miss Roberts; next a new $30,000 dormitory at Laurens Institute, Monterey, for which the contract has just been let, and which is an absolute necessity to accommodate the students who are pressing for entrance in that school, now more successful in every way than ever before; the purchase from the Disciples of their school property at Monterey, and the opening in it of a girls' school by the Woman's Council, which, under the direction of Miss Dora Ingram, is already doing excellent capacity work; the expenditure of about $10,000 in opening and re-equipping the Monterey Hospital, which is now full and which must either have enlargement at its present site, or must have a new building on the finely-located lot, secured from the Disciples in exchange of properties. In addition to the expansion of the hospital and school work at Monterey, a Christian Center has been opened for social settlement work, and we are now looking for a suitable site for a building.

In Chihuahua the new school building which had been erected by the Congregationalists was taken in exchange, and is used for the boys' dormitory of Colegio Palmore, and in addition there is to be about $60,000 expended on new buildings at the old college site. The old school of the Congregationalists near the center of the city has been thoroughly renovated, additional property has been bought, the whole has been remodeled, and we now have most attractive quarters for night classes, domestic science work, club work, day nursery, playgrounds and dispensary. A very large building located on the edge of the city with spacious grounds has been purchased and, because of its suitable construction, has been easily converted into a hospital, which can be enlarged as need may require.

CONCERNING THE CONSTITUTION OF THE CHURCH.

By Rev. N. G. Augustus.

In the earlier years of my ministry my good friend, R. G. Porter, used to tell me that all so-called noveities in theology were old, discardod notions brought to light by uninformed men.

Of course, no young man is inclined to hear such a statement without protest. But some discoveries I have recently made of things long forgotten incline me to believe that Gilderoy and Solomon were probably right, and that there is nothing new under the sun.

Philip the evangelist evidently thought that the 53d Chapter of Isaiah was Messianic prophecy. The church since Philip has mostly had the same thought of this Scripture. Indeed, the great German theologian, Franz Delitzsch, has well said that this prophecy reads as if it had been written at the foot of the Cross.

But some months back I read in a Sunday school periodical two interpretations of this passage, one giving the widely accepted application to the suffering Christ, the other applying it to the suffering of Israel. This latter view, I believe, is the view current among latter-day Higher Critics.

Is it new? Let's see. Among the earlier attacks on Christianity, one of the most noted is that of Celsus, who wrote about A. D. 177 or 178. In his "True Discourse," Celsus quotes a Jew as saying that Isaiah, in his 53d chapter, is speaking of the suffering of the Jewish people.

The "True Discourse" has perished, but the above statement is made by Origen in his reply to Celsus, Book I, chapter 55. Origen of Alexandria flourished A.D. 186-254. This new light from learned expositors of "Denten-Isaiah" is thus seen to have been derived from a very ancient and discreditable source.

Another instance of like nature is brought to light by a careful reading of the following quotation:

"Other views of the subject, however, must claim a share of our attention. Among the many weighty reasons which influence the Southern Conferences in seeking to be released from the jurisdiction of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, as now constituted, are the novel, and, as we think, dangerous doctrines, practically avowed and endorsed by that body and the Northern portion of the church generally, with regard to the Constitution of the church, and the constitutional rights and powers respectively of the Episcopacy and the General Conference.

"In relation to the first, it is confidently, although most unaccountably, maintained, that the six short Restrictive Rules which were adopted in 1808, and first became obligatory, as an amendment to the Constitution of the church in 1812, are in fact the true and only Constitution of the church. This single position, should it become an established principle of action to the extent it found favor with the last General Conference, must subvert the government of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

"It must be seen at once that the position leaves many of the organic laws and most important institutions of the church entirely unprotected, and at the mercy of a mere and ever-fluctuating majority of the General Conference. Episcopacy, for example, although protected in the abstract, in general terms, may be entirely superseded or destroyed by the simple omission to elect or consecrate bishops, neither of which is provided for in the Restrictive Articles. The whole itinerant system, except general superintendency, is without protection in the Restrictive Rules; and there is nothing in them preventing the episcopacy from restricting their superintendency to local and settled pastors, rather than a traveling ministry, and thus destroying the most distinctive feature of Wesleyan Methodism.

"So far as the Restrictive Rules are concerned, the Annual Conferences are without protection, and might also be destroyed by the General Conference, at any time. If the new constitutional theory be correct, class-leaders and private members are as eligible, upon the basis of the constitution, to a seat in the General Conference, as any ministers of the church. Societies, too, instead of Annual Conferences, may elect delegates, and may elect laymen, instead of ministers, or local instead of traveling ministers.

"Very few indeed of the more fundamental and distinguishing elements of Methodism, deeply and imperishably imbedded in the affection and veneration of the church, and vital to its very existence, are even alluded to in the Restrictive Articles. This theory assumes the self-refuted absurdity, that the General Conference is in fact the government of the church, if not the church itself. With no other constitution than these mere restrictions upon the powers and rights of the General Conference, the government and discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church as a system of organized laws and well-adjusted instrumentalities for the spread of the gospel and the diffusion of piety, and whose living principles of energy and action have so long commanded the admiration of the world, would soon cease even to exist.

"The startling assumption that a bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, instead of holding office under the Constitution, and by tenure of law and faithful performance of duty, is nothing in his character of bishop but a mere officer at will of the General Conference, and may accordingly be deposed at any time, with or without cause, accusation, proof, or form of trial, as a dominant majority may capriciously elect, or party interests suggest: and that the General Conference may do, by right, whatever is not prohibited by the Restrictive Rules, and, with one single exception, possesses power 'supreme and all controlling'; and this, in all possible forms of its manifestation, legislative, judicial and executive —the same men claiming to be at the same time both the fountain and functionaries of all the powers of government, which powers, thus mingled and concentrated into a common force, may at any time be employed, at the prompting of their own interests, caprice or ambition.

"Such wild and revolutionary assumptions, so unlike the faith and discipline of Methodism, as we have been taught them, we are compelled to regard as fraught with mischief and ruin to the best interests of the church, and as furnishing a strong additional reason why we should avail ourselves of the warrant we now have but may never again obtain, from the General Conference, to establish an ecclesiastical connection, embracing only the Annual Conferences in the slaveholding States."

This language is found in the report of a committee on organization, read on May 15, 1845, by Henry B. Bascom (and doubtless written by him) to the Louisville Convention; and adopted by that body with only two negative votes.

This was the solemn and deliberate action of the only body authorized to make a Constitution that has ever assembled in the history of our Southern Methodism; and the first body of like power to meet since 1808, when the mass conferences ceased to exist. Since 1808 General Conferences are delegated bodies with limited power. They can inaugurate constitutional amendments to be ratified by the Annual Conferences But they have no plenary constitution-making power.

It is not a matter of surprise that this deliverance was made by such a body. The South, in church and State, has ever stood for a government of laws, rather than a government by men; for constitutional government; for government protecting the rights of all men, which of course means the protection of the minority against the majority.

It is a matter of great surprise that an utterance so made, and made on the occasion of the setting up of our church, should have been overlooked by our Commission on the Constitution of the church. To read the above quotation is to see at once the utter futility and worthlessness of the recently published report of the Commission.

Byhalia, Miss.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

"Come walk with me," said the Spirit of Wisdom, "by the way of the Valley of Beauty." It lies hard by the stream of Life. Many, very many, and exceeding all wonder, are the scenes and the things that befall one who may journey this way.

To him who hath the seeing eye and understanding heart, visions are given. There are more than phantoms, more than dreams that chance may come to men by day or night.

Full of meaning are these, for Wisdom is interpreter and guide to honest wayfarers. His fellowship was joy.

The melody of sweet music did fall upon our listening ears. Overborne by the flood of harmony, such concord of joy, such notes of sorrow, that tears were mingled with gladness and all else was for the time forgotten. My very soul was still in wonder, as a vision splendid, in all its charm, yet deep in meaning, burst like the dayspring upon us.

One clad in garments whose glint was like pearl in whiteness was singing of life, its power, its privliege, its mystery, whilst his hands flew from one shining key to another over the shelving fronts of an organ, so vast and great and of such tones that all the depths of my heart were stirred, for awe and wonder. For the song and music out the depths and heights did laugh and weep, shout and praise, sob and mourn. All the glad minstrelsy of field and forest, the rippling laugh of children, the old heart melodies that ever live, the sad notes of souls burdened with sorrow, all the mighty range of the things through which men live, greeted our wondering souls. Then anon silence fell, a hush so deep and still that we wondered the more.

"Give me the meaning of all the vision, for to you is given understanding," I said to the Interpreter. Wisdom answered:

"In this wondrous organ is enshrined the soul of man; and the Angel of Life is the Shining One voicing its songs of joy and grief, of hope and failure, defeat and victory, gain and loss. The silence is when the portal is closed which no man can open. For the Master of all things did alike make the player, the music, and the organ, and for a time these three are one. Beyond this valley lies the city of which his presence is the light. The seers have said more wondrous are the ways of life and the songs with music immortal in that city. The redeemed walk in its light."

Paul wrote of the many things he endured for the Gospel's sake. Perils of many kinds are enumerated, and the care of the churches. But he had few, if any, financial problems to face. The churches on several occasions provided for his support, and entrusted funds to him for the suffering saints in Jerusalem. The modern pastor could give him pointers on this ever-present, perplexing problem. Methodism as constituted in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has made the pastor the responsible party in all its financial movements. No matter how well the movement may be organized with its officers, boards, committees, Conference and Connectional, the machine halts and just will not go unless the preacher grabs the reins and yells at the team. And, judging from the numbers of letters received, the entire crowd of officials and "boarders," from the bishop on down the line, land on him, and seem to hold him responsible. I would respectfully suggest that some of these men, appointed and paid fair salaries to do this work, get out and get acquainted with some of the folks in the churches who are supposed to be doing this work, and allow us P. C.'s a little time and opportunity to attend to local needs—which, in many places, are suffering—and to minister to the flock of Christ in spiritual things. For the rural churches are confessedly being weakened, and this at the peril and cost of Methodism. Office work will not restore our lost prestige in many places—only field work will win back lost ground. Plain words, but plain, outstanding facts demand them. We have talked so much about strategic points and building up the centers that the outlying lines of defense, which are really the strength and source of supply to our Zion, are neglected, if not forgotten. If any can gainsay my statements, he may enter the lists.

Coushatta, La.

OUR CHURCH PRESS.

One of the most important matters to come before our approaching General Conference will be the making of more adequate provision for the support and circulation of our Conference organs. It is an open secret that under present conditions most of these periodicals find it difficult to maintain their existence. As a rule, they are edited by men of real ability; but because of meager financial support these men are unable to secure the kind of material which they need and know how to get or to make their papers as rich in content and as attractive in appearance as they desire. Those who know anything about the newspaper business marvel at the wonders they accomplish with their limited resources.

For, in spite of the difficulties under which they are issued, our Conference organs are among our most effective agencies for promoting the work of the church. Without their help neither the Centenary Movement nor the Christian Education Movement could have been brought to a successful consummation. To their support and cooperation the General Sunday School Board is largely indebted for the great work it has accomplished during the present quadrennium. They are absolutely invaluable to the church, and we cannot for one moment entertain the thought either of giving them up or of leaving them to fight for existence under disheartening difficulties. They must be amply supported in order that they may successfully accomplish their great mission.

But what can the General Conference do to help them? Various suggestions have been offered. One is that it seek to bring about the abolition of the Conference organs and in their place establish a number of strong connectional organs in various sections of the church. This would doubtless result in giving us stronger papers, hut we are by no means sure that they would be able to render the service that is rendered hy our Conference papers even under present unfavorable conditions. The circulation of the Conference organ, as a rule, is confined mainly to a single State. It is able, therefore, to give large space and intelligent attention to local church enterprises and to the moral aspects of local, social, civic, and political problems. And this is what the people both need and desire. No paper published at a distance and circulating throughout a territory comprehending several States with their diverse conditions and interests can render the service that is possible to the well-conducted local periodical.

And if this is true, then the argument that the merging of our church papers into a small number of general organs would result in a large financial saving loses its force. For, after all, what we should be concerned about is not the saving of five or ten cents a week for each family in the church, but the greatest possible service to our membership. The appeals which are sometimes made for retrenchment in our efforts for the spread of the gospel and the promotion of Christian life and ideals tend to belittle the entire work of the church. In the face of the fact that Southern Methodists spend vastly more every year for moving-picture shows or for tobacco or for candy and chewing gum than for religious literature, such appeals naturally carry with them the suggestion that we regard the religious life as something relatively unimportant. Such trifling with the deepest concerns of life is doing incalculable harm. The church, to be sure, should set a wholesome example of economy in the use of money, but it need not be niggardly in order to avoid extravagance. On the contrary, it should approach its members with the positive affirmation that the things of the mind and the spirit are the things of supreme importance, and that for the sake of these they should gladly economize in the matter of material luxuries.

We need our Conference organs and must have them regardless of cost, and the General Conference should do everything in its power to secure their support.

The following suggestions seem to us worth considering:

1. Legislation to encourage each charge to make provision in its annual budget for putting the Conference organ in every family connected with the charge.

2. Urgent recommendation that single Conferences or groups of Conferences adopting papers own these papers and make provision by assessment or otherwise for their adequate equipment and support.

3. Arrangement with the Conference organs for a central agency for securing proper advertisements and for the purchase of paper and other necessary supplies.

Meanwhile we urge all of our Sunday school officers and teachers and all members of our adult Bible classes to subscribe for their Conference organs. The Conference organ should be considered as much a part of the equipment of the Sunday school worker as the Church School or the Magazine or the Adult Student.—Editorial in Sunday School Magazine for March.

AN APPEAL FOR ARMENIA.

Dear Brethren: The moving appeal of the starving Armenian children has just come to our attention again through Dr. John R. Voris, Associate Gen'l Secretary of the Near East Relief Committee. The immediate appeal of this committee is in the interest of the more than 100,000 children already gathered and saved from starvation by the splendid work of this committee. The fate that has befallen all benevolent appeals in the past few months has greatly reduced the income of this committee. As a result, it faces, we are assured, the terrible alternative of securing greatly increased contributions from the Christian communities of America, or the certain starvation of thousands of children who have hitherto been saved through the generosity of American contributors.

The undersigned cannot too strongly urge upon the Christian citizenship of the South, who have so well proved their liberality in the past, to give a generous response to the most worthy and urgent appeal of these starving people. The life of a suffering race of people is at stake, and almost the extinction of the oldest branch of the Christian Church. To have a Christian love for humanity and to know the facts is appeal enough to win for this need a hearty response.

Respectfully,

E. B. CHAPPELL,
Gen'l Secretary S. S. Board, M. E. Church, South.

NOTICE.

To the Presiding Elders, Pastors, and Epworth Leaguers, Mississippi Conference.

I have arranged to hold a series of District Epworth League Institutes in six of the districts of our Conference (on account of a big revival, I could not reach the Meridian District). I would appreciate announcement being made by the presiding elders, and also by the pastors, in their respective districts and churches.

I am to have with me a representative from the Central Office, and I am counting on these institutes being largely attended, and, as a result of a splendid program, much good be accomplished.

The following is the itinerary:

Vickshurg District—Gibson Memorial Church, Vicksburg, beginning at 7:30 p.m., April 5, and continue through the 6th.

Jackson District—Capitol Street Church, Jackson, beginning 7:30 p.m., April 7, through the 9th.

Brookhaven District — Brookhaven Church, Brookhaven, beginning 7:30 p.m., April 10, continuing through the 11th.

Seashore District—First Church, Gulfport, beginning 7:30 p.m., April 12, through the 13th.

Hattieshurg District—Main Street Church, Hattiesburg, beginning 7:30 p.m., April 14, through the 16th.

Newton District—First Church, Laurel, beginning 7:30 p.m., April 17, through the 18th.

Yours very sincerely,

W. D. HAWKINS,
President Miss. Conf. Epworth League.

NOTICE.

You preachers in the rural districts and small towns! Do you need help in meetings? During the summer months of June, part of July and part of August, I have open dates for protracted meetings. References: H. M. Ellis, Brookhaven, Miss., or M. L. Burton, Jackson, Miss.

DID YOU KNOW?

Data by R. B. Eleazer.

1. That in 1920 and 1921 Southern Methodists invested more in missions, home and foreign, than in any previous ten years?

2. That we sent abroad 162 new missionaries?

3. That we built 147 churches in foreign fields?

4. That we bought or built 74 missionary residences and parsonages?

5. That we opened six new hospitals in China, Korea and Mexico, and enlarged and equipped six others, at a total cost of $250,000?

6. That we established or provided with additional grounds and buildings 42 colleges and schools in foreign fields, at a total cost of $750,000?

7. That we bought at least 75 additional sites for churches, parsonages, schools, and other missionary purposes?

8. That we opened a new mission in Siberia and Manchuria, with a church membership already of 1200?

9. That we established mission work—preaching, teaching, healing, and relief—in three countries of Europe—Belgium, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia?

10. That we have already enrolled 5000 church members in Czecho-Slovakia—2200 in one church in Prague alone?

11. That we have established in Europe two orphanages for homeless children and have fed and clothed tens of thousands of destitute refugees and war sufferers?

12. That we have in Warsaw, Poland, a night school attended by 2000 students, to whom the gospel is preached every night?

13. That revival fires are springing up in all the foreign fields as a result of the Centenary impetus?

14. That 181 churches were organized in Korea last year and 16,000 new believers enrolled for Christian instruction?

15. That a great double-the-membership campaign has been launched in Japan?

16. That in two years there has been an increase of 100 per cent in membership in Mexico?

17. That 32 Chinese students volunteered for life service in one meeting; that we have 38 ministerial students in Brazil, and 173 volunteers in Mexico.

18. That our foreign Christians are giving to the church twice as much as they were three years ago ($172,000 in 1920), and rapidly increasing?

19. That our Chinese and Korean churches are striving for complete self-support by the end of the Centenary period, so that all mission funds may be left for expansion?

20. That Mexico's contributions have increased 135 per cent in one year?

21. That we have expended in two years for home missions $2,242,406 and returned to the Conferences for Conference missions $1,150,000, or a total of $3,392,000 for home work?

22. That we have invested a half-million dollars in more than 25 mission schools in the home land?

23. That we have helped at home to build scores of churches and a number of institutional plants?

24. That we have assisted in supporting hundreds of poorly paid preachers?

25. That we have extensive mission work in this country among foreigners—Italians, Cubans, Mexicans, Bohemians and Orientals—among Negroes and Indians, among mountain people, miners, cotton mill workers, dependent and delinquent girls, and in 48 city centers and many rural communities?

26. That we have had at home the largest gains in membership in our history—nearly 300,000 professions of faith in two years, and a net gain of 160,084?

27. That we are conducting evangelistic meetings annually in 60 or more colleges, with remarkable results in conversions, reclamations and offers for life service?

28. That the Centenary enrolled 242,000 in the League of Intercession, 20,775 in the Family Altar League, 50,000 Bible Readers and 75,000 Tithers?

29. That pastoral salaries at home have increased $2,452,000 in two years?

30. That this is just a partial report of the many-sided work your mission gifts are doing at home and in ten foreign countries?

31. That over 90 per cent of the money contributed for missions has actually gone to the field—less than 10 per cent pays all the cost of administration?

32. That at a time when many mission boards are showing deficits, our own is keeping clear of debt and on a safe basis?

33. That the full payment of the Centenary pledges will put our church in the front rank of efficiency and progress at home and abroad?

DEATH OF REV. W. A. MANGUM.

(After the editorial mention of Brother Mangum's death was in type, the letter below was received from Dr. R. H. Wynn, presiding elder of the Shreveport District.)

March 25, 1922.

Dear Brother Carley: Rev. W. A. Mangum, the faithful pastor of the Queensborough Church, Shreveport, passed away Friday at 4:15 p.m., as the result of pneumonia. His funeral took place Saturday at 4 p.m. The service was conducted by the presiding elder, the following brethren being in attendance and participating: Revs. A. W. Turner, W. W. Drake, G. S. Sexton, H. F. Brooks, A. S. Lutz, R. S. Walton, W. F. Henderson, Sr., R. E. Smith, D. B. Raulins, I. T. Reames, H. L. Johns, A. S. J. Neill, and R. T. Ware. The Board of Stewards acted as pallbearers.

Brother Mangum virtually sacrificed his life in his effort to build a church for the congregation. His loss to the Conference is very great and our hearts are sad. He leaves a wife and two small children, for whom prayers of the church are requested.

Your brother,

R. H. WYNN.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Centenary College has a glorious history and is related to the early educational work of the State of Louisiana. In 1825 a charter was granted to the College of Louisiana, to be established in the town of Jackson, East Feliciana Parish. This institution was virtually the successor of the College of Orleans, which had been founded in 1805. The College of Louisiana was operated by the State in Jackson from 1825 to 1845.

In 1845 the property came into the hands of the Methodist Church and from this date is known as the Centenary College of Louisiana. The history of Centenary College as an institution of the Methodist Church goes back to 1839, the one-hundredth year after the organization of the first Methodist society in England by John Wesley, when Centenary offerings were taken for Christian education. The college had been located in Brandon, Miss., but was moved to Jackson, La., in 1845.

The Louisiana Conference in 1905 accepted the proposition to move the college to Shreveport and in the fall of 1908 Centenary began her career in that city. The site in Gladstone Heights is well located, and offers everything in the way of natural advantages for the future development of the college.

The appeal of this institution to the Methodists of Louisiana is something more than the appeal to church pride. It stands as a representative of Christian Education in a large territory which is prosperous and growing in population. Centenary College is now filled to its capacity and has a large number of applications for next session. The problem before us is to make preparation to take care of these new students. Besides some dormitories, Centenary needs the following memorials:

Administration Building	$125,000
Library Building	25,000
Science Building	50,000
Endowment of Library	25,000
Endowment of Six Chairs, each	50,000

These are only suggestive. Others could be added. This but gives us an idea of the big job before us. Some one will say it is a hard job. Yes! But remember:

"It's good to do the hard job, for it's good to play the man,
For the hard job strengthens courage, which the easy never can.
And the hard job, when it's over, gives the man a broader smile
For it brings the joy of knowing that he's done a thing worth while.

"Oh, stand you to your hard job with the will to see it through;
Be glad that you can face it and be glad it's yours to do;
It is when the task is mighty and the outcome deep in doubt,
The richest joys are waiting for the man who'll work it out.

"Beyond the gloom of failure lies the glory to be won,
When the hard job is accomplished and the doubtful task is done;
For it's manhood in the making and its courage put to test,
So buckle to the hard job—it's your chance to do your best."

ALBERT S. LUTZ,
Conf. Sec'y of Education.

AN INDIVIDUAL RESPONSIBILITY.

World Sunday, March 26, was one of the great days in the Centenary calendar—the day when hosts of our people made their payments on Centenary pledges. It is not possible to report at this time the results of the special effort, but we doubt not that the returns will show that our people have made a record worthy of the membership of a great church.

During the canvass of the present week every Centenary subscriber is to be given opportunity to make some payment on his or her subscription. This special effort ends with the present week, except in the cases of Conferences that, by agreement, are to make the canvass at a later date. In a movement such as this each individual has a share of the responsibility. Your co-operation will make a contribution to the success of the movement, your failure to co-operate will to that extent prevent your Church reaching the goal that has been fixed. With so much at stake in this movement in the good name of the church, the missionary enterprises at home and in the foreign fields, our obligation to pay, without discount, the Centenary appropriations for the current year—we cannot afford to do less than our best. Pay all or part of your Centenary subscription on or before April 1.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE EDUCATIONAL NOTES.

Dr. C. W. Carter, in his "Semi-centennial Address." speaks of the founder of Mansfield College thus:

"There was Henry C. Thweat, a Virginian, who attained great fame as an eloquent preacher and a successful educator in his native State. He came out to Louisiana, and was made agent of Mansfield Female College before it had an existence. He proved to he a successful agent, building the college and acting as its first president. Afterwards, he was presiding elder of the Shreveport District; then superannuated and took up his abode in sight of his beloved college; and, from gout, he died in peace and was hurried on the college campus."

In this institution is treasured the memory of this far-reaching and consecrated man who is responsible in a great measure for all the blessings which this college has conferred upon our Southland.

During last week, the Wesley Bible Class Federation met in Mansfield. Then, during the month of June, our young people will hold their Epworth League Assembly in the college buildings. How we do wish we could meet our full objectives for this school in our Educational Campaign! We want for Mansfield the following:

Annex building	$60,000
Conservatory and auditorium	25,000
Library	10,000
Gymnasium	5,000
Administration building	150,000

This would give us in Louisiana a girls' school second to none in the South. Why not have it so? The unselfish citizen of a Christian nation who has caught the spirit of Christian service looks for better investments than lands, or stocks, or bonds.

Mansfield affords a fine opportunity for building a monument eternal by investing funds which will yield perpetual dividends in Christian character. During its fifty years of service, this institution has sent out four hundred graduates, as well as thousands of other students who have carried into their life-work the high ideal of Christian culture for which the school has always stood.

It would help matters very much if, on account of the depression, we should do something extra to get our subscriptions to the Educational Movement paid. Let everybody pay their first pledge up to date. if they possibly can. If for any reason you can't pay all, make the biggest payment you can. If you can, pay something in advance. Do that, for the money is sorely needed by our colleges to pay their debts and put in new improvements.

ALBERT S. LUTZ,
Conf. Sec'y of Education.

ORGANIZING IN CZECHO-SLOVAKIA.

My Dear Dr. Carley: You will no doubt be interested in hearing that we held our first quarterly conference in Czecho-Slovakia last night. This conference was held at the Vrsovice church, Rev. Josef Dobes, pastor. Brother Dobes is a native Bohemian, but spent many years in the States and is now an elder in the Central Texas Conference. A business man in Prague said the other day that Brother Dohes was without doubt the most Christlike man he had ever seen. He has now eight organized congregations in Bohemia. The one at Vrsovice has approximately 3000 members, including probationers. This church is certainly wide awake and would put to shame thousands of our congregations at home. You recognize at once that this congregation is the largest we have in the world.

We elected the board of stewards, the Sunday school superintendent, and other officers of the church last night. I tried to make the congregation understand that only members of the quarterly conference could vote. I am sure that you would have laughed heartily if you could have heard them vote on every question. Notwithstanding my warning, everybody present voted, but no one voted the negative and so I let it go. Besides the above business, we licensed seven very fine men to exhort and each of them will apply for license to preach at our annual meeting. They were licensed to exhort at present as a step towards local preachers' license later on.

I am more fully convinced than ever that it is absolutely necessary that we have bishops who live on the field for a period of four years at least. I hope you will use you influence through the Advocate to arouse the conscience of the church on this point before the General Conference meets.

Please give us young men, full of the Holy Spirit, missionary zeal, and an abundance of what we used to call in Mississippi "common horse sense." Either give us men of this type to live on the field with the people, or give to the missionaries the authority to decide questions without the delay necessary at present. Besides the delay, it is often necessary for important questions to he decided hy those at home who are not themselves conversant with all the facts in the case. This is not their fault, but a result of our present system.

There is without doubt a wonderful opportunity in this country, and by God's grace we are going to do our best to meet this opportunity.

With kindest personal regards and brotherly love, I remain, Yours sincerely,

J. L. NEILL, Supt.

EIGHTEEN UNANSWERABLE FACTS ABOUT PROHIBITION.

Deets Pickett, in "How Prohibition Works in American Cities."

1. The prohibition movement was not "sudden." It developed gradually over a period of more than one hundred years.

2. Before the federal law was enacted thirty-two of the forty-eight States had passed prohibition laws of their own.

3. The constitutional amendment was submitted and adopted according to the prescribed method under the form of government of the United States. It could not have been submitted and adopted in any other way whatever except by the calling of a constitutional convention.

4. In submitting it, the Federal House of Representatives voted 281 for it to 128 against prohibition. The United States Senate voted 65 for it to 20 against. The Senate of the State Legislatures voted 1288 for to 213 against. The Houses of the State Legislatures voted 3739 for ratification to 934 against. Forty-five of the forty-eight State Legislatures voted to ratify.

5. In Washington, D. C., there were 10,793 arrests for drunkenness in the last wet twelve months and 5447 in the first dry twelve months. The report of the Board of Charities for 1921, just issued, says (page 4): "The daily average num- of prisoners at the workhouse in 1921 was the lowest number recorded since the establishment of the workhouse eleven years ago."

6. In the last wet October in Baltimore there were 1165 arrests for drunkenness, and in the first dry October there were 119.

7. On February 9, 1920, while the city of New York was snowed under, there were only 36 inmates in the Municipal Lodging-house, which had more than 800 beds.

8. Arrests for all causes in the last wet six months in Philadelphia totaled 47,090. In the first dry six months arrests totaled 28,530.

9. In the last six months of 1918 (wet) the Philadelphia General Hospital entertained 1184 alcoholics. In the last six months of 1919 (dry) it had only 276.

10. The last wet year in San Francisco had 17,354 arrests for drunkenness; the first dry year, 1814.

11. In San Francisco under prohibition the annual arrests for assault with deadly weapons fell from 223 to 120; assault to murder, from 125 to 72; arrests for petit larceny, from 668 to 503.

12. In Boston arrests for drunkenness decreased by two-thirds (from 52,682 to 16,487) in the first dry year. Assault cases fell from 2127 to 1675. Larcenies declined in number by twenty per cent.

13. The workhouse at Cincinnati closed soon after prohibition went into effect.

14. The mayor of Louisville, Ky., in a signed letter said: "Under prohibition, liquor offenses fell off 84.5 per cent in one year. As an economic measure, there can be no question of the beneficial results."

15. In and near Peoria, Ill., under license, the distillers had a capacity of grinding approximately 42,000 bushels of grain a day. It is very improbable that so much grain is used in a month's time in all the illicit manufacture throughout the nation under prohibition.

16. The executive secretary of the Peoria Association of Commerce says: "Peoria has not suffered since this marvelous change in industry. The concerns occupying the old distilling and brewing plants employ more men and more money is involved than in the old days."

17. Prohibition has been outraged and betrayed in many localities, hut the areas in rebellion are comparatively few. The propaganda against the law nearly all originates in New York and Chicago.

18. There have been in Boston, Baltimore, and elsewhere more arrests in 1921 than in 1920. The figures, however, are still far below the last wet year, which ended July 1, 1919. The increase is not due to the "failure of prohibition" but to the betrayal of prohibition in these communities.—Exchange.

HEARKEN TO THIS.

There is one thing about which we may all of us be quite sure. It is this: we shall each one of us come to need all the faith we have and all the support which can come to us from God through our soul. We may be quite sure of that: that life shall yet make such demands upon our faith and upon our hope and upon our love; so many things will yet assail us and tempt us and try to wear us down, that it will be well for us not to have evaded any experience which later, as a memory, may fortify our soul. This, in fact, was the charge which our Lord made against the five foolish virgins of the parahle; they had set out upon life forgetful of its later demands. If everything had turned out gaily, and according to their most sanguine anticipations, all would have been well. They had oil enough for the hour or two which they hoped would be all the time they should have to wait. But they had nothing in reserve. They had no resources if their first resources should be exhausted. They had no deeper way of looking at life if their young dream should fail. And so they would be left a prey to bitterness—to bitterness about life which brings such misadventures, or to bitterness about themselves who might have had reserves on which to fall back after life's first blow.—John A. Hutton, in The Christian World, London.

"ALWAYS MORNING."

On a sun-dial which stands on the pier at Brighton these words are inscribed: "'Tis always morning somewhere in the world." Why should we grow so weary of life when the clouds hang low and the sun will not shine? The morning sun will drive all the mists away. Balmy breezes blown softly from a land of flowers and fragrance will make us forget the chill and damp of these low lands. Hurry across the valleys to the hills beyond.—Texas Christian Advocate.

Just to let thy Father do
What He will;
Just to know that He is true,
And be still;
Just to trust Him, this is all!
Then the day will surely be
Peaceful, whatsoe'er befall,
Bright and blessed, calm and free.

—F. R. Havergal.

FACE TO FACE.

No, I have never seen Him face to face;
But I have spoken in His listening ear;
Have tasted freely of His saving grace;
Have proved His promises and felt Him near.

I have not seen Him face to face; what need,
When, day by day, His tender love and care
Wrap me around; when I can with Him plead
My heart's desires, and know He answers prayers?

Not face to face; not yet! but hand in hand!
As He has willed it, I would have it so.
But some sweet day, I shall in His own land
Behold Him, and His glorious beauty see!

WHEN WORK WAS PLAY.

Mazie was sitting on a stool in front of an open fire. In her hand she held a little broom, as she had been sweeping up the hearth, and had sat down to consider whether she would take the corner of the dining-room which was next to the parlor, or let Lucile have it when she came over to play paper dolls. This was the favorite corner, as the parlor door opened into the dining-room in such a way as to make that corner a little room.

As she sat there thinking the matter over, her mother came in with her wraps all on. "Oh," she said, "you are brushing up. That's good! When you finish you can dust, and then set the table. I'm going up-street. I won't be gone very long."

Mazie was a well-trained child and did not argue with her mother. "Yes, mother," she said, but there was a look of disappointment in her face that made her mother think, "I'll stop at Kuntz's and bring her some candy." She kissed her daughter and hurried out.

Well, no paper dolls, that was clear, unless the work was finished before mother got back. For after she came Mazie would have to help in the kitchen, and Lucile would have to go home to her dinner.

Just then a tap was heard on the window, and a face framed in a red cap looked in. Mazie jumped up and opened the side door.

"Oh, Lucile!" she exclaimed, "I was just fixing up to play paper dolls and mother came in and told me to dust the dining-room and set the table. She's gone out."

"Let's play awhile first," suggested Lucile.

"I guess we'd better do the work first. Maybe there will be some time left if we hurry as fast as ever we can."

Tap, tap—another face at the window, framed by two blue mittens and a fur cap. "There's Maud!" exclaimed both children at once, as they rushed to open the side door.

Again the woeful tale was told—work instead of play.

"Well," said Maud, "I know what let's do. There's a game I learned at Cousin Clara's that you can do work by."

"A game!" said Mazie. "How can you play and work at the same time?"

"Just get me a sheet of paper and a pencil, and I'll show you." She tore the paper into halves, quarters, eighths, sixteenths. On each piece she wrote the name of an article of furniture—mother's chair, father's chair, high chair, mantelpiece, sideboard, and so on. Then she put these pieces into a box, saying, "We'll draw these first." Mazie and Lucile watched with great interest. On other pieces she wrote the names of things to go on the table—asbestos cloth, white cloth, plates, knives, and so forth. These she put into a separate box.

Taking up the first box, she held it out to Mazie and said, "Draw one." Mazie put her hand in and pulled out a piece on which was written "side table." "That means," said Maude, "that you must dust the side table."

It was not long before all three were as busy as bees, running to the box, drawing the slips and dusting the furniture. Soon the first box was empty, and they started on the second. These slips told how to set the table. Everything was on but the carving-knife and fork, and Lucile and Mazie were both hurrying back for the last slip, when the door opened and there stood Mazie's mother. "What is this?" she said. "You haven't put your friends to work, have you, Mazie?"

"Oh, it isn't work!" they all cried. "It's play. We've had lots of fun!"

"Perhaps, then, you don't want this?" said her mother as she handed Mazie a box of marshmallows.

"Yes, we do, too," said Mazie, "and we'll sit right down and toast them."—The Churchman.

THE SNAKE-SKIN BIRD.

By Winthrop Packard,
Secretary Massachusetts Audubon Society.

The crested fly-catcher arrives in Massachusetts in May with the first rush of really warm days. You may look for him about the fifteenth, at which time the bird migration is at its height and the woods are full of carolling hosts. You may hear the most beautiful bird songs of the year then, but the crested flycatcher is not responsible for any of these. I cannot say that he sings at all, though he is voluble enough, chattering to himself as he flits and explores restlessly in the taller trees. Often he calls aloud a single call rather harsh and often repeated. I always think this call says "grief, grief," and I take it he does not mean this for himself, but for the mourning-cloak butterflies which he devours. In earliest spring the mourning-cloaks frequent the sunny glades beneath the trees where great-crest loves to linger and cry "grief." Perhaps that is why he is there. He dashes upon them from his green ambush; you hear the snip-snap of his beak and it is all over for the mourning-cloak.

Economically this is well, and the great-crest is to be commended for his diligence, for the caterpillar hordes, which are the children of the mourning-cloaks are the bravest and hardiest of willows and make the twigs horrid with their spiny black bodies. On the other hand, the mourning-cloaks are the bravest and hardiest of our butterflies. Often they winter in image form and I find them in sunny nooks in the woods early in March, when ice and snow still linger, cheering the dull world with their sprightly flitting, and the soft brown beauty of their tan-margined, blue-spotted wings. Thus nature compensates. If the spiny black caterpillars were too numerous, the willows would be wrecked, so the crested flycatchers keep down the numbers while still leaving enough of the butterflies to make the woods joyous.

The great-crests, like all the flycatchers, are valuable insect eaters. They have the lordly ways of the flycatcher tribe and even their cousin, the kingbird, is not more pugnacious. Soon after their arrival the birds are nest hunting. They like well the hollow limb of a tall tree. They are not at all averse to an abandoned flicker hole, and bird houses, placed rather high, and with an entrance hole two to two and a half inches in diameter, are often occupied by them. In the bottom of the cavity they make a nest of twigs and rootlets. To these they add almost invariably the filmy cast skin of a snake. No one has ever been able to inform me why they do this, least of all the flycatchers themselves. It is an almost invariable custom. When it is not done, I have an idea that it has been a bad spring for snake skins and none have been where the flycatchers could find them. I cannot prove it, but I quite believe they do this to scare marauders from the nest. All creatures, including man, know and avoid snakes, so the great-crest not only takes a snake skin into the nesting hole, but usually takes care to leave a little of the end protruding. It is a very definite warning to nest disturbers. It is a bold small boy who will put his hand and arm into a hole from which a snake skin protrudes. I doubt if a chipmunk or a jay would enter a hole under such conditions, and I like to fancy that the great-crests reasoned it all out ages ago and wisely established the custom which has since existed. Great-crested flycatchers are useful and most interesting birds. They may be attracted to the home grounds by putting out flicker-sized nesting boxes.—In Our Dumb Animals.

GOOD ENOUGH.

"Johnny, do you know you should never do that? There was an article in the Mother's Home Journal just this month which said that little boys who pick their teeth are very bad mannered."

"Well, I'm going to be good by the Bible; that's good enough for me."—Cornell Widow.

DEATH OF REV. W. A. MANGUM.

On Saturday of last week we received a telegram from Shreveport, La., announcing the death and burial on Friday of Rev. W. A. Mangum, our pastor at Queensborough. We reported last week the serlous llIness of Brother Mangum of pneumonia, but the news of his death comes as a great shock. He was one of the most useful members of the Louisiana Conference, diligent in all his labors and uniformly successful in building up the interests of the church in all his charges. We have no details of his last llIness and burial, but we hope to have a suitable memoir for publication in due time. We extend sincere sympathy to the famlly of our deceased brother and pray that they may be sustained by the comforting grace of the gospel in this sad hour.

BISHOP McMURRY IN NEW ORLEANS.

Bishop W. F. McMurry, in charge of this Episcopal District, spent Saturday and Sunday in New Orleans, greatly to the delight of a multitude of frlends and to the profit of Methodlsm throughout the city. The occaslon of hls vlsit was the dedication of the beautiful new church in Algiers, at 4:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon; but he gave attention to other matters in connection with the development of the work of the church in this important field, and on Sunday morning he preached a thought-provoking and inspiring sermon at the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church.

The dedicatlon of the church in Algiers marked an important event In the history of Methodism In New Orleans. Thls church, enterprised during the pastorate of Rev. R. M. Brown and completed under the leadership of Rev. C. C. Wier, is a beautiful brick structure, with splendid Sunday school facilities, and it is strategically located for effective servlce in an important part of the city. The fact that it is near the Algiers naval station gives It an opportunity for servlce not excelled by any other church in the city.

The dedication service was attended by probably the largest congregation that ever assembled on that side of the river in a Methodist church. In addition to the members and friends of the church in Algiers, there were many visitors from the other churches of the city, lncluding, of course, Rev. J. G. Snelling, presldlng elder of the New Orleans Dlstrlct, and practically all the pastors and resident Methodist minlsters. The program included the baptism of a number of infants by Bishop McMurry, the rendition of appropriate music by the capable choir, an acknowledgment by the pastor of several gifts by members and friends, and the receipt of congratulatory messages, the delivery of an appropriate and stirring address by the Bishop, and the formal act of dedication. There was no debt on the building to be provided for, but an offering was taken, to be applied to the beautiful furnishings.

Rev. R. M. Brown, a former beloved pastor, was a guest of honor, and he preached at the evenlng hour. A great future ls In prospect for our church in Algiers.

Those Pledges To The Advocate.

At the recent sessions of our three patronizing Conferences, the necessity of increasing the number of subscriptions to the Advocate was forcibly presented by an officially appointed representative of the Publishing Committee, and the pastors pledged themselves to secure a definite minimum number of subscriptions. The total number definitely pledged was as follows:

Louisiana Conference	1,700
North Mississippi Conference (about)	1,000
Mississippi Conference	1,300
Total	4,000

RESULTS TO DATE.

The Business Manager of the Advocate has just compiled the figures showing the number of subscriptions sent in by the pastors since the adjournment of the Conferences. These figures include both renewals and new subscriptions; and while there may be slight errors due to the immense amount of work involved in going through the books in detail, the figures are substantially correct, being brought down to March 21 of this year. According to these figures, the total number of subscriptions, renewal and new, sent in by the pastors is as follows:

Louisiana Conference	398
Mississippi Conference	453
North Mississippi Conference	486
Total	1,337

WORK STILL TO BE DONE.

It is evident from the above figures that these pledges have not yet been redeemed in full—and we are well into the Conference year. Shall those pledges remain unredeemed? Some of our pastors have not yet done anything, and comparatively few of them have met their pledges in full.

WHY NOT DO IT?

Brother preacher, if you have not yet given attention to this very important matter, will you not do so at once? We are relying upon your pledges.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. F. Campbell, of Wlggins, Miss., is lssuing a quarterly publlcation, known as the "Wiggins Circuit," In the interest of his work.

The meeting at Gunnlson, Miss., conducted by Rev. W. M. Mclntosh, resulted in the addition of sixteen members to the Methodist Church.

Rev. D. L. Griffin, local preacher, requests us to say that any pastor who desires his assistance in meetings can communicate with him at Shreveport, La., Route 1.

Rev. A. W. O'Bryant. of Richton, Miss., was In the city last weck, having come for a slight surgical operation. We greatly regret being out of the office when he paid a brotherly call.

Dr. Jno. T. Sawyer occupied the pulpit of the McDonoghville Methodist Church on Sunday morning, March 19. He reports a large congregation and close attention to his message.

The report of church attendance at Noel Memorial, Shreveport, La., for Sunday evening, March 19, showed 210 present. The report reached us too late for insertion In last week's Advocate.

We learn from the Midland Methodist that Dr. M. N. Waldrip, pastor of McKendree Church, Nashville, Tenn., has suffered another nervous breakdown and has gone West in search of rest and health.

Rev. A. H. Williams, formerly of the North Mississippl Conference, ls now pastor of the First Methodist Church, Montevallo, Ala. A post card picture of the church shows it to be a beautiful and substantial structure.

According to a press dispatch, the Methodist Church at Greenwood, Miss., will soon begin the erection of a magnificent Sunday school building, the rapid growth of the Sunday school making such a step necessary.

Dr. W. G. Cram, superintendent of our mission work in Korea, spent last Sunday in New Orleans, delivering a strong message at Rayne Memorial at the 11 o'clock hour. He was en route to San Antonio, Texas, to attend the meeting of the Woman's Council.

The faculty of Southwestern University, Georgetown, Texas, has memorialized the General Conference to inquire into the situation and, if found desirable, to recommend to our church schools a definite and uniform policy concerning college fraternities and sororities.

Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, chairman of the Commission on Unification, has called a meeting of the Commission for April 17 at Memphis, Tenn. The meeting is called for the purpose of preparing the report to be submitted to the approaching session of the General Conference.

We have heen unofficially but reliably informed that Rev. H. J. Moore, our pastor at Ellisville, Miss., has been appointed pastor at Forest, Miss., to take the place of Rev. J. W. Chisholm, transferred, and that Rev. J. B. Cain, of the Oak Ridgo charge has heen appointed to Ellisville.

H. Wynn Rickey, son of our pastor at DeRidder, La., a senior in Tulane University, has recently heen elected to membership in Phi Beta Kappa, a scholarship fraternity in which membership is a high honor. Mr. Rickey has made a remarkable record as a student at Tulane.

Bishop W. F. McMurry authorizes us to announce the appointment of Rev. Frank C. Collins as pastor of our church at McDonoghville, La., to succeed the late Rev. J. D. Harper. Brother Collins will soon receive his degree from Emory University, after which he will enter upon his new work.

An interesting item in connection with tho holding of the second quarterly conference at Okolona, Miss., was the appointment of Mrs. Laura Murdock, 91 years of age but still active, on the committee on Christian literature, tho other members being Mrs. Joe Herndon and Miss Aleyne Brewster.

The Western Assembly Commissioners, after protracted and careful investigation, have accepted the offer of Fayetteville, Ark., for the establishment of the Assembly. Fayetteville's offer included $35,000 in cash, 400 acres of land, connections for water, electric lights, and sewerage, and a good road to the entrance of the grounds.

We regret to learn that Mr. J. W. Carnes, formerly an official member of our McDonoghville Church, and later our Carrollton Avenue Church, this city, hut now residing in Tampa, Fla., has been ill for the past year, having undergone several serious operations and being confined to his bed much of the time. We are glad to know, however, that his condition is improving, and he expects soon to resume his business activities.

The work at Senatobia, Miss., goes well under the leadership of Rev. W. S. Shipman. The work is somewhat handicapped on account of the crowded condition of the Sunday school, but early relief is in sight, a committee having been appointed to let a contract for the building of the first unit of a Sunday school annex. Some of the classes meet now in neighboring buildings, the great class conducted by Prof. J. R. Brinson meeting in the courthouse.

Rev. R. A. Allums, of Monticello, Miss., serves an appreciative people. They have shown their appreciation by a "protracted pounding," beginning with the first of the year. Rev. T. W. Adams was with Brother Allums on a recent Sunday, delivering a strong message in behalf of the worn-out preachers of the church. Rev. Geo. H. Thompson will assist Brother Allums in a meeting at Monticello, the time including the fourth and fifth Sundays in April.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Louisiana Conference Sunday School Field Secretary, paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Monday of this week. He was in the city in the interest of the District Standard Training School, which opens at First Church next Sunday. He gave a glowing account of the Wesley Bible Class Federation meeting, which was held at Mansfield last week. The attendance was remarkably good, and the interest was great. Mr. T. Wynn Holloman, of Alexandria, was elected president, and the next meeting will be held at Alexandria.

We are glad to be able to report that Rev. J. W. Porter, of Columbia, La., who has been seriously ill, seems now to be on the road to complete recovery. The good people of Columbia and of Graysn held prayer meetings at 10 o'clock Thursday morning to pray for his recovery. A touching featuro of the service at Columhia was the attendance of the school children in a body. His family attribute his recovery to the prayers offered in his behalf, and they give God the praise.

Plans are under way for the erection of a $60,000 church at Oxford, Miss., Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, pastor. The Board of Church Extension has promised substantial aid in the enterprise, and the local members of the church are enthusiastically interested in carrying the plans to a successful issue. The fact that Oxford is the seat of the University of Mississippi, with hundreds of students from Methodist homes, ought to make the building of this new church of interest to the State at large; and we doubt not that the local efforts will be seconded by Methodists throughout tho State.

Rev. Charles E. Downer, our pastor at Terry, Miss., under date of March 27, writes as follows: "At our second quarterly conference, held on the 19th inst. at Spring Ridge Church, one of the most historical in the district, Dr. A. F. Watkins preached for us and directed the conference proceeding, assisted by Rev. J. C. Chambers and Rev. H. M. Johnson. There was a good attendance, and reports were encouraging. Owing to illness, Brother Burton, the presiding elder, was absent, and we missed him. In addition to two of our own local preachers, Revs. W. W. Broom and T. A. Luster, we had with us Revs. J. M. Alexander, of Wiggins; W. T. Bazzel, of Tishomingo, and J. H. Cain, of Pascagoula, who are representatives from their home counties to the State Legislature, which is still in session at Jackson. Brother Bazzel preached for me last night at Byram."

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. R. A. Allums, Monticello, Miss., 3; Rev. S. B. Watkins, Glancy, Miss., 5; Rev. W. F. Rogers, Coffeeville, Miss., 2; Rev. W. J. Dawson, Brandon, Miss., 13; Rev. J. H. French, Evergreen, La., 4; E. A. Howell, Durant, Miss., 9; Rev. T. J. Norsworthy, Meridian, Miss., 2; Rev. E. V. Duplantis, Ville Platte, La., 3; Rev. W. M. Williams, Purvis, Miss., 3; Rev. W. S. Shipman, Senatobia, Miss., 3; Rev. W. B. Baker, Eupora, Miss., 12.

CHURCH ATTENDANCE CONTEST, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The following are the reports for last Sunday evening in the church attendance contest, Louisiana Conference:

Bogalusa	173
Lake Charles	291
Leesville	160
Ruston	134

We had received no other reports at the time of going to press.

DERIDDER-MERRYVILLE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONTEST.

The report for the DeRidder-Merryville Sunday school contest for last Sunday is as follows:

DeRidder had present 190, a total gain of 140.

Merryville had present 282, a total gain of 609.

The attendance of both schools was cut down on account of a terrific rainstorm Saturday night. Both schools expect an attendance of 400 next Sunday.

HOW THE TURKEY GOT HIS GOBBLE.

A Cherokee Indian Story.

"In the early days, the grouse had a very fine voice. His singing was the envy of all the feathered folks. The turkey had no voice at all, but desired to become a sweet singer like the grouse. So the turkey decided to ask the grouse to teach him to sing. The grouse consented, but on one condition, and that was that the turkey should give him enough feathers for a collar. Until then the grouse had no collar.

"The turkey was very slow to learn. One plan after another was tried by the faithful teacher, but with no success. At length the grouse became discouraged, but resolved on one final experiment.

"And so one day the grouse took the turkey into the woods where they found a hollow log. The grouse said, 'You go into the hollow log and when I tap on it you must cry out, "Halloo," three times, as loudly as you can.'

"The grouse climbed upon the hollow log while the turkey spread his feathers and strutted toward the opening in the end, proud that now he, too, was to have a sweet voice like that of the grouse.

"When the grouse tapped once, he listened, but only heard a faint gurgling sound from the turkey. This amused the grouse and he tapped more loudly. The turkey became so frightened at the loud tapping that he rushed from the log, and the only thing he could do when he opened his mouth to cry 'Halloo' was to say 'Gobble, Gobble, Gobble.'

"The grouse was so amused that he kept on tapping just to hear the turkey gobble. Ever since that day the turkey gobbles three times whenever he hears a noise. And ever since that day, also, when the grouse starts to tap on a log he cannot stop with the one tap, but continues just as he did when he frightened the turkey gobbler. The grouse wears his collar of turkey feathers. Ugh!"—Christian Advocate (N. Y.)

BE BRAVE.

"As we were returning, he spoke to me again, saying: 'I want you to remember that of all the advice I give you the chief thing is to be brave. If you start out with a war party, to attack enemies, do not be afraid. If your friends are about to make a charge on the enemy, still do not be afraid. Watch your friends, and see how they act, and try to do as the others do. Try always to have a good horse, and to be in the front of the fighting. To be brave is what makes a man.'"—From "When Buffalo Ran," the story of an Indian boy, by George Bird Grinnell, written as an autobiography.

THE SHALLOWS.

On, through the shadows deep,
Forward with Thee;
Till the glad morning shine
Thy hand is clasping mine,
Forward with Thee.

Closer the shadows press,
Greater the strain and stress
As the hours fly;
Oh, for the dawning light
Herald of morning bright,
Flooding the sky!

Pitch black may be the night,
Yet I can see the light
Hid in Thy face:
Sweet is Thy company,
Faithful Thy word to me,
Sure is Thy grace.

Obituaries

Obituaries not over 200 words in length will be published free of charge. All over 200 words must be paid for at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and be sure to send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around. We cannot make discriminations. Memorial resolutions are subject to the same rule as obituaries.

Since God in His all-wise providence has seen fit to remove from our midst our honorary member and co-worker, Brother J. A. LEWIS, therefore be it resolved:

1. That we, the Galloway Memorial Class of Houston (Miss.) Methodist Sunday school, do hereby express our deep sorrow, and deplore our loss, pledging ourselves anew to the work he so much loved and to try to follow more closely in the footsteps of Him who was his guide. His faith shall be our inspiration to greater efforts in our Christian living.

2. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and to each of his four sons, with the assurance of our intense sorrow, sincere sympathy, and heartfelt prayer for each of them.

Signed by: Mrs. Joe E. Davis, Mrs. J. A. Evans, Committee.

WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH THE CHURCH?

From what we see in the Christian Advocate (Nashville) and some other papers, what is the matter with us anyway? An old tale went something like this: "A man had an unruly ox and desided to hitch himself up with him; so he put his neck into the other end of the yoke. The ox became unruly as usual and went tearing down the road, with the helpless man yelling, 'Some one head us—we are running away!'" Some seem to have yoked themselves up with the church and are now wanting some one to "head us."

Now I am really going to tell what (I think) is the matter—we seem to be using too much mechanics to accomplish the results hoped for. If we want it done, let's have one to three secretaries to put it over, with a number of set-up meetings. The General Minutes show that we have 330 men, members of Conferences, in detached service, enough to make up two Conferences as large as the Louisiana, and yet we have a shortage of preachers. Is it real or only apparent? If I were the General Conference, I think I should pass an act requiring every member of the Conference to be in the pastorate, and PREACH, or be a layman. College presidents, professors, editors, etc., ought to be laymen. I do not believe that ministers are the only ones that are competent or willing to fill these places. S. S. Thomas, of Centenary fame, and R. E. Bobbitt, of Mansfield College fame, are two worthy examples. Why not give the layman a chance?

Then there must be something wrong with our P. E's. Personally there has not been any complaint, with mine, for the most part. I served as a layman longer than in the pastorate, and the statement of a leading loyal layman to me a short time since seems to be about the general sense of preachers and laymen. He said, "I think the $144 paid to our P. E. last year would have been worth more to us if it had gone to the pastor, for he, the P. E., was probably worth about fifteen cents to cur church." I do not know how, but some one needs to "head us."

Some one has suggested that we are not producing great preachers. Perhaps when they cease to be the "key-men" to every kind of drive, and do not teach men how to farm, raise chickens, merchandise, how to care for nursing babies, etc., they may become more effective as preachers. Paul said, "This one thing I do;" and when our preachers, filled with power from on high, preach with power, and men find God, I think our financial problems will be solved as they can never be by "driving" them.

Then, what incentive has the average preacher to become a great preacher? When he goes to any kind of conference, district or annual, the same fellows from First Church, Piccadilly, or some connectional man, holds forth, and the preachers hear the same old stuff they heard from him before, or read in some of the literature; hence he strolls out to stretch himself and get some fresh air until someting new comes along; and then every church that amounts to anything is filled with an "imported" man. "Aw, what's the use?"

When the church of God, the Methodist Church, goes to its task from its knees, and preaches the Word, and eliminates about 95 per cent of the "Perfessers," Secretaries, etc., it will be more efficient. "Tarry, * * * Go."

Brethren, let's try it.

LOVE LIGHTENS LABORS.

A good wife rose from her bed one morn
And thought with a nervous dread
Of the pile of clothes to be washed, and more
Than a dozen mouths to be fed.
"There's the meals to get for the men in the field,
And the children to fix away
To school, and the milk to be skimmed and churned;
And all to be done this day."

It had rained in the night, and all the wood
Was wet as it could be;
There were puddings and pies to bake, besides
A loaf of cake for tea.
And the day was hot, and her aching head
Throbbed wearily as she said:
"If maidens but knew what good wives know,
They would not be in haste to wed!"

"Jennie, what do you think I told Ben Brown?"
Called the farmer from the well;
And a flush crept up to his bronzed brow,
And his eyes half bashfully fell.
'It was this," he said, and, coming near,
He smiled and, stooping down,
Kissed her cheek; "'twas this, that you were the best
And dearest wife in town!"

The farmer went back to the field and the wife,
In a smiling, absent way,
Sang snatches of tender little songs
She'd not sung for many a day.
And the pain in her head was gone, and the clothes
Were white as the foam of the sea;
Her bread was light and her butter was sweet
And as golden as it could be.

"Just think," the children all called in a breath,
"Tom Wood has run off to sea!
He wouldn't, I know, if he'd only had
As happy a home as we."
The night came down and the good wife smiled
To herself as she softly said,
"'Tis so sweet to labor for those who love—
It's not strange the maids will wed!"

COVERING A SUNDIAL.

A missionary once gave a sundial to some savages. So desirous were they to honor and keep it sacred that they shut it away from the sun—closed it up in a dark room.

That is the way some people look upon Christianity. They hold it too sacred for daily and practical use. They carefully lay it aside for Sunday and special occasions. They think it is all right for women in the home or for preachers in the pulpit, but that it has no place in the office or shop or factory. No wonder they lose what little faith they have. Use your religion. Grow by exercise; that is the law of growth in anything. Let your faith inspire you to noble deeds.—Gospel Advocate.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI

By Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

I filled orders for Sunday School Day programs for 125 schools, and have sent order blanks to every school in the Conference. We are planning to follow up every school with letters until we find out why some superintendents fail to give tho children the instruction they are due to give. Think of it, we are reaching only 32 per cent of our children in Mississippi. No wonder so many are going crooked. The reason of it all is, we do not give the right kind of religious instruction and give too little of what we do give.

Fill out those reports for Intermediate and Senior classes so I shall not have to write again and again. If I had not sent a stamped envelope for reply, there might be some excuse for not answering. The fellow that will not reply never reads these notes or much of anything else.

In a few days I shall send blanks for Young People's and Adult classes to make reports. I hope I may have better luck with them. We can never make much progress in bringing in the people when we work like that. It is enough to make one lose hope or rather lose faith in some fellows. We must bring in the ten thousand who are on the outside, literally starving for the Bread of Life. Help men, help.

Good progress is being made in securing faculties for the six Standard Training schools we are to hold in the Conference this summer. It is a big job to arrange everything to get ready to teach, but a harder task to get people to attend. The bottom of it is laziness on the part of some, mental laziness. The devil laughs at our lack of earnestness and determination to cast him out. We need a revival of honest study as well as other kinds of revivals. Let us pray more and pray harder. Resist the devil and he will flee.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Rev. J. M. Lewis, the pastor at Collins, arranged for a meeting of the Methodist Sunday school workers of Covington County for March 18. Half the charges were represented. They decided to postpone organization till they had another meeting along in the summer. This will prove, I am sure, a great help to all the schools of the county.

O. C. Hull was with me and we had a most pleasant time indeed. Brother Hull spent Sunday at Williamsburg and reports a great service out there and promises of improvement and advancement. Good for Williamsburg! May it be the beginning of great things!

The work at Collins is in good shape. There are many signs of life and improvement. The folks in the church seemed to be in fine spirits and have a mind willing to work. Last Sunday they reached their high water mark for attendance this year. I trust that it will go higher and mean more as the days go by.

They have an Intermediate League that would gladden any one's heart. It is a wonderful opportunity, and I am glad they are seeing it and entering. I enjoyed the visit very much and had such a good time. God's richest blessings be upon this kind people, and their big-hearted, brotherly pastor.

Children's Week! Please don't forget. If literature has not reached you, write to me for it.

Standard Training School! Make your plans to that end.

Pray for the work and workers.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS,
Field Secretary.

CHURCH COMPLETED AT HOUMA, LA.

Dear Mr. Editor: This is to inform you and all the church that we have at last completed our new church here, and to give all former pastors a special invitation to the opening.

The building will cost $15,400 net, lighting fixtures and seating extra. When completed and furnished, the property, including lot, will have cost the church $20,000. Of this amount the General Board of Church Extension will have donated us $5,300. We will then owe the General Board $5,000 as a loan.

The opening service will be the first Sunday in April, at 11 a.m. Dr. R. L. Russell, of the Mission Board, will preach the opening sermon. We are expecting a grand time.

We wish here to thank all our friends who have sent us contributions from time to time.

Our membership now is one hundred and four. With the splendid opportunity we now have, we ought to double the membership in the next five years. Houma is a small city of six thousand, and growing gradually, so we need not fear for our future here.

We have a splendid Missionary Society, and will soon organize an Epworth League. Our Sunday school has been growing all the time.

We use the weekly envelope system. Of the 104 members, we have 98 on the weekly offering list. Pastor and elder are paid up to date.

Our Board of Stewards is equal to that of any church in the Conference. Soon we will hear of good men who will want the Houma church.

More after the opening service.

Fraternally yours,
F. J. McCOY, P. C.

HOBBIES.

The hobbies of some people are regarded as expensive luxuries by others. Sometimes hobbies are looked upon as the boring or grubby pursuits of persons who are unable to amuse themselves in a proper or normal fashion. Occasionally a hobby is respected as contributing to a man's usefulness or interest. But the word "hobby" carries with it a mildly disdainful atmosphere that does not cling round the more elegant yet essentially synonymous word, "avocation."

There is seldom any reason for people to disdain one another's hobbies, however inevitable, owing to differences in human disposition, lack of sympathy with them may be.

The hobby of collecting postage stamps, despised as it was by many when first it manifested itself, needs no longer to be admitted with an air of deprecation. The hobby of mechanics is one that in these days too often demonstrates its usefulness to arouse in any one who does not share it any feeling other than that of envy. The hobby of photography combines numerous admirable interests—those of nature, those of art, those of science; any one who seriously pursues that hobby is sure to increase his stock of knowledge and his capacity for enjoyment. The various hobbies of the collector—butterflies, shells, Indian relics—have their value, even though that value is not often of a social character.

If we look for the reason underlying the old prejudices against hobbies, it is to be found in the fact that many of them are of an unsocial nature. The people who don't share them—and usually they are hobbies in which partnership is difficult—feel that they raise a barrier against human intercourse, or that they introduce into human intercourse a devasting element. Talking shop is bad enough, but talking hobbies is usually worse, so far as general conversation is concerned.

The people without hobbies are usually to be commiserated. They may have their sports and their books, but neither sports nor books afford quite the same kind of interest that is to be derived from the pursuit of a well-chosen and congenial hobby; for in that pursuit there is always something satisfying to the creature impulse in man.—The Youth's Companion.

HOW FAR?

How far, then, is it to God? How long is the road? Is there some far away Mecca to which pilgrims must turn their feet? Or is there a priestly altar at the other end of the town? Or is there a long, bleak, heavy road called Legality? Nay, all these are long roads, and weary souls would faint before they got to the end of the way. The real road to God is shorter than an arm-stretch; nay, shorter than a hand's-breadth. This "way" has this strange characteristic: it is entirely without distance. You no sooner begin to walk it than you are there. You turn to the way and you find yourself at the goal. You have come to God; you have arrived. This is surely what St. Augustine means in his wonderful words: "Do not conceive of long journeyings. When thou believest then thou comest; for to Him Who is everywhere, men come by loving, not by traveling."

And therefore if God is the great Father-Spirit there is no need of any struggling to find Him. We need not set out on burdensome pilgrimages. There is no necessity that we should call as to some one afar off. There are no "heavenly steps" to climb to bring the Lord Christ down. We need not turn to height or depth. "A present help is He."

What serenity, then, ought to characterize the true believer's life! Indeed, this should be the Christian's royal distinction in the world. There ought to be a most outstanding register in our lives that we have got somewhere, and that Somewhere is God. As far as this fundamental thing in life is concerned we have arrived. Our Life is at rest, and therefore ready for progress.—Jowett.

THE GIFT.

He laid his gold within my hand,
But said, "I cannot pay you all."
I cried, "I do not understand,
You owe no more that I recall."

He said, "I wandered here forespent,
And your warm heart went out to me,
My debt is more than you have lent,
One cannot pay for sympathy."

—Paul L. Benjamin.

Peter Cooper, the inventor, in his autobiography, said: "I first obtained an old pair of shoes and took them apart to see the structure and then, after procuring leather, thread, and needless and some suitable tools, without further instruction I made the last, and a pair of shoes which compared very favorably with the country shoes then in vogue."—U. S. Bulletin.

THE JOHN BROWN MEETING IN MERIDIAN, MISS.

Rev. John E. Brown, Siloam Springs, Arkansas, will open a thirty-day campaign in Meridian, Miss., Sunday, April 2, in a huge tabernacle on Eighth Street and Twenty-fifth Avenue. Mr. C. L. Virgin has been in Meridian for the past thirty days working out and completing the details of this campaign and everything is in readiness for Mr. Brown's coming.

A very unique plan was used in the erection of the tabernacle, all the work being done by voluntary labor. The schedule of Mr. Virgin was to complete the tabernacle within three days, and, with the exception of odds and ends, this program was carried out. The ladies of the various churches served a bountiful luncheon in the basement of the Central Methodist Church each day and all participating in the erection of the building enjoyed the fellowship immensely. This method brought many men from all walks of life into direct touch with the campaign, and the executive committee feels that this method was a most fortunate one.

A choir of some three hundred voices is being organized and preparations are going forward for one of the greatest revivals ever known in Meridian. Mr. Brown has just completed a campaign in Chattanooga and news stories in the press of that city indicate that thousands of people were turned away from the great Billy Sunday tabernacle where the meeting was held, and that there were during the campaign about four thousand conversions.

Many visitors are expected to attend the meeting, not only individually, but in delegations from the surrounding territory, and a splendid committee headed by Rev. Paul D. Hardin, chairman, will look after the delegations.

J. B. HOLLAND.

TO THE PASTORS AND CENTENARY TREASURERS, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

When you read this article, I hope your church has already gone "over the top" and your report has been made; but if you have not completed the campaign, please continue until every subscriber has been seen and urged to pay the amount due.

If anything has prevented your putting on the Campaign during the week of March 26-April 2, would suggest that you put on the campaign yet, following out the same plan, so that every subscriber in each church shall have the privilege of paying the amount due.

Would further suggest that the committee of workers you have been using be continued as a "permanent" committee, to see the same subscribers until all payments have been made for the five years: a systematic follow-up of the work will bring large results in the future.

I thank you for what you have done, are doing, and you may do to bring the "pledge money" into the "storehouse," so that God will bless us as never before. Yours for service,

W. D. HAWKINS,
Conference Missionary Secretary.

HE WANTED TO KNOW WHERE TO FIND HER.

In a recent Y. M. C. A. shop meeting the subject was Roosevelt. The speaker, earnestly addressing a group of thirty or forty thousand workmen, was giving the source of the great man's power. This, he said, was drawn from five "wells." He was "well bred, well fed, well read, well wed, and well led."

He stopped long enough to explain just what he meant by good breeding, physical fitness, the well-stored mind, a happy home life, and above all, being led by the Spirit of God. As he concluded the simple explanation of what he meant by being well wed, a young Italian-American spoke up:

"Say, boss, where can I find such a girl? I am looking for her."

The speaker smiled. "Where have you been looking for her?" he asked. "Have you tried your church social or the prayer meeting?"

"No, sir."

"Have you not been looking for her on dance-hall floors?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, old man, you can't find a prayer meeting girl on a dance-hall floor. The trouble is, you have been looking for the right thing in the wrong place. Suppose you slip around to the old church and see if the fine woman about whom you have been thinking is not in the same fine place where she has always been."

FRECKLES

March Brings Out Unsightly Spots. How to Remove Easily.

The woman with tender-skin dreads March because it is likely to cover her face with ugly freckles. No matter how thick her veil, the sun and winds have a strong tendency to make her freckle.

Fortunately for her peace of mind, Othine—double strength, makes it possible for even those most susceptible to freckles to keep their skin clear and white. No matter how stubborn a case of freckles you have, the double strength Othine should remove them.

Get an ounce from your druggist and banish the freckles. Money back if it fails.

THE ANNUAL MEETING, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The 10th Annual Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society convened in the First Methodist Church, Water Valley, March 7. The president, Mrs. J. W. Conger, of Winona, presented Miss Julia Wasson, who is at home on leave from her work at China, who gave a spiritual address, which was followed by Dr. Brandon, of Alabama, who delivered one of the best addresses heard. All during the conference, splendid musical numbers were given by the local choir, assisted by the visitors, and the devotionals, conducted by Dr. L. P. Wasson, Rev. B. P. Jaco, Rev. R. A. Tucker, Misses Wasson, Horner and Massey, Mesdames B. W. Lipscomb, J. M. Wyatt, R. P. Neblett and A. W. Stokes, were seasons of prayer and consecration.

Wednesday morning Mrs. Conger gave her address, full of the past year's work, with a note of encouragement from every department. Reports were heard from every Conference officer during the session. Mrs. Joe Herndon was not present, but sent a report of her year with the Young People, which was read.

During Wednesday Mrs. J. H. McCoy, of Nashville, gave a most wonderful address, touching on the activities of the Home Department, with reference to its most glaring needs, urging that Christianity start in the home. That evening Mrs. Lipscomb, of Nashville, who is known and loved by all Mississippians, and Miss Mary Massey, in charge of Sau Paulo college, Mexico, delivered addresses that were interesting and instructive.

The District Secretaries received the warm praise they have so well merited, when they came to the front and told of what the year had been in every district, naming many Auxiliaries that were doing all lines of work required by the Council.

Wednesday afternoon all business was suspended and Mrs. J. F. Evans, honorary president of the Conference, held the memorial service, assisted by Mrs. S. M. Thames, the other honorary president. Beautiful tributes were paid to those who have gone on before.

Thursday evening a number of young ladies came over from Grenada College and presented the beautiful pageant, "Call of the New Year." The local band gave a sacred concert, which was so much enjoyed.

Committee reports were heard Friday morning and adopted with very few changes. Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, of the Hospital Board, gave her report of her meetings with the Board, which was followed by Rev. L. H. Estes, who told many interesting things of the hospital.

Mrs. E. T. Clark gave her report as member of the Orphans' Board, and Mrs. Alma Riley and the two girls supported by the Water Valley Missionary Society, Misses Easter and Mattie Myrtle Thornton, were present. Mrs. Riley made a talk, while the young ladies gave several musical numbers.

Mrs. W. T. Johnson, in a very appropriate talk, invited the Conference to meet with Greenwood Auxiliary in 1923, which invitation was seconded by many who wanted to go to that city, and it was unanimously decided that Greenwood would entertain the next Annual Meeting.

The election of officers showed results as will be found in the Conference Directory. All district secretaries were reappointed, and Mrs. Wyatt was re-elected for the Hospital Board and Mrs. E. T. Clark for the Orphanage Board.

The noon hour and a half was given to social and committee meetings, lunch being served every day in the beautiful Masonic Temple banquet hall by members of the local auxiliaries. The first day, T. Q. Ellis, for the Masonic order, delivered a beautiful welcome, and the local orders spared no pains in their efforts to make their guests comfortable.

Thursday evening the Water Valley Young People entertained the visiting young people with a banquet in the Masonic Hall. Their departmental meetings were well attended, showing the young people were there to take a message home.

About 150 delegates registered and a number of visitors, many of whom gave inspiration to the Conference officers by their presence and interest.

Too much praise cannot be given the Water Valley Auxiliary and their friends, who gave the week to making the visit of their guests one of pleasure and profit. The local arrangements seemed perfect.

Supt. Publicity.

Report of Committee on Resolutions as Adopted at Annual Meeting, W. M. S.

Whereas, the 10th Annual Session of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference, held at Water Valley, March 7-10, 1922, has been one of the most pleasant in the history of the Society;

And, whereas, the generous hospitality, unstinted liberality and remarkable open-hearted and open-handed attitude of the citizens of Water Valley, regardless of church affiliations, have contributed so largely to our comfort and pleasure;

Therefore, be it resolved, That we, by standing vote, express our deep appreciation to Revs. L. P. Wasson and M. E. Scott, the genial and thoughtful pastor-hosts, and their accomplished wives; to Rev. Wain Allison, of the Baptist church, for his tireless co-operation; to Rev. R. A. Tucker, the efficient presiding elder, for his watchful direction; to the pastors of the Conference for their presence and guidance; to our connectional and other visitors, Dr. Brandon, Mrs. J. H. McCoy, Mrs. Bessie Lipscomb, Miss Julia Wasson, Miss Mary Massey, Miss Eva Horner and Mrs. Alma Riley, for their clear, inspirational presentation of our work; to the Masons for their whole-hearted welcome and continuous service; to the young people of Water Valley for their enjoyable luncheon; to the local committees for the splendid luncheons, the decorations, the car service, the postal conveniences; to the choir and the band for their well chosen music; to the members of the Methodist church and their friends of other churches of the city whose homes have been kindly opened to us; to the railroads, newspapers, reporters, for courtesies; to the telephones and efficient operators; to all who have in the remotest way made contributions to the pleasure and comfort of this occasion, we say, THANK YOU.

Good Rich Red Blood

And plenty of it, is essential to health, willing effort, good appetite.

Lack of it, or thin, watery blood, means illness, rheumatism, catarrh, humors, headache, wandering pains, cold hands and feet, decline of health-tone.

We recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla for all these and other symptoms because it is made from the best ingredients physicians prescribe, combined by pharmacists who have made a life-long study of medicines; and best of all, because it has helped thousands to have good, rich, red blood and all the blessings that come from it.

The worth and great economy of Hood's Sarsaparilla appeal to everyone. A bottle will last a month. War tax removed and price reduced. Get a bottle. For a mild cathartic, get Hood's Pills.

Mothers in a Like Situation Should Read This Letter from Mrs. Enrico

Chicago, Illinois.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a serious trouble. I had tried doctors and all said the same—an operation. At first I only felt the pain on my left side, but later I seemed to feel it on both sides. I am a power sewing-machine operator and have a little girl to support. I work in a tailor shop and that line of work has been very slack this year and I am home part of the time. I do not like to take any chances, so I consulted my friends, and one lady said, 'Take Lydia Pinkham's medicine,' so I did. I have felt better right along and am in good enough health to go to work. I recommend your Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash to all."—Mrs. MARY ENRICO, 459 N. Carpenter St., Chicago, Illinois.

Often the mother is obliged to support her children and good health is necessary. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is just the medicine you can depend upon. It is a medicine for women's ailments and the relief it brought Mrs. Enrico it may bring to you. Keep well by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A FINE CLASS AT IUKA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: After reading Sister Calloway's interesting letter in last week's Advocate, I felt it was due my splendid class to tell of its activities, hoping to inspire others to go and do likewise.

Our Wesley class is composed of mothers from 30 to 70 years, or more. Our Class Motto is, "Love, Consecration, Service;" Aim, "No criticism, but helpfulness."

This is not a year's report, but one quarter's report. A number of members have been perfect in daily Bible reading and prayer, especially for each other, which has created a wonderful bond of unity. Number of visits, two hundred; amount given for charitable purposes, or in church work but not reported through the regular channels, $70.85; trays sent, sixteen; garments given, forty-three. This class superintends the Cradle Roll, five in number, and the Home Department, with eighteen enrolled. We hold monthly business meetings, at which time we have a regular course of Bible study. We sent a beautiful, well-filled basket, Xmas, to the widow of one of our superannuates.

We are planning to entertain our husbands again. We entertained them last year with a splendid supper (no lettuce, no salad), but things men like for entertainment. We had the men tell of their first courtship, which, of course, didn't embarrass any of the wives present. Then we all recited our first speech at school, after which we sang the old songs until a late hour; then we were dismissed with prayer.

We are planning to undertake bigger things for this year, some of which we may write you about later.

MRS. W. M. McINTOSH.

Iuka, Miss.

FROM EPPS, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: Everything is going well on the Midway and Epps charge. We have a good Sunday school in all the churches, and the leaders are doing splendid work.

We have just closed a revival meeting at Epps, which added to the membership, eleven. The Rev. G. D. Anders, of the Shreveport District, did the preaching. We feel that the church is greatly benefited by his having been with us. The business houses and also the school closed for the morning service. We will not forget to mention the hearty co-operation of our Baptist friends in letting us have a number of seats from their church, and also helping us pay the expenses of the meeting.

In conclusion we ask that the reader remember us at a throne of grace, as prayer is the road to success in Christian life.

Your brother in Christ,

P. B. McCLELLIN, P. C.

THE HOUSE OF WERLEIN.

Eighty years in serving this community with everything in the line of music and musical merchandise is the record of the house of Werlein, established during the administration of John Tyler as president of these United States. Nine national administrations have come and gone, and during all the changes in those many years and events, including the Civil War, the house of Werlein has stood all adverse business conditions and with succeeding members of the same family at the helm.

The founder, the first Philip Werlein, was esteemed by all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance, and he not only lived up to the religion which he professed, but to the precept of his Master in his relations with and obligations to the fraternal orders with which he was affiliated. At his death, about forty years ago, he was succeeded by his son, Philip Werlein the Second, who was also a most charitable man, the worthy son of his sire, succeeding in the business as his father had done. Another son is the Rev. S. H. Werlein, D.D., one of the most widely known ministers in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

When Philp the Second fell into ill-health, the reins of the business fell into the hands of his son, Philip Werlein the Third, nearly a quarter of a century ago, who carried it on successfully until his untimely passing, when pneumonia claimed him as a victim, and the management has fallen to his brother, Mr. Parham Werlein, who has proved himself the capable successor of his predecessor. It is worthy of note that no other business house in New Orleans has remained for so long a period of time under the management of one family and in one business exclusively, and the New Orleans Christian Advocate extends its best wishes and congratulations on the celebration of its eightieth anniversary.

WASTING OUR LORD'S MONEY.

A few days ago, in Toronto, Chief Justice Sir William Mulock, addressing the Grand Jury, took occasion to refer to the fact that in Ontario there were 200,000 autos, of which 150,000 were used solely for pleasure, and it is costing the people of the province $60,000,000 yearly for the maintenance of these machines. His lordship argued that under present conditions it would be vastly better if these millions were laid up for a rainy day. But this expenditure on automobiles is but one account, and by no means the most serious one, in the indictment against us for extravagant, unwise, and unchristian expenditure. We do not mean that it is an unchristian thing to own an auto, and we do not think the expenditure upon autos, even for pleasure alone, is half as blameworthy as some other expenditures, but as Christian citizens we need to learn and to learn quickly the lesson of a wise economy.

There is a feeling abroad that so long as a man is spending his own money he has a right to please himself as to how he will spend it. And even if he be a Christian man the only limitations upon his expenditures is that they be not essentially unchristian and hurtful. But this idea is not a defensible one. The State has a claim upon all its citizens and its claim should be regarded by every patriot. This claim is not met by merely paying one's taxes in full; and it is not met merely by keeping within the law. The claims of the State may be paramount long before they are embodied in an Act of Parliament, as our young men felt when the war was on. The State has passed no law forbidding foolish and useless expenditures, and it is not likely that it will. But it is not necessary to pass such a law. We all recognize that Canada is face to face with a very serious financial situation, and the only way out lies in hard toil and wisely curtailed expenditure, and each citizen must be brought to realize, if possible, that without any law in the matter, it is his bounden duty, as a true patriot, to labor and save, not for his own sake, but for his country's sake.

But the Christian has yet another claim upon him; for his money, his property, his all, are not his own, even if they are in his name and he has legal title to them; his money, his property, his all, belong to his Master and he is but that Master's steward, holding every dollar of that property in trust for Him. To many of us, possibly, this claim is so startling and so preposterous that we do not for one moment admit it; and yet it is the clear and unmistakable teaching of our Lord. And some of us, while admitting the claim theoretically, have utterly failed to realize the wide-sweeping character of its demands. If it were the money of a client which had been entrusted to us, we should never dream of spending it so recklessly nor so selfishly. And yet the money we are spending so freely upon our luxuries and extravagant and needless pleasures, is every dollar of it "trust funds," committed to us, not by men, it is true, but by the living God. In view of the present stringency, in view of the world-wide need, in view of the destitution all about us, and in view of the thousand projects for betterment that are waiting for money to carry them out, it is certainly up to every patriot and every Christian to revise his own personal and family expenditures and in Canada's name and in the name of our Lord to cut out every expenditure which can fairly be looked upon as either extravagant or useless. It is our Lord's money.—Christian Guardian.

distant land cheer and encourage far more than the sender can imagine.

Am very sorry that this will not reach you in time for the Conference. If you want a letter by a certain time, it is necessary to allow at least two months for your letter to go and the answer to return; even then you cannot be sure. Three months should be allowed. In December I will write to you and then you will have it for next year. That will be the last meeting before my furlough is due. Only sixteen months now and I shall be starting home. Only those who have had a similar experience can imagine how happy I shall be to see the dear home folks.

It would be impossible for me to forget the many kindnesses shown me by the ladies of the Louisiana Missionary Society, for most of the things that I use every day were gifts from them just before I left home—the pillows that I lay my head on every night that I am at home; the rug that I put my feet on the first thing every morning; the bed linen, the towels, and all the useful things, even clothes: how could I have lived through this fourteen degrees below zero winter without the good warm suit that Carrollton Avenue gave me and the good winter coat from Rayne Memorial! And then I am reminded of the New Orleans District whenever any of my salary is used. But even though I have all these reminders of you, it is indeed good to receive a letter from some of you every once in a while to remind me that you are still thinking about me and praying for me. If people never write letters, how can we know that they have not forgotten us?

Love to every member of every Auxiliary in the Louisiana Conference, and best wishes for the personal happiness and prosperity of each and for the continued success of the great work which is being done by the Conference. Lovingly,

HUMILITY.

There is a plant called "sensitive plant." You breathe on it and it instantly droops its head; you touch it and it withers away. Humility is of that character. It cannot safely be brought out on exhibition. A man who thinks he is humble is self-decelved. Moses knew not that his face shone. A snaky kind of Uriah-Heep effort to appear humble is disgusting. Sometimes a man's egotism is seen in his efforts to appear to be not egotistic. A studied endeavor to be indifferent to other men's ways of doing things, an apology for being odd, are evidences of egotism and are meant to call special attention to self. When humility speaks of itself, it vanishes. It consists not in thinking meanly of self, but in not thinking of self at all. —Gospel Advocate.

CHINESE DENTISTS.

The work of old-time Chinese dentists is rather primitive. The operator extracts all the teeth with his fingers. From youth to manhood he is trained to pull pegs from a wooden board, and this training changes the shape of the hand and gives him a finger grip equivalent to a lifting power of three or four hundred pounds. Gripping the aching tooth with only his fingers, he can remove it as neatly as a modern dentist who uses dental pincers.—Selected.

Are You Ailing?

A Suggestion Worth While

Jackson, Miss.—"My trouble was feminine weakness. I suffered misery at times and was weak most all of the time. I was reading in a newspaper about Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription and I saw that I could order one of Dr. Pierce's books, the "Common Sense Medical Adviser," from him, so I did, and I found my complaint was woman's trouble. I started on the Favorite Prescription and am glad to say it did me all the good in the world. I had three doctors; they all said that I had to be operated upon, but after using the Prescription I began to feel better. I have now taken three bottles and feel fine. Am glad to recommend Dr. Pierce's medicine to all my friends." —Mrs. Pearl Holt, 934 Deer Park St.
